Love is the law, love under will.

He shall everywhere proclaim openly his connection with the A.:A.: and speak of It and Its principles (even so little as he understandeth) for that mystery is the enemy of Truth.

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS & SIDEBARS

FRONTISPIECE

A solar flare, the likes of which human scientists had never previously seen, left our Sun on April 8, 1907 E.V., and arrived two days later on April 10, crossing the 93 million mile abyss between Sol and Earth during the three days that were the 93rd anniversary of the dictation of Liber Legis. The Book of the Law, on April 8-10, 1904 E.V. This historic storm was the first we were ever able to study so carefully, due to recently deployed extra-atmospheric satellite technology. The Frontispiece illustration portrays this cosmic drama as a messenger from the Order of the Silver Star to the Children of the Light dwelling on Earth.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the Law.

As always, there are many to thank, formally and genuinely.

This present book contains numerous quotations from the writings of Aleister Crowley. The literary estate of Aleister Crowley, including ownership of all surviving copyrights, is the property of Ordo Templi Orientis (O.T.O.), JAF Box 7666, New York, NY 10116 USA. Although most Crowley writings pertaining to the A.:A.: are nonproprietary and in the public domain, we have occasionally quoted apparently proprietary material as well. The author and publisher both wish to thank O.T.O., not only for its courtesy, but for continuing its fine management of this important literary legacy. The present Grand Master of O.T.O., Frater Hymenæus Beta, has long displayed a particular Genius for this kind of work.

Certain quoted and referenced documents are from the archives of the Soror Estai (Jane Wolfe) lineage of the A.:A.: Whatever their origin, all source documents are respectfully used here for educational purposes consistent with the high aims and purposes of the A.:A.:.

Anna-Kria King, Greg Peters, and Michelle Spadotto lovingly read nearly every chapter of this book as it was being written, and gave the benefit of their opinions. Numerous others read a chapter here, a passage there, at our request. The book now in your hands has benefited from their recommendations. With the usual caveat that any weaknesses that remain are solely the responsibility of the author, we especially thank them all for their interest and labor.

Alison West and Valerie Cole, although neither understands (formally) the material presented here, have each contributed generously to the book. Were it not for them, this work would not be nearly so rich. Ali, O Shining One, your unfolding has barely begun, and already is so full of promise. Val, no one has ever before offered me so precious a compliment. I love you both.

Thank you to all of my Wednesday night students, now and over the past decade-plus. Your voracious curiosity, your passion for the Light, and your pure and ardent aspiration have invoked whatever worthwhile teachings have been offered. You ask far better questions of me than I have ever asked of myself. A teacher is made by the quality of his or her students; and it is your own desire to receive that has set the standard for our time together.

Paul Clark and Linda Clark have been dear friends for many years, whose support has long been felt in innumerable ways. To them (and also – especially! – to C.A. and D.G.) go my thanks for proving anew that doctrinal differences are no bar to the love that blooms among the Children of the Light.

The late Francis Israel Regardie was a man rich in friends – most of whom, it seems, have recently been publishing their own books with his picture on the cover. Fortunately, I am certain his sense of humor is adequate to the challenge! A man of kindness, and a gracious guest, Francis also had a marvelous power to heal by speaking the truth. His most important words to me were during a health crisis when we didn't think he'd live (but he fooled us). I was trying to thank him adequately for certain contributions he had made to my life, sure I could never pay him back for what he had given. His response was that you don't go through life paying back that kind of thing – you pass it on to those who come along next. He was entirely right, of course; and he lived his life that way. Thank you, Greatly Honored Frater.

As I type this, my cat Crawford has sauntered over to visit me, reminding me of the pleasure she has added to my life during the best years of this work. However (as I am reminded this very minute), her typing leaves much to be desired. Thanks, Crawford.

Finally, in Eastern style and with profound reverence, esteem, and gratitude, I acknowledge and thank my teacher, Soror Meral, who has been to me many things; who knew and bore the Light of the Gnosis from the dark age of Saturnus unto the dawn of a new generation, carrying the seeds of this Work farther and wider than any who has lived since that winter of '47 e.v. And I thank, esteem, and praise her teacher as well, Soror Estai, who (though she and Therion knew each other not) was the only Scarlet Woman who bore viable progeny to the Beast, and this by her perseverance, strength, and love of the Great Work. And I thank, esteem, and praise her teacher as well, Frater To Mega Therion, who did prepare this pathway unto the Light during His incarnation on earth: who delivered unto us The Book of the Law; and who did awaken the splendor solis and true gnosis of the Holy Number 666. Blessing and worship to the prophet of the lovely Star. And I thank, esteem, and praise His teacher as well, Frater

D.D.S., that Hermit, that Hermes, who did ever bear the Lantern of Truth before him. Thus does the Mystery come full circle.

And unto all those who have ever gone before us, "that transmitted the light of the Gnosis to us their successors and their heirs," do we give honor, thanks, and blessing. By their Light in Extension, the Light of a SILVER STAR, may all come to dwell under the Shadow of the Wings of that ONE Most Beloved.

SUB VMBRA ALARUM TUARUM.
Love is the law, love under will.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS FOR THE SECOND EDITION

I am immensely grateful for the scores of positive responses this work has received in its First Edition, and especially to two individuals who have been of great help to me in preparing for the Second Edition. Scott Brush of Los Angeles provided many pages of errata and worthy questions, which allowed for corrections and clarifications in subsequent editions. Vilas Keith of Michigan provided research assistance that was helpful to me in improving Chapter 3. Thanks to you both!

J.A.E., March 10, 1995 E.V.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS FOR THE FIRST HARDCOVER EDITION

In the seven years since its first publication, this book has been permitted to mature by the involvement and response of its readers. Thank you.

Tony De Luce has been the primary motivator for this hardcover presentation, and has handled much of the project management. His time, energy, and ideas have been true gifts of devotion to this Work of L.V.X. Truly, without him this edition would not have existed. He deserves your thanks, and has mine.

Angela Wixtrom has provided valuable artistic contributions, enabling me to improve many small areas of the book, to the overall benefit of the whole. Regular readers of the College of Thelema's journal BLACK PEARL will be familiar with Angela's astounding artwork, which graces the covers of many issues. For lending her gifts to the present work, she again has earned my thanks.

Michelle Spadotto has devoted dozens of hours to proofreading and general review of the work. By the time you read this, I suspect she will have done the same for the galleys – a tedious and demanding task which, by these acknowledgements, I will at least keep from being thankless.

Phyllis Seckler (Soror Meral) has continued to be a light of inspiration, a severe critic, and a passionate supporter of my work, as she has been for over 20 years. No writing by me on the A. A. A. can fail to have benefited quite directly from her contribution, inasmuch as she has been the central, guiding flame of the Order for several decades, and my own most dear and wise teacher. Were we an order of knights, Phyllis would be the queen and dame in whose honor I bear my arms.

FOREWORD

to the Third Revised Edition

52. There was also an humming-bird that spake unto the horned cerastes, and prayed him for poison. And the great snake of Khem the Holy One, the royal Uræus serpent, answered him and said:

53. I sailed over the sky of Nu in the car called Millions-of-Years, and I saw not any creature upon Seb that was equal to me. The venom of my fang is the inheritance of my father, and of my father's father; and how shall I give it unto thee? Live thou and thy children as I and my fathers have lived, even unto an hundred millions of generations, and it may be that the mercy of the Mighty Ones may bestow upon thy children a drop of the poison of eld.

54. Then the humming-bird was afflicted in his spirit, and he flew unto the flowers, and it was as if naught had been spoken between them. Yet in a little while a serpent struck him that he died.

55. But an Ibis that meditated upon the bank of Nile the beautiful god listened and heard. And he laid aside his Ibis ways, and became as a serpent, saying Peradventure in an hundred millions of millions of generations of my children, they shall attain to a drop of the poison of the fang of the Exalted One.

56. And behold! ere the moon waxed thrice he became an Uræus serpent, and the poison of the fang was established in him and his seed even for ever and for ever.

– Liber Cordis Cincti Serpente,
Cap. V, vv. 54-56

Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the Law.

Initiation is a reality. Humanity has a potential to grow far beyond its own native state of consciousness and capability. This growth is a spiritual growth, and its fruits inform and empower every facet of human, mortal expression, in addition to disclosing to each of us our own inherently immortal natures.

It is on this spiritual growth, more than any other thing, that the future welfare and progress of humanity depends.

We know the means of unlocking and awakening this growth, and of bringing its fruit to maturity. That is, we know how to unleash genius at will, and to produce its miracles on demand. It is not an overnight process, but it is a sure process for those who persevere. The means of doing this are not my discovery, or that of any person in recent history; rather, they have been known for thousands of years.

In modern English we say that a person is a genius; but the ancient Greeks and Romans, who originated the word, said a person has a genius, by which they meant a protective and instructive spiritual being – a holy guardian angel, one might say – that inspires, awakens, and fulfills us each.

The word “genius,” at root, means, “that which begets and gives birth.” Whether anthropomorphized, as an angel or spirit or god – whether understood as a force of nature, or as cosmic consciousness or, for that matter, as any other thing whatsoever – there is THAT within each of us, immortal and infinitely creative, which truly gives us birth. Something in us knows, instinctively, that we must (each in our own ripe time) seek this, embrace this, and surrender to this as we would to the most overpowering and fulfilling love. And then we must give it expression in our lives and our work, must pour forth the very essence of ourselves into that which we love most. I say “must,” because it feels deeper than a biological imperative, and, in time, grips us with an inner conviction before which the best reasoned logic is impotent.

In this entwining of love and will, we find not only the greatest joy and fulfillment of life, but also the most loving and fruitful path of service for ourselves. In the East, this is called dharma. We give it the Greek name Θελεμα – Thelema.

If I never say another thing in the whole of my life, I am satisfied that the above will serve to speak for me. It is what I have waited a lifetime to say: True spiritual initiation exists – and we know how one may bring it about for themselves at will.

Since 1993, when the first edition of The Mystical & Magical System of the A.:A.: was published, it has received a gratifyingly warm response from many quarters of the Thelemic community. For this, I am personally appreciative. When writing this book, I thought it might, perhaps, be of interest to some of the students of A.:A.:, working directly with my teacher or myself. It has, however, drawn a far wider audience.

Many of those drawn to it have written me that they have chosen to work independently, and this book has provided them the program and materials that they have needed to undertake the Great Work on their own. Still others have acquired this book at the recommendation of teachers in other lineages of A.:A.: with which I am not associated. I am certain that this book's value to them is that it describes the A.:A.: system as designed by its creators: that is, it is an ark, preserving the system as originally formulated, for those that follow.

To those working independently, I continue to say that I believe the best value is to be had, generally, by entering into the system formally, and working with one who has gone ahead on the Path. However, this is not possible for all aspirants, and not desirable to others. One must walk as one is drawn to walk. We happily accept the duty of assisting, when we can, all who would pursue the Work, without exacting a price in the coin of any realm. It was part of the initial plan of A.:A.: to make its teachings available to all. The basic techniques described in this book are open to all. The sequence of applying those methods rests on an accurate understanding of the inherent constitution of our psychological – one might say, psychospiritual – constitution, and thereby forms a “graded path” in much the same sense as the ontogenetic stages of biological development.

To those working with other lineages, we continue to extend our fraternal greeting. Because there has been, in the past, misunderstanding of our position on this point, I want to state it clearly. For many years, the following summary has appeared on a web site maintained by the College of Thelema pertaining to A.:A.:

Various [A.:A.:] lineages have survived. Claims are periodically encountered that one individual or another is an authentic link to A.:A.:. Some of these claims are quite real; some are honest mistakes; and some are fraudulent. It is not our present purpose to play arbiter to these claims, to upraise one or knock down another. It is a universal truth of Initiation that each student, at each step along the way, gets the teacher he or she “deserves,” based on the real maturity and needs of the soul; and that while sometimes spiritual growth is fostered by finding the BEST teacher, at other times it is best fostered by lessons of discrimination taught in the School of Hard Knocks.

In this matter we give but one sage piece of advice: “By their fruits shall ye know them!” The Works of the Adept, the fruits of his or her garden, are the signs of his or her attainment.

Where our tolerance falls short, at times, is in tolerating intolerance. Occasionally, there emerge those who would arrogate the entirety of A.:A.: to themselves as if it were property. This is plain silly. The last large-scale attempt of this kind was by Marcelo Ramos Motta, a Neophyte under Karl Germer who made a bid to control all of organized Thelema. He failed at that, though he succeeded in leaving a diverse body of successors whom he raised sufficiently far through the system that many have carried on one or another form of the teachings of the Order to a new generation. Successorship was his proof.

A.:A.: is not property, not a political entity or arena, and not a club. It cannot be “owned” any more than the spirit of human courage can be owned. In an essay titled “An Account of A.:A.:” adapted from the writings of Karl von Eckartshausen, this is explained:

From all time, therefore, there has been a hidden assembly, a society of the Elect, of those who sought for and had capacity for light, and this interior society was the Axle of the R.O.T.A. All that any external order possesses in symbol, ceremony, or rite is the letter expressive outwardly of that spirit of truth which dwelleth in the interior Sanctuary. Nor is the contradiction of the exterior any bar to the harmony of the interior. . . .

But all exterior societies subsist only by virtue of this interior one. As soon as external societies wish to transform a temple of wisdom into a political edifice, the interior society retires and leaves only the letter without the spirit. It is thus that secret external societies of wisdom were nothing but hieroglyphic screens, the truth remaining inviolable in the Sanctuary so that she might never be profaned.

In this regard, the singular criticism levied against this present book, from its First Edition on, was that it put forth the idea of multiple lineages within A.:A.:. If I am being faulted for religious tolerance, then I happily accept the blame. It is not even a valid argument that no such idea of lineages existed in Aleister Crowley's time: Crowley recognized various individuals as high grade initiates of A.:A.: who had no formal relationship at all to himself or to the system he was given to put forward. In our own time, can we do less than acknowledge the authenticity of all who descend, by one or another channel from a common source? Political power plays alienate the Work from its inner moorings. Should we shame ourselves in comparison to the many lineages of Buddhism that peacefully coexist in acceptance of each other? It would be a shame if we did! The mystical and magical system of the A.:A.: and the Law of Thelema which it put forth to the world nearly a hundred years ago, is, above all, ecumenical and inclusive.

No question has been asked more often concerning this book, in the last five years, than this: Why have I not listed other legitimate A.:A.: links or lines. The answer is that, to name those we endorse as legitimate, would appear to castigate those we fail to mention. There is greater wisdom, methinks, in practicing the Fourth Power of the Sphinx.

When I first was admitted into A.:A.: as a Probationer, in 1979, I remember being in awe of the magnitude of its teachings, and of the precision of its pathway – a step-by-step unfolding of oneself unto a particular spiritual goal. In subsequent years, I lost that initial, childlike sense of wonder. In the last two or three years, it has revisited me often.

Thinking back to that first, innocent exposure, I recall a thought that passed through my mind at the time. Not a goal, hardly a plan, barely a reverie. Just a thought. It was that if I followed this system, step-by-step, and succeeded in it, this would be a proof to the world that the system bore inherent virtue, and would instill confidence in the method itself. So, with this thought behind me, I threw myself into it. To reach the full measure of my initial goal took 14 years. For what it may be worth to anyone else, I have walked the A.:A.: 's prescribed path, step by meticulous step, until I came to its end; and I stand as a single (but hardly singular) witness that it fulfilled every one of its promises to me, and more.

There is no claim that the mystical and magical system of the A.:A.: is the only path. It is a path, not the path. The present book endeavors to document this particular system by which all, who are drawn to it, may attain direct and living communion with the Divine.

Among the many changes and additions to this Third Revised Edition are several aimed at those who wish to work independently. The book no longer assumes that its reader will probably have Gems From the Equinox at his or her elbow, and be already familiar with all the practices described. More discussion and definition are given regarding the actual assignments and tasks. An Appendix G has been added, containing some of the most important and essential documents, which are widely used throughout the stages of the Work.

This book, especially in its new edition, is written for every ibis that would lay aside its ibis ways and become a serpent, for the promise of the generations that come after it. May each, as well, receive the royal reward of liberty for themselves.

Love is the law, love under will.

INTRODUCTION

... if there is ever to be a universal religion, it must be one which will have no location in place or time; which will be infinite, like the God it will preach, and whose sun will shine upon the followers of Krishna and of Christ, on saints and sinners, alike; which will not be Brahminical or Buddhist, Christian or Mohammedan, but the sum total of all these, and still have infinite space for development; which in its catholicity will embrace in its infinite arms, and find a place for, every human being, from the lowest grovelling savage, not far removed from the brute, to the highest man, towering by the virtues of his head and heart almost above humanity, making society stand in awe of him and doubt his human nature. It will be a religion which will have no place for persecution or intolerance in its polity, which will recognize divinity in every man and woman, and whose whole scope, whose whole force, will be centred in aiding humanity to realize its own true, divine nature.

— Swami Vivekananda, 1893 e.v.

Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the Law.

THIS book explores, in close detail, the spiritual disciplines of the Order called A.:A.:. The goals of the A.:A.: are those which have motivated spiritual exploration and religious inquiry throughout human history.

Its methods are those of science. Its aims are those of religion.

However, many religions promise their rewards only in some far distant future, perhaps beyond the limen of death. This is not the view or approach of the A.:A.: In our most revered book, the Divine ALL, personified as the Goddess of Infinite Space, is quoted as saying:

I give unimaginable joys on earth; certainty, not faith, while in life, upon death; peace unutterable, rest, ecstasy; nor do I demand aught in sacrifice.¹

was founded by an individual who actually experienced what may be called realization, or liberation, or a consciousness of the Divine, or a union with God, or superconsciousness — the exact description does not matter, only that the experience transcended, by an incalculable factor, the commonplace experiences of human life. From culture to culture, religion to religion, era to era, the language employed has varied, because language itself necessarily fails to encompass that which cannot be defined and barely can be described.

Yet despite the tremendous diversity of details, each of these liberated individuals was transformed; each had actually experienced something of immeasurable, and possibly infinite, proportion; and each began to teach in terms that are phenomenally similar in meaning, if only the detritus of culture and era be discarded. Their messages have been wondrously alike.

Furthermore, where we have adequate biographical records, we find that each of these founders of a religion underwent some form of isolation, or retirement from normal life, immediately before emerging enlightened and ready to teach. Moreso, where either the master's teachings or the biographical details are preserved adequately, we find that essentially identical practices (or religious observances, or methods of spiritual inquiry) were employed in each case. The methods, where known, are so universal that only the enormity of human religious prejudice, intolerance, and bigotry could have kept this similarity from being recognized widely all along.

The A.:A.: teaches, therefore, that the goals of religious aspiration – actual spiritual experience – are attainable in this life, on earth, now; that while the nature of the Supreme Experience (or TRUTH) is necessarily unique for each individual, it can be recognized universally by all; and that these wonderful results are producible by known methods that, in one or another variety, have been employed throughout history.

I love you; I would sprinkle you with the divine dew of immortality.

This immortality is no vain hope beyond the grave: I offer you the certain consciousness of bliss.

I offer it at once, on earth: before an hour hath struck upon the bell, ye shall be with Me in the Abodes that are beyond Decay.²

The general populace, when sufficiently content with their circumstances in life, may not choose to undertake this great spiritual adventure, which we call the Great Work. For these masses, conventional religions are provided. Each such orthodoxy is suitable to the time and place that it serves. In these orthodox religions, we therefore find diversity and multiplicity of outer form and specific doctrine. Yet behind each, serving each, and the source of each, are universal and ecumenical spiritual principles. These principles are known. They can be verified – in fact, discovered anew – by each individual without the need of dogmatic assertion. Personal experience will confirm or deny the efficacy of these methods of mysticism and of ceremony – that is, of yoga and of ritual magick – so that each person who undertakes these methods will know, from practice and experimentation, what is true for him or her, and what is false.

The method is that of science. The aim is that of religion.

An introductory lecture on the A.:A.: system says the following:

In all systems of religion is to be found a system of Initiation, which may be defined as the process by which a man comes to learn that unknown Crown.

Though none can communicate either the knowledge or the power to achieve this, which we may call the Great Work, it is yet possible for initiates to guide others.

Every man must overcome his own obstacles, expose his own illusions. Yet others may assist him to do both, and they may enable him altogether to avoid many of the false paths, leading no whither, which tempt the weary feet of the uninitiated pilgrim. They can further insure that he is duly tried and tested. . .

Now the Great Work is one, and the Initiation is one, and the Reward is one, however diverse are the symbols wherein the Unutterable is clothed.³

Hence, there have existed, in all known periods of history, societies or orders or schools (or whatever) that have taught magick or mysticism or spirituality (or whatever). The maxim of these orders has been, "Know thyself!" The self-knowledge acquired has been represented as "Light in extension" (or by a cognate expression). Those who have attained to Beauty, Understanding, and Wisdom must, by virtue of who they are and what they have received, give it forth to those who seek it. Hence, the Wisdom Schools have propagated, from generation to generation.

There have also been, in each age, those who have sought to teach without knowing the first thing about their subject. The blind endeavor to lead the blind. In some cases this is from noble (albeit ignorant) motives, and in some cases not. Regardless, each has its use in nature's plan. First, they provide subtle tests in discrimination, winnowing from the crowd those not yet ready to essay the true spiritual slopes. In other words, every student gets the teacher he or she "deserves," based on the real maturity and needs of the soul. Also, every lie or folly (whether uttered by the malicious or the naive) is exactly the "truth" needed by some young seeker to direct him or her toward the next step of the Path.

When the student is ready, the teacher will appear. Each will be led to the level of teaching he or she can hear. Inherent safeguards ward the inmost sanctuaries from those not ready for them.

³ Liber 61 vel Causa, vv. 2-5.

But for those who are prepared, there comes the method of the A.:A.:. This book, now in your hands, gives you the opportunity to explore it.

This book does not, however, contain all of the actual technical instructions or methods. These are readily available, and we will tell you exactly where to find them. What the present book provides is comprehensive description of the course of study that allows you to employ these methods effectively. Previously, so comprehensive a guidebook has not been readily available.

HOW IT WORKS

The A.:A.: is an organization whose heads have obtained by personal experience to the summit of this science. They have founded a system by which every one can equally attain, and that with an ease and speed which was previously impossible. (Book 4, Part II)

In the A.:A.: the blind do not lead the blind.

Progress is measured by a series of grades. The theoretical and practical basis for these grades will be discussed later.

Each person is admitted by a teacher, a fellow seeker, who is at least one grade further along in the system. This person, in turn, is responsible to his or her own teacher, and so forth up the line.

Primarily, this Body exists for the purpose of conferring Initiation. Secondly, It prepares people for initiation by means of courses of instruction.⁴

The A.:A.: is not a group system. It is a method of individual training and progress.

The aspirant learns the methods that are taught, applies them, observes the consequences of this practice, and keeps a journal of these results. In this way, each person is provided with all of the essential tools, or methods, and receives examination to ensure that he or she is proficient in their use. Each learns by experience which methods are most helpful and productive of results. Being thus prepared, the student gradually progresses in self-understanding, gradually matures in spiritual perception, and gradually awakens to THAT which first inspired the sacred quest.

In all thy wanderings through darkness, this lamp went before thee, though thou sawest it not. It is the symbol of the light of occult wisdom, which the profane see not, neither do they know.⁵

None of the instructional materials are secret, except for the actual ceremonies of initiation. All of the formal teachings are published openly. It may be that this published information is all that a given seeker needs in order to advance to the Next Step of his or her own inner development; in which case, the Order has served its purpose with respect to that individual. However, the usual method is for an aspirant to affiliate formally with the Order, gaining the benefit of personal instruction from those who have walked similar ground. One thereby becomes a new link in an unbroken chain that reaches back to the dawn of history.

In the remainder of this Introduction, we will discuss the modern history of the formation of the A.:A.: system that we have today; the theoretical models, which frame the stages of measured progress; and how to employ this book to best effect. We encourage the reader to proceed patiently. For many in the West, it is a novel thought that spiritual awareness can be drilled and accelerated in the same fashion that a muscle can be strengthened or a golf game improved. Not many decades ago, the same would have been thought concerning mental and emotional health; yet the methods of psychotherapy, founded on increasing knowledge of human behavior, have shown otherwise. An ear trained to listen to music detects wondrous subtleties that the untrained ear misses; the same can be said of the palate trained to distinguish fine food and wine, the touch drilled to read Braille text, or the eye trained to discriminate nuance in any of a thousand areas. Perception can be refined and, as night the day, heightened awareness follows. You have to learn where to look, and to recognize what you see. The remainder is a continuous unfolding and maturation of appreciation. And, while this lengthy metaphor is not entirely descriptive of all the processes that lie before you, it does aim your attention in the right direction.

Let them that have eyes see.

FRATERNITAS A...A...

THE TREE OF LIFE

On the preceding page is a diagram of the grades of the Fraternitas A.:A.:. The form of this diagram is a Qabalistic map called the Tree of Life.

It is impossible, in the space now available, to introduce the Tree of Life more than passingly to those not familiar with it. Most readers of this book will have familiarity with it; and anyone else is encouraged to undertake its study as a basic prerequisite to understanding much about this system of attainment. Particularly recommended as well-rounded introductory texts are The Mystical Qabalah by Dion Fortune; The Sword & the Serpent by Melita Denning and Osborne Phillips; The Ladder of Lights by William Gray; and The Study of the Kabbalah by William Wynn Westcott.

The Tree of Life is a map of the aspects of human consciousness. As such, it becomes a "filing cabinet," or pattern for categorization, of all things that can be perceived by us. Therefore, it is a "map of the universe;" that is, the interrelationship of all things can be demonstrated on this diagram, by one who has practical familiarity with it.

Because it is a categorical map of human consciousness (the universe "within" us) and, at the same time, of all things knowable by us in our world (the universe "outside" of us), the Tree of Life also serves as the perfect scheme for plotting the stages of progressive initiation: that is, of progressive unfoldment of aspects of expanded consciousness.

Pay close attention to this common representation of (a) human consciousness, (b) the universe, and (c) the path of initiation. Your understanding of your inner processes will grow, to the extent that you perceive the absolute NECESSITY that all three be represented by a common model, and are able to witness the ongoing patterns of their interrelationship.

Take a few moments to look at the diagram of the Tree of Life. See its basic pattern. It consists of ten circles, arranged in three columns of three, four, and three circles, respectively.  Alternately it may be viewed as three triangles, beneath which a final circle is pendent. Small channels, or paths, connect all the circles.

The ten circles are representative of the ten sephiroth (singular, sephirah), or "emanations." Each sephirah represents an aspect of human consciousness. Their names are given in transliterated Hebrew. Each has a literal translation, and is associated with a planet or other cosmic principle, as indicated in the box on the next page.

Ten numbered grades (or steps) of the A.:A.: system correspond to these ten sephiroth in reverse numerical order: that is, from sephirah 10 (Malkuth) to sephirah 1 (Kether).

It may, perhaps, be easier to understand the formation of this diagram if it is viewed, first, in a different way. Sephiroth 3 through 9 represent the seven planets known to the ancients. These are used by astrologers, and in numerous other occult theories, to describe a wide range of phenomena including (especially) human behavior and destiny. These seven planets are the basic categories employed by the magician to represent the forces that the magician would govern. They represent various faculties of the human psyche, according to the following table:⁶

3	Saturn	Intuition
4	Jupiter	Memory
5	Mars	Volition
6	The Sun	The Ego-center ⁷
7	Venus	Desire
8	Mercury	Intellect
9	The Moon	Automatic consciousness

This seven-fold scheme has beautiful interconnecting symmetries. It deserves much consideration and meditation, and may be expanded readily into the ten-sephirah Tree of Life as follows: The principle of Saturn (sephirah 3), related to intuition or superconsciousness, is expanded into a trinity, of which it is the lowest representative. This defines Chokmah (sephirah 2, "Wisdom") and Kether (sephirah 1, "The Crown") as other aspects of transrational or superconscious experience.

The principle of The Moon (sephirah 9), representing the autonomic and other automatic functions, is extended further into manifestation, formulating the tenth sephirah, Malkuth, "The Kingdom," which represents manifest sensory reality.

Hundreds of pages could be written on each of these ten principles. Furthermore, each is said to exist simultaneously on four planes or worlds! For our present purposes, these four Worlds actually simplify things for us. For, although all ten sephiroth exist on all four planes, Qabalists sometimes represent the Tree of Life in such a way that progress up the Tree (from Malkuth to Kether) is parallel to progress upward through the Four Worlds. In some applications, this would cause a misrepresentative view of things. However, when the path of initiation, or spiritual progress, is being studied, it is exceedingly helpful to use this "composite Tree."

Readers are, once more, encouraged to learn all they can about the Tree of Life, and the representation of the ten Sephiroth in the Four Worlds. However, for what follows, we will take the practical approach of acting as if the Four Worlds and the ten emanations combined in a simpler way. In this "composite Tree," it is acknowledged that all real spiritual progress is along the Middle Pillar of the Tree of Life. That is (referring to the appended figure), from sephirah 10 to sephirah 9, then to sephirah 6, then to sephirah 1. Although the A.:A.: grades also incorporate the six sephiroth on either side of the Middle Pillar, those grades are of a different type. The main progress is in the grades of the Middle Pillar.

The discussion following is, admittedly and purposely, simplistic; but it should get the basic idea across.

Assiah

In the "composite Tree" view, the sephirah Malkuth (10) is uniquely assigned to the fourth World, the World of Assiah – the "World of Action." This is the material world as we know it, perceptible to the five physical senses. The first stage of the initiatory process is, therefore, to start exactly where you are, and to become aware of who you are and how the world is about you.

Yetzirah

In the next stage, advancing to the sephirah Yesod (9), awareness is also opened to the next higher (that is, the next most subtle or inner) of the Four Worlds, the World of Yetzirah – the "Formative World." This is a direct consequence of the work undertaken in the previous stage. Yetzirah is what we conveniently call the "astral plane." In human psychology, the Yetziratic level corresponds to the reactive and adaptive aspects, including the entire range of emotion; to the capacity to form and perceive images (imagination); and to the intellect.¹ That is, it corresponds to the field of human personality. Accordingly, of the vast hosts of spiritual (nonmaterial) beings, diverse angels, governors, spirits, intelligences, and demons of many types are attributed to Yetzirah; for these correspond to the equally diverse scope of the human personality, from its most morbid depths to its greatest heights; from its visions of Hell to its visions of Heaven; from its most insidious and incapacitating fears, to its most ennobling and inspiring hopes.

The seventh, eighth, and ninth sephiroth are, therefore, attributed to the World of Yetzirah. Of these, Yesod's usual attributions are almost interchangeable with those of Yetzirah. Yesod especially corresponds to the generative, creative, and vitalizing forces of the psyche. Hod and Netzach (Mercury and Venus) represent the polarities of intellect vs. desire, theory vs. experience, form vs. force, structure vs. life, etc. The deeper meanings of these sephiroth are learned by study, by applying the Tree of Life labeling system to categorize the experiences of life, and by the work of actually passing through (developing and incorporating) the energies of each sephirah when working its corresponding grade.

In awakening to this World of Yetzirah from that of Assiah, we learn to see past the world of the physical senses and matter to the wondrous nonmaterial world behind it, a world of magic and fantasy, of psychological (and psychic) realities and shifting tides of energies too subtle for the physical senses. Gradually, we become as much at home and as able to function in this world as we ever have been in the world of matter.

Briah

The advance to sephirah 6, Tiphereth, Beauty, the Sphere of the Sun, also represents the awakening of consciousness from the Yetziratic level to that of the next highest plane, the World of Briah, or the "Creative World." Magicians say that archangels are native to Briah, as the direct agents, or messengers, of God. Briah is a level above that at which most people operate but — a very important point! — it is the natural level of the awakened or fulfilled human being. The initiation unto the sphere of Tiphereth, and the concurrent awakening unto the Briatic Plane, is the spiritual destiny of every person. This experience has been described under many different names; but the drafters of the present A.∴A.∴ system elected to use the mystical term, "the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel." This attainment is discussed in Chapters 8 and 9 of the present book. It is the goal to which the aspirant to the A.∴A.∴ system is directed, the Next Step of humanity, the fulfillment of the inherent spiritual destiny of Homo sapiens at this stage of our collective development. One who has attained this is called an Adept.

Qabalists sometimes associate Briah with the element Water. This is not the turbulent water of troubled emotions, but the serene embrace of the Great Mother, the "passionate peace" or "peace profound" (Pax profunda) of a great inner, vital stillness. Once more, you are referred to Chapters 8 and 9 for a discussion of some of these correspondences in consciousness. In the present discussion, I want to employ this "water" metaphor in two ways. First, in contrast to the divisive, excited, and tumultuous characteristics of Yetzirah, Briah represents a tranquil and clear lake that has become capable of reflecting sunlight, brilliantly, even blindingly, without diminishment or distortion. Second, in relationship to the Atziluthic Plane still above (the plane of unconditioned divinity), Briah is like a chalice which becomes filled by Divine Inspiration, a womb that has become fertilized by a Sacred Seed, and, again, a lake lucidly reflecting the One Light of the Spiritual Sun. It is a consciousness beyond emotion, beyond thought and word, even beyond image.

It is usual to say that where Yetzirah manifests a diverse range of colors, in Briah there is Color, an essential and imageless idea transcending chromatic diversity; that where, in Yetzirah, are all possible numbers, in Briah is the idea of Number. And so forth. This concept is hard to grasp unless one has experience of it; and that experience appears, initially, to be wholly intuitive. Later, it may become a more commonplace state of mind.

Also, although some theorists would relate the experience of samadhi to a higher level than Briah,⁹ classical descriptions of samadhi provide an almost perfect description of the Plane of Briah. For example, according to Swami Vivekananda,

Suppose I am meditating on a book; I have gradually succeeded in concentrating the mind on it, and then in perceiving only the internal sensations, the meaning, unexpressed in any form. That state of dhyāna is called samādhi.¹⁰

⁹ Some forms of samadhi are certainly of a higher level than that presently discussed.

Compare this description to the examples given in the previous paragraph. Patanjali's description of *samadhi*¹¹ – that, by it, “is taken off everything that hides the lordship of the soul” – is quite accurate in its description of the Briatic level. These are examples of attempts to describe the phenomena of Briatic consciousness.

Briatic consciousness is, thus (in the composite Tree), characteristic of the three sephiroth numbered 4, 5, and 6. Tiphereth is par excellence the sephirah associated with the Adept. Geburah and Chesed (Mars and Jupiter) represent further developments of this attainment, and the eventual confrontation and balancing of the seeming polarities of Strength and Mercy, Power and Love, magick and mysticism, and many others.

In brief terms, the awakening to this World of Briah from that of Yetzirah is an unveiling of the spiritual realities that are hidden by the drape of human thought and emotion. It is a perceiving past the transient to the Eternal, past the ever shifting and personal to the still, serene, and transpersonal. Briatic consciousness is, to use Vivekananda's phrase, a disclosure of “the lordship of the soul” – of the inherent stellar divinity of every man and every woman.

Atziluth

The highest (inmost, most exalted, most subtle) of the Four Worlds is the World of Atziluth, called (somewhat misleadingly, post-Jung) the “Archetypal World.” It is the realm of unconditioned divinity. That which is Atziluthic is the Essence behind the highest intuitive and philosophical perceptions of “God” that humanity has had. Therefore, the three highest sephiroth – Binah, Chokmah, and Kether, known collectively as the “Supernal Triad,” and corresponding to Atziluth on the composite Tree – are regarded, in this present approach, as purely Divine, each representing an aspect of superconsciousness (cosmic consciousness). The Supernal Triad is the Sanctum Sanctorum, the “Holy of Holies,” the highest or inmost sanctuary of the human spirit. One who is admitted into this Sanctuary is called a Master.

Sephiroth & Grades

To each of these ten sephiroth is attributed one of the main grades of the A.:A.: system. Their names and numerical designations are given on the Tree of Life diagram. These are also given, in tabular form, in the essay One Star in Sight in Appendix C.

Two numerals, separated by an “equal sign,” form the numerical designation of each grade. The two numbers of a grade designation always total to 11, a number which has great magical and mystical importance. The first of the two numbers is the grade number; the second is the sephirah number. Thus, the Neophyte Grade, assigned to Malkuth, is the First Grade of the Order, and associated with sephirah 10; its number is, therefore, “1=10.”¹²

After each number, in these equations, is a special symbol. Following the first number is a small circle $\circ$; following the second, a small square $\square$. The circle is not a degree symbol, as often thought, but, rather, an emblem of eternity, of that which has neither beginning nor end. In contrast, the square symbolizes the temporal, material, and mundane. These figures refer to esoteric mysteries of “squaring the circle,” a phrase that has many interpretations, all of which pertain, ultimately, to the spiritual and alchemical (transmutative) process called the Great Work, the quest for spiritual attainment. Each represents an aspect of the union of the Macrocosm and the Microcosm, or of “heaven” and “earth.” Further interpretations of these numerical grade designations are given later in the present book; and the symbols are interpreted more thoroughly within the formal sanctuaries of initiation.

“Colleges” and “Orders”

Notations along the side of the Tree of Life diagram indicate two different ways that A.:A.: grades are categorized into three subparts. One schema designates these as “colleges;” the other enumerates them as “orders.” Both schemata are used within the A.:A.: To make matters even more confusing, the “colleges” are given names of “orders”! Though in most respects these differences are only semantical, we need to devote a little time to sorting out their respective meanings, both within and without of the A.:A.:.

Prior to the A.:A.:’s formulation, in an earlier Order from which it evolved,¹³ the Tree of Life grade structure was divided into three segments: a First Order, comprising the grades of the four lowest sephiroth on the Tree of Life (all of those below Tiphereth); a Second Order, comprising grades corresponding to Tiphereth, Geburah, and Chesed; and a Third Order, corresponding to the Supernal Triad.

These categorizations changed in A.:A.:; but the change came slowly, and was not always expressed consistently. Old habits sometimes die hard. Probably the use of two schemata evolved from practical advantages of dividing the Tree of Life into its three natural Triads, yet with a new view of where the “second order” rightly begins.

In the A.:A.:, the grades corresponding to Malkuth, Yesod, Hod, and Netzach constitute the Collegium Exterior, or “outer college,” designated also by the initials G.:D.:.¹⁴ The grades corresponding to Tiphereth, Geburah, and Chesed comprise the Collegium Interior, or “inner college,”¹⁵ represented by the initials R.:C.:. The grades corresponding to Binah, Chokmah, and Kether comprise the Collegium Summum, or “highest order,”¹⁶ represented by the initials S.:S.:. More will be said concerning these initials later.

This is the most familiar, and most commonly encountered, categorization of A.:A.: grades.

¹³ The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, and its successor, the Rosicrucian Order of the Alpha et Omega. The H.O.G.D. is discussed later in this Introduction.

¹⁵ The Latin word interior may be translated variously as “inner, secret, private, deeper, more intimate.” Collegium Interior, therefore, may be read not only as “inner college” but also as “secret society,” “intimate association,” etc. All of these possible meanings are accurately descriptive, and may be helpful in understanding the real nature of the Order R.:C.:.

¹⁶ Summum means “highest, uppermost, greatest, consummate, most distinguished,” etc. The main idea is “at the top” — that is, this is the summit of the system overall.

However, there is another classification. In this, only Malkuth is included in the First Order. The grades corresponding to Yesod, Hod, Netzach, Tiphereth, Geburah, and Chesed form the Second Order. Grades corresponding to Binah, Chokmah, and Kether (that is, the Collegium Summum) form the Third Order. Reasons for marking the start of the Second Order at Yesod are explained more fully in Chapter 4, once we have a better foundation. Even with what little has been explained thus far, you can see that the passage from Malkuth to Yesod marks a transition from the purely elemental and terrestrial domain to the planetary sephiroth (which begin with Yesod), and from the World of Action (Assiah) to the World of Formation (Yetzirah).

Three grades do not correspond to any sephirah. At the bottom of the diagram, below Malkuth, you will find mention of the Probationer Grade, 0^C=0^D. This is the transitional grade into the First Order. Not indicated on the diagram are two unnumbered grades. The first, between Netzach and Tiphereth (often diagrammed directly on the Middle Pillar, on the 25th Path of Samekh, 25, corresponding to the sign Sagittarius) is the Grade of Dominus Liminis (or Philosophus Major), the transitional grade into the Inner College. Also, between Chesed and Binah (often diagrammed, as before, directly on the Middle Pillar, but this time on the 13th Path of Gimel, 13, corresponding to the Moon) is the Grade of Babe of the Abyss (or Adeptus Exemptus Major), the transitional grade into the Order S.:S.:.

Finally, we turn our attention to the pathways that connect the ten sephiroth. These Paths are 22 in number. Each corresponds to one of the 22 Hebrew letters. Each also corresponds to a planet, Zodiacal sign, or element. Each also corresponds to one of the 22 Atus or Trumps (Major Arcana) of the Tarot. Each Path represents a transition of consciousness from one sephirah to another. In the system of spiritual training discussed in the present book, each represents a power or spiritual capacity that is to be gained, a skill mastered, a reality explored; in short, a task of each grade which must be completed, an experience incorporated, before moving on to the next. These 22 Paths (including their Tarot attributions) constitute one of the most extensive areas of study in Qabalah. They may be studied in The Book of Thoth by the Master Therion, and in numerous other works. They are mentioned here only to help demystify the Tree of Life diagram for those not yet thoroughly familiar with it.

These several pages have represented only the briefest introduction to the Tree of Life and the Qabalistic theories of the Four Worlds. They are fundamental to the A.:A.: grade model, and frequently employed for reference or metaphor throughout the instructional papers of the A.:A.: system. A comfortable familiarity with all of these terms and concepts – as detailed in the various books recommended above, and others – should be obtained by the Student (see Chapter 1) before seriously entering upon the work of the Probationer Grade.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE A.:A.:¹⁷

By the name “A.:A.:” we designate that One and Eternal Order that Paul Foster Case and Kenneth Mackenzie called the “True and Invisible Order,” and Karl von Eckartshausen titled the “Interior Church” or “community of light.” Having existed throughout history, silently guiding humanity’s cultural and spiritual evolution, it is the Arcaenum Arcanorum, the Holy of Holies wherein that Sacred Ark rests inviolate. Every legitimate magical order, mystery school, fraternity, religion, or other agency disseminating some portion of Wisdom has been but an Outer Vehicle of this Inner Fellowship of Light.

It has been known by uncountable names and terms throughout history, the name “A.:A.:” being only one of the more recent ones.

In the magical tradition, the A.:A.: often is referred to as the “Third Order,” or the “Inner School.” Its members have been poetically depicted as “Secret Chiefs,” “Hidden Masters,” and “Invisible Guardians.” It is the Collegium Summum, the highest companionship.

It may be that, rather than an actual society, it is but a spirit of Wisdom that has persisted in the background throughout human history; but, if so, we may ask ourselves how there can be continuity of Understanding, Wisdom, and Illumination without a vehicle to convey them, an Ark that is their repository.

This is the highest and purest meaning of the name A.:A.:.

More commonly, however, we use “A.:A.:” to mean not only the invisible Third Order,¹⁸ but a particular outer vehicle or terrestrial incarnation of the Interior School, which came into being, beginning in 1906, at the hands of two adepts, Aleister Crowley and George Cecil Jones. It teaches a method of aspiration and attainment called Scientific Illuminism or Skeptical Theurgy.

The biographies of these two individuals (especially Crowley), and the exoteric history of the A.:A.:, are discussed in numerous other works. It is not possible to explore these histories in detail in the present place. Although we now will give an outline history of Crowley, Jones, and the Order wherein they were first trained, the reader is primarily referred to other biographical and historical works for more details.

Aleister Crowley (1875-1947)

Of the two founders, the better known, and ultimately the more influential, was Aleister Crowley (né Edward Alexander Crowley). Born in England, and raised by Christian Fundamentalist parents, his lifepath was altered forever by a seemingly spontaneous experience of cosmic consciousness at age 21 in December 1896. He received initiation into Isis-Urania Temple of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn on November 18, 1898, and into its Second Order (as an Adeptus Minor) on January 23, 1900. He became a pawn – something of a centerpiece around which warring factions circled – during the revolt within the Order that erupted in 1900. When the smoke had cleared, Crowley retained his loyalty to S.L. MacGregor-Mathers (G.:H.: Frater Deo Duce Comite Ferro) in the formation of the new Isis Temple of what came to be called the “Rosicrucian Order of the A.:O.: [Alpha et Omega].”

Crowley traveled extensively after 1900, especially in the Far East where he received formal training and practical experience in the different forms of yoga. This began an important period of his life, an exploration of the magical and mystical methodologies, of East and West alike, which eventually converged into the basic pattern of the A.:A.: system.

In 1904, Crowley experienced the most important single event of his life. Over three consecutive days – April 8, 9, and 10 – he received what we might call the “channeled” dictation of the three chapters of a book called Liber Legis, or The Book of the Law.¹⁹ The intelligence dictating the Book declared its Name to be Aiwass,²⁰ and identified itself as “the minister of Hoor-paar-kraat” – that is, the minister of the God of Silence, virtually the “Voice of the Silence” itself. Years later, Crowley discovered that Aiwass was, in fact, his own Holy Guardian Angel.

The Book of the Law declared the dawning of a new spiritual era for humanity, an Æon governed by Horus, Child of Isis and Osiris, rather than by the “slain god” archetype of Osiris or Christ which had governed, in different forms, the few thousand years preceding.

The significance of such a world transition must not be missed. Mystics for many decades had been promising the emergence of a New Age, which some of the astrologically minded identified as an Age of Aquarius.²¹ The implication is that those universal archetypes most likely to draw human consciousness inward toward its superconscious roots, the archetypal forces that oversee both the intentional and the natural evolution of humanity, had undergone a quantum shift. The Slain or Sacrificed God had been replaced by the Eternally Born Child.

From the skeptical position taught by the A.:A.: system, these extraordinary claims or possibilities are obviously premises that must be investigated, and not accepted on faith;²² but, each aspirant having investigated the matter for himself or herself, and having (may we presume?) embraced the new formulae based upon reason and experience, the wonderful message of The Book of the Law signals a stupendous advance in humanity's collective spiritual awakening.

The Book of the Law declares that the old ritual forms and their accouterments were abrogated, and that new formulae were to be prepared from the ashes. It charged Crowley with certain responsibilities in disseminating its message, and in preparing the new ways of teaching.

Crowley's subsequent personal journey of initiation is a lengthy and interesting tale. In brief, he virtually ignored Liber Legis for several years (1904 until mid-1909, when he again picked up, with new commitment, the particular tasks assigned to him thereby). In 1906, during a months-long expedition across China, he commenced the mystical undertaking called The Sacred Magick of Abra-Melin the Mage (described in Chapter 8),

²⁰ In Hebrew, אֵיִוָּס = 93. In Greek, Αἰῶνας = 418.

²² For those fundamentalist Thelemites who think this last statement heretical, I would refer them to the closing pages of Crowley's extraordinary and epic poem, Aha! Draw your own conclusions. (Furthermore, the idea of a “heretical Thelemite” is amusing.)

HORUS

This "god of War and of Vengeance," son of Isis and Osiris, was adapted, in The Book of the Law, to serve as Hierophant ("Revealer of the Mysteries") for the new Æon, "the Hawk-headed mystical Lord," "the Hawk-Headed Lord of silence & of Strength," child of Nuit and Hadit, "the visible object of worship." This present image is of Amen-Ra-Heru-Khuti, an aspect of the God closely related to Ra-Hoor-Khuit (Ra-Heru-Khuti), amalgamated with aspects of Amen (Amoun).

which he successfully completed later that year. Upon his return to England, he consulted with his original sponsor and mentor in the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, George Cecil Jones, and presented his work and accomplishments of the six years preceding. Jones (who had the authority to do so) confirmed Crowley's entitlement to the 7=4 Grade of Adeptus Exemptus.

Thereupon these two adepts conferred together, saying: May it not be written that the tribulations shall be shortened? Wherefore they resolved to establish a new Order which should be free from the errors and deceits of the former one.

Without Authority they could not do this, exalted as their rank was among adepts. They resolved to prepare all things, great and small, against that day when such Authority should be received by them, since they knew not where to seek for higher adepts than themselves, but knew that the true way to attract the notice of such was to equilibrate the symbols. The temple must be builded before the God can indwell it.²³

The story of their collaboration will be given in more detail a little later. Suffice it to say that they began building (over the 32 months following) what was to become the A.:A.: system, while continuing with their own mystical and magical progress.

The system they built is the topic of this present book.

In March 1909, Crowley published the first issue of THE EQUINOX, a large, hardcover periodical (about 400 pages per average issue) which came out twice each year for a five-year period (1909-1913).²⁴ It described itself, on its title page, as "The Official Organ of the A.:A.: – The Review of Scientific Illuminism." Its motto was, "The Method of Science – The Aim of Religion."

THE EQUINOX was amazing! A veritable encyclopedia of the Great Work, it contained the majority of all A.:A.: official instructions as they were issued, openly published and available for all to use. To better fill the periodical, Crowley included poems, plays, and short stories by himself and others, along with book reviews, artwork, musical

²³ Liber 61 vel Causæ, v. 20. Crowley's diary for July 29, 1906 records this discussion: "D.D.S. [Jones] and P. [Crowley] discuss a new Order. D.D.S. wants authority. I should write and say, 'Perfect the lightning-conductor and the flash will come.'"

Aleister Crowley continued his personal initiatic progress while persisting in his work on behalf of the A.:A.: and his mundane occupation of poet. The two most significant subsequent landmarks of his magical career were his full initiation to the 8^o=3^o Grade of Magister Templi in December 1909, and his advancement to the 9^o=2^o Grade of Magus in October 1915.

No summary of Crowley's life would be complete without acknowledging the significant role of the neomasonic fraternity called Ordo Templi Orientis (O.T.O.).

O.T.O. was the brainchild of Karl Kellner in collaboration with Theodore Reuss. Kellner dreamed of an Academia Masonica, a compilation (or "ark") of all the essential secrets of the diverse and numerous Masonic rites which had proliferated in the 19th Century. Furthermore, Kellner had realized, by 1895, a Central Mystery that synthesized and fulfilled every Masonic teaching, and a practical magical-mystical secret based upon that Central Mystery. Kellner organized his teachings into a three-degree system. One of the prerequisites of admission to Kellner's "Order of Oriental Templars" was that one had passed "fully" through Freemasonry, which (originally) meant the three Craft Degrees followed by the Scottish Rite degrees through 33^o.

Reuss eventually simplified "the whole of Freemasonry" into six degrees, which included the

THE EQUINOX

Volume I was published 1909-1912. Its bearings (above) show insignia of the Golden Dawn and the Rosy Cross on a shield, beneath the Eye-in-the-Triangle ensign of the Silver Star; all between symbols of Aries and Libra to signify the two Equinoxes of each year. Note the motto, above and beneath. Aries and Libra correspond to Tarot trumps numbered IV (The Emperor) and VIII (Adjustment), celebrated arcanelly in the A.:A.: Equinox ceremony by the words, "Let the Eight inform the Four; Let the Four adore the Eight!"

three Craft Degrees and the Royal Arch, Rose-Croix, and Kadosh Degrees, followed by an honorary acknowledgement of a 33^o mason as a VII^o of O.T.O. Kellner's magical-mystical triad was then placed atop this as the VII^o, VIII^o, and IX^o of O.T.O.

Contrary to published "ghost stories" (Magick Without Tears, Letter 25; Confessions; and elsewhere) about time-traveling phantom Grand Masters walking through walls to confront Crowley with copies of books he had not yet written, Crowley's entry into O.T.O. was much less fantastic. In early 1910, Crowley was involved in a lawsuit filed by S.L. Mathers, then the governing Chief of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn.²⁶ Mathers sought to stay Crowley's publication of the Order's secret Adeptus Minor initiation ceremony in THE EQUINOX No. 3, scheduled for release in March 1910. While testifying, Mathers said he was the head of the Rosicrucians. When the newspapers circulated this story, Crowley was inundated with offers of help from (seemingly) every other occult group in England and Europe that claimed they were the real representatives of the Rosicrucians. Many of these groups gave Crowley, sight unseen, every grand-sounding title, dignity, and office that they had to spare, to fortify him for his labor against Mathers. Among these generous-iftedious entitlements was Theodore Reuss' unsolicited acknowledgement of Crowley as a member of O.T.O. with an honorary VII^o.

²⁵ In 1970, Israel Regardie compiled and edited nearly all of the actual magical and mystical papers from the eleven main issues of THE EQUINOX and from Crowley's Magick in Theory & Practice, into a collection called Gems From the Equinox. If you have any practical interest in the A.:A.: at all, get this book, even if you already have a complete set of THE EQUINOX. Gems is an "A.:A.: bible," in the industrial rather than religious sense of the word. No single reference will begin to serve you as well as this magnificent and worthy compilation of the practical instructions from Crowley's magnificent encyclopedia.

At first, Crowley did not take O.T.O. too seriously. He thought it was just one more paramasonic association, like so many he had seen; but, as he and Reuss talked sometime later, he came to realize that a significant teaching lay behind the veil of the VII°, in Kellner's mysterious upper triad. Over the next two to three years, Crowley systematically worked his way through the higher O.T.O. degrees, attaining the IX° by 1912. He also received the X°, designating a national governor, and was appointed Grand Master in the United Kingdom where he established one working lodge. The British outer degrees of O.T.O. were called Mysteria Mystica Maxima (M.:M.:M.:). Beginning in EQUINOX No. 8 (Autumn, 1912) a brief introduction of O.T.O. was included in the front matter; and by No. 9 (Spring, 1913) the following conservative notice was added:

The Præmonstrator of the A.:A.: permits it to be known that there is not at present any necessary incompatibility between the A.:A.: and the O.T.O. and M.:M.:M.:, and allows membership of the same as a valuable preliminary training.

Perhaps because of this statement, a false opinion has circulated, in more recent times, that Crowley intended O.T.O. to serve as the "preliminary training" for the A.:A.: It has never held this official position. In fact, over the course of his remaining life, Crowley wrote, on various occasions, concerning the differences between A.:A.: and O.T.O. Probably his clearest discussion was in a letter written to Karl J. Germer (S.:H.: Frater Saturnus) on September 16, 1946:

The difference between the A.:A.: and the O.T.O., is very clear and simple. The A.:A.: is a sempiternal institution, and entirely secret. There is no communication between its members. Theoretically, a member knows only the superior who introduced him, and any person whom he himself has introduced. The Order is run on purely spiritual lines.

The object of membership is also entirely simple. The first objective is the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel. The next objective, omitting considerations for the present of the [6°=5°] and [7°=4°] degrees, is the crossing of the Abyss, and the attainment of mastership of the Temple. This is described very fully especially in Liber 418. Much less is written about the [5°=6°] degree, i.e., the Knowledge and Conversation, because it is too secret and individual. It is impossible to lay down conditions, or to describe the experiences involved in detail.

The O.T.O. has nothing to do with this, except that The Book of the Law and the Word of the Æon are essential principles of membership. In all other respects, it stands by itself as a body similar to Freemasonry, but involving acceptance of a social and economic system which is intended to put the world on its feet. There is also, of course, the secret of the IX° which is, so to say, the weapon which they may use to further these purposes.

To show you the difference, Theodore Reuss was Supreme Head of the O.T.O., but was not even a probationer in the A.:A.:²⁷

Related correspondence, dated December 8, 1944, from Crowley to young Kenneth Grant, is reproduced in the latter's book, Remembering Aleister Crowley.²⁸ A similarly relevant discussion, in greater detail, emerged in letters to an unnamed student that eventually appeared as Letters D and G in Crowley's Magick Without Tears.

Similar views were expressed by the current O.T.O. leadership in the following notice published in Vol. VI., No. 1 of its newsletter, The Magical Link:

A number of correspondents have raised the question of our relation to the A.:A.: It is simply this. We bear no absolute relation with them, nor they with us. One of their number received a holy book, which our Order has adopted as our Volume of the Sacred Law. Any connection to either Order must be made by each individual for him or herself. Claims to affiliation with either Order reflect upon the claimant, not on either Order.

My only point here is that O.T.O. and A.:A.: are entirely separate entities. Their only direct connection is that O.T.O. formally adopted The Book of the Law and the Law of Thelema, which it teaches. The only reason for discussing this so extensively is that it has been misunderstood by so many and so often.

²⁷ Originally published in IN THE CONTINUUM, Vol. I, No. 2 (1973). Despite Crowley's word choice in this particular letter, the term "grade" is more characteristic of A.:A.: usage than "degree."

²⁸ London: Skoob Books Publishing, 1991.

Having said that, I must add that there are, in 1993,²⁹ within the O.T.O. membership, A.:A.: members of adequate grade to admit Probationers. I state this from personal knowledge. Some of these individuals descend through the Soror Estai (Jane Wolfe) lineage, and some through other authentic lineages. Nor is their ranking in O.T.O. necessarily indicative of their A.:A.: grade. Scattered among the current O.T.O. membership, therefore, are "contact points" which are alternatives to the College of Thelema and Temple of Thelema routes that are discussed at greater length in Chapter 1. However, O.T.O., per se, takes no official recognition of any A.:A.: grade or lack thereof.

By 1912, Crowley was at a crossroads. Of the original three A.:A.: Chiefs, Cecil Jones had faded mostly into the background (for reasons explained in his own history, which follows), and J.F.C. Fuller also had broken with Crowley at about the same time (for a variety of interpersonal reasons). Within about a year of those departures, Crowley had national (and potentially world) O.T.O. leadership thrust into his hands. By agreement with Reuss, O.T.O. adopted The Book of the Law, and Crowley was given leave to incorporate some of its philosophy into revisions of the O.T.O. initiation rituals – which, up to that time, had been essentially the ceremonies of Craft Freemasonry and the British Royal Arch, Rose-Croix, and Kadosh ceremonies. Crowley saw in O.T.O. a vehicle to popularly promulgate The Book of the Law, which he believed would have broad appeal. In his lifetime, this promise never manifested, but in the hands of his heirs? – Ah, who can tell what may yet happen?³⁰

By 1913, one can see Crowley's attention clearly centering on O.T.O. rather than A.:A.:. By 1919 he had written most of his important work for the A.:A.:. Although the A.:A.: writings which followed – Magick in Theory & Practice, commentaries on Liber 220 and Liber 65, The Equinox of the Gods, The Book of Thoth, and the beautiful Heart of the Master – were major works of classic proportion, even these cannot compare to the volume, quality, and importance of the earlier work which actually defined and established A.:A.: between 1906 and 1919. As a Magus 9^o=2^o, Crowley was technically the senior initiate incarnate on earth, and responsible for all the Work of the Order. But as Aleister Crowley, the man, he began, increasingly, to direct his attention elsewhere, especially to O.T.O. which "concerns itself with material things,"³¹ and where he could better fulfill his personal True Will of spreading the doctrine of The Book of the Law to the world at large.

Aleister Crowley's original aspiration name in the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn was Perdurabo, which he translated, "I shall endure to the end." His motto for the 5^o=6^o Grade of Adeptus Minor was *Christeos Lucifias*³² (C.L.: "Let There Be Light"); for 6^o=5^o, Ol Sonuf Vaoresaji (O.S.V.: "I reign over ye"); for 7^o=4^o, Oú Mh (O.M.: "The Not"); for 8^o=3^o, Vi Veri Vniversum Vivus Vici (V.V.V.V.V.: "By the power of Truth, I, in my lifetime, have conquered the Universe"); as 9^o=2^o, To Meya Θηριον (666: "The Great Beast"); and as 10^o=1^o, Crowley died on December 1, 1947.

³¹ Liber 300, Khabs Am Pekht (1919).

³² In the First Edition of this book, Crowley's Adeptus Minor motto was intentionally withheld. It is the general rule of A.:A.: that the sacramental name of the Adeptus Minor is not openly disclosed outside of the Order, and certainly not without good cause; see especially Crowley's own footnote in Chapter IV of The Equinox of the Gods. Furthermore, Crowley repeatedly went out of his way to conceal this one motto, which would seem to indicate his personal wishes, which we respect. Nonetheless, all of this is now moot, since the motto subsequently was published openly, rendering it a matter of public record.

"Christeos Lucifias" is the Enochian phrase meaning, "Let there be Light." It likely was inspired, in part, by Crowley's mentor Allan Bennett, whose motto, lehi Or, has the same meaning in Hebrew. To my knowledge, Crowley only signed one published work with this name, that being Ambrosii Magi Hortus Rosarum (1902), later included in Vol. II of his Collected Works; and he did not there disclose that it was his Adeptus Minor motto.

²⁹ This is left as written in the First Edition. We know of no reason to suppose it is any less true today, in 2000.

George Cecil Jones³³ (1873-1953)

An analytical chemist by profession, and Welsh by birth, Cecil Jones was initiated a Neophyte (0=0) of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn on July 12, 1895, taking the aspiration name Volo Noscere (V.N.: "I Will to Know"). Eighteen months later, on January 11, 1897, he had completed the First Order course and was advanced to the 5=6 Grade of Adeptus Minor. His Second Order motto bore the initials D.D.S.

It was Jones who, almost two years later in October 1898, recommended that Crowley join the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, and sponsored him for his Neophyte initiation. For that ceremony, Frater V.N. served as Kerux, an officer who, in many ways, corresponds to The Hermit of the Tarot, and to the god Mercury or Hermes. For years after, Crowley referred to Jones as "The Hermit," and dedicated to him a poem by that name in The Winged Beetle (1910). The poem is a marvelous depiction of a man who lives in accord with the Tao; that is, the Qabalistic "Pure Fool." A brief excerpt will make the point well enough:

God sent all plagues; he laughed and heeded not,
Till people took him for an idiot.

God sent all joys; he only laughed amain,
Till people certified him as insane.

But somehow all his fellow-lunatics
Began to imitate his silly tricks.

And stranger still, their prospects so enlarged,
That one by one the patients were discharged.

Along with Allan Bennett (V.:H.: Frater Iehi Aur), Jones was one of Crowley's two primary mentors and tutors during the Englishman's early days of magical training.

During the revolt that erupted in the Order in 1900, Jones sided with Mathers against the rebellious London Isis-Urania members. His name appears on the earliest rosters of the new Isis Temple that was formed by Mathers, Westcott, Berridge, and a number of loyalists. Sometime before the summer of 1906, he had attained the Grade of Adeptus Exemptus, 7=4.

What we know of Cecil Jones, the man, is fragmentary. His diaries and private papers are preserved by a university archive here in the United States; but, as yet, they have not been fully available for review. Most of what we know of him came from brief remarks by his friends.

Crowley, in his autobiographical Confessions, described Jones as follows:

He possessed a fiery but unstable temper, was the son of a suicide, and bore a striking resemblance to many conventional representations of Jesus Christ. His spirit was both ardent and subtle. He was very widely read in Magick; and, being by profession an analytical chemist, was able to investigate the subject in a scientific spirit.

He was a family man, a proud and caring father and (eventually) grandfather. Julian Baker (V.:H.: Frater Causa Scientiæ) described him as "a man who is a much greater magician than I am myself." His colleague, Captain (later General) J.F.C. Fuller³⁴ described Jones as having "had a peculiarity, which was that he told the truth." Sir Gerald Kelley³⁵ (Frater Eritis Similis Deo) wrote of him that, "There was only one member [of the G.D.], . . . whom I was impressed by and whom I liked. His name was Jones and there were very few as sincere as he was."

³⁴ Frater Per Ardua, 0^c=0^m; as V.:H.: Fra. Non Sine Fulmine (5^c=6^m Honorary), the first Cancellarius of the A.:A.:.

³⁵ Sir Gerald F. Kelley, an Isis-Urania initiate before 1900, later became Aleister Crowley's brother-in-law. He is best known as an academic painter, a President of the Royal Academy, and a Commander of the Legion of Honour. His view of Jones is placed in perspective by considering Kelley's criticism of Crowley (whom he otherwise quite enjoyed as a chum), that he was "not exactly a gentleman;" and, regarding his fellow G.D. members, Kelley wrote, "I was quite shocked by the vulgarity and commonness of most." The present quotation regarding G.C. Jones is from a 1965 letter from Sir Gerald to author Ithell Colquhoun, as quoted in her book, Sword of Wisdom. (Incidentally, there was only one man named Jones ever initiated into Isis-Urania Temple.)

From reports, he was levelheaded and to the point. Crowley recorded numerous anecdotes of this. When Crowley took a flat in London under the name Count Vladimir Svareff, to live quietly and anonymously, Jones told him a wiser man would have called himself "Smith." In 1900, when the London adepts were in revolt, running around hysterically trying to decide if Mathers was rightfully their Chief, Jones observed that, if Mathers were not the head of the Order and the trusted representative of the Secret Chiefs as claimed, then there was no Order to fuss about. When Crowley showed Jones The Book of the Law, Jones said Chapter III reminded him a lot of the Old Testament Jehovah (a warrior god demanding abundant blood rites that make those of Horus seem tame in comparison) and The Book of Revelations.

He reportedly said of himself, "I am not an appreciator of poetry, and I have no Keats."

On July 27, 1906, Crowley and Jones held a private celebration during which they reenacted the old Adeptus Minor ceremony through which they had passed six and nine years earlier, respectively. Crowley recorded this in his diary as, "P. crucified by D.D.S." To their mutual surprise, they obtained a striking mystical result, far exceeding what either had experienced from the ceremony before. Two evenings later, these adepts discussed the formation of a new Order. Jones required the sanction of higher authority. Nonetheless, they set out together to put the new system in place, anticipating the time such Authority might arise.

They celebrated the Autumnal Equinox on September 22, and continued their work of building. Then, between September and December, something extraordinary happened. From Crowley's diaries and papers, we have a pretty clear idea what magical work he was performing; but we do not know what Jones was doing. We only know the result. By December, they each had been prepared for admission to the Third Order and the Grade of Master of the Temple.

Crowley recorded that on December 7, 1906, "Jones writes from the Samadhi-dhattu," i.e., the more or less continuing state of Samadhi.

On December 10, Jones visited Crowley. "Jones says Oû Mh [Crowley] is 8°=3°," Crowley recorded. Certain other confirmations followed. Crowley summarized this period in his Confessions:

SAMUEL & MOIRA MacGREGOR MATHERS
Frater 'S Rioghial Mo Dhream and Soror Vestigia
Nulla Retrosum in 1900, soon after the London Revolt.

In the month of December, the Secret Chiefs formally invited me, through G.R. [sic] Frater D.D.S., to take my place officially in the Third Order. I still felt that I was not worthy. . . .

The two spent the Christmas season together. Crowley wrote a satirical account of this visit as Ali Sloper; or, The Forty Liars in his anthology, Konx Om Pax, published the following year.

One can only guess at the amazing character of that time. Together, Crowley and Jones were reaching mystical levels for which they had long hoped, but which neither had ever seen approached by any other member of the Order that raised them. Together they were building the foundation of a reformed and renewed Order, to transmit what they had been given to those who would come after them.

By April 8, 1907, Crowley had written, and Jones had approved, the History Lecture of the A.:A.: (Liber 61 vel Causæ), which is quoted in various parts of this book. Therefore, every event described in Liber 61 already had occurred. They had received the Authority Jones required.

Just before the dramatic events of December 1906, Crowley summarized his personal feelings about Jones. The third and final volume of Crowley's Collected Works was being prepared for publication.³⁶ On November 18, 1906, the eighth anniversary of his Neophyte initiation, Crowley wrote the following "Epilogue and Dedication" of Volume III to Jones:

MY DEAR ION. – I address you by the unfamiliar title in giving you, a man self-damned, God knows how unjustly, as the author of the phrase, "I am not an appreciator of poetry, and I have no Keats," these volumes. For the matter thereof is already in great part yours and as such cannot be given. The rest I offer because it is hardly possible to close definitely, as I do now, a period of many years' work, without reflecting upon that period as a whole. And, when I do so, I find you at the beginning like Ladas or Pheidippides of old, running – ready to run until you achieve the goal or your heart bursts; but you are among a crowd. I join you. Eight years ago this day you, Hermes, led me blindfold to awake a chosen runner of the course. "In all my wanderings in darkness your light shone before me though I knew it not."³⁷ To-day (one may almost hope, turning into the straight) you and I are alone. Terrible and joyous! We shall find companions at the End, at the banquet, lissome and cool and garlanded: companions with a Silver Star or maybe a Jewelled Eye mobile and uncertain – as if alive – on their foreheads. We shall be bidden to sit, and they will wreath us with immortal flowers, and give us to drink of the seemly wine of Iacchus – well! but until then, unless my heart deceives me, no third shall appear to join us. Indeed, may two attain? It seems a thing impossible in nature. May it not be that – near as the resounding roar of the viewless spectators sounds to our dust-dimmed ears – there stands some awful opposer in the way, some fear or some seduction? Why do you grip that bar in your left hand? Does not this loin-cloth irk my limbs? We should have shaved our heads before the race – the curls are moist and heavy! Why did we cumber ourselves with sandals? Long ere now our feet would have grown hard. Well, if my heart bursts, it bursts; you must give these volumes to the young athletes, that they may learn wherefore I failed – wherefore it was given unto me to run thus far. For, if I have put nothing else therein, most surely that is there.

Such is the available record of George Cecil Jones. Only a few years later he lost an embarrassing and highly publicized libel suit against The Looking Glass, a leading tabloid of the day, which Jones believed had inferred (inaccurately) the existence of a homosexual relationship between himself and Crowley. In London in 1911, not many years after the Wilde trial, this was a devastating accusation. The trial was an absurd affair – space constraints prevent a detailing of the ridiculous course the proceedings took – with the net result being that Jones, as plaintiff, was found not to have made his case against The Looking Glass. Consequently, as a family man and professional, Jones no longer could afford to be formally associated with Crowley. Although he continued to lend his name, as Præmonstrator, to the various A.:A.: formal instructions, he apparently took no active role in the management of the Order after 1911.

The purpose for which the two men had come back together in 1906 had been accomplished. Like paired kerubim, they had invited the mystical Lightning Flash, and it had come. By their fused polarity, they had received both the bones and the flesh of the new system. They had founded the new Order.

Eight years later, Crowley recorded the following in his diary for December 30, 1919, just after a visit with Jones:

It was a sad interview. He is the same dear man as he was, strangely gray for 46, but his turning back from the Abyss is evident. He is just a nice simple bourgeois, interested in the number and quality of his offspring.

Crowley considered that Jones had fallen back from the Great Work to become a provincial grandfather. It is clear that the two men had different priorities for their respective incarnations! One wonders, though, whether anyone who had accomplished what G.:H.: Frater D.D.S. had accomplished could be regarded a failure. Had he persisted further in his active role in the Order, could Crowley's personality have long tolerated the continued presence (as an equal) of this man he regarded as his mentor? If Crowley's other friendships are any clue, the polite answer is, "Probably not."

There is a private history of George Cecil Jones' subsequent spiritual work, which is not yet a matter of public record; nor does it relate directly to the topic of the present book. He died in 1953.

³⁷ A paraphrase of a line in the Golden Dawn Neophyte ritual referring to Jones' office of Kerux.

The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn

Founded in 1887, and commencing open temple work in 1888, the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn has been the single most important influence on the development of the Western Mystery Tradition over the last century.

The history of the Golden Dawn has been told redundantly by many authors. As a way to concisely review the tale, I will quote extensively from the A.:A.: History Lction, Liber Causæ, adding supplemental explanations:

Some years ago a number of cipher MSS. were discovered and deciphered by certain students. They attracted much attention, as they purported to derive from the Rosicrucians. You will readily understand that the genuineness of the claim matters no whit, such literature being judged by itself, not by its reputed sources.

The discovery reportedly was made in the mid-1880s. By one or another means, the "cipher manuscripts" came into the hands of William Wynn Westcott, a high ranking freemason and scholar of Qabalistic and other occult matters. He arranged for them to be deciphered by one of his brethren, Samuel Liddell Mathers.

Among the MSS. was one which gave the address of a certain person in Germany, who is known to us as S.D.A. Those who discovered the ciphers wrote to S.D.A., and in accordance with instructions received, an Order was founded which worked in a semi-secret manner.

"S.D.A." was G.:H.: Soror Sapiens Dominabitur Astris (Anna Sprengle), 7^c=4^q. Some historians, who believe the cipher manuscripts to have been forgeries, have disputed her existence. Her first letter to Westcott is dated November 26, 1887. The Order that came into being was called the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. By "semi-secret" is meant that its existence was disclosed to any who were interested, but the actual proceedings of the Order were reserved to initiated and obligated members.

After some time S.D.A. died: further requests for help were met with a prompt refusal from the colleagues of S.D.A. It was written by one of them that S.D.A.'s scheme had always been regarded with disapproval. But since the absolute rule of the adepts is never to interfere with the judgment of any other person whomsoever – how much more, then, one of themselves, and that one most highly revered! – they had refrained from active opposition. The adept who wrote this added that the Order had already quite enough knowledge to enable it or its members to formulate a magical link with the adepts.

WILLIAM WYNN WESTCOTT

Frater Sapere Aude of the First Order, or G.:H.: Frater Non Omnis Moriar of the Second Order. Despite Mathers' greater visibility, Westcott's was the primary spiritual force behind the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. After the Revolt in 1900 he remained in close association with both primary factions, quietly revising the rituals of the Stella Matutina for Dr. Felkin while serving initially as Praemonstrator of Mathers' Isis Temple of the Alpha et Omega.

The letter, from Soror S.D.A.'s colleague, G.:H.: Fra. Ex Uno Disces Omnes, is dated August 23, 1890.

Shortly after this, one called S.R.M.D. announced that he had formulated such a link, and that himself and two others were to govern the Order. New and revised rituals were issued, and fresh knowledge poured out in streams.

S.R.M.D. is Mathers, as known in the First Order: Frater 'S Rioghail Mo Dhream. The two others were Brother Westcott (Frater Sapere Aude in the First Order; or G.:H.: Frater Non Omnis Moriar), and Brother William Robert Woodman (Frater Magna est Veritas in the First Order; or G.:H.: Frater Vincit Omnia Veritas).

We must pass over the unhappy juggleries which characterized the next period. It has throughout proved impossible to elucidate the complex facts.

We content ourselves, then, with observing that the death of one of his two colleagues [Woodman], and the weakness of the other [Westcott], secured to S.R.M.D. the sole authority. The rituals were elaborated, though scholarly enough, into verbose and pretentious nonsense: the knowledge proved worthless, even where it was correct: for it is in vain that pearls, be they ever so clear and precious, are given to the swine.

The ordeals were turned into contempt, it being impossible for any one to fail therein. Unsuitable candidates were admitted for no better reason than that of their worldly prosperity.

In short, the Order failed to initiate.

Scandal arose and with it, schism.

In 1900 one P., a brother, instituted a rigorous test of S.R.M.D. on the one side and the Order on the other.

P. is Frater Perdurabo – Aleister Crowley.

He discovered that S.R.M.D., though a scholar of some ability and a magician of remarkable powers, had never attained complete initiation: and further had fallen from his original place, he having imprudently attracted to himself forces of evil too great and terrible for him to withstand.

The claim of the Order that the true adepts were in charge of it was definitely disproved.

In the Order, with two certain exceptions and two doubtful ones, he found no persons prepared for initiation of any sort.

He thereupon by his subtle wisdom destroyed both the Order and its chief.

One awkward semantic matter should be cleared up now. The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn is popularly known simply as "the Golden Dawn." However, Golden Dawn is also the proper name of the Outer College of the A.:A.: – mentioned earlier in this Introduction as G.:D.:. Obviously, we must be able, in the chapters that follow, to distinguish easily between these two Orders. It is not convenient always to give the full title "Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn:" and its abbreviation (H.O.G.D.) always comes out sounding less than respectful when pronounced aloud.³⁸ Whenever this problem has arisen, I have referred to the H.O.G.D. as "the old Order," or "the old Golden Dawn," or "Mathers' Golden Dawn," or some other phrase that makes clear what is meant. This frees the simple term "Golden Dawn" for unambiguous application to the Outer College of the A.:A.:.

Also, the Second Order from which the Mathers Golden Dawn depended was properly called Rosæ Rubæ et Auræ Crucis ("The Ruby Rose & the Golden Cross"), or R.R. et A.C. This is not to be confused with the Inner College of the A.:A.:, which is called simply R.:C.:. To increase the likelihood of my being understood in what follows, I have uniformly ignored the name R.R. et A.C.,³⁹ and referred to it simply as "the Golden Dawn Second Order," or some such phrase.

As with the A.:A.:, the old Golden Dawn had a grade structure based upon the sephiroth of the Tree of Life, with similar nomenclature. The table on the next page summarizes and compares the two systems. Several points should be noted in these tables.

First, the circle and square characters have been used in this book with A.:A.: grade designations (e.g. 0[○]=0[□]) but not with old G.D. grade designations (e.g. 0=0). This is purely a convention adopted to distinguish easily which grades are being discussed at any given point. The circle and square characters are equally applicable, as symbols, to the grades of the old Order.

Matching grade numbers in each column reflect matching sephirothic attributions. For example, 3=8 and 3[○]=8[□] both refer to a grade corresponding to sephirah 8, Hod. The Tree of Life diagram on page 4 can be consulted in this respect.

The first three grade names differ somewhat in the two lists: then, beginning with Practicus, they are the same in each list, except for the Portal Grade, which, in A.:A.:, is openly called Dominus Liminis.

³⁸ I prefer "HO GoD!" to "Hog'd."

³⁹ Crowley occasionally, though rarely, also called the A.:A.: Inner College the R.R. et A.C.; witness, for example, passages in his commentary to Liber 65.

OLD G.D. GRADES

0=0	Neophyte
1=10	Zelator
2=9	Theoricus
3=8	Practicus
4=7	Philosophus Portal
5=6	Adeptus Minor Zelator Adeptus Minor (ZAM) Theoricus Adeptus Minor (ThAM) Practicus Adeptus Minor (PAM) Philosophus Adeptus Minor (PhAM) Adeptus Adeptus Minor (AAM)
6=5	Adeptus Major
7=4	Adeptus Exemptus

A.:A.: GRADES

0 ^o =0 [□]	Probationer
1 ^o =10 [□]	Neophyte
2 ^o =9 [□]	Zelator
3 ^o =8 [□]	Practicus
4 ^o =7 [□]	Philosophus Dominus Liminis
5 ^o =6 [□]	Adeptus Minor Adeptus Minor Without Adeptus Minor Within
6 ^o =5 [□]	Adeptus Major
7 ^o =4 [□]	Adeptus Exemptus

Although matching grade numbers in the two lists correspond to identical sephiroth, they do not correspond to the same sephiroth on the same level. For example, the 2=9 Grade of the old Order, and the 2^o=9[□] Grade of the A.:A.: both correspond to the sephirah Yesod; but they represent very different levels of responding to Yesod consciousness.

Two simple examples should suffice to clarify this point: To pass from the 1=10 Grade to the 2=9 Grade of the old Order, one had to memorize a few pages of intellectual matter consisting primarily of definitions of terms used in alchemy and qabalah. After passing an examination in this memorization, the candidate then passed through a ritual of advancement, taking about an hour, and was declared a 2=9. In contrast, the chief requirement to pass from the 1^o=10[□] Grade to the 2^o=9[□] Grade of the A.:A.: is to acquire mastery of the so-called "astral plane," opening oneself at will to conscious awareness in the World of Yetzirah with full mobility and control of one's excursions. As I am sure you see, this is quite a difference! For this reason, advancement in the old Order scheme is often said to be "formal," while advancement in the A.:A.: is said to be "actual."

Another example: A full Adeptus Minor 5=6 of the old Order swore, at his or her initiation, to attain the mystical experience called the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel, or "to unite myself to my higher and Divine Genius." The 5=6 initiation represented the beginning of that clear aspiration. In contrast, the full Adeptus Minor 5^o=6[□] of the A.:A.: is one who actually has attained this result. Although the old 5=6 initiation, when properly done, hardly can be called a mere formality (I write as one who has been on both sides of the Pastos lid), it is, nonetheless, surely obvious that the actuality of the 5^o=6[□] attainment in the A.:A.: is incomparably greater.

The reason for this disparity lies in the subtle structure of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. If you examine the foregoing table, you will see that the grades of Zelator through Adeptus are repeated within the Adeptus Minor Grade itself. The grades 1=10 through 4=7 were, so to speak, "dry runs" – a ceremonial exposure to the symbolism of the sephiroth, an imprinting of a pattern on subconsciousness, but without substantially inward "working" of the actual transformative phenomena of each sephirah. This is not to say that the old First Order ceremonies are ineffective; nor am I implying that, under the guidance of able Chiefs, members of such an association never work. However, the level of that work in the best situations is but a hint of what is to come later. The Elemental Powers, equated and equilibrated in the old First Order ceremonies, are predominantly aspects of the personality (that is, microcosmic Yetziratic forces); and there are higher places to fly!

Having completed this "dry run" of the sephiroth from Malkuth to Tiphereth, the new Zelator Adeptus Minors would find themselves again as at the base of the Tree of Life. The theory was that, within the subgrades of Adeptus Minor, the aspirant actually would 'work' the sephiroth, requiring actual inner transitions from sphere to sphere and plane to plane. By this schema, the Adeptus Adep- tus Minor would have attained what the Zelator Adeptus Minor had sworn to undertake.

It did not work. The Order failed to initiate.

As an example of how poorly it worked, Mathers never finished writing the instructional papers for the Theoricus Adeptus Minor subgrade, and scarcely even outlined his intent for the higher subgrades.

Ideally, the Adeptus Major, 6=5, should have completed all the subgrades of 5=6 through Adeptus Adeptus Minor (A.A.M.). It seems never to have happened. When Mathers became eager to test the effects of his new 6=5 and 7=4 ceremonies, he selected four leading 5=6 members⁴⁰ and announced that he would pass them through the 6=5 ceremony once they had completed the Z.A.M. work, and through the 7=4 ceremony once they had completed the Th.A.M. work.

This is one example of why Crowley and Jones claimed that the old Order failed to initiate.

When the A.:A.: was founded, Fratres D.D.S. and O.M. essentially dispensed with the old First Order altogether. For their new Outer College, they took the old Adeptus Minor subgrades. They also incorporated the methods of yoga into each grade, according to its symbolism – for example, Gñana Yoga (Union by Knowledge) for Hod, and Bhakti Yoga (Union by Devotion) for Netzach.

In summary, though the new grades had identical numerical designations, and similar or identical names, they represented entirely different attainments. A Zelator (2°=9°), or even an advanced Neophyte (1°=10°), of the A.:A.: is every bit the equal of a 5=6 of the old Order. A 5°=6° of the A.:A.: – had such ever appeared during Mathers' watch – would have been considered an 8=3 in the old Order!⁴¹

⁴¹ For the most part, there is no evidence that any of the "adepts" of the old Order attained to the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel while still a member of the Order, although several did so after leaving it, founded on what they had received there. Crowley and Jones are just two examples. Dr. Henry Pullen-Burry (V.:H.: Frater Anima Pura Sit) was another. In later generations, Paul Foster Case and Israel Regardie became striking and important examples. If there was one exception to the general rule – one original H.O.G.D. adept who truly attained – it surely was Florence Farr (V.:H.: Soror Sapientia Sapienti Dona Data). Her story, along with much more of this general history of the Order, can be found in Mary Greer's remarkable book,

This raises an interesting question about the actual attainment of Fratres O.M. and D.D.S. in 1906. When they recorded that they had been admitted to the Magister Templi Grade, was this by Old or New standards? There is some evidence for the former. For example, Crowley's attainment was the result of performing the Sacred Magick of Abra-Melin, a Work usually related to the Adeptus Minor (5°=6°) Grade; and it was a reenactment of a critical part of the old 5=6 ceremony (in July 1906) that opened a gate to the greater attainment reached by both adepts later that year. Crowley also felt that he did not really deserve the 8°=3° Grade in 1906 – not, in fact, until three years later. Unfortunately, in the absence of adequate records – in the absence of any available diaries from Jones – we are not in a place to know for sure whether he actually attained, in 1906, what today would be called 8°=3°, or only what we now call 5°=6°.

Occasionally, in the chapters here following, quotations from the old Golden Dawn rituals will be used to highlight various instructional points. This should not be interpreted to imply anything more than analogy. When establishing the new A.:A.: system, its founders' only experience of the nature and symbolism of the sephirothic grades was in the grade ceremonies through which they themselves had passed, and which Jones repeatedly had helped administer.

LIGHT IN EXTENSION

In its highest interpretation, the Order A.:A.: is identical with the Third Order, or Collegium Summum, which is also identified by the letters S.:S.:.

Were we not otherwise informed, we might suspect that these initials refer to the Arcanum Arcanorum ("Secret of Secrets"), which is to be found within the Sanctum Sanctorum ("Holy of Holies"). In fact, the initials have a different meaning.

It has been stated frequently and correctly that the letters A.:A.: refer to the phrase "Silver Star," which is, in fact, what the letters S.:S.: represent.

However, something that has been stated almost as frequently is that the true name of the Order is the Latin phrase for "silver star," Argentum Asirum. This is not correct.

During Aleister Crowley's life, he took care not to disclose the actual name of the Order except to its initiates. However, since his death, certain previously unpublished documents and notes have been circulated widely among peripheral groups of magick students. A point has been reached where there are more people unassociated with the A.:A.: who know its actual name than there are initiates. This being the case, there is no longer a good reason for keeping a nonsecret secret from the people it was intended most to serve.

The name is Astron Argon (ΑΣΤΡΟΝ ΑΡΓΟΝ). It is the Greek – not Latin – phrase meaning "silver star."

At first it may seem that it does not really matter whether the initials A.A. are Greek or Latin if the translation means the same thing. However, to the Qabalist, there is a great difference. By gematria – a Qabalist's numerology – the Greek Astron Argon enumerates to 451, the value of the Greek words Konx Om Pax (ΚΟΝΞ ΟΜ ΠΑΞ).

Konx Om Pax – an important mystical phrase, interpreted in the old Golden Dawn as meaning "Light in Extension" – is also the name of the only book Aleister Crowley wrote and published during the two year period (1906-07) when he and Jones were most concentratedly formulating the A.:A.: system.⁴²

Konx Om Pax, the book, is seen, on inspection, to be a veritable Manifesto of the A.:A.: It includes an introductory and dedicatory essay that gently criticizes the old Order while stating the emerging principles of the new one. Its dedication (virtually an invitation) is to those who have fallen away from the old Order, yet are true children of the Light. Then follows The Wake World, a Qabalistic fairy tale outlining the structure of the Order; Ali Sloper, or The Forty Liars, a satire on the Crowley-Jones collaboration in December 1906, and a spoof on the major players of the old Order; Thien Tao, an essay on the art of government and producing genius at will; and a long piece called The Stone of Abiegnus, at least the title of which has great relevance to the attainment of the Great Work.

Konx Om Pax – Light in Extension. This, in a phrase, is the entire meaning, purpose, and method of the Order A.:A.:. And that Light is the Light of a Silver Star, by which simple name we know the Third Order and the Masters thereof.

451 also has other significance. Among its several important Hebrew correspondences is the phrase Eth ha-Adam (אֵת הָאָדָם), "The Essence of Humanity." In the A.:A.: is found that true "essence of humanity" which is indigenous to every one of us.

The initials R.:C.:, applied to the Inner College of the A.:A.:, stand for "Rosy Cross."

As said previously, the initials G.:D.: (the title of the First Order) stand for "Golden Dawn."

One Star in Sight

Besides Astron Argon, and the oft-repeated Latin equivalent, other ideas surface, from time to time, of what the letters A.:A.: might mean. A frequent request from readers of earlier editions of this book is that we discuss some of these.

The non-Latin alternative to Astron Argon suggested most often is Aster Argos (ΑΣΤΗΡ ΑΡΓΟΣ). It, too, is a correct Greek rendering of the words "Silver Star." It is particularly attractive to many students because it appears in either the public writings or private papers of three A.:A.: members from Crowley's lifetime: Charles Stansfeld Jones (Fratr Achad), C.F. Russell (Fratr Genesthai), and Kenneth Grant (Fratr Aossic). At first, these three appear to be a significant number of diverse initiates seeming to have the same "inside information." However, these are not three separate witnesses. Though all three men had personal access to Crowley, Genesthai was a student working directly under Achad, and Grant, had extensive contact with Achad. This rendering of the name, therefore, tracks back to only a single source: Frater Achad.

Achad had impressive credentials within the A.:A.: One would like to trust his statement on the name of the Order. Yet it is ΑΣΤΡΟΝ ΑΡΓΟΝ, not ΑΣΤΗΡ ΑΡΓΟΣ, that we find recorded at least twice in Crowley's handwriting (once in a note, and once in an official document). Any other claims regarding the actual name of the Order must take second place to this.

What makes Aster Argos particularly interesting, though, as a secondary form of the name, is its numerical value, 489. This is also the value of Σοθις, Sothis, the Greek name of the star Sirius, ⁴² What later became Liber 777 was also written during that time, but not published until 1909.

brightest star in the nocturnal sky. Sirius commonly is held to be the physical expression of that "Silver Star" after which the Order is named.⁴³

Even before the founding of the current incarnation of the Order circa 1906, the letters A.:A.: had a long, if relatively obscure, history in Western esoteric tradition. They appear, in passing, as a name for a secret Order in the 19th Century writings of Pascal Beverly Randolph. They also appeared in 16th and 17th Century British manuscripts and woodcuts peripheral to early Masonic and Rosicrucian circles. Furthermore, beyond these historical uses, personal interpretations of the double-A emerge in the work of individual aspirants. They are affectionately understood, as well, to refer to the Angel and the Abyss (the two main threshold attainments in the Order), or to the relationship of the Angel and the Adept (which was nearly a subtitle of the First Edition of this book).

But Astron Argon is the name handed down to us by one of only two sources who were there at the start of the Order, and likely to know what they meant the letters to stand for.

THE HOLY SEAL OF THE A.:A.:

On the front of this book is the Sigillum Sanctum Fraternitatis A.:A.: – the Holy Seal of the Fraternitas A.:A.:

This Seal first appeared in Book IV, Part I (1911). It did not appear anywhere in the first volume (first ten numbers) of THE EQUINOX.

The central part – the seven-pointed star and its embellishing features – also appeared in Crowley's The Book of Lies (1913), Cap. 49. By itself, it is called the Seal, or Star, of Babalon.

The heptagram is an ensign of the Great Order at every level. It is the pattern of the Seven-Branded Candlestick, the Vault of the Adepti, and the seal upon the gates of the City of Pyramids – demarcating, respectively, admission to the First Order, the Second, and the Third.

With two points uppermost and one point downward, the heptagram assumes a distinctly feminine quality. This is reinforced by the predominance of the name BABALON, which is the basis of this entire seal. BABALON is a holy name associated with Binah. She is essentially equivalent to Shakti, or to the most ecstatic formulations of the Shekinah. BABALON can be studied deeply in The Vision & the Voice (Liber 418). For now, it is only important that you understand that she is the manifestation of that Reality which betokens admission to the Third Order; that Her name consists of seven letters; and that it enumerates to 156.

The seven-pointed star refers, among other things, to the seven letters of Her name, which are placed within the points of the Star. (The point of the heptagram at which the name begins is, by Hermetic tradition, attributed to the Moon, to the Hebrew letter Gimel, and to the Tarot Trump whose esoteric name is "The Priestess of the Silver Star." This may or may not have been intended in the original design of this Seal.)

Before going further, I must digress to explain one of the entertainments and, simultaneously, an exercise in mental discipline with which Crowley and his friend Oscar Eckenstein occupied themselves on mountain climbing excursions (presumably not during the actual climbing). They would attempt to represent any number soever by employing the number 4 exactly four times, in combination with any mathematical symbols they chose. For example:

THE CEILING OF THE VAULT OF THE ADEPTI

The heptagonal "Vault of the Adepti," from the 5=6 Grade of the old Order, certainly was an inspiration for the Seal of Babalon. Note the attributions of the sephiroth to the points of the heptagram. This Vault is the cup, or womb, of Babalon, into which the Adept offers every drop of his blood (or life) in the Mysteries of the Rosy Cross.

⁴³ This correspondence is so attractive that when the Chiefs of the Soror Estai lineage of A.:A.: decided to assign (internal to the lineage) an official catalogue number to the important essay "One Star in Sight," they labeled it Liber 489.

 1 &= (4+4) \div 4 - 4 \\
 2 &= (4+4) \div (4+4) \\
 18 &= (4 \times 4.4) \div .4 \\
 128 &= 4^4 \div (4 - \sqrt{4})
 \end{aligned}$$

Crowley recorded that, by this device, they had succeeded in generating every number (every positive integer) up to about 170 except 113; and from there to about 300 with very few gaps.

This is relevant to the present discussion because the Sigillum Sanctum of the A.:A.: is formed on a similar principle, using the number 7 seven times. Remembering that the name BABALON consists of seven letters and enumerates to 156, we find that:

By taking slight artistic license with the size and distribution of the numerals and mathematical symbols, we obtain the following:

 77 + \text{O} + 77 \\

Virtually no imagination is required to bridge between this and the final design:

Therefore, in addition to the geometric symbolism of the heptagram, a divided Vessica Piscis, and the three crosses, we have important mathematical and artistic symbolism whereby the design represents the name BABALON itself, as ensign of the Third Order. This, then, is the heart of that image which has been adopted as the seal – the sigil – of the Great Order itself.

WORKING THE A.:A.: SYSTEM

Since the death of Frater O.M. in 1947 and Frater D.D.S. a few years later, there have been no universal Chiefs of the A.:A.:. Crowley's appointed successor in the O.T.O., S.:H.: Frater Saturnus (Karl Germer), 8^c=3^q, was also one of the senior living A.:A.: members at Crowley's death, and many turned to him for guidance. After Germer's death, there clearly was no one who emerged visibly as a central guiding figure.

This does not mean, however – as some have suggested – that the A.:A.: ceased to exist or to function as a manifest Order. The central unit of the A.:A.:'s functioning is the work of a given teacher with a given student.

It is written that an A.:A.: member only officially knows his or her own teacher, and any students that the member may have admitted to the system. This instruction has given rise to a lot of silliness and paranoid secrecy by people who have overlooked or misunderstood the word "officially." Let me, then, say plainly that this secrecy is not required. Nor does it accord with the published working descriptions of the A.:A.: system.

For example, in one grade, the Imperator and Præmonstrator of the Order specially evaluate the aspirant, even if neither of these officers is his or her Superior. In each grade, one's Superior is instructed to file the record of one's admission or advancement with the Cancellarius (see Liber 185 in Appendix B). Also, responsibility for a student "floats uphill." The senior member of a lineage⁴⁴ is ultimately responsible for the work not only of his or her own students, but of their students, and their students, and their students. . . .

Finally, one's membership in A.:A.: simply is not secret; in fact, as explained more fully in Chapter 2, quite the opposite may be true, depending on circumstances.

The real purpose of the rule not officially to know other members in general is that peers are not to work together. As Frater O.M. wrote in One Star in Sight:

⁴⁴ Consistent with Eastern customs governing lineages of a received tradition (and also in the spirit of the Rosicrucian tradition which is Europe's chief foundation in High Magick), a senior member may appropriately designate one student to assume responsibility, at the senior's death, for the lineage and all of its students. This requires a certain prior familiarity between the designated successor and the others.

The real object of the rule was to prevent Members of the same Grade working together and so blurring each other's individuality; also to prevent work developing into social intercourse.

A member may (in a limited way) work with those ahead of him or behind, but not those who are undergoing the same processes through which he also is passing.

Also, even though there is no world governing authority of the A.:A.:, its continued governance on Earth is ensured by the responsibility borne by each member for his or her students, and the continuity of the lineal descent implied by membership. Although not of an episcopal character, this lineal succession and continuity is no less 'apostolic'⁴⁵ than that on which the Church of Rome is built. A given lineage of the A.:A.: may have its own Chiefs – Præmonstrator, Imperator, Cancellarius – who only bear authority with respect to those students for whom they are responsible.⁴⁶

Occasionally I encounter a person who informs me that he (so far it always has been a "he") is in the A.:A.: On further discussion, it becomes evident that, by this, he means he has acquired the appropriate books and is doing his best, on his own, to follow the Order's curriculum. This effort is worthy of praise. Any such work stands an excellent chance of yielding some sort of profit (or even a prophet!). But it is not A.:A.: nor has the Student any assurance, without supervision, that he is working correctly. Inherent in the very definition of the A.:A.: system is the condition of direct transmission of a linkage from teacher to student; and the ceremony of admitting a Probationer is based on this reality.

For those who have no teacher, and wish to undertake the work as best they can alone, this present book should provide more than a little help; but let the student not fool himself into thinking that an authentic linkage is irrelevant. On the other hand, since all of the essential instructions are openly published, a given aspirant may have all that he or she needs to take up the Great Work and bring it to conclusion. Having considered the matter, let each make his or her own decision accordingly.

Something needs to be said concerning the adaptation of the formal A.:A.: system to the individual needs of a particular aspirant. First, let it be clear that the system is inherently individual, even though the assignments are precise and the thresholds invariable. There is no contradiction between a firm curriculum and individual needs: for the formal curriculum is merely that, a defining form within which the personal development of each seeker occurs. Although the grade assignments (discussed in detail in the chapters to come) designate specific thresholds which must be confronted and surpassed, the real work is often behind the scenes, in the response of the student's character, environment, and karma to the parameters of passage. There always must be the latitude or freedom to look behind the letter of an assignment and discover its spirit; nor can any person, no matter how wise, know in advance exactly what is required by the soul of another. But these are the exceptions which confirm the basic pattern; and never must they be allowed to become excuses for bypassing or avoiding an honest assignment due to some inner resistance or inability to perform it.

Although I have been careful to make this book descriptive of the A.:A.: pattern per se, rather than of my own personal Path, a couple of personal anecdotes may be appropriate in this Introduction to emphasize these last points. Those with experience say that at least one of the Outer College grades is especially hard, and at least one especially easy, for each aspirant. In my own case, I spent seven years in one grade, and only one month in another; nor was either of these the outcome I would have guessed in advance. The grade that – based on my personality and prior experience – I thought would take the least time of all, actually took many times longer than I would ever have guessed.

By hindsight, however, the reasons for all of this are now quite clear to me. At each stage, the Holy Guardian Angel has its own ideas (if I may be forgiven for the anthropomorphization) of what transformations are to be accomplished, what work is to be done. During the grade that lasted for seven years, I needed every one of those years to accomplish much that was not listed in the formal assignments, but which my life made evident to me. Then, having put off for more than six and a half years an assignment that I was sure would take a couple of years to perfect, I took up the neglected task and mastered it in about two months.

⁴⁵ Literally, "one sent forth." Its usage here is more precisely accurate than many be apparent at first.

⁴⁶ Historically, members below the Grade of Zelator, 2°=9°, did not communicate directly with the Chiefs as such. As an open example of this, compare, in Appendix B, the instructions written at the top of The Task of the Probationer with the corresponding instructions written near the top of The Task of the Neophyte.

This is not boasting. It is profound humility. I had little to do with it. The Angel had its own schedule and plans.

On another occasion, I had completed every formal requirement of a certain grade but one, the memorization of 27 short sentences. Even though I had previously memorized ten times that much of similar material, I sat for nearly two years, seemingly going no place, entirely blocked on that one task. I now know that it simply took the extra time for me to be ripened inwardly on certain points; and that I still had more work to do in that stage, whether I knew it then or not.

The main point here is that following the A.:A.: system cannot fail to be a most intimately personal journey, if it is pursued earnestly and wholeheartedly.

From the foregoing, we now turn to the secular. Perhaps money should not be an issue where purely spiritual matters are concerned; yet both the practical exigencies of books and other supplies on one hand, and the unstable thoughts and emotions routinely excited by considerations of cash on the other, require that we address the matter of money and the A.:A.:, if but to lay it to rest. Fortunately, we have a perfectly clear instruction in the essay One Star in Sight:

There is however an absolute prohibition to accept money or other material reward, directly or indirectly, in respect to any service connected with the Order, for personal profit or advantage. The penalty is immediate expulsion, with no possibility of reinstatement on any terms soever.

Unfortunately, even the plainest statements are not likely to be understood if read superficially. For example, the above does not mean that there is no exchange of money. On the contrary, that most canonical of A.:A.: documents, Liber 185 (see Appendix B), instructs that the Neophyte and Zealator shall each pay a certain sum, prior to initiation, in exchange for certain documents.

Additionally, we must consider the more subtle circumstances of the original A.:A.: Student program. As is detailed in Chapter 1 of this book, Crowley eventually required that, before any person could be admitted as an A.:A.: Probationer, they must possess approximately two dozen specific books, 80% of which were written and/or published by Crowley. However, this apparent commerce did not violate the A.:A.: rule stated above. Crowley made a habit of selling his books for a price barely above cost. He diverted any small surplus of funds back into the support of the Great Work – generally for more publishing.

Nor did he hesitate to ask others for direct financial contributions to the Order, and especially toward its publishing program. According to the evidence, he was ruthlessly honest in using such donations strictly for the purposes designated, and not for personal ends.

The relevant rule, it will be recalled, is that no A.:A.: member is to receive, with respect to the Order, any money or other material reward for personal profit or advantage. At the same time we are equally admonished in our most sacred text, The Book of the Law:

Establish at thy Kaaba a clerk-house: all must be done well and with business way.

It is a hallowed principle within all authentic initiatory schools that initiation is not for sale. Spirit may not be bought. Enlightenment is not a marketable commodity. The "Gold of the Wise" is an interior gold immeasurably more valuable than coin; or, more accurately, the two are incommensurable.

ON USING THIS BOOK

English vs. Non-English Titles

Certain conventions have been adopted in the preparation of this book.

Official A.:A.: instructions most often have Latin titles, and are numbered with Roman numerals. In this book, the more familiar Arabic numerals have been substituted, except in direct quotations. Where useful or meaningful, document titles have been translated into English.

Earlier in this century, when most of this material was written, it was commonplace that educated people were familiar with the classics and could read ancient Greek and Latin. Lamentably, this is no longer the situation. Certainly, readers will approach the present book with disparate educations, and with little guarantee of easy familiarity with ancient languages. I should, therefore, particularly mention that the Latin word liber simply means "book," and vel means "or." Thus, for example, Liber E vel Exercitiorum literally means, "Book E, or The Book of Exercises." It is also called Liber IX, which does not mean it is a book called "Ix," but that it is cataloged as Book 9.⁴⁷

The Pronoun Problem

A problem, which every conscientious writer must address, is how to handle the gender of pronouns. English does not have an ungendered personal pronoun; and it has long become unacceptable to me to employ uniformly masculine pronouns as though they were neuters. Different stylistic solutions are appropriate in different situations. However, the mere minimalization of pronouns, or avoiding them altogether, is not fully satisfactory. Studies have clearly shown that when English-speaking people hear masculine pronouns, they usually imagine pictures of men; when they hear feminine pronouns, they usually (but less frequently!) form inner pictures of women; and when gender is not specific in the language used, people usually visualize images only of men!!

The mental pictures we formulate and maintain define the parameters of our world, and of our actions, thoughts, feelings, and speech in that world. Only by explicit verbal inclusion of women in our world view can we heal, within each of us individually and all of us collectively, the indifference to, if not outright suppression of, the feminine.

This issue became unusually important to me in writing the present book, for two reasons.

First, throughout the book are frequent quotations, composed by other writers during an earlier era when the linguistic invisibility of the feminine was taught, by sophisticated thinkers, as being grammatically correct. It was simply the way people spoke and wrote. Over this quoted material, I have little control if I wish to represent my sources honestly. By themselves, the quotations paint vivid images of an almost exclusively male involvement in things magical and mystical. This is unacceptable. It troubles me that even the greatest of modern occult writers (who should have known better) have perpetuated this unconscious affront.

The second reason that the gender issue is so important in the present book is that those of you reading these pages, as a group, have minds of tremendous power compared to the majority of humanity. Your thoughts, your words, your inner pictures have a tremendously greater potential to affect (and, I suppose, to effect) the collective images of humanity as a whole. Therefore, the images I offer for your consideration, the pictures which form in your minds as a result of these written words, have an unusually great power to heal – but only if they are healing words.

Therefore, I have elected to balance the extensive and almost exclusive use of quoted masculine pronouns in Chapters I through II by using almost exclusively feminine pronouns in my own original paragraphs. Some of those friends and associates who have read these chapters for me have been startled by the pointed, intended feminine presence invoked thereby. Encountering unanticipated feminine pronouns has often made even the most feminist of my copyreaders uncomfortable, because of its frank unusualness. I invite you, each time you are startled by a generic "her" or "herself" in these chapters, to observe how infrequently you are exposed to inclusive feminine images in your usual reading and thinking; and, perhaps, when reading other books hereafter, to jostle yourself consciously by substituting feminine pronouns into your reading until you are entirely comfortable with their presence.

In this century, the Western Mysteries alone have produced such teachers as Dion Fortune, Ann Davies, Phyllis Seckler, Melita Denning, and others less well known – women of wisdom, understanding, compassion, strength, and light. In principle, these Mysteries have long "supported the admission of both sexes to our Order, on a perfect equality;" but that "perfect equality" has rarely been perfect in practice. Perhaps our small editorial decision and these present remarks will open the gates a little wider. It does little good to talk ⁴⁷ It is disturbingly common to hear young magical students refer to Crowley's Liber I vel Reguli as "Liber Vee," or as "Vel Reguli." The "V" is a Roman numeral 5, and the title is properly Liber Five, or Liber Reguli, or (when fully translated) The Book of the Prince. No condescension is intended toward any readers by this painstaking example. Sadly, it has been found necessary. The truly serious explorer of magical and mystical texts should consider seriously the advantages of familiarizing herself with Latin, ancient Greek, and ancient Hebrew, at least to the point that one can read their alphabets as readily as one's own, can readily use a dictionary or lexicon, and is not intimidated by the enigmas of their basic grammar.

CLASSIFICATIONS OF OFFICIAL A.:A.: INSTRUCTIONS

Class A Documents Consists of books of which may be changed not so much as the style of a letter: that is, they represent the utterance of an Adept entirely beyond the criticism of even the Visible Head of the Organization.

Class B Documents Consists of books or essays which are the result of ordinary scholarship, enlightened and earnest.

Class C Documents Consists of matter that is to be regarded rather as suggestive than anything else.

Class D Documents Consists of Official Rituals and Instructions.

Class E Documents Deal especially with the propagation of the Law of Thelema.

Notice that the first four have a successive correspondence to the four Qabalistic Worlds; or, one might rather say, they are of Neshamah (or Spirit), Ruach (here as the higher aspects of mind), Nephesch (the emotional plane where inference and allegory prevail), and the plane of direct action. Class E Documents, the last group to be added, then carry this further, out into the world.

and write about magick if we do not use our words, as well, actually to perform magick – actually to heal, freely, ourselves and our world.

Sections of the Book

Immediately following this Introduction are three preliminary documents that provide a further introduction of the A.:A.:’s principles, in the words of one of its founders. Liber Porta Lucis is one of the Thelemic Holy Books, and is considered inspired (for lack of a better one-word description), rather than authored. “Postcards to Probationers” and the Editorial from No. 2 of THE EQUINOX provide summaries of the essential premises of Scientific Illuminism, the technical training system employed by the A.:A.:.

Chapters 1 through 11 successively describe the various stages or grades of A.:A.:, from Student to Exempt Adept. Their purpose is to explain the formal requirements of each stage, relying, where feasible, on quoted source materials, supplemented by explanations of more obscure points.

I have carried the discussion only as far as the 7^o=4^o Grade of Adeptus Exemptus. I felt no need at all to discuss the Third Order grades.⁴⁸ First, I seriously question whether any Magister Templi needs the help! Second, I have seen too many students obsessed with “crossing the Abyss” (attaining to the Third Order) when they have not even grounded themselves in the basics of the First Order. Their underlying motivation seems to be a belief that if the 5^o=6^o Grade is cool, then 8^o=3^o must be cooler. For those so motivated, I will offer a more prudent alternative: Attain to adepthood, through the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel; then let the Angel guide you on the remainder of the journey, in whichever incarnation you are prepared to undertake it!

The Appendices are a small book in themselves. For the first time, all of the primary defining A.:A.: documents have been gathered in one place. The first three appendices – Liber Graduum Montis Abiegni (Liber 13), Liber Collegii Sanctii (Liber 185), and One Star in Sight – are the descriptive papers that define the A.:A.: grade tasks. To these have been added two additional documents: Appendix D contains official syllabi (reading and study lists) for each grade. Appendix E is a catalog of official documents categorized in five official Classes. Both lists are original compilations. Appendix D is based on the more limited syllabi published in THE EQUINOX No. 11 (that is, Vol. III, No. 1), fleshed out with other documents which Liber 13 and Liber 185 state are required for the grade. Nothing has been added to these lists unless one of the Order’s defining documents called for it. Finally, Appendix F discusses several matters of lesser importance, but without which the description of the Order would not be complete; viz., the characteristic robes and signs (gestures) of each grade, and the Order's internal governmental structure.

Finding the Books of Instruction

Formal instructions of A.:A.: – nearly all of which are writings of Aleister Crowley – frequently move in and out of print, one new edition of a particular work eventually replacing the last. Therefore, it would be futile, in most cases, to mention particular publishers or publications. Nonetheless, with the references available to book retailers, such as the annual publication Books in Print, and with high quality Internet commercial sites such as www.Amazon.com, you should have little trouble finding what is currently available. Bookstores specializing in occult or metaphysical subjects also often have used-book sections where out-of-print editions frequently float to the surface.

In the chapters that follow, many instructional papers and books will be mentioned. For those of you who decide to acquire these materials and pursue the A.:A.: methods, you may want to plan carefully how to get the most while shopping prudently. Appendix D gives assistance in finding where particular instructions are published. I will try, in the next few paragraphs, to summarize that information into a few pointers.

As indicated previously, most of the instructions (especially most of the important ones) are in Gems From the Equinox, edited by Israel Regardie. Gems should be your primary acquisition, to be followed in close order by *Magick in Theory & Practice*⁴⁹ by Aleister Crowley, and The Holy Books of Thelema. These three volumes should be the foundation of your A.:A.: library.

Most of the rest can be found in THE EQUINOX itself. Instructions which are in the first eleven issues of THE EQUINOX but are not included in Gems include: John St. John, The Chymical Jousting of Brother Perardua, A Note on Genesis, Liber Gaias (A Handbook of Geomancy), Aha!, Thesaurou Eidolon, The High History of Good Sir Palamedes the Saracen Knight, Gematria (from "The Temple of Solomon the King"). Across the Gulf, Adonis, A Description of the Cards of the Tarot, Sepher Sephiroth, The Key of the Mysteries, and The Message of the Master Therion.

If you cannot afford an EQUINOX set, you can obtain much of the same material by other routes. Most A.:A.: documents are available in plaintext form for free download at multiple World Wide Web locations. Other print availability includes the following:

Several important works are stand-alone books, obtainable in none of the anthologies. These include: The Equinox of the Gods, Eight Lectures on Yoga, The Book of Thoth, Liber Aleph (The Book of Wisdom & Folly), Khing Kang King, The Book of Lies, The Key of the Mysteries by Eliphas Levi, Aha!, The Book of Changes, and Tao Teh King. Some of these works, and others relevant to the A.:A.: tasks, are published by the College of Thelema; currently available titles are listed at the end of the present volume. Such smaller documents as Liber Gaias, A Note on Genesis, and Liber 78 (retitled Tarot Divination) have been available more recently as stand-alone booklets from various publishers.

Some of these documents are contained in the more available Vol. III, No. 10 of THE EQUINOX, published by O.T.O. These include many documents originally published in Vol. III, No. 1.

In a modern anthology variously called The Qabalah of Aleister Crowley or 777 and Other Qabalistic Writings are included three important Qabalistic works: Liber 777, after which the collection is sometimes named; the Hebrew gematria lexicon called Sepher Sephiroth; and an introductory article on "Gematria," which was originally part of the Temple of Solomon the King installment in EQUINOX No. 5.

In the out-of-print and unauthorized volume, Secret Rituals of the O.T.O. by Francis King, are published three A.:A.: Class B documents: De Nuptiis Secretis Deorum cum Hominibus, De Natura Deorum, and De Homunculo; and the Class D document, Liber Agape.

The Paris Working is contained in The Vision & the Voice with Commentary and Other Papers (EQUINOX Vol. IV, No. 2), published by Samuel Weiser, Inc. Liber Artemis Iota is contained in Aleister Crowley's final book, Magick Without Tears. The essays Science & Buddhism and The Sword of Song are contained in The Collected Works of Aleister Crowley. The Wake World and ⁴⁹ Magick in Theory & Practice, though often published by itself, is part of a larger composite work, Book 4. The definitive edition of this complete work (alternately titled Magick or Liber ABA), edited and annotated by Frater Hymenæus Beta, is the first one-volume publication of all four parts, these being: (1) Mysticism and (2) Magick, previously published together under the title Book Four; (3) Magick in Theory & Practice; and (4) The Equinox of the Gods.

Thien Tao are contained in the anthology Konx Om Pax, mentioned earlier.

THE LION OF LIGHT

For thousands of years, the principal methods of spiritual progress have been confined predominantly to the Mystery Schools, or initiated instruction, in the East and West alike. Some of the root principles of these methods often have been present even in conventional, orthodox religions, but visible only to those few who had the eyes to see what was before them.

Nearly four hundred years ago, a current was unleashed upon the Western world with the intent of preparing the day when the full secrets could be disclosed. The opening years of the 17th Century brought one of the greatest declarations of spiritual liberation in modern times – a message not yet for every man and woman, but, at first, only for the erudite, the elite, the spiritually privileged who would bear, thereby, the responsibility of establishing its principles for all, by necessary political, economic, social, and religious reforms in the centuries following. Europe was ripe with child; and the birth announcement came under the banner of a Rosy Cross.

Early in the 17th Century, two small books appeared, initially in Germany, called Fama Fraternitatis of the Meritorious Order of the Rosy Cross, and The Confession of the Rosicrucian Fraternity. They are most commonly identified as the Fama Fraternitatis and the Confessio Fraternitatis; or, more simply, as the Fama and the Confessio.⁵⁰ These two pamphlets purported to be the manifestos of the Fraternity of the Rosy Cross, more popularly called the Rosicrucians.

Centuries of debate have ensued as to the identity of those who issued these manifestos. In the final analysis, it does not really matter who they were. No matter what individuals lent their hands to the production of these documents, the true Authorship, and the motivation for their production, must be credited to the Secret Masters of the Third Order. The Fama and the Confessio were, above all, Their manifestos, announcing Themselves anew to certain individuals who had a capacity to serve.

In the Fama, the authors indicated that, "The word R.C. should be their seal, mark, and character." In addition to other meanings, it would be clear to any Qabalist that "the word R.C." (in Hebrew, רך) is equal to the number 220, which is, therefore, equally the signature of the Hidden ORDER.

When The Book of the Law was dictated to Aleister Crowley by Aiwass in 1904, it contained numerous internal references that seemed, to some, to allude to the Rosicrucian Order; but the final clue, and certainly the most important, was that it contained 220 verses. Crowley even catalogued it as Liber 220.

The Book of the Law might as well have been signed with the letters "R.C." It is a new manifesto authored by the same Source as the Fama and Confessio, addressed to men and women of a new age. No longer is the message addressed only to an elite. No, the new law is for all, and is open to every person in the world.

Crowley was instructed (by those who proved to him that they were legitimate representatives of the Third Order) to publish most of what had been previously secret. Because it was to these Hidden Masters that he had taken his original obligations of service and silence, his publication of the hitherto secret instructions was a fulfillment, not a violation, of his oaths.

Crowley's identification of himself as The Great Beast, 666, has raised considerable alarm in the minds of many who were raised on an anxious diet of The Book of Revelations. Some of this apprehension was probably intentional on Crowley's part, in an effort to shake off the chains of Western humanity's centuries-long bondage. In any case, the primary meaning of 666 has escaped the interpretive eyes of most Christian scholars. As 6 is the number of the Sun (because Tiphereth, the Sphere of the Sun, is numbered 6 on the Tree of Life), so is 666 the fourth and greatest of the numbers traditionally sacred to the Sun (the others being 6, 36, and 111). It corresponds to the heart, to transcendent Beauty, and to that Life, Love, Liberty, and Light which are perhaps best symbolized by the most luminous sunlight.

The primary message of The Book of the Law is in the Greek words thelema (θέλημα), meaning "will" – referring to the True Will, or dharma, or Divine Word inherent in each person – and in ⁵⁰ The Fama was written in 1604. It was circulated in manuscript form in Germany in 1610. It saw publication in 1612, then again in 1614 and 1615. In 1615, the Confessio was also released.

agape (ἀγάπη), meaning “love” – specifically bhakti, or passionate love of the Divine, as a basis for authentic human love. Both thelema and agape, in the Greek Qabalah, enumerate to 93, one of the most important numerical keys to The Book of the Law, probably again referring, in the final analysis, to the central, unitive image of our Sun, 93 million miles from us.

666 is the actual Qabalistic numeration of the Greek phrase to mega therion (το μέγα θηριον), meaning “the great beast.” Of this, there should never have been any scholarly question. Nor should there have been any question in the minds of those versed in the Qabalistic system (on which the Old Testament was founded) that the nature of that Beast was the Light of the Sun, the Gnostic Redeemer-Lion-Serpent, the solar-phallic kundalini of the Hindus (Hebrew ו, Teth, “serpent” = Leo, “lion”). 666 is a liberating, enlightening, illuminating, vivifying Lion of Light. In Crowley’s assumption of this name and number to fulfill the duty imposed upon him by the Third Order, he assumed a karma to fulfill a prophesy from the original manifestos, and to make available methods of attainment open to everyone: for in the Confessio Fraternitatis, our predecessors prophesied concerning the revelation of our own age, in the following words:

... our treasures shall remain untouched, till the Lion shall arise and exact them as his right, receive and employ them for the establishment of his kingdom.

This time is now come, and the Lion hath indeed arisen to declare His Word THELEMA, for the establishment of the Kingdom of Horus.

The full revelation of the methods of attainment has been offered to all in the system of Scientific Illuminism, which is the pragmatic foundation of the Order A.:A.:. The gates have been opened whereby every sound person may enter in and undertake to bring the Great Work to perfection.

To you, dear children of the Light, do we deliver freely what has been given unto us. May the Way be opened for all that would walk it, proudly, joyously, serenely – with strength, wisdom, love, and the LIGHT which informs them with Beauty.

O Child of Eternity, seek only the True Crown through the Knowledge of your True Will. Then the Hidden Light shining in your heart shall expand and extend until it becomes the White Brilliance of the Sun.

Love is the law, love under will.

(A.:A.: Publication in Class A)

1. I behold a small dark orb, wheeling in an abyss of infinite space. It is minute among a myriad vast ones, dark amid a myriad bright ones.
2. I who comprehend in myself all the vast and the minute, all the bright and the dark, have mitigated the brilliance of mine unutterable splendour, sending forth V.V.V.V.V. as a ray of my light, as a messenger unto that small dark orb.
3. Then V.V.V.V.V. taketh up the word, and sayeth:
4. Men and women of the Earth, to you am I come from the Ages beyond the Ages, from the Space beyond your vision; and I bring to you these words.
5. But they heard him not, for they were not ready to receive them.
6. But certain men heard and understood, and through them shall this Knowledge be made known.
7. The least therefore of them, the servant of them all, writeth this book.
8. He writeth for them that are ready. Thus is it known if one be ready, if he be endowed with certain gifts, if he be fitted by birth, or by wealth, or by intelligence, or by some other manifest sign. And the servants of the master of his insight shall judge of these.
9. This Knowledge is not for all men: few indeed are called, but of these few many are chosen.
10. This is the nature of the Work.
11. First, there are many and diverse conditions of life upon this earth. In all of these is some seed of sorrow. Who can escape from sickness and from old age and from death?
12. We are come to save our fellows from these things. For there is a life intense with knowledge and extreme bliss which is untouched by any of them.
13. To this life we attain even here and now. The adepts, the servants of V.V.V.V.V., have attained thereunto.
14. It is impossible to tell you of the splendours of that to which they have attained.
Little by little, as your eyes grow stronger, will we unveil to you the ineffable glory of the Path of the Adepts, and its nameless goal.
15. Even as a man ascending a steep mountain is lost to sight of his friends in the valley, so must the adept seem. They shall say: He is lost in the clouds. But he shall rejoice in the sunlight above them, and come to the eternal snows.
16. Or as a scholar may learn some secret language of the ancients, his friends shall say: "Look! he pretends to read this book. But it is unintelligible – it is nonsense." Yet he de-

- lights in the Odyssey, while they read vain and vulgar things.
17. We shall bring you to Absolute Truth. Absolute Light. Absolute Bliss.
 18. Many adepts throughout the ages have sought to do this; but their words have been perverted by their successors, and again and again the Veil has fallen upon the Holy of Holies.
 19. To you who yet wander in the Court of the Profane we cannot yet reveal all; but you will easily understand that the religions of the world are but symbols and veils of the Absolute Truth. So also are the philosophies. To the adept, seeing all these things from above, there seems nothing to choose between Buddha and Mohammed, between Atheism and Theism.
 20. The many change and pass; the one remains. Even as wood and coal and iron burn up together in one great flame, if only that furnace be of transcendent heat; so in the alembic of this spiritual alchemy, if only the zealator blow sufficiently upon his furnace all the systems of earth are consumed in the One Knowledge.
 21. Nevertheless, as a fire cannot be started with iron alone, in the beginning one system may be suited for one seeker, another for another.
 22. We therefore who are without the chains of ignorance, look closely into the heart of the seeker and lead him by the path which is best suited to his nature unto the ultimate end of all things, the supreme realization, the Life which abideth in Light, yea, the Life which abideth in Light.

by Aleister Crowley

THEOREMS

- I. The world progresses by virtue of the appearance of Christs (geniuses).
- II. Christs (geniuses) are men² with super-consciousness of the highest order.
- III. Super-consciousness of the highest order is obtainable by known methods.
Therefore, by employing the quintessence of known methods we cause the world to progress.

ESSENTIALS OF METHOD

- I. Theology is immaterial: for both Buddha and St. Ignatius were Christs.
- II. Morality is immaterial: for both Socrates and Mohammed were Christs.
- III. Super-consciousness is a natural phenomenon: its conditions are therefore to be sought rather in the acts than the words of those who attained it.
The essential acts are retirement and concentration – as taught by Yoga and Ceremonial Magic.

MISTAKES OF MYSTICS

- I. Since truth is supra-rational, it is incommunicable in the language of reason.
- II. Hence all mystics have written nonsense, and what sense they have written is so far untrue.
- III. Yet as a still lake yields a truer reflection of the sun than a torrent, he whose mind is best balanced will, if he become a mystic, become the best mystic.

² And women! – JAE

THE METHOD OF EQUILIBRIUM

I. THE PASSIONS, ETC.

- I. Since the ultimate truth of teleology is unknown, all codes of morality are arbitrary.
- II. Therefore the student has no concern with ethics as such.
- III. He is consequently free 'to do his duty in that state of life to which it has pleased God to call him.'

II. THE REASON

- I. Since truth is supra-rational, any rational statement is false.
- II. Let the student then contradict every proposition that presents itself to him.
- III. Rational ideas being thus expelled from the mind, there is room for the apprehension of spiritual truth.
It should be remarked that this does not destroy the validity of reasonings on their own plane.

III. THE SPIRITUAL SENSORIUM

- I. Man being a finite being, he is incapable of apprehending the infinite. Nor does his communion with infinite being (true or false) alter this fact.
- II. Let then the student contradict every vision and refuse to enjoy it: first, because there is certainly another vision possible of precisely contradictory nature; secondly, because though he is God, he is also a man upon an insignificant planet.
Being thus equilibrated laterally and vertically, it may be that, either by affirmation or denial of all these things together, he may attain the supreme trance.

IV. THE RESULT

- I. Trance is defined as the ek-stasis of one particular tract of the brain, caused by meditating on the idea corresponding to it.
- II. Let the student therefore beware lest in that idea be any trace of imperfection. It should be pure, balanced, calm, complete, fitted in every way to dominate the mind, as it will.
Even as in the choice of a king to be crowned.
- III. So will the decrees of this king be just and wise as he was just and wise before he was made king.
The life and work of the mystic will reflect (though dimly) the supreme guiding force of the mystic, the highest trance to which he has attained.

YOGA AND MAGIC

- I. Yoga is the art of uniting the mind to a single idea.
It has four methods.

	Gnana-Yoga.	Union by Knowledge.
	Raja-Yoga.	Union by Will.
	Bhakta-Yoga.	Union by Love.
	Hatha-Yoga.	Union by Courage.
add	Mantra-Yoga.	Union through Speech.
	Karma-Yoga.	Union through Work.

These are united by the supreme method of Silence.

- II. Ceremonial Magic is the art of uniting the mind to a single idea.
It has four Methods.

	The Holy Qabalah.	Union by Knowledge.
	The Sacred Magic.	Union by Will.
	The Acts of Worship.	Union by Love.
	The Ordeals.	Union by Courage.
add	The Invocations.	Union through Speech.
	The Acts of Service.	Union through Work.

These are united by the supreme method of Silence.

- III. If this idea be any but the Supreme and Perfect idea, and the student lose control, the result is insanity, obsession, fanaticism, or paralysis and death (add addiction to gossip and incurable idleness), according to the nature of the failure.
Let then the Student understand all these things and combine them in his Art, uniting them by the supreme method of Silence.

EDITORIAL

from The Equinox.
Vol. I, No. 2

by Aleister Crowley

It is four hundred and seventy-seven years since the trouble in the Monastery. There were assembled many holy men from every part of the civilised world, learned doctors, princes of the Church, bishops, abbots, deans, all the wisdom of the world: for the Question was important – how many teeth were there in a horse's mouth.

For many days the debate swung this way and that, as Father was quoted against Father, Gospel against Epistle, Psalm against Proverb; and the summer being hot, and the shade of the monastery gardens pleasant, a young monk wearied of the discussion, and rising presumptuously among those reverend men, impudently proposed that they should examine the mouth of a horse and settle the question.

Now, there was no precedent for so bold a method, and we are not to be surprised that those holy men arose right wrathfully and fell upon the youth and beat him sore.

Having further immured him in a solitary cell, they resumed debate; but ultimately "in the grievous dearth of theological and historical opinion" declared the problem insoluble, an everlasting mystery by the Will of God.

To-day, their successors adopt the same principles with regard to that darkest of horses, the A.:A.: They have not only refused to open our mouths, but have even refused to look into them when we ourselves have gone to the length of opening them wide before them.

However, there have been others. Whether we were too confident or they too easily discouraged is a question unnecessary to discuss. We hoped to sever at one blow their bonds; at least we should have loosened them. But their struggle, which should have aided our efforts, seemed to them too arduous. They have been perplexed rather than illumined by the light which we flashed upon them; and even if it showed a road, gave no sufficient reason why it should be followed.

Of such we humbly crave the pardon; and in answer to a seemingly widespread desire to know if we mean anything, and if so, What? we request those who would know the Truth of Scientific Illuminism to look into the open mouth of its doctrine, to follow its simple teachings step by step, and not to turn their backs on it and, walking in the opposite direction, declare so simple a problem to be an everlasting mystery.

We are therefore not concerned with those who have not examined our doctrine of sceptical Theurgy, or scientific illuminism, or that which lies beyond. Let them examine without prejudice.

Some, too, have raised weapons against us, thinking to hurt us. But malice is only the result of ignorance; let them examine us, and they will love us. The sword is not yet forged that can divide him whose helmet is Truth. Nor is the arrow yet fledged that will pierce the flesh of one who is clothed in the glittering armour of mirth. So here, and now, and with us: he who climbs the Mountain we point out to him, and which we have climbed; he who journeys by the chart we offer to him, and which we have followed, on his return will come in unto us as one who has authority; for he alone who has climbed the summit can speak with truth of those things that from there are to be seen, for HE KNOWS. But he who stands afar off, and jests, saying: "It is not a Mountain, it is a cloud; it is not a cloud, it is a shadow; it is not a shadow, it is an illusion; it is not an illusion, it is indeed nothing at all!" – who but a fool will heed him? for not having journeyed one step, HE KNOWS NOT concerning those things of which he speaks.

To make ourselves now utterly plain to all such as have misunderstood us, we will formulate our statement in many ways, so that at least there may be found one acceptable to each seeker who is open to conviction.

I

1. We perceive in the sensible world. Sorrow. Ultimately that is; we admit the Existence of a Problem requiring solution.

2. We accept the proofs of Hume, Kant, Herbert Spencer, Fuller, and others of this thesis:

The Ratiocinative Faculty or Reason of Man contains in its essential nature an element of self-contradiction.

3. Following on this, we say:

If any resolution there be of these two problems, the Vanity of Life and the Vanity of Thought, it must be in the attainment of a Consciousness which transcends both of them. Let us call this supernormal consciousness, or, for want of a better name, "Spiritual Experience."

4. Faith has been proposed as a remedy. But we perceive many incompatible forms of Faith founded on Authority – The Vedas. The Qurán. The Bible: Buddha. Christ. Joseph Smith. To choose between them we must resort to reason, already shown to be a fallacious guide.

5. There is only one Rock which Scepticism cannot shake; the Rock of Experience.

6. We have therefore endeavoured to eliminate from the conditions of acquiring Spiritual Experience its dogmatic, theological, accidental, climatic and other inessential elements.

7. We require the employment of a strictly scientific method. The mind of the seeker must be unbiased; all prejudice and other sources of error must be perceived as such and extirpated.

8. We have therefore devised a Syncretic-Eclectic Method combining the essentials of all methods, rejecting all their trammels, to attack the Problem, through exact experiments and not by guesses.

9. For each pupil we recommend a different method (in detail) suited to his needs; just as a physician prescribes the medicine proper to each particular patient.

10. We further believe that the Consummation of Spiritual Experience is reflected into the spheres of intellect and action as Genius, so that by taking an ordinary man we can by training produce a Master.

This thesis requires proof: we hope to supply such proof by producing Genius to order.

II

1. There is no hope in physical life, since death of the individual, the race, and ultimately the planet, ends all.

2. There is no hope in reason, since it contradicts itself, and is in any case no more than a reflection upon the facts of physical life.

3. What hope there may be in Investigation of the physical facts of Nature on Scientific lines is already actively sought after by a powerful and well-organized body of men of perfect probity and high capacity.

4. There is no hope in Faith, for there are many warring Faiths, all equally positive.

5. The adepts of Spiritual Experience promise us wonderful things, the Perception of Truth, and the Conquest of Sorrow, and there is enough unity in their method to make an Eclectic System possible.

6. We are determined to investigate this matter most thoroughly on Scientific lines.

III

1. We are Mystics, ever eagerly seeking a solution of unpleasant facts.

2. We are Men of Science, ever eagerly acquiring pertinent facts.

3. We are Sceptics, ever eagerly examining those facts.

4. We are Philosophers, ever eagerly classifying and co-ordinating those well-criticised facts.

5. We are Epicureans, ever eagerly enjoying the unification of those facts.

6. We are Philanthropists ever eagerly transmitting our knowledge of those facts to others.

7. Further, we are Syncretists, taking truth from all systems, ancient and modern; and Eclectics, ruthlessly discarding the inessential factors in any one system, however perfect.

IV

1. Faith, Life, Philosophy have failed.
2. Science is already established.
3. Mysticism, being based on pure experience, is always a vital force; but owing to the lack of trained observation, has always been a mass of error. Spiritual Experience, interpreted in the terms of Intellect, is distorted: just as sunrise shows the grass green and the sea blue. Both were invisible until sunrise: yet the diversity of colour is not in the sun, but in the objects on which its light falls, and their contradiction does not prove the sun to be an illusion.
4. We shall correct Mysticism (or Illuminism) by Science, and explain Science by Illuminism.

V

1. We have one method, that of Science.
2. We have one aim, that of Religion.

VI

There was once an Inhabitant in a land called Utopia who complained to the Water Company that his water was impure.

"No," answered the Water Man, "it can't be impure, for we filter it."

"Oh, indeed!" replied the Inhabitant, "but my wife died from drinking it."

"No," said the Water Man: "I assure you that this water comes from the purest springs in Utopia: further, that water, however impure, cannot hurt anybody: further, that I have a certificate of its purity from the Water Company itself."

"The people who pay you!" sneered the Inhabitant. "For your other points, Haeckel has proved that all water is poison, and I believe you get your water from a cesspool. Why, look at it!"

"And beautiful clear water it is!" said the Water Man. "Limpid as crystal. Worth a guinea a drop!"

"About what you charge for it!" retorted the incensed Inhabitant. "It looks fairly clear, I admit, in the twilight. But that is not the point. A poison need not cloud water."

"But," urged the other, "one of our directors is a prophet, and he prophesied – clearly, in so many words – that the water would be pure this year. And besides, our first founder was a holy man, who performed a special miracle to make it pure for ever!"

"Your evidence is as tainted as your water," replied the now infuriated householder.

So off they went to the Judge.

The Judge heard the case carefully. "My good friends!" said he, "you've neither of you got a leg to stand on: for in all you say there is not one grain of proof. – The case is dismissed."

The Water Inspector rose jubilant, when from the body of the Court came a still small voice.

"Might I respectfully suggest, your Worship, that the water in question be examined through my Microscope?"

"What in thunder is a Microscope?" cried the three in chorus.

"An instrument, your Worship, that I have constructed on the admitted principles of optics, to demonstrate by experience what these gentlemen are arguing about à priori and on hearsay."

Then they both rose up against him, and cursed him.

"Unscientific balderdash!" said the Water Man, for the first time speaking respectfully of Science.

"Blasphemous Nonsense!" said the Inhabitant, for the first time speaking respectfully of Religion.

"Wait and see," said the Judge: for he was a just Judge.

Then the Man with the Microscope explained the uses of this new and strange instrument. And the Judge patiently investigated all sources of error, and concluded in the end that the instrument was a true revealer of the secrets of the water. And he pronounced just judgement.

But the others were blinded by passion and self-interest. They only quarrelled more noisily, and were finally turned out of court. But the Judge caused the Man with the Microscope to be appointed Government Analyst at £12,000 a year.

Now the Water Man is the Believer, and the Inhabitant the Unbeliever. The Judge is the Agnostic – in Huxley's sense of the word; and the Man with the Microscope is the Scientific Illuminist.

Curious as it may seem, all this was most carefully explained in No. 1 of this Review³, in Mr. Frank Harris's "The Magic Glasses."

Mr. Allett is the Materialist, Canon Bayton the Idealist, the Judge's daughter is the Agnostic, and Matthew Penry the Scientific Illuminist. If the little girl had been able to "follow up the light," she might there have seen Penry standing, his head and his feet white like wool, and his eyes a flaming fire!

This, then, in one language or another, is our philosophical position. But for those who are not content with this, let it be said that there is something more behind and beyond. Among us are those who have experienced things of a nature so exalted that no words ever penned could even adumbrate them faintly. The communication of such knowledge, so far as it is at all possible, must be a personal thing; and we offer it with both hands.

It is simple to write to the Chancellor of the A.:A.: at the care of the publishers, 23 Paternoster Row, E.C.:⁴ a neophyte of the Order will be detailed to meet the inquirer. He will read to him the History of the Order and explain the task of the Probationer. For we give to each inquirer a year's study; mutual, so that he may decide whether we can indeed give that which he wishes, and so that we may know exactly what training is suitable for him.

Also, because we are subtle of mind, many are offended. For we wished to test the world by the touchstone of THE EQUINOX. Those who perceived the essential gold that lay hidden in that hard rock are now busy delving out the same; many are thereby become rich.

So I who write this for the Brethren, with all humility and awe, do seriously summon all men unto the Search, even those who are offended because I laugh, gazing into the Eyes of the Beloved; and those who are offended because I hate the veil of words that hides the face of the Beloved; and those who are offended because my passion for the Beloved is too virile and eager to suit their awe; perhaps they forget that passion means suffering.

But let them know that my Beloved is mine and I am his; he feedeth among the lilies.

⁴ This address, from 1909 e.v., is, of course, no longer valid. However, it is simple to write to a representatives of one living, thriving lineage of the A.:A.: in care of the College of Thelema at 222 North Manhattan Place, Los Angeles, CA 90004.

The reader may also have knowledge of legitimate representatives of other authentic lineages. Both the criteria and procedures of admission are now different than discussed in the present paragraph, and may be studied in Chapter I of the present book. — JAE

ORDO G.:D.:

OCTOBER DAWN

*From out of the darkness came Dawn,
 And Dawn's light,
 Its wondrous, lustrous dew transfiguring
 All things of sight, of taste, of touch.
 Touched by miraculous fingers of incandescent life,
 My heart expands & wakes, even before the roses.
 Three lotuses lay open before this morning's glory:
 All of me is laid bare & open & awake before Thee;
 And in the offering of myself, naught withheld.
 I hear, at last, the Song of that deafening silence.*

*Quiet moonlight implodes in silvery dance within the folds of that silent song.
 In eternal Night, the river of forthpouring stars runs ever serenely & keenly, all in their appointed Way.
 I have known the night, the darkness, the dread weariness,
 And been lost, through my frailty, in its leaden shroud:
 Yet this new Night, more luminous than any Day,
 Expands me beyond whatever used to pass for me
 On the prior day of barren, cavernous aloneness.
 Now, within this Dawning Night,
 The without & within, mysterious twins,
 Are lost in each other.
 The veil between them indistinguishable from the continuous living texture of their shared substance.
 I shall know the dim and empty night again, no doubt.
 Only one lamp, one love, shall conduct me surely through that nacreous nocturne:
 It is a single scarab, immortal.
 A midnight sun that burns with unwavering heat even in the otherwise empty void.*

*Sacred twin columns of silver & gold.
 Rapturous dance of our disparate essences.
 Alive in the beauty of diurnal glory:
 Enswathed in the pleasure of luminous night.
 Water to quench the immense conflagration:
 Flame to sublime the cascading desire.
 Spiraling waves, intertwined, oscillating,
 Enfolding, enswathing each other each hour.
 Secret, obscure, enigmatic twin mirrors.
 There is no difference; they are one – and are not.*

*Veil of Mystery withdrawn –
 Union, communion of October dawn –
 In silence I bite back this rapture, and then,
 In thunderous song we are One. Amen.*

Chapter 1

AN OPEN DOOR

FROM ITS BEGINNING, the A.:A.: philosophy supported the admission of any interested person soever into the instruction and practice of Scientific Illuminism. That is, anyone could write to the A.:A.: and request an interview with a Neophyte, who (all things proceeding agreeably to the applicant) would admit the individual as a Probationer forthwith.

This, like the A.:A.:’s open publication of nearly all official instructions in magick and yoga, was a dramatic innovation in the esoteric initiatory tradition! Although the first year of a person’s association with the A.:A.: was, indeed, probationary, each aspirant was, nonetheless, given immediate access to the essence of the work, and to all of the technical methods on which even the most advanced techniques would be based. (The Probationer’s curriculum is explained in Chapter 2.)

The A.:A.:’s founders dispensed with the preparatory First Order of the old Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, and introduced the aspirant, at once, to techniques that previously would have been disclosed only to the more advanced Second Order.

Unfortunately, for most seekers this generous approach did not work!

Occasional notes and memos to Probationers began appearing in each issue of THE EQUINOX, suggesting that many were having more than a little trouble in their work. Aleister Crowley later estimated that approximately seven out of every eight Probationers did not persevere adequately to advance to Neophyte.

THE A.:A.: STUDENT

THE ORIGINAL A.:A.: STUDENT PROGRAM

By early 1912, in EQUINOX No. 7, a new notice appeared, which was run thereafter in every issue of Volume 1. The following is quoted from the slightly longer version that first appeared six months later in EQUINOX No. 8:

Owing to the unnecessary strain thrown upon Neophytes by unprepared persons totally ignorant of the groundwork taking the Oath of a Probationer, the Imperator of A.:A.:, under the seal and by the authority of V.V.V.V.V., ordains that every person wishing to become a Probationer of A.:A.: must first pass three months as a Student of the Mysteries.

He must possess the following books: –

1. THE EQUINOX from No. 1 to the current number.
2. "Raja Yoga," by Swami Vivekananda.
3. "The Shiva Sanhita," or "The Hathayoga Pradipika."
4. "Konx Om Pax."
5. "The Spiritual Guide," by Miguel de Molinos.
6. "777."
7. "Rituel et Dogme de la Haute Magie," par Eliphas Levi, or its translation, by A. E. Waite.
8. "The Goetia of the Lemegeton of Solomon the King."
9. "Tannhäuser," by A. Crowley
10. "The Sword of Song," by A. Crowley
11. "Time," by A. Crowley
12. "Eleusis," by A. Crowley

[These four last items are to be found in his Collected Works.]

13. "The Book of the Sacred Magic of Abramelin the Mage."
14. The Tao Teh King and the Writings of Kwang Tzu (Sacred Books of the East, Vols. XXXIX, XL).

An examination in these books will be made. The Student is expected to show a thorough acquaintance with them, but not necessarily to understand them in any deeper sense. On passing the examination he may be admitted to the grade of Probationer.

The same year this notice first appeared, a similar discussion was included in Book Four, Part I, by Frater Perdurabo. Following the book list just given, the Book Four discussion added:

These books should be well studied in any case in conjunction with the second part – Magick – of this Book IV.

Study of these books will give a thorough grounding in the intellectual side of Their system.

After three months the Student is examined in these books, and if his knowledge of them is found satisfactory, he may become a Probationer.

A further explanation of the purpose of this requirement was given by Crowley in Eight Lectures on Yoga, Cap. VIII, ¶24:

You are expected to spend three months at least on the study of some of the classics on the subject. The chief object of this is not to instruct you, but to familiarise you with the ground work, and in particular to prevent you getting the idea that there is any right or wrong in matters of opinion. You pass an examination intended to make sure that your mind is well grounded in this matter, and you become a Probationer.

Let us examine the original EQUINOX notice carefully, so that we understand just what had happened before, and what was expected now.

First, Probationers who had been admitted under the original liberal rules were being found, all too often, painfully unready. They were characterized as "unprepared, . . . totally ignorant of the groundwork." Even with the help available through their supervising Neophytes (their private tutors), they were not "making the grade."

Furthermore, this was throwing "unnecessary strain" upon the Neophytes. They were overtaxed by their combined duties of supervising unprepared Probationers, and of getting on with their own grade work.

Therefore, this Student program was instituted – not as a part of the A.:A.: system, but as a preliminary to it.

As a first requirement, every person who wanted to be a Student of A.:A.: had to acquire certain basic, itemized textbooks. She then had to spend at least three months studying them. Anytime after that, the Student could be examined in what she had read.

Various Student Examinations have survived. The earliest in our collection dates from 1916,¹ and the latest from 1945. All contain variations on the same basic themes. All were "open book" examinations. Their purpose was to find out if the Student had studied the assigned material and could find her way around it in some functional way. In short, she had to prove that she had acquired a "thorough acquaintance" with the assigned materials, and stood a reasonable chance of succeeding in the work of the Probationer Grade and beyond.

A.:A.: STUDENT SYLLABUS

A brief discussion of each of these assigned books seems warranted at this point, to help the aspirant to the A.:A.: understand the type of preliminary education a Student is expected to acquire.

THE EQUINOX and Konx Om Pax were discussed in the Introduction to the present book. The Book of the Sacred Magic of Abramelin the Mage will be discussed in Chapter 8.

The Tao Teh Ching and The Writings of Kwang-Tze are well-known Chinese (Taoist) classics that warrant little introduction, other than to mention that Crowley eventually produced his own translation of the former, an official A.:A.: instruction in Class B published posthumously as THE EQUINOX, Vol. III, No. 8.²

¹ Some undated examinations appear to be later than the one dated January, 1916, but may, in fact, be a little earlier.

² An edition of Crowley's Tao Teh King is available from the College of Thelema. Crowley's excellent Introduction to the Tao Teh King can be found also in Magick Without Tears.

Similarly, we shall let speak for themselves the four essays itemized on lines 9-12 above, all written by Aleister Crowley early in his career and collated in his Collected Works. Their careful perusal is encouraged.

Introductions to the seven remaining titles are provided below.

Raja Yoga

Raja Yoga, by Swami Vivekananda (1863-1902), was, by all appearances, one of the most influential works in Crowley's own training and in the formulation of the A.:A.: 's essential methodology. The A.:A.: motto, "The Method of Science – The Aim of Religion," was very likely inspired by Vivekananda's statement that, "Raja-yoga is the science of religion;" and one has but to compare Raja Yoga to the Introduction and other essential themes of Crowley's Book Four, Part I to see the remarkable influence Vivekananda had on Crowley's thinking. In the same way that the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn provided the primary roots of the A.:A.: 's teachings in ceremonial magick, it is clear that the many writings of Swami Vivekananda, and his Raja Yoga in particular, were the primary influences upon, and derivation of, its teachings in yoga. For this reason, as well as for the substantial intrinsic value of the book, we highly recommend it to the early attention of any student interested in A.:A.: work.³

The first half of Raja Yoga consists of a learned discussion of the subject by Swami Vivekananda. The last half consists of his "rather free translation" and commentary upon the Yoga Sutras of Patanjali, the ancient classic that rightfully provides the foundation for all modern teachings on the subject.

Raja Yoga's practice is traditionally structured in eight stages: yama (restraint), niyama (observances), asana (posture), pranayama (breath-control), pratyahara (withdrawal), dharana (concentration), dhyana (contemplation) and samadhi (fusion).⁴

In theory, it is quite simple: Arrange your life, within and without, to be supportive of meditation. Bring the physical body to stillness, and the inner vital rhythms to a dynamic equilibrium. These steps serve also to quiet the emotional waves and mental jabberwocky that preoccupy and distract our workaday consciousness. Next, begin to meditate – to direct your attention to the flow of consciousness itself. The veils of physical sensation, emotion, and thought having been withdrawn, one discovers, by direct and repeated experience, a profound of Beauty at the center of one's being, and slips silently into it, even as a lover surrenders to the arms of the beloved.

Or, as Swami Vivekananda summarized:

When, by analyzing his own mind, a man comes face to face, as it were, with something which is never destroyed, something which is, by its own nature, eternally pure and perfect, he will no more be miserable, no more be unhappy. All misery comes from fear, from unsatisfied desire. . . .

There is only one method by which to attain this knowledge, and that is concentration. . . . There is no limit to the power of the human mind. The more concentrated it is, the more power is brought to bear on one point. That is the secret. . . .

In his Introduction, Swami Vivekananda delineated themes that should be quite familiar to the student who has read thus far:

Thus it is clear that all the religions of the world have been built upon that one universal and adamant foundation of all our knowledge – direct experience. The teachers all saw God; they all saw their own souls, they saw their souls' future and their eternity; and what they saw they preached. Only there is this difference: By most of these religions, especially in modern times, a peculiar claim is made, namely, that these experiences are impossible at the present day; they were possible only to a few men, who were the founders of the religions that subsequently bore their names. At the present time these experiences have become obsolete, and therefore we now have to take these religions on faith.

³ Similarly, the Student should not fail to become thoroughly familiar with the symbols, ritual formulae, and methods of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. In several instances, A.:A.: official instructions were merely old Golden Dawn papers slightly rewritten. In other cases, where no distinctive A.:A.: instruction ever was issued, the aspirant apparently, was referred to the same G.D. instructions from which Frs. D.D.S. and O.M. first received their own training. To put it more simply: One cannot understand the A.:A.: system and its teachings without a primary education in the traditional G.D. system and its teachings. Although a summary of old G.D. rituals is given in Volume I of THE EQUINOX, Nos. 2 and 3, this is not adequate. The Student can do no better than to obtain The Golden Dawn by Israel Regardie, originally published in 1937-1940, and kept in continuous publication for many decades by Llewellyn Publications. (This early work by Regardie, including his magnificent Introductions, is far superior to his later efforts at revision.)

This I entirely deny. If there has been one experience in this world in any particular branch of knowledge, it absolutely follows that that experience has been possible millions of times before and will be repeated eternally. . .

The teachers of the science of Raja-yoga, therefore, declare not only that religion is based upon the experiences of ancient times, but also that no man can be religious until he has had the same experiences himself. Raja-yoga is the science which teaches us how to get these experiences. It is not much use to talk about religion until one has felt it. . . If there is a God we must see Him; if there is a soul we must perceive it; otherwise it is better not to believe. It is better to be an outspoken atheist than a hypocrite. . . Man wants truth, wants to experience truth for himself. When he has grasped it, realized it, felt it within his heart of hearts, then alone, declare the Vedas, will all doubts vanish, all darkness be scattered, and all crookedness be made straight. . . The science of Raja-yoga proposes to put before humanity a practical and scientifically worked out method of reaching this truth. . . [N]o faith or belief is necessary. Believe nothing until you find it out for yourself. . . The best guide in life is strength. In religion, as in all other matters, discard everything that weakens you.

And so he continues, in passage after passage, along similar lines. It is, perhaps, needless to add that this is entirely consistent with the basic approach of the mystical and magical system of the A.:A.:.

The Shiva Samhita & The Hatha Yoga Pradipika

The Shiva Samhita (or Samhita) and The Hatha Yoga Pradipika are two Sanskrit yoga texts of Hindu orientation. Although they often use substantially different terminology than Patanjali employed in his Yoga Sutras, they are of considerable importance. Each is a self-contained treatise on yoga methodology. Each, independently, could serve as the basis for many practical experiments.

The Shiva Samhita consists of five chapters. It is written as though authored by Ishvara, who describes Himself as "the lover of my devotees, and Giver of spiritual emancipation to all creatures." That is, He is one expression, or way of representing, what we mean by "the Holy Guardian Angel." He defines the "science of yoga" as being "for the spiritual disenthralment of persons whose minds are undistracted and fully turned towards Me."

Chapter I explains that Spirit is the only reality, and that all else is illusion. The subsequent discussion is reminiscent of similar Rosicrucian and other Hermetic teachings from Europe. The five Elements (Tattwas) and the three Gunas are then delineated. Chapter II discusses the nerve channels of the human body, and the operation of the principles called the Sun, the Moon, and Fire therein. Chapter III begins a careful discussion of the stages of yoga practice in general (a curriculum that continues and is elaborated throughout the rest of the book), with particular discussions of prana and pranayama, the guru, criteria for success, and four primary postures. Chapter IV opens with advanced and remarkably beautiful yogic practices, then concludes with a discussion of mudrās and the awakening of Kundalini. Chapter V discusses further practices and results that rightly follow upon those of the four chapters preceding. Chapter V is also greatly important because it includes the most complete discussion of the individual chakras in any classical Eastern source generally available in English translation.

From internal evidence, we know that The Shiva Samhita was intended to be an esoteric text, probably of a secret tradition, supplementing the ritual initiations mentioned in Cap. IV, s. 6. The author certainly knew what points to drive home most strongly to new students, as this advice from Cap. IV, s. 9 shows:

Therefore, those who wish for emancipation should practice this daily. Through practice, success is obtained; through practice one gains liberation.

Reiterating the same point, sutra 11 of Cap. IV also demonstrates that the text was not intended for general circulation. Having just explained the practice called Yoni-Mudrā, the author wrote,

Through practice one gets the power of prophecy, and the power of going everywhere, through mere exertion of will. This Yonimudrâ should be kept in great secrecy, and not be given to everybody. Even when threatened with death, it should not be revealed or given to others.

Later, in Cap. V, he more carefully stated the criteria originally imposed regarding the disclosure of these teachings to others:

The Yogi, desirous of success, should keep the Hatha Yoga as a great secret. It becomes fruitful while kept secret; revealed, it loses its power. . . Let this science be recited to all holy men, who desire emancipation. By practice success is obtained; without it, how can success follow?

The Hatha Yoga Pradipika proceeds along different lines, although it also elucidates the essential yoga practices, and in a way that more closely parallels Patanjali's teachings. The four chapters instruct, respectively, regarding (1) asanas (with general preliminaries and basics of practice), (2) pranayama, (3) mudras, and (4) samadhi. This book is organized much better than The Shiva Samhita. Emphasizing practice over theory, it wisely concludes:

As long as the Prana does not enter and flow in the middle channel and the vindu does not become firm by the control of the movements of the Prana; as long as the mind does not assume the form of Brahma without any effort in contemplation, so long all the talk of knowledge and wisdom is merely the nonsensical babbling of a mad man.

The Spiritual Guide

The Spiritual Guide, by Spanish Priest Miguel (or Michael) de Molinos (c. 1627-1700), is a European treatise on Raja Yoga – or, to use its author's language, on "internal recollection," the practices of those known as the Quietists.

This book is hard to find, yet of such importance that someone should keep it in print. A highly successful international "best seller" of its day, it was first published in 1675, praised by the Inquisition in 1682, then summarily condemned by the same office as heretical in 1685.⁵ Untold copies were burned. The best copy in our possession is a 1911 reproduction of the 1699 English edition.

Bowdlerized and highly fragmentary small editions have appeared in the last few years, including one in which the editor happily explains that he has removed everything that would be unacceptable to evangelical Christians, then almost apologetically adds that, "I have also left some things in the book that seem to be uniquely Michael Molinos'!" Hopefully, it is unnecessary to say that we do not recommend these slaughtered versions.⁶

According to the 1699 title page, the full designation of the work was, The Spiritual Guide which Disentangles the Soul; and brings it, by the inward way to the getting of perfect contemplation and the Rich Treasure of Internal Peace. The following excerpt from Molinos' brief Preface states his basic premise, which (overlooking minor terminological differences) may surprise some Thelemites with its close conformity to their own doctrine:

The way of inward peace is in all things to be conform [sic] to the pleasure and disposition of the Divine Will. . . Such as would have all things succeed and come to pass according to their own fancy, are not come to know this way. . . [a]nd therefore lead a harsh and bitter life, always restless and out of humour, without treading in the way of peace which consists in a total conformity to the will of God.

This Conformity is the sweet yoke that introduces us into the regions of internal peace and serenity. Hence we may know that the rebellion of our will is the chief occasion of our disquiet; and that, because we will not submit to the sweet yoke of the Divine Will, we suffer so many straits and perturbations. O Soul! If we submitted our own to the Divine Will, and to all His disposition, what tranquility should we feel! What sweet peace! What inward serenity! What supreme felicity and earnest bliss! This, then, is to be the burden of this book. May it please God to give me His divine light, for discovering the secret parts of this inward way, and chief felicity of perfect peace.

In these few words, Abraham the Jew would have recognized the doctrine of the Holy Guardian Angel, Lao-Tze would have seen life in the Tao, ⁵ Molinos, after renouncing his "heresy," was sentenced to life imprisonment. Hundreds of his followers were prosecuted actively by the Church.

⁶ The full work consists of two parts, of 16 and 22 chapters respectively.

The Shiva Samhita's author would have beheld Ishvara, and Swami Vivekananda would have perceived the seeds of Vedanta and the methods of Raja Yoga. What Molinos called "prayer," Vivekananda called "meditation."

It is impossible to summarize the details and depth of the doctrine that fills these 162 pages of tiny type. We shall content ourselves with brief points, relying heavily on quotations from the text itself to convey its flavor.

Molinos' simple premise orbits "internal recollection," which is "faith and silence in the presence of God." It is apparent from the text that "internal recollection" is what the Qabalist would call Briatic awareness, and the Hindu samyama (a stage of meditation beyond that of pratyahara). In Cap. XVI Molinos wrote in a language that we are accustomed to find only in Asian works:⁷

There are three kinds of silence: the first is of words, the second of desires, and the third of thoughts. The first is perfect, the second more perfect, and the third most perfect. In the first, that is, of words, virtue is acquired; in the second, to wit, of desires, quietness is attained to; in the third, of thoughts, internal recollection is gained. By not speaking, nor desiring, and not thinking, one arrives at the true and perfect mystical silence, wherein God speaks with the soul, communicates Himself to it, and in the abyss of its own depth teaches it the most perfect and exalted wisdom.

Earlier in the book, Molinos had described this practice as "beholding [God] in the most inward recess of thine own soul, without form, likeness, manner, or figure," and as "settling in that holy repose, with quietness, silence, and tranquility; and endeavoring for a whole day, a whole year, and thy whole life, to continue that first act of contemplation, by faith and love."

Much of The Spiritual Guide deals with the ordeals of the spiritual life, the inner despair and darkness (or "dryness") of which St. John of the Cross was the classic exponent.⁸ Much of the last half of the book focuses on this aspect of the journey. Molinos addressed this "Path of Darkness" far more extensively than any modern writer in the mystical-magical tradition; yet every aspirant encounters these problems at some point – usually at many points – in her career. It is unfortunate that, in the quotations below, more emphasis is placed on the nature of the problem (which is simpler and thus more quotable) than on the solution (for which Molinos wrote dozens of eloquent pages).

Thou wilt find thyself, as all other souls that are called by the Lord to the inward way, full of confusion and doubts. . . . It will seem to thee that God does no more assist thee as formerly. . . .

Thou oughtest then to be persuaded, that thou mayest not draw back, when thou wantest expansion and discourse in prayer, that it is thy greatest happiness, because it is a clear sign that the Lord will have thee to walk by faith and silence in His Divine presence, which is the most profitable and easiest path. . . .

Though I have spent forty years in reading and prayer, yet I could never find anything more efficacious, nor compendious, for attaining to mystical theology, than that our spirit should become like a young child and beggar in the presence of God. (Cap. II)

Thou shalt know that there are two sorts of prayer, the one tender, delightful, amiable, and full of sentiments; the other obscure, dry, desolate, tempted, and darksome. The first is of beginners, the second of proficients, who are in the progress to perfection. God gives the first to gain souls, the second to purify them. . . .

Know that the Lord makes use of the vail of dryness, to the end we may not know what He is working in us, and so be humble; because if we felt and knew what He is working in our souls, satisfaction and presumption would get in, imagining that we were doing some good thing, and reckoning ourselves very near to God: which would be our undoing. (Cap. IV)

Yet, in no way is Molinos' doctrine solely that of darkness, suffering, and martyrdom, and certainly – despite the course his own life took – it is not solely a path of outer affliction. His chief premise was that all outer acts, practices, and even ordeals are secondary to the more advanced and subtler inner way. We begin to see his direction more clearly in Cap. VI of Part II:

The other more profitable and meritorious martyrdom in souls already advanced in perfection and deep contemplation [emphasis added] is a fire of Divine love which burns the soul and makes it painful with the same love. Sometimes the absence of its beloved afflicts it; sometimes the sweet, ardent, and welcome weight of the loving and Divine Presence torments it. This sweet martyrdom always makes it sigh: sometimes if it enjoys and has its Beloved, for the pleasure of having Him, so that it cannot contain itself; other times if he does not manifest Himself through the ardent anxiety of seeking, finding, and enjoying Him. All this is panting, suffering, and dying for love.

⁸ Dark Night of the Soul by St. John of the Cross (1542-1591).

Oh, that thou couldst but come to conceive the contrariety of accidents that an enamoured soul suffers! The combat so terrible and strong on one side, so sweet and melting and amiable on the other! The martyrdom so piercing and sharp with which love torments it, and the cross so painful and sweet withal,⁹ without ever being in the mind of getting free from it whilst thou livest! . . .

Sometimes it hears the inward voice of its Beloved, which courts and calls it, and a soft and delicate whisper which goes forth from the secret of the soul where it abides, which pierces it strongly, even like to melt and dissolve it, in seeing how near it hath Him within itself, and yet how far off from it, whilst it cannot come to possess Him. This intoxicates it, embases it, scares it, and fills it with unsatisfiability; and therefore love is said to be as strong as death, whilst it kills just as that doth.

Finally, we find clear evidence that the author knew this way as a Way of Joy – that after the darkness comes a dawn. In Part II, Cap. XII, having identified “true solitude” as that wherein “the soul reposes with a sweet and inward serenity in the arms of its chiefest good,” he wrote further:

Oh, what infinite room is there in a soul that is arrived at this Divine solitude! Oh, what inward, what retired, what secret, what spacious, what vast distances are there within a happy soul that is once come to be truly solitary! There the Lord converses and communicates Himself inwardly with the soul; there He fills it with Himself, because it is empty; clothes it with light and with His love, because it is naked; lifts it up, because it is low; and unites it with Himself, and transforms it, because it is alone.

O delightful solitude and cipher of eternal blessings! O mirror, in which the Eternal Father is always beheld! There is great reason to call thee solitude: for thou art so much alone that there is scarce a soul that looks after thee, that loves and knows thee. O Divine Lord! How is it that souls do not go from earth to this glory? How come they to lose so great a good, through the only love and desire of created things? Blessed soul, how happy wilt thou be, if thou dost but leave all for God! Seek Him only, breathe after none but Him; let Him only have thy sighs. Desire nothing, and then nothing can trouble thee; and if thou dost desire any good, how spiritual soever it be, let it be in such a manner that thou mayest not be disquieted if thou miss it.

“Let it be in such a manner that thou mayest not be disquieted if thou miss it.” This is Raja Yoga, plain and simple. The mind must be stilled; the emotions must be at peace; then only do the true mind and heart enter into direct converse with the soul and the Author of the soul, in a “passionate peace” or “peace profound.” The rapture of the author here disclosed is the outer elation of the attained yogi or adept, though his language is that of a vastly different other religion.

Dogme et Rituel de la Haute Magie

Eliphas Levi's Dogme et Rituel de la Haute Magie (not Rituel et Dogme, as Crowley mistakenly wrote in the Student syllabus) was the pre-eminent work on ceremonial magick of its day. While still in its original French, it profoundly influenced both the practical methods and theoretical instructions of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. A.E. Waite's English translation, Transcendental Magic – Its Doctrine & Ritual, was completed in late 1896, about two years before Crowley's initiation into the H.O.G.D.; and it was certainly one of his early basic texts.

Levi originally issued this work in two volumes, his Dogme (Theory) in 1855 and his Rituel (Practice) in 1856. Each book consisted of 22 chapters, corresponding numerically and thematically to one of the 22 Trumps of the Tarot. It is easy to see that the title and format of this work inspired those of Crowley's own 22-chapter magnum opus of High Magick, entitled Magick in Theory & Practice.

Even now, almost a century and a half after it was written, Dogme et Rituel has tremendous value. Yet, with the passage of time, other works

⁹ This says far more than it appears to say on the surface.

ELIPHAS LEVI

He bore sufficient resemblance to Aleister Crowley's father, that Crowley at times confused their images. Crowley came to recognize himself as the reincarnation of Levi, who had died six months before Crowley's birth.

naturally have surpassed it. Crowley's Magick in Theory & Practice is foremost of these. The Tree of Life by Israel Regardie is another masterful treatise of theoretical and practical magick, virtually encyclopedic in its scope, and well worth the Student's conscientious review.

The Goetia, or The Lemegeton of Solomon the King

The Goetia is one of the most famous of the medieval grimoires (or "grammars") of ceremonial magick. Primarily discussing the evocation of "spirits," it is one of five parts of a larger work (much of which has never been readily available) called The Lemegeton, or Clavicula Salomonis Regis, "The Key of Solomon the King."¹⁰ and is, itself, commonly called "The Lesser Key of Solomon." The Goetia describes itself as follows:

CLAVICULA SALOMONIS REGIS, which containeth all the Names, Offices, and Orders of all the Spirits that ever he [Solomon] had converse with, with the Seals and Characters to each Spirit and the manner of calling them forth to visible appearance: In 5 parts, viz.:

THE FIRST PART is a Book of Evil Spirits, called GOETIA, showing how he bound up those Spirits, and used them in general things, whereby he obtained great fame. . . .

The available edition of The Goetia was prepared by S.L. Mathers as a work for hire, then edited and published by Aleister Crowley.¹¹ However it began, this project did not end as a cooperative venture. Crowley's most neutral description of the events was included in his Confessions:

I had employed Mathers to translate the text of The Lesser Key of Solomon the King of which The Goetia is the first section. He got no further: after the events of 1900 [the schismatic breakup of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn], he had simply collapsed morally. I added a translation of the conjurations into the Enochian or Angelic language; edited and annotated the text, and prefixed a 'Preliminary Invocation,' added a prefatory note, a Magical Square (intended to prevent improper use of the book) and ultimately an Invocation of Typhon when the First Magical War of the Æon of Horus was declared.

As just described, prefatory to the translation proper was a short ritual labeled "Preliminary Invocation." Thereafter, Crowley regularly referred to this as "The Preliminary Invocation of the Goetia." However, it had absolutely no connection to the original manuscript of The Lemegeton. Instead, it was a transcription of a fragment of an ancient Græco-Egyptian magical ceremony contained in a papyrus, published in translation by Charles Wycliffe Goodwin in 1852.¹² Although never an official ritual of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, it was well-known among that Order's adepts as "The Bornless Ritual for the Invocation of the Higher Genius:" and, in fact, it was the ritual later employed by Crowley in 1906 in his own invocation of the Genius (or, in Crowley's preferred language, the Augoeides or Holy Guardian Angel). Two decades later, he issued his personal reconstruction and adaptation of the ritual as an A.A.A. instruction for the Adeptus Minor called Liber Samekh, discussed in Chapter 8 of this present book.

Following this "Preliminary Invocation," Crowley inserted "The Initiated Interpretation of Ceremonial Magic," a short essay interpreting magical phenomena solely from a rationalistic – today we could say, from a psychological – perspective.

Thereafter follows The Goetia itself. The body of the work consists of a catalog of 72 goetic spirits. Although these are characterized by The Lemegeton itself as "Evil Spirits," it should be noted that not all of their claimed functions would usually be regarded as "evil" in intent. A majority are said to grant knowledge of diverse and wide-ranging types. The spirit Buer "teaches Philosophy, both Moral and Natural, and the Logic Art, and also the Virtues of all Herbs and Plants. He healeth all distempers in man, and giveth good Familiars" – hardly the characteristics of an "Evil Spirit" to most people's minds.

Similarly, Gusion "conciliateth and reconcileth friendships, and giveth Honour and Dignity unto any;" Bimé "giveth Riches unto a Man, and maketh him Wise and Eloquent;" and Andromalius can "bring back both a Thief, and the Goods which be stolen." These spirits, and others resembling them, are collated with others of less savory descriptions, the whole composing one of the most consulted Medieval catalogs of theurgy.

¹² See Ceremonial Magic by Israel Regardie for the most available accurate reproduction of the original Greek text, Goodwin's translation, the version from The Goetia, and Crowley's later adaptation.

A MAGICAL CIRCLE & TRIANGLE OF EVOCATION from The Goetia. "This is the Form of the Magical Circle of King Solomon, the which he made that he might preserve himself therein from the malice of these Evil Spirits." It is 9 ft. across and contains, on the body of the entwining serpent, sacred Names of the Sephiroth from Kether to Yesod.

The catalog is supplemented by basic instructions in ceremonial magick, including brief sections on the timing of magical ceremonies; preparation of the Magical Circle and Triangle, and of the Hexagram and Pentagram seals and other like devices; the ceremonial mode of bathing, anointing, and vesting; and formal spells – conjurations, constraints, invocations, curses, and the like – to be employed in the evocation of these spirits.¹³

Finally, the book concludes with Crowley's translation of The Goetia's spellbook into the Enochian (or "Angelic") language, according to the magical system of Dr. John Dee. The "Invocation of Typhon" mentioned by Crowley is a Greek "spell" copied nearly verbatim from the Leyden Papyrus (Col. XXIII), incorporated at the front of the book before the title page without explanation – but not without Mathers' name being added to it!

There is a separate work from the 14th or 15th century entitled The Key of Solomon the King (Clavicula Salomonis), translated by S.L. Mathers and first published in 1888. It is commonly labeled, by students of magick, as "The Greater Key of Solomon," even as The Goetia is called "The Lesser Key;" but these comparative appellations are not actually part of the title of either. This "Greater Key" is a work of vastly different style than The Goetia, and deals predominantly with planetary magick. It was one of the primary references employed by Eliphas Levi in his own workings and writings. The "Greater Key" and The Goetia are of comparable, but different, importance, and it is unclear why Crowley did not include the former in the Student curriculum as well, in the same way that he listed both The Shiva Samhita and The Hatha Yoga Pradipika.

Book 777, compiled in 1906 by Aleister Crowley and published anonymously in 1909, is a fundamental reference of Qabalistic correspondences and magical symbolism. The story of its writing is given briefly in Crowley's autobiographical Confessions. Describing a health crisis in December 1906, Crowley wrote:

I was obliged to put myself once more in the doctor's hands and go to Bournemouth. I was now thoroughly prepared to take up my Work of initiating mankind, but I was still determined to do it on the old lines.

I had no books of reference at Bournemouth, and it struck me that it would be very convenient if I possessed a volume giving all the correspondences of the Cabbala in a compact form. I spent a week in writing this down from memory and the result is Liber 777.

A PANTACLE OF JUPITER

Unlike The Goetia, the so-called "Greater" Key of Solomon has designs for planetary pantacles. This one, said to bestow "honors, dignities, riches, and all kinds of good, together with great tranquility of mind" is included here as a benediction upon the readers of this book. May you acquire the One Treasure that is never exhausted!

on the matter.

An advertisement for the book in THE EQUINOX summarized its importance as follows:

This book contains in concise tabulated form a comparative view of all the symbols of the great religions of the world; the perfect attributions of the Taro, so long kept secret by the Rosicrucians, are now for the first time published; also the complete secret magical correspondences of the G.:D.: and R.R. et A.C. It forms, in short, a complete magical and philosophical dictionary; a key to all religions and to all practical occult working.

For the first time Western and Qabalistic symbols have been harmonised with those of Hinduism, Buddhism, Mohammedanism, Taoism, etc. By a glance at the Tables, anybody conversant with any one system can understand perfectly all others.

These claims are not seriously exaggerated. Cecil Jones, in a semi-anonymous critique of the work in the Occult Review, evaluated it as follows:

Despite its cumbrous sub-title [Prolegomena Symbolica ad Systemam Sceptico-Mysticam Viæ Explicandæ. Fundamentum Hieroglyphicum Sanctissimorum Scientiæ Summæ] and high price per page, this work has only to Crowley's diaries of this period mention his journey to Bournemouth on December 11, and two to three hours per day of work on the "Table of Correspondences" for December 15, 16, and 18. By December 19 he noted, "Table of Correspondences became chronic." On Christmas he was, "At work all day and night on table." On the next day we find, "More Table until Jones¹⁴ broke down."

This detailed accounting is given because it often has been alleged (but without a hint of evidence) that Crowley had stolen Liber 777 from S.L. Mathers, or otherwise was not responsible for its preparation. However, Crowley's magical diary of the time confirms his later public statement come under the notice of the right people to be sure of a ready sale. In its author's words, it represents 'an attempt to systematise alike the data of mysticism and the results of comparative religion,' and so far as any book can succeed in such an attempt, this book does succeed; that is to say, it condenses in some sixty pages as much information as many an intelligent reader at the Museum has been able to collect in years. The book proper consists of a Table of 'Correspondences,' and is, in fact, an attempt to reduce to a common denominator the symbolism of as many religious and magical systems as the author is acquainted with. . .

The Qabalistic information is very full, and there are tables of Egyptian and Hindu deities, as well as of colours, perfumes, plants, stones, and animals. The information concerning the tarot and geomancy exceeds that to be found in some treatises devoted exclusively to those subjects. The author appears to be acquainted with Chinese, Arabic, and other classic texts. Here your reviewer is unable to follow him, but his Hebrew does credit alike to him and his printer. . . A knowledge of the Hebrew alphabet and of the Qabalistic Tree of Life is all that is needed to lay open to the reader the enormous mass of information contained in this book. The 'Alphabet of Mysticism,' as the author says – several alphabets, we should prefer to say – is here. Much that has been jealously and foolishly kept secret in the past is here, but though our author has secured for his work the imprimatur of some body with the mysterious title of the A.:A.: and though he remains himself anonymous, he appears to be no mystery-monger. Obviously he is widely read, but he makes no pretence that he has secrets to reveal. On the contrary, he says, 'an indicible arcanum is an arcanum which cannot be revealed.' The writer of that sentence has learned at least one fact not to be learned from books.

The original work was quite small, approximately sixty pages, and consisted almost entirely of tabulations. However, its author left behind voluminous notes, commentaries, explanations, and expansions so that, in the 1950s, Karl Germer, was able to edit and release 777 Revised. Virtually all copies that it is now possible to find are of this expanded and revised edition. For over twenty years the most accessible form of this reference work has been in the excellent anthology published by Samuel Weiser, Inc., alternately called 777 and Other Qabalistic Writings or The Qabalah of Aleister Crowley.

LATER DEVELOPMENTS

Although this formal Studentship was inaugurated in 1912, and although Crowley gave examination in it as late as 1945 (about two and a half years before his death), there is little evidence that he paid much attention to it, in that form, during the intervening 33 years.

In the three final decades of his life, Crowley tried numerous ways of preparing people to undertake the Probationer Grade of the A.:A.: He moved from one approach to the next, apparently adapting each to the needs of a particular student as best he could.

At his Abbey of Thelema in Cefalù, and elsewhere during the remainder of his life, Crowley Crowley's early magical stylization was strongly emulative of that of his mentor, S.L. MacGregor Mathers. The deep admiration he originally felt, and their originally close working relationship, did not survive the passage of time.

ARTIST & ADEPT

Phyllis Seckler (Soror Meral) was admitted to the A.:A.: in 1940, and received the Knowledge and Conversation of her HGA in 1952. It was many years before she would speak of this except to intimates. "There is a certain sense of shyness and reticence about events connected with the Holy Guardian Angel," she wrote in 1992. Phyllis expressed this "Light of Life in splendid rapture of delight/ Who fills my veins with life in majesty of might" primarily through her poetry. She concretized the experience in her personal lamen (the magical seal of an Adept), shown at right, which she later used as well for the College of Thelema that she founded as a spiritual school of self-knowledge and self-understanding, and for the Temple of Thelema, which it birthed in 1987.

simply taught students one-on-one. Sometimes this was as part of one or another magical or fraternal order, and sometimes not. The nature and amount of teaching depended very much on the student. Although Crowley would have disparaged this kind of "hand holding" in the early days of the A.:A.:, eventually it became his standard. At the end of his life, discussing this change of philosophy, he wrote the following in Magick Without Tears:

The reason for the relaxation of the [original] rule was that it was thought better to help people along in the early stages of the work, even if there was no hope of their turning out first-class.

THE COLLEGE OF THELEMA and TEMPLE OF THELEMA

In the late 1960s, a sister of the A.:A.: – educator and artist Phyllis Seckler, better known in magical circles as Soror Meral – began to accept Probationers in the A.:A.: and, soon after, established the College of Thelema. With this college, she sought to guide students to an understanding of the Law of Thelema (the life philosophy presented in The Book of the Law), especially through a deeper understanding of themselves and of their dharma, or True Will.¹⁵ Her methods have included Qabalistic study, the practice of certain magick rituals, self-examination and introspection.

¹⁵ The College of Thelema offers four courses which students may complete more or less at their own pace. These courses are equivalent to the third and fourth years of an undergraduate program, and require two years of college (or the equivalent) as a prerequisite.

attention to physical and psychological health, astrology, and other methods.

During the College of Thelema's early years, Soror Meral rediscovered the same hard facts Crowley had learned by 1912. She found that most A.:A.: Probationers that she admitted fell by the wayside. They demonstrated little interest in serious work. Often they simply vanished without explanation. But there were exceptions! And, nearly to a one, those exceptions were people who, before being admitted as Probationers, had completed an initial course of study in the College of Thelema.

In other words, those who had served a studentship, and persevered through it, were likely to succeed as Probationers. Others (with only a couple of exceptions) were not. Soror Meral thereafter decided, around 1980, that she would not admit as a Probationer any person who had not first completed C.O.T. Course I.

A further major evolution occurred in the College of Thelema in late 1987. While continuing its traditional curriculum, the College also gave birth to a group ceremonial and initiatory system – a modern Mystery School – called the Temple of Thelema. This Order employs ceremonies similar to those of the old Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, but recrafted to conform to the symbols and principles of the Thelemic dispensation declared in The Book of the Law and the writings of Aleister Crowley.¹⁶ Along with much other practical instruction, the First Order of the Temple of Thelema incorporates the entire curriculum of College of Thelema Course I. Additionally, its initiates pass through a series of "grades" symbolically equivalent to the A.:A.: grades, but on a "lower octave." In this way, the Temple of Thelema has renewed and revitalized the preliminary First Order of the old Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn both for its own sake, and as an optional "primary education" for those who approach the A.:A.:.

In the chapters that follow, each grade of the A.:A.: system will be discussed in detail, from Probationer (0°=0°) through Adeptus Exemptus (7°=4°). This discussion will be based on the Order's fundamental defining documents: Liber 13 (The Book of the Slopes of Mt. Abiegnus), Liber 185 (The Book of the Holy Society), and the essay One Star in Sight, supplemented by additional clarifying information from many sources. This discussion is an expression not of one or another 'branch' of the A.:A.:, but of the authentic system as promulgated by its two founders. However, with the Student stage – which was a subsequent adaptive adjustment – a different approach has been necessary. Having already described the classic Student system, it was felt necessary to describe the workings of that particular branch of the "A.:A.: family tree" which sprang from Hollywood film actress Jane Wolfe, who was generally known within the Order as Soror Estai. Soror Estai admitted only one Probationer into A.:A.:, that being Phyllis Seckler (Soror Meral).

Under Soror Meral's direction and guidance, the Soror Estai lineage has held to the fundamental definitions of the A.:A.: contained in Liber 13, Liber 185, and One Star in Sight, in every grade from Probationer onward. However, in the preliminary Student stage, we do not follow the exact pattern of earlier generations, even as Crowley did not constrain himself to one interpretation of the Student period. We follow his informal lead.

palpable difference when the leaders of a group are the rightful heirs of a received heritage. Two of the three founders of the Temple of Thelema had been initiated and trained in the traditional G.D. system (both First and Second Orders) by an Order descended lineally from S.L. Mathers. In addition to the A.:A.: linkage of its founders, and certain inner warrants, the founding of T.:O.:T.: was authorized by the head of this other Order. In this sense, it is not a "new order" per se, but a significant reformation of an ancient one, conformed to the new spiritual conditions of the planet.

STUDENT OPTIONS

Today, the Soror Estai A.:A.: lineage adheres to the basic requirement, issued under the seal and by the authority of V.V.V.V.V., that "every person wishing to become a Probationer of A.:A.: must first pass three months as a Student of the Mysteries," and pass examination therein.

We formally note that The Master Therion employed, over the years, many different approaches to this task, "to help people along in the early stages of the work." We have done the same. We recognize three or four forms of the Student task, each an avenue of approach to the Probationer Grade.

First, we recognize the original Student program, published in THE EQUINOX and quoted, in full, early in this chapter. A Student can get the assigned books, study them, and take examination.

Also, we recognize the successful completion of Course I of the College of Thelema as fulfillment of the Student requirement. Similarly, passage through the First Order of the Temple of Thelema satisfies the Student requirement. This is primarily because a person who completes the First Order grades will, in the course of their work, have completed the whole of C.O.T. Course I.

Additionally, there is an occasional individual whose personal study and life experience are clearly equivalent to any of the foregoing. Such a seeker may be admitted as a Probationer without further requirements. However, such individuals are rare.¹⁷

THE EXPANDED READING LIST

Many who explore this work believe that the correct Student curriculum is that given in THE EQUINOX, Vol. III, No. 1, beginning on page 19 – a list of seven or eight dozen occult classics. A similar list was published in Appendix I of Magick in Theory & Practice.

There is no need to reproduce this list in the present book, because it is so readily available in the original works just cited.

¹⁷ We have observed that, generally, where a Probationer has been admitted on this basis and has passed on to other grades, they have gone back and undertaken one or more of the other offered programs as well. This kind of behavior is not at all surprising, considering the character type of those aspirants who typically succeed.

This expanded Student reading list is of considerable importance; but it is not the preliminary reading list on which the A.:A.: Student is examined before passing to Probationer. In fact, the commentary appended to this larger list is quite clear that, "The A.:A.: does not offer examination in this course, but recommends these books as the foundation of a library."

One of the greatest virtues of this expanded reading list, however, is the appended commentary, which discusses the state of mind the Student should strive to develop while preparing for her approach to the A.:A.: As stated in EQUINOX III:1:

The object of this course of reading is to familiarize the student with all that has been said by the Great Masters in every time and country. He should make a critical examination of them: not so much with the idea of discovering where truth lies, for he cannot do this except by virtue of his own spiritual experience, but rather to discover the essential harmony in those varied works. He should be on his guard against partisanship with a favourite author. He should familiarize himself thoroughly with the method of mental equilibrium, endeavoring to contradict any statement soever, although it may be apparently axiomatic.

The general object of this course, besides that already stated, is to assure sound education in occult matters, so that when spiritual illumination comes it may find a well built temple. Where the mind is strongly biased towards any special theory, the result of an illumination is often to inflame that portion of the mind which is thus overdeveloped, with the result that the aspirant, instead of becoming an Adept, becomes a bigot and fanatic.

ADDITIONAL GRADES OF STUDENTSHIP

Also in the eleventh number of THE EQUINOX (Vol. III, No. 1), a new structuring of the A.:A.: system was introduced; and although this new plan was abandoned almost immediately in practice, it is still worth discussing for the perspective it gives on other points.

An article titled A.:A.: Curriculum began as follows:

In order to facilitate the study of The Official Instructions and other publications of the A.:A.:, the Præmonstrator of the Order¹⁸ now issues a series of courses corresponding to the various grades. The grades themselves represent magical and mystical progress, corresponding to which will be grades of studentship representing intellectual progress, and an examination in each such grade must be passed before the equivalent magical grade is officially conferred.

It must be understood that the highest occult attainments are possible even to people who have no intellectual knowledge whatsoever. But this has been in the past a source of great iniquity, as it represents an overdevelopment of one organ of the Nature at the expense of others.

In other words, it was, at that time, contemplated that the A.:A.: would follow two parallel tracks, each member passing through "Student Grades" before having conferred the corresponding "Magical Grades." For example, a Neophyte 1^o=10^o, who had in every respect qualified to be advanced to the 2^o=9^o Grade of Zelator, first would have been required to spend time as a "Student Zelator," studying and passing intellectual examination on the 2^o=9^o written curriculum, before having the actual 2^o=9^o Grade conferred upon her.

If taken literally, the plan quoted above not only would be pretty confusing, it would place undue emphasis on intellectual development – producing exactly the kind of "overdevelopment of one organ of the Nature at the expense of the others" that it was designed to prevent. Other problems become obvious on even a little inspection of the plan. It would have been a horror, both procedurally and developmentally!

What has been retained, however, is the basic idea that the intellectual development must be as thorough as that in other areas. Although two parallel tracks of "Student Grades" and "Magical Grades" are not followed, the published reading lists, or syllabi, of the respective grades are taken seriously. The aspirant must, in each grade, pass appropriate examination in the prescribed course of study – but as part of, rather than as a preliminary to, its “equivalent magical grade.”

This Curriculum makes clear that such examinations of intellectual progress “must be passed” in each grade. One Star in Sight, written a few years after, reinforces the importance of this aspect of testing when it says:

Every Member of the A.:A.: must be armed at all points, and expert with every weapon. The examinations in every Grade are strict and severe: no loose or vague answers are accepted. In intellectual questions, the candidate must display no less mastery of his subject than if he were entered in the “final” for Doctor of Science or Law at a first class University.

ADVANCEMENT TO PROBATIONER

These additional “grades of studentship,” however, go beyond our immediate topic. The real point of this chapter is, simply, that a person preparing to enter into a lifelong relationship with magick and mysticism should find out something about them first! She should educate herself in the classics, survey the more popular literature, and develop a background sufficient to let her understand (and even participate in) a reasonable discussion of the topics. Once she has this background, and has demonstrated a willingness – or, rather, a real enthusiasm! – to invest time and effort into the matter, she may be admitted to the Grade of Probationer.

Chapter 2: (0°=0□)

THE PROBATIONER GRADE

THE Great Work, for the Probationer, is, “to obtain a scientific knowledge of the nature and powers of my own being.” From the beginning, the nature of the Work is self-knowledge.

“Probation” is defined as a trial period, during which a person’s fitness for membership is tested. The word comes from the Latin probatio, the root of which is probare,¹ “to prove.” Thus, in Liber 185 the Probationer is advised to, “be mindful that the word Probationer is no idle term, but that the Brothers will in many a subtle way PROVE him, when he knoweth it not.”

ADMISSION TO THE PROBATIONER GRADE

In the original A.:A.: system, any person soever could be received as a Probationer. However, because so many candidates approaching the Great Work proved to be unprepared, the Chiefs of the Order, in 1912, instituted the Student “Grade” discussed previously. The rule (as published in Book Four) then became,

After three months the Student is examined. . .
and if his knowledge. . . is found satisfactory, he may become a Probationer....

The Probationer (0°=0□) is received by an initiate who is at least a Neophyte (1°=10□). The Neophyte, in turn, is responsible to her Zelator (2°=9□). This serial responsibility is the rule, regardless of the actual grades held.

¹ Probatio enumerates to 86, and probare to 67 by Latin Qabalalah Simplex. The individual seeker is encouraged to investigate these numbers, both in Latin and in Hebrew, for additional clues to the nature and purpose of this probation.

The ceremony of admission, though usually simple, may carry a tremendous impact. It is not felt necessary to reproduce this ceremony in full, since any Neophyte qualified to admit a Probationer will have the knowledge of what is required. The most important details, in any case, have been published in Liber 185, and are as follows:

The aspirant to the A.:A.: shall hear the Lecture (Liber LXXI) and this note of his office [The Task of the Probationer, from Liber 185]: IF HE WILL, shall then procure the robe of a Probationer; shall choose with deep forethought and intense solemnity a motto. . . On reception, he shall receive the robe, sign the form provided and repeat the oath as appointed, and receive the First Volume of the Book.

“The Book”

“The First Volume of the Book” consists of Liber 61, called Liber Causæ; and Liber 65, called Liber Cordis Cincti Serpente. There were originally three small, white “Volumes of the Book,” one each for the Probationer, the Neophyte, and the Zelator. Mostly, these contained the text of Thelemic “Holy Books” (“channeled” communications of exalted verse), parts of which the aspirant is to memorize at various stages of progress. The “First Volume,” given to the Probationer, contained Liber 65 because the Probationer is required to commit to memory one chapter of Liber 65. It also contained Liber 61, Liber Causæ the History Lecture of the A.:A.: – and, incidentally, the one document in the three “Volumes of the Book” which was not considered a “Holy Book” – because this is the introductory document which explains the system, and which plays a significant role in the aspirant's reception as a Probationer.

"THE BOOK"

Each Probationer, according to Liber 185, receives "The First Volume of the Book" ΘΕΛΗΜΑ, containing Liber Causæ (the Preliminary Lesson and History Lesson for A.:A.:.), and Liber 65 (Liber Cordis Cincte Serpente). At left, the first page of Liber 65, shown opposite its original Imprimatur. D.D.S. and V.N. were G.C. Jones. O.M., O.S.V., and P. were Crowley. P.A. was J.F.C. Fuller.

At the present, rather than provide the candidate with these separately printed little books, the Probationer is advised to purchase The Holy Books of Thelema (THE EQUINOX, Vol. III, No. 9). The so-called "Blue Equinox," which is Vol. III, No. 1, also contains the two books, Liber 61 and Liber 65, required by the Probationer.

The Robe

The robe of a Probationer is a white Tau robe, without a hood, and with gold braid along the bottom hem, the cuffs, and near the neckline. On the front is a scarlet pentagram. On the back is a hexagram, formed from a descending blue triangle interwoven with an ascending red triangle, and with a gold Tau in the center. Thus, it conforms to the older style of the Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram which declares, "Before me flames the Pentagram, and behind me shines the Six-Rayed Star."

What is of particular note, however, is that this robe, which every Probationer is to procure, is actually the robe of an Adeptus Minor! Here is a potent symbol for the Probationer, and especially a reminder that, from the beginning, the purpose of the A.:A.:. work is one, and it is that very task which is best identified with the Minor Adept: to attain to the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel.

The Aspiration Name

It is generally known that students of magick assume a special "magical name" or "motto" by which to distinguish their magical personalities from their mundane or civil identities. Depending on the situation or context, these "magical names" may serve quite varied purposes.

The particular type of "magical name" or "motto" which the Probationer-candidate is to select generally is called an "aspiration name." It is a declaration of the seeker's spiritual aspiration, to the best of her ability to articulate this at the beginning of the journey. Usually these are phrased in Hebrew, Greek, or Latin; but we have seen a few expressed in the person's native language. There is no rule on this.

In Book Four (Part II, Cap. 6), Frater Perdurabo commented:

Word should express will: hence the Mystic Name of the Probationer is the expression of his highest Will.

There are, of course, few Probationers who understand themselves sufficiently to be able to formulate this will to themselves, and therefore at the end of their probation they choose a new name.²

² See the chapter following, on the Neophyte Grade.

OVERVIEW OF THE PROBATIONER WORK

Any attempt to specify the tasks assigned to the Probationer must necessarily be vague.³ This is because every aspirant approaching the A.:A.: comes with different history, different capacities and interests, different strengths and weaknesses, different karma. The real purpose of the probationary grade is for the aspirant to explore the widest possible selection of material and, primarily, to find her own methods and styles of working. The Probationer's Great Work, remember, is "to obtain a scientific knowledge of the nature and powers of my own being." Although the Probationer is certainly expected to work – and there is quite a lot of work to do! – considerable care is taken to ensure that the supervising Neophyte does not intrude upon this process.

Thus, we can best describe the assignment of the Probationer in general language, and a few simple rules. One Star in Sight summarizes the Probationer's "principle business" as, "to begin such practices as he may prefer, and to write a careful record of the same for one year."

The period of Probation is a minimum of one year. After six months or more, select Probationers are admitted to a special ceremony, Ritual 28 or Liber Septem Regnum Sanctorum (The Book of the Seven Holy Kings). The nature of this ceremony is, necessarily, never disclosed publicly nor to the candidate in advance. Nor is it appropriate for all candidates. Neophytes of the A.:A.: are provided with precise criteria for determining which Probationers are best suited to benefit from Ritual 28.

Supervising the Probationer's work is a Neophyte whose experience can guide the Probationer. However, the Probationer alone must determine the essential path and direction of the work.

The Probationer is given an extensive curriculum of study materials. This syllabus is included in Appendix D of the present volume, and will be discussed more thoroughly below. It consists primarily of all A.:A.: publications in Class B.

³ The Neophyte Grade shares this vague quality, to a certain extent: subsequent grades become much more precise in their requirements. This is a consequence of the complex and diverse nature of the First Matter – the aspirant – who is approaching the work in its early stages.

The full knowledge of the interpretation of this book is concealed from all, save only the Shining Triangle.

The Probationer must nevertheless acquire a copy and thoroughly acquaint himself with the contents. He must commit one chapter to memory.

This course will furnish the Probationer with a thorough general knowledge of the whole system of Attainment, and of the practices tending to this goal, so that he may choose freely as to what way he will take in his Beginning. For this is always left by the A.:A.: to his Free Will: They only begin to advise and criticize him on the information supplied to Them by himself in the Magical Record which he prepares for Their Instruction.⁴

He may select any practices that he prefers, but in any case must keep an exact record so that he may discover the relation of cause and effect in his working, and so that the A.:A.: may judge of his progress and direct his further studies.⁵

However, this does not relieve the Probationer of the responsibility to become familiar with all of the assigned material. For one thing, one cannot tell if a particular practice is useful in one's own

Great Work without trying it. Also, and at least as important a reason, the Probationer, when eventually advanced to Neophyte, must be fully equipped to answer the questions of the next generation of Probationers. It will, then, be seen that, from the very beginning, the A.:A.: trains a seeker not alone for that individual's own advancement but, equally, for those who come after.

One specific assignment is that the Probationer must memorize one of the five chapters of Liber 65 (Liber Cordis Cincti Serpente, "The Book of the Heart Girt with a Serpent"), an account of the relations of the aspirant with her Holy Guardian Angel. It is not an exaggeration to say that this book is one of the most beautiful and stirring works of mystical verse in the history of the world. Liber 65 consists of five chapters (of exactly 65 verses each) attributed, respectively, to the elements Earth, Air, Water, Fire, and Spirit.

Additionally, the Probationer "shall perform any tasks that the A.:A.: may see fit to lay upon him." However, except in certain cases, these are not specific tasks assigned by the supervising Neophyte. With rare exception, these additional tasks take the form of life ordeals. (More on this later.)

It is frequently stated – incorrectly! – that A.:A.: membership is secret, that one is not permitted to talk about it. This is absolutely false. Granted, discretion rightly prevails in many life circumstances, and a person can be expected to be naturally cautious about discussing matters that he or she holds to be intimate and sacred. Yet, the actual "rule" needs to be clearly stated, once and for all, from Liber 185:

He shall everywhere proclaim openly his connection with the A.:A.: and speak of It and Its principles (even so little as he understandeth) for that mystery is the enemy of Truth.

This instruction persists in every grade of the Outer College (G.:D.:). Finally,

He shall hold himself chaste, and reverent toward his body, for that the ordeal of initiation is no light one. This is of peculiar importance in the last two months of his Probation.

THE PROBATIONER'S JOURNEY

Perhaps more than any other grade of the A.:A.:, Aleister Crowley wrote extensively on the nature of the Probationer Grade and its work. We can do no better than to quote him at length. In Eight Lectures on Yoga, Cap. VIII, ¶¶22, 24, he outlined how the beginning stages of the A.:A.: work were designed:

The question for me is, . . . to describe a method of procedure which will be sufficiently elastic to be useful to every human being. I have tried to do this by combining the two paths of Magick and Yoga. If we perform the preliminary practices, each according to his capacity, the result will surely be the acquisition of a certain technique. And this will become much easier as we advance, especially if we bear it well in mind not to attempt to discriminate between the two methods as if they were opposing schools, but to use the one to help out the other in an emergency. . .

You are expected to spend three months at least [the Student period] on the study of some of the classics on the subject. The chief object of this is not to instruct you, but to familiarize you with the ground work, and in particular to prevent you getting the idea that there is any right or wrong in matters of opinion. You pass an examination intended to make sure that your mind is well grounded in this matter, and you become a Probationer. Your reading will have given you some indication as to the sort of thing you are likely to be good at, and you select such practices as seem to you to promise well. You go ahead with these, and keep a careful record of what you do, and what results occur. After eleven months you submit your record to your superior: it is his duty to put you right where you have gone wrong, and particularly to encourage you where you think you have failed.

I say this because one of the most frequent troubles is that people who are doing excellent work throw it up because they find that Nature is not what they thought it was going to be. But this is the best test of the reality of any experience. . . .

The basic instructions in "the two paths of Magick and Yoga" are, respectively, the Class B documents entitled Liber O vel Manus et Sagittæ (The Book of the Hand & the Arrow) and Liber E vel Exercitiorum (The Book of Exercises). With apologies for the pun on "errors and omissions" coverage, these unquestionably may be considered the "E&O insurance" which protect against "magical malpractice." These clear, to the point, practical instructions are, in other words, the foundation of the entire A.:A.: system of Scientific Illuminism.⁶ G.:H.: Frater O.M. emphasized their importance plainly in an editorial in EQUINOX, No. 7 (March 1912). Every "fundamental practice" mentioned in the paragraph below is taught in Liber E or Liber O:

I am authorised to say that no one will be admitted as a Neophyte unless his year's work [as a Probationer] gives evidence of considerable attainment in the fundamental practices. Asana. Pranayama, assumption of God-forms, vibration of divine names, rituals of banishing and invoking, and the practices set out in sections 5 and 6 of Liber O. Although he is not examined in any of these, the elementary experience is necessary in order that he may intelligently assist those who will be under him.

Several other quotations from Crowley, in one or another of his official capacities or identities, disclose much about the Probationer process:

When a man ceremonially affirms his connection with the A.:A.: he acquires the full powers of the whole Order. He is enabled from that moment to do his true will to the utmost without interference. He enters a sphere in which every disturbance is directly and instantly compensated. He reaps the reward of every action on the spot. This is because he has entered what I may call a fluid world, where every stress is adjusted automatically and at once. . .

The penalties of wrong-doing are applied not by the deliberate act of the Chiefs of the Order: they occur in the natural course of events. I should not even care to say that these events were arranged by the Secret Chiefs.⁷

. . . Every one who signs the oath of a Probationer is stirring up a hornets' nest.

A man has only to affirm his conscious aspiration; and the enemy is upon him.

It seems hardly possible that any one can ever pass through that terrible year of probation – and yet the aspirant is not bound to anything difficult; it almost seems as if he were not bound to anything at all – and yet experience teaches us that the effect is like plucking a man from his fireside into mid-Atlantic in a gale. The truth is, it may be, that the very simplicity of the task makes it difficult.

The Probationer must cling to his aspiration – affirm it again and again in desperation.

He has, perhaps, almost lost sight of it; it has become meaningless to him; he repeats it mechanically as he is tossed from wave to wave.

But if he can stick to it he will come through.

And, once he is through, things will again assume their proper aspect; he will see that mere illusion were the things that seemed so real, and he will be fortified against the new trials that await him.

But unfortunate indeed is he who cannot thus endure. It is useless for him to say, 'I don't like the Atlantic; I will go back to the fireside.'

⁶ Both Liber E and Liber O are reproduced in Appendix G.

⁷ The Confessions of Aleister Crowley, pp. 661f.

Once take one step on the path, and there is no return. . . The statement that the Probationer can resign when he chooses⁸ is in truth only for those who have taken the oath but superficially.⁹

I have been asked by Authority to say a few words on the relations which should subsist between a Neophyte and his Probationers. Though a Neophyte is obliged to show 'zeal in service' towards his probationers, it is no part of his duty to be continually beating the tattoo. He has his own work to do – very serious and important work – and he cannot be expected to spend all his time in making silk purses out of pigs' ears. He is not expected to set definite tasks, nor has he authority to do so. The Probationer is purposely left to himself, as the object of probation is principally that those in authority may discover the nature of the raw material. It is the duty of the Probationer to perform the exercises recommended in his text-books, and to submit the record of his results for criticism. If he finds himself in a difficulty, or if any unforeseen result occurs, he should communicate with his Neophyte, and he should remember that although he is permitted to select the practices which appeal to him, he is expected to show considerable acquaintance with all of them. More than acquaintance, it should be experience; otherwise what is he to do when as a Neophyte he is consulted by his Probationers? It is important that he should be armed at all points. . .

But let no one imagine that those in authority will urge probationers to work hard. Those who are incapable of hard work may indeed be pushed along, but the moment that the pressure is removed they will fall back, and it is not the purpose of the A.:A.: to do anything else than to make its students independent and free. Full instruction has been placed within the reach of everybody; let them see to it that they make full use of that instruction.¹⁰

lect Adepts. But the method appears twofold: (i) to fortify the fit; (ii) to eliminate the unfit.¹¹

I believed then, and believe now, that the probationer of A.:A.: is nearly always offered the opportunity to betray the Order. . .¹²

The Chancellor of the A.:A.: views without satisfaction the practice of Probationers working together. A Probationer should work with his Neophyte, or alone. Breach of this rule may prove a bar to advancement.¹³

This last sentence requires comment. The stated rule is sincere, and is basic fare to the A.:A.: system. That is, peers are always expected not to work together because they are almost certain to cloud and confound each other's work. But the penalty delineated is rarely enforced by one's superiors in the Order. Rather, it is the unfolding of natural law. It is the "working together" itself that is almost certain to bar one's real advancement, rather than one's Neophyte refusing to pass along the next grade paper!

Quite a lot more has been written about the relationship between the Probationer and his or her supervising Neophyte:

In the A.:A.: the superior is, so to speak, the sparring partner of the pupil. His function is to discover the prejudices, fears, and other manifestations of tendency which limit the pupil, by observing the instinctive reactions which may follow any order. The pupil discovers his own weaknesses, which he then proceeds to destroy by analysing them, somewhat as Freud has recently suggested. . . as well as to master them by habitually ignoring their inhibition. If the superior is anything of a psychologist, he should be able to teach the average weakling fairly perfect self-control in three months at the outside.¹⁴

It is presumptuous for a Neophyte to lay down rules: for (a) he cannot possibly know what his Probationer needs, having no record to guide

⁸ "He may at any moment withdraw from his association with the A.:A.: simply notifying the Neophyte who introduced him." (Liber 185)

"Modified by the official Regulations applicable to Residents of an Abbey of Thelema." Aleister Crowley wrote on Jane Wolfe's Probationer Oath on June 11, 1921, before signing his name as a Magus 9°=2° – not a Neophyte. In the nearly 80 years intervening, the original wax seals have cracked and fallen away, although portions of two of them remain, and the original wax's coloration remains, staining the paper crimson and dark purple in the two other locations. The sealing wax was in the colors of the Sephiroth Binah, Chesed, Geburah, and Tiphereth in the so-called "King Scale" of Color.

him; (b) the Probationer's task is to explore his own nature, not to follow any prescribed course. A third objection is that by putting the Probationer in Corsets, an entirely flabby person may sneak through his year, and become a Neophyte, to the shame of the Order. But this objection is theoretical; for Initiation is overseen from the Third Order, where no Error may endure.¹⁵

THE PROBATIONER SYLLABUS

Study material for the Probationer Grade comprehends all Class B documents of the A.:A.:. Class B documents are generally scholarly works, of an informative and practical nature. With this basis, the Probationer Syllabus incorporates nearly all of the major practical instructions of the remaining grades of the Outer College, 1^o=10^o through 4^o=7^o. Additionally, several other documents are unique to the Probationary.

The complete syllabus of this grade, and of all others, is given in an appendix of the present work. We will here discuss only selective points.

As stated above, Liber O and Liber E are the foundation of the A.:A.:. system. They become central to the specific curricula of the 1^o=10^o and 2^o=9^o grades, respectively; but they have an importance that reaches far beyond those levels, and should not be neglected nor deprecated by any Probationer.

Several Class A documents – the so-called “Holy Books of Thelema” – are mentioned specifically in the Probationer Syllabus. The Book of the Law is the literary embodiment of the spiritual impetus of the entire Thelemic dispensation, and is part of the syllabus of every grade of the Order. Besides this, and Liber 65, there are specific references to Liber Porta Lucis, Liber Tzaddi, and Liber A'ash. We would advise, however, that the Probationer become as familiar as possible with all of the Class A documents. They are gathered together in The Holy Books of Thelema.

Four A.:A.:. Class B documents are also official papers of the Thelemic fraternity known as Ordo Templi Orientis (O.T.O.). Three of these are official and confidential instructions of that order's VII^o, VIII^o, and X^o. This presents a problem: for the Probationer is required to study and be tested on all Class B Documents, yet the supervising Neophyte, if now or in the past a member of O.T.O., cannot distribute these three papers without breaking solemn, honorable obligations. A solution is made possible, however, by the fact that all of these documents have been illicitly published by mainstream publishers, and are not impossible to find with a little effort. If the Probationer acquires these on her own, the Neophyte is then at liberty to discuss them to the limit of the Probationer's independent understanding of them, which is usually more than sufficient!¹⁶

Among the works on divination, Liber 78 remains an excellent guide to traditional teachings on the Tarot, although The Book of Thoth has superseded it in many ways. Liber Gaias, the instruction on geomancy, is limited, and admittedly contains blinds (intentionally erroneous information). We recommend A Practical Guide to Geomantic Divination by Israel Regardie, an excellent substitute.

Among the Chinese works, Khing Kang King (a very small, very wonderful poem on yoga) is usually out of print, but small enough for any Neophyte to photocopy. Crowley's translations of the Tao Teh Ching and the *I Ching*¹⁷ are available from the College of Thelema.

Of the Class B documents, a few are assigned only to the Probationer level, and to no other grades. These include: Blavatsky's The Voice of the Silence, The Two Paths, and The Seven Portals (with commentary by G.:H.: Frater O.M.); Liber Aleph, The Book of Wisdom or Folly; The Heart of the Master; Little Essays Towards Truth; A Mas-

¹⁶ Because the Probationer cannot reasonably be tested on an instruction she cannot obtain, we have not listed these documents on the Probationer Syllabus in Appendix D, although they are listed with the other Class B Documents in Appendix E. There is some question of the relevance of some or all of these particular papers to the Probationer process of someone who is not an advanced O.T.O. member; but, of course, that cannot be determined a priori, nor by anyone but the individual Probationer. Based on this principle, and the firm requirement that each Probationer study all Class B Documents, it would be neither honest nor within our prerogative to fail to mention them altogether, despite the understandable proprietary feelings of those (including ourselves) who pledged not to disclose their contents.

ter of the Temple; Liber Artemis Iota vel De Coitu Scholia Triviae; The Paris Working; and The Greek Qabalah (which should be in the Practicus curriculum, but was never added officially).

There are also documents other than Class B that show up only in the Probationer syllabus and, therefore, deserve particular attention here. These include: An Account of A.:A.:; the important solar adorations in Liber Resh vel Helios; the short but brilliant pamphlet called The Message of the Master Therion; Liber CL vel געל, A Sandal, De Lege Libellum; Khabs am Pekht; and The Law of Liberty. This would also include the four parts of Book Four; but these are of such general value that they virtually become handbooks of whatever grade one is in.

ADVANCEMENT TO NEOPHYTE

Advancement within the grades of the A.:A.: is, at each step, the result of actual accomplishment; one might say actual attainment. The crite-riion for moving to the next grade (other than certain minimum time requirements) is that one has accomplished the task of the present grade. Thus, according to Liber 185, "any Probationer who has accomplished his task to the satisfaction of the A.:A.:" is to be prepared for advancement to Neophyte.

The Probationer Grade lasts at least one year, approximately. The actual earliest date of advancement is "When the sun shall next enter the sign under which he hath been received" (Liber 185). To prepare for this, the Probationer is instructed to deliver a copy of the Record of the Probationer period to the supervising Neophyte, and, at that time, to recite the chosen chapter of Liber 65. This is to occur one month before the completion of the Probationary period, i.e., at least eleven months after admission.

The Probationer is to remain free from all other engagements for one whole week, which is the length of the Neophyte initiation process.

Chapter 3: (1⁰=10⁰)

THE NEOPHYTE GRADE

THE Great Work, for the Neophyte, is defined as, "to obtain control of the nature and powers of my own being." Compare this to the Work of the Probationer, where one was to obtain knowledge of the nature and powers of one's own being. The obtaining of self-knowledge is a never-ending task; but, some significant measure of that self-knowledge having been obtained, one now undertakes to gain self-control.

We are reminded of a corresponding paragraph in the 1=10 ceremony of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. At the time that Aleister Crowley and Cecil Jones passed through it, the ceremony read as follows:

The [0=0] Grade is a preparation for other Grades, a threshold before our discipline, and it shows, by its imagery, the Light of the Hidden Knowledge dawning in the Darkness of Creation; and you are now [in the 1=10 Grade] to begin to analyze and comprehend the Nature of that Light. . . Prepare to enter the Immeasurable region.

The word "neophyte," in English, generally means any beginner, novice, tyro, or new convert. It also has come to bear distinctly religious connotations, being the title of a novice in some religious orders, and of a newly ordained Roman Catholic priest.

"Neophyte" is a purely English word. Its Latin antecedent is neophytus.¹ This, in turn, comes from the Greek νεοφυτος, "new plant;" from φυτος, which refers to that which is shaped by nature, i.e. raw material: the Masonic "rough ashlar," or the alchemical "green lion." From this we understand that the Neophyte, an initiate of the element of Earth, has "taken root" as a "new plant" in the "garden" of the Masters who govern the work of the A.:A.:. This beautiful metaphor can be studied more fully in Liber 418, The Vision & the Voice, the 13th Æthyr.

An official commentary on the grade name is given in Liber 185:

Let him be mindful that the word Neophyte is no idle term, but that in many a subtle way the new nature will stir within him, when he knoweth it not.

To borrow a phrase from alchemy, the Neophyte Grade marks a "volatilizing of the fixed," an intentional stirring into instability of a relatively inert prima materia ("first matter"), as a necessary stage of its transformation.

SYMBOLS OF THE NEOPHYTE GRADE

The Neophyte Grade is attributed to the tenth sephirah of the Tree of Life, called Malkuth, the Kingdom. Malkuth corresponds to the Sphere of the Four Elements; and, in a different way, specifically to the element Earth.

¹ Neophytus enumerates to 127 by the Latin Qabalah Simplex. Other Latin words bearing the same enumeration include mysterium, meaning "secret" or "mystery;" and sapientia vera, "true wisdom," phrases of particular significance for most who enter upon this decisive level of initiation into the magical Mystery Tradition.

This grade also incorporates the symbolism of the 32nd Path of Tav (Ⓣ), which opens from the Sphere of the Elements in Malkuth unto the Sphere of the Moon in Yesod. Tav means “cross” – the Cross of the Four Elements. It corresponds to the planet Saturn, to the element Earth, and to the XXIst Trump of the Tarot, The Universe (esoterically, “The Great One of the Night of Time”).

Additionally, there is preliminary work associated with the Paths of Shin (ש) and Qoph (ק), the other two Paths that open from Malkuth to higher sephiroth.

The net result is to empower and balance the individual with respect to the Malkuth stage of development, and to secure actually – not just metaphorically – the Neophyte’s advancement to the very threshold of the Sephirah Yesod, the World of Yetzirah, and the Grade of Zelator.

The Neophyte’s work encompasses more or less all of the practical teachings previously given in the Adeptus Minor Grade of the old Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. Ceremonial magick and “astral” explorations are the primary methods learned and applied. Among the most important in its teachings are those for which the grade itself is named: the Neophyte Formula, a magical formula of exceptional versatility, from which the Neophyte Initiation ceremony is itself derived.

ADVANCEMENT TO THE NEOPHYTE GRADE

Liber 185 describes the procedure for the advancement of a Probationer to the Grade of Neophyte:

Let any Probationer who has accomplished his task to the satisfaction of the A.:A.: be instructed in the proper course of procedure: which is:– Let him read through this note of his office, and sign it, paying the sum of One Guinea for Liber VII which will be given him on his initiation, and One Guinea for this Portfolio of Class D publications, B-G. Let him obtain the robe of a Neophyte, and entrust the same to the care of his Neophyte.

He shall choose a new motto with deep forethought and intense solemnity, as expressing the clearer consciousness of his Aspiration which the year’s Probation has given him.

Let him make an appointment with his Neophyte at the pleasure of the latter for the ceremony of Initiation.

As indicated in the preceding chapter, advancement within A.:A.: grades is the result of work actually accomplished. Therefore, the first step of advancement is that the Probationer “has accomplished his task to the satisfaction of the A.:A.:”

In practice, the formal reading of the Task of the Grade, and the ascription to the Oath, are normally done on the occasion of the initiation ceremony itself. Also, in modern times, the Neophyte does not pay a guinea for a copy of Liber 7 but, rather, is already in possession of The Holy Books of Thelema, which includes it. The phrase “this Portfolio of Class D publications” refers to Liber 185, the Task and Oath papers for each grade from Neophyte through Adeptus Minor (Without), reproduced in Appendix B of this present book.

The robe of a Neophyte is a black Tau robe, hooded, and totally unadorned with no other symbols or insignia. This black robe is the robe of the Outer College of the A.:A.: Other symbols will be added to the robe as one progresses through the grades.

The instruction with respect to selecting a new aspiration name is self-explanatory. Contrary to a popular belief, it is not required, or even expected, that the aspirant select a new name at each grade. The passage to Neophyte is the only stage at which it is mandatory to do this. Otherwise it is left to the aspirant’s discretion; or, rather, to the aspirant’s inner prompting or guidance.

Having dispensed with these preliminaries, there remains only the actual ceremony of initiation.

THE NEOPHYTE INITIATION CEREMONY

Liber 185 instructs:

When the sun shall next enter the sign under which [the Probationer] hath been received, his initiation may be granted unto him. He shall keep himself free from all other engagements for one whole week from that date.

and

Let him make an appointment with his Neophyte at the pleasure of the latter for the ceremony of Initiation.

Similarly, Liber 13 says:

At the end of the Probation he passes Ritual DCLXXI [i.e., 671] which constitutes him a Neophyte.

There are controversies about the interpretation of these sections. In order to discuss these controversies, we first must give a history of the document – actually, documents – called Ritual 671.

At the Autumnal Equinox, 1906 e.v., during the initial period of formulation of the A.:A.: system, G.:H.: Frater D.D.S. (Cecil Jones) reduced the Neophyte Ritual of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn to skeleton form, “eliminating all unnecessary features and quintessentializing the magical formulæ.”¹ From this, G.:H.: Frater O.M. (Aleister Crowley) wrote, on September 30, the first draft of a new Neophyte ceremony. He began working with this ceremony and further revised it “on 7th Oct. and other dates.” On October 9, by its use, he was “permitted. . . to perceive the Vision of ΙΑΩ,” which he elsewhere described with the words, “received the great Initiation.” Thereupon, on that date, he “did duly write out for the third time this ritual. . . it having been in its crude form of assistance to him in the obtaining of the chrism aforesaid.”

Crowley submitted the final draft to Jones for approval. Together, they made a few “slight alterations.” The final copy was named Liber T'raa (תרעא). It was given the number 671, the numerical value of the Chaldee word t'raa (תרעא), meaning “gate,” a title of the sephirah Malkuth. This number, 671, is also the value of the Divine Name Adonai, when each of its letters – Aleph, Daleth, Nun, Yod – is spelled out in full: יוד נון דלה אלף. Adonai is a Divine Name especially associated with Malkuth and the element Earth. Therefore, the ritual was given the subtitle, “The Spelling of the Name of Adonai by the Ritual of the Pyramid.” Approximately two years later, at the Autumnal Equinox 1908, it received the official Imprimatur of V.V.V.V.V., 8^c=3^d.

This, then, is the ritual originally designated Ritual 671.

Liber T'raa is a temple ceremony for two visible officers. Its rubric describes, in detail, the six days of preparation³ through which the candidate is to pass in anticipation of the initiation ceremony itself, which occurs on the seventh day.

It is clear from internal clues that the manuscript copy of Liber T'raa in our possession was prepared during the last week of September 1908, or later. Crowley thereafter put it to a further personal use, which, even today, continues to confuse many students and scholars.

What Crowley undertook, beginning “in the last days of September 1908”⁴ was a magical retirement, in which he wrote a custom adaptation of Liber T'raa for his personal use. In the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn he had learned that the Neophyte Initiation Ritual is based on a formula, called “The Formula of the Magick of Light,” which was discussed in a Second Order manuscript called Z 2.⁵ Second Order members of the old Order were instructed (in Z 2) how to adapt the Neophyte Ceremony to derive other magical ceremonies for purposes including evocation, consecrations, divination, alchemy, invisibility, astral transformations, and – the apex of the Z 2 teaching – spiritual development. The latter was called the “Shin of Shin” working. Eventually, every Adeptus Minor of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn was expected to make such a personal “Shin of Shin” adaptation of the Neophyte Ritual, and apply it to her spiritual progress.

In the fall of 1908 – only one week after Liber T'raa had become finalized and officially approved within the A.:A.: system – Crowley undertook a thirteen-day magical retirement for the purpose of ceremonially advancing himself to the grade of Adeptus Major, 6^o=5^d. (“Distinction is to be made,” he wrote in his diary at that time, “between attainment of this grade in the natural and in

² More commonly written as “Throa,” or “ThROA,” an attempt at transliterating the Hebrew תרעא, which would be pronounced t'ra'a.

³ This confirms the statement in Liber 185, that the Neophyte Initiation occupies “one whole week.”

BOOK III

PART W: SPIRITUAL DEVELOPMENT

A. The Sphere of Sensation.
 B. The Augoeides.
 C. The Sephiroth, &c. employed.
 D. The Aspirant, or Natural Man.
 E. The Equilibration of the Symbols.
 F. The Invocation of the Higher, the limiting and controlling of the lower; and the closing of the material senses to awaken the Spiritual.

G. Attempting to make the Natural Man grasp the Higher by first limiting the extent to which mere intellect can help him herein, then by the purification of his thoughts and desires. In doing this let him formulate himself as standing between the pillars of Fire and of Cloud.

H. The aspiration of the whole Natural Man towards the Higher Self, and a prayer for Light and guidance through his Higher Self addressed to the Lord of the Universe.

I. The Aspirant affirms aloud his earnest prayer to obtain divine guidance; kneels at the West of the Altar in the position of the Candidate in the "Enterer," and at the same time astrally projects his consciousness to the East of the Altar, and turns, facing his body to the West, holding astrally his own left hand with his astral left; and raises his astral right hand holding the presentment of his Lotus Wand by the white portion thereof, and raised in the air erect.

J. Let the Aspirant now slowly recite an oration unto the Gods and unto his Higher Self (as that of the Second Adept in the entering of the Vault), but as if with his astral consciousness; which is projected to the East of the Altar.

(NOTE. - If at this point the Aspirant should feel a sensation of faintness coming on, he should at once withdraw the projected astral, and properly master himself before proceeding any further.)

Now let the Aspirant concentrate all of his intelligence in his body, lay the blade of his sword thrice on the Daath point of his neck, and pronounce with his whole will the words: "So help me the Lord of the Universe and my own Higher Soul."

Let him then rise facing East, and stand for a few moments in silence, raising his left hand open, and his right hand holding the Sword of Art, to their full length above his head: the head thrown back, the eyes lifted upwards. Thus standing, let him aspire with his whole will towards his best and highest ideal of the Divine.

K. Then let the Aspirant pass unto the North, and facing East solemnly repeat the Oration of the Hierophant, as before endeavoring to project the speaking conscious self to the place of the Hierophant (in this case the Throne of the East).

Then let him slowly mentally formulate before him the Eidolon of a Great Angelic torch-bearer: standing before him as if to lead and light his way.

L. Following it, let the Aspirant circumambulate and pass to the South, there let him halt and aspire with his whole will: First to the Mercy side of the Divine Ideal, and then unto the Severity thereof. And then let him imagine himself as standing between two great pillars of Fire and of Cloud, whose bases indeed are buried in black enrolling clouds of darkness; which symbolizes the seeming chaos of the world of Assiah, but whose summits are lost in glorious light undying: penetrating unto the White Glory of the Thrown of the Ancient of Days.

M. Now doth the Aspirant move unto the West; faces South-West, repeats alike the speeches of the Hieres and of the Hegemon.

N. After another circumambulation the Adept Aspirant halts at the South and repeats the meditations in L.

O. And as he passes unto the East, he repeats alike the words of the Hierophant and of the Hegemon.

P. And so he passes to the West of the Altar, led ever by the Angel torch-bearer. And he lets project his astral, and he plants therein his consciousness: and his body knows what time his soul passes between the pillars, and prayeth the great prayer of the Hierophant.

Q. And now doth the Aspirant's soul re-enter under his gross form, and he draws in Divine Exstasis of the glory ineffable which is in the Boundless Beyond. And so meditating doth he arise and lift to the heavens his hand, and his eyes, and his hopes, and concentrating so his Will on the Glory, low murmurs he the Mystic Words of Power.

R. So also doth he presently repeat the words of the Hierophant concerning the Lamp of the Kerux, and so also passeth he by the East of the Altar unto between the Pillars, and standing between them (or formulating them if they be not there, as it appears unto me) so raises he his heart unto the highest Faith, and so he meditates upon the Highest Godhead he can dream on, or dream of. Then let him grope with his hands in the darkness of his ignorance: and in the "Enterer" sign invoke the Power that it remove the darkness from his Spiritual Vision. So let him endeavor to behold before him in the Place of the Throne of the East a certain Light or Dim Glory which shapeth itself into a form.

(NOTE. - And this can be beholden only by the Mental Vision: Yet owing unto the effect of the Spiritual Exaltation of the Adept it may appear as if he beheld it with his mortal Eye.)

Then let him withdraw awhile from such contemplation, and formulate for his equilibration once more the pillars of the Temple of Heaven.

S. And so again does he aspire to see the Glory enforming; and when this is accomplished he thrice circumambulateth, reverently saluting with the "Enterer" the Place of Glory.

T. Now let the Aspirant stand opposite unto the Place of that Light, and let him make deep meditation and contemplation thereon: presently also imagining it to enshroud him and envelope, and again end endeavoring to identify himself with its Glory. So let him exalt himself in the form or Eidolon of a Colossal Power, and endeavour to realise that this is the only true Self: And that one Natural Man is, as it were, the Base and Throne thereof: and let him do this with due and meek reverence and awe. And thereafter he shall presently proclaim aloud: "Thus at length have I been permitted to begin to comprehend the Form of my Higher Self."

U. Now doth the Aspirant make treaty of that Augoeides to render comprehensible what things may be necessary for his instruction and comprehension.

V. And he consults it in any manner wherein he may especially sought for guidance from the Beyond.

W. And, lastly, let the Aspirant endeavor to formulate a link between the Glory and his Self-hood: and let him render his obligation of purity of mind before It, avoiding in this any tendency to fanaticism or spiritual pride.

And let the Adept remember that this process here set forth is on no account to be applied to endeavouring to come in contact with the Higher Soul or Genius of another. Else thus assuredly will he be led into error, hallucination, or even mania.

the spiritual world. The former I long since possessed.") For this purpose, he adapted the A.:A.: Neophyte Ceremony (Liber T'raa) along "Shin of Shin" lines into a self-initiation ceremony. The new self-initiation ceremony eventually was named Liber Pyramidos.⁷ The record of Crowley's magical retreat, and the process of deriving Liber Pyramidos from Liber T'raa, is recorded in detail in Liber 860, called John St. John, and published six months later in the first issue of THE EQUINOX.

Unfortunately, Liber Pyramidos – it seems – was also given the number 671!

There are those, therefore, who have argued that Liber Pyramidos, the self-initiation ceremony, was intended to replace Liber T'raa, the official temple initiation ceremony for Neophyte. We do not believe this conclusion is supported by the facts. For example, Liber 185 and Liber 13 refer to details of the Neophyte initiation process that occur only in T'raa, not in Pyramidos. Liber 185, in a passage apparently not written until 1919, also requires that the Dominus Liminis "shall accept an office in a Temple of Initiation, and commit to memory a part appointed by the Imperator of the A.:A.:," a situation that, of course, requires an initiation ceremony having "parts." As late as September 1913, Crowley wrote that Liber 671 bore its number, "From הַרְעָא, the Gate, and the spelling in full of the name Adonai."⁸

⁷ Actually, it is not at all clear that Crowley himself ever named this ritual Liber Pyramidos. His personal copy is not so labeled. The earliest copy known to bear this title is a typescript made by Jane Wolfe (Soror Estai), possibly while living at the Abbey of Thelema in Cefalù, Sicily during the 1920s. It is clearly a typescript of Crowley's handwritten and hand painted ("illuminated") copy, the illustrations having been translated into limited stage directions. Every other copy of this self-initiation ritual that we have seen bearing the name Liber Pyramidos is either a direct or secondary copy of Jane Wolfe's typescript. The secondary typescript we have from Fra. E.A.O.A. of the so-called Kowal Manuscript does not bear the name Liber Pyramidos anywhere; and Fra. E.A.O.A. has confirmed, in private conversation, that the original Kowal Manuscript from which his copy derives is also untitled. For the purpose of this present discussion, however, we are following the post-Crowley convention of labeling the self-initiation version Liber Pyramidos. (It is clear that Crowley, by late 1913, had labeled some ritual Liber Pyramidos; but there is, if anything, more evidence to suggest that this was a renaming of the original Liber T'raa than that it was his personal self-initiation formula which the present generation of magicians calls Liber Pyramidos.)

⁸ A Syllabus of the Official Instructions of A.:A.: Hitherto Published, in THE EQUINOX No. 10.

There are those, however – including those that have our greatest respect – who want nothing to do with T'raa or temple initiations: who instruct their Probationers that to pass to Neophyte they must, instead, memorize and perform Liber Pyramidos as a self-initiation. Given the beauty and efficacy which most aspirants find in Liber Pyramidos, we appreciate these teachers' desire that their students work with it; and, in fact, our own practice also requires every Neophyte to master Liber Pyramidos, but during the course of their time as a Neophyte, as an important aspect of working with the Neophyte Formula per se, not as their rite of passage into the Neophyte Grade. The passage itself is celebrated by the Temple initiation ceremony originally known as Liber T'raa.

It is not our purpose to require other Zelatores to agree with us on this point. There is room for such disagreement. We seek only to contribute certain facts and points of view so that others are better equipped to make their own determinations.

In any case, Liber Pyramidos has served, and served well, as a fallback when it is not possible for a Probationer to pass properly through Liber T'raa. There were many years when a copy of T'raa was not available, and Pyramidos was all we had; so the Probationers and Neophytes of those years had to work a little harder and do the best they could to "bootstrap" themselves with what was at hand.

We also have used Pyramidos successfully when a Probationer was at too great a physical distance to reasonably make the trip to an established Temple of Initiation at the proper time. In this case, the aspirant was provided with a copy of Liber Pyramidos and required to learn and perform it; and was then given supplemental instructions, in sealed envelopes, to use in a personal one-week magical retreat. Having made arrangements for seven days of undisturbed isolation, the member was given a page of general instructions, which also stated when each of the sealed envelopes was to be opened. This recreated the preparatory period of Liber T'raa as best as could be done under the circumstances. Near the end of the week, at the appointed hour, the member then again performed Liber Pyramidos as a climax to the week's retreat, at the exact place where he otherwise would have passed through Liber T'raa.⁹

OVERVIEW OF THE NEOPHYTE WORK

Most of the work assigned to the Neophyte can be categorized easily as referring to the symbolism of Malkuth (as Earth and as cycle of Four Elements); or to the Path of Tav; or to the collateral Paths of Shin and Qoph. However, behind all of

Furthermore, the manuscript contains instructions for the week of preparation; and these instructions are more effective if they are not known in advance.

Also, the body of the ritual manuscript contains information that, for the most effective initiation, should not be disclosed to the candidate in advance. For example, it contains notes on how the officers are to evaluate the candidate's responses at different points in the ceremony, in order to determine whether the initiation is going properly. Anyone who has studied this manuscript will understand that, if a candidate saw the manuscript in advance, it would invalidate those built-in tests.

We therefore view with sadness those who have seen fit to publish or otherwise circulate (however small the edition) copies of Liber T'raa. Such publication or circulation deprives interested students of the opportunity eventually to pass through the ceremony with full effect.

Magical "secrets" are kept secret for a variety of reasons. In the immediate case, the present author would not object at all to the widespread publication of all of the A.:A.: initiations ceremonies if they were only going to be read by people who never planned on entering the A.:A.:. We would not really mind "outsiders" having full access to these "secrets." Such a disclosure would not cause any real harm. However, it is rarely the disinterested outsider who would undertake to study these documents. Usually it is the enthusiastic, serious student – beginning an A.:A.: probation, or preparing to one day take that step – that would most eagerly study these manuscripts. These are the very individuals who, sadly, would be most hurt by having access to the rituals in advance, because they are the very individuals who would benefit the most from a "virginal" exposure to Ritual 671 when the time comes for their Neophyte initiation, a once-in-an-incarnation passage.

It is our policy to give copies of necessary materials to legitimate, verifiable A.:A.: lineages that do not possess them. We happily would provide copies of Liber T'raa to an authentic A.:A.: Zelator. We also would provide the Word of the Neophyte to any who is entitled to it. There is no issue of mystery mongering.

But we do resent those who profess to value the A.:A.: system, yet nonetheless set out to circulate its "Not for Publication" rituals, to the probable detriment of those who eventually would benefit from them the most. If these persons believe that Liber T'raa is an outmoded antique, rightfully replaced by Liber Pyramidos, we do not wish to interfere with their interpretation; nor do we invite them to interfere with ours. By these present comments, we ask them publicly, as we have asked them privately, to be tolerant and supportive of those who would pass through the A.:A.: system as it was designed by its founders. The ceremonies of a living Order generally have no place in print!

these details, there is the one, guiding, underlying goal of progress in the Neophyte's Great Work, defined as "to obtain control of the nature and powers of my own being."

In what are apparently his earliest notes on the formalization of the A.:A.: curriculum, Crowley summarized his view of this 1^c=10⁰ Grade as follows:

The duties of a Neophyte are in Malkuth, in which is Kether. Therefore he still tries many paths, yet always with the idea of the One Path.

There are a few miscellaneous tasks that do not fall so readily into this Qabalistic treatment but are, instead, inherent in the grade's sequential placement in the A.:A.: scheme:

The Neophyte must memorize one of the seven chapters of Liber 7, called Liber Liberi vel Lapidis Lazuli, Adumbratio Kabbalæ Ægyptiorum (*The Book of Liber*¹⁰, or The Book of Lapis Lazuli, Outline of Egyptian Qabalah).

Additionally, the Neophyte "shall perform any tasks that his Zelator in the name of the A.:A.: and by its authority may see fit to lay upon him." Please notice that this is distinctive from a similar requirement of the Probationer. Probably more Neophytes have fallen from failing this particular test than from any other cause besides laziness!

On reaching the Neophyte Grade, an aspirant is authorized to admit Probationers. This is subject to the approval and ultimate supervision of the Neophyte's immediate superior (and so on up the chain, to the senior living member of the lineage). Accepting responsibility for such students is one of the most sacred duties an initiate can undertake, and only should be done with full preparedness for the task. One of the six founding rules of the Rosicrucian Fraternity, it will be recalled, was, "Every brother should look about for a worthy person who, after his decease, might succeed him."¹¹ Accordingly, the Neophyte obligation includes the promise "to observe zeal in service to the Probationers under me, and to deny myself utterly on their behalf." Similar pledges are made in subsequent grades.

In addition, the Neophyte is to undertake the study of the Formula of the Neophyte.

The Neophyte Formula

Liber 185, as part of the Task of the Neophyte, states that the aspirant, "shall apply himself to understand the nature of his Initiation."

At its simplest, of course, this means that the Neophyte is to do what every aspirant to self-knowledge and spiritual progress is encouraged to do: namely to witness, and seek to understand, the actual process, the patterns, the road signs of her particular journey.

However, much more is expected of the Neophyte than this. She is to study and practice the actual Neophyte Initiation ceremony and, especially, the Neophyte Formula which underlays it.

Crowley made clear, in his writings, the great importance that he placed on the Neophyte Formula. He devoted to it the whole of Chapter 6 in Magick in Theory & Practice, concluding:

Numerous examples of this formula are given in Equinox I, Nos. II and III. It is the formula of the Neophyte Ceremony of the G.D. It should be employed in the consecration of the actual weapons used by the magician, and may also be used as the first formula of initiation.

In the book called Z 2¹² (Equinox I, III) are given full details of this formula, which cannot be too carefully studied and practised [emphasis added]. It is[,] unfortunately, the most complex of all of them. But this is the fault of the first matter of the work, which is so muddled that many operations are required to unify it.

Z 2 was discussed earlier in this chapter.

From the Syllabus published in THE EQUINOX No. 10, we learn that Liber 671 "includes sub-rituals numbered from 672 to 676." We believe that these five unpublished Class D "sub-rituals" (which have not survived as such) constitute the five parts of Z 2. No other satisfactory interpretation has been proffered, and this one is very attractive. Whether or not this is a correct interpretation, it is nonetheless certain that the study and practical application of the Neophyte Formula is of paramount importance to the Neophyte.¹³ Crowley's excellent discussion of the main types or categories of magical operations (Magick in Theory & Practice, Cap. 21, Sec. II) is primarily a discussion of the sections of Z 2 and, thus, of the Neophyte Formula.

The Feast of the Equinox

The Equinox of the Gods is the term used to describe the Beginning of a New Aeon, or a New Magical Formula. It should be celebrated at every Equinox, in the manner known to Neophytes of the A.:A.: (New Comment to Liber L., Cap. II, v. 40)

One specialized application of the Neophyte Formula which is particularly referred to the Neophyte (and, implicitly, to initiates of all higher Grades) is the Feast of the Equinox.

The Ceremony of the Feast of the Equinox serves two purposes. First, it is a ritual by which each initiate magically can unite her consciousness with that of the Sun, and attune herself thereby to a new magical current inaugurated twice annually, at the commencement of spring and autumn. Second, by this same ceremony is derived a Word which quintessentializes the nature of the magick current prevailing for the six months following.

During Crowley's life, he regularly obtained this Word for the Order at each Equinox. Our archives contain a listing of most such words from 1907 to 1927; and, from later years, letters survive by which the Word was transmitted to A.:A.: Neophytes (or those of higher grade) worldwide. For many years, Jane Wolfe (Soror Estai) and Karl Germer (Fratel Saturnus) were the only ones in America who received these letters. From these letters, we know that Crowley customarily would derive, at each Equinox, not only a Word, but also an Oracle (a word or phrase selected by bibliomancy from Liber Legis), and an Omen (a hexagram of the I Ching).

¹² Z 2 originally was divided into five sections, corresponding to the five letters of the Pentagrammaton, הוהוה. However, the ו portion was divided further into three subsections. As quoted above, Crowley had no respect for the ה (Divination) and ו (Alchemy) sections. Therefore, the five "sub-rituals" of the Neophyte Formula would be either the original five sections or, more likely, sections on Evocation (ו), Consecration (ה), Invisibility (ה of ו), Transformations (ו of ו), and Spiritual Development (ו of ו).

¹³ "Those sections dealing with divination and alchemy are the most grotesque rubbish in the latter case, and in the former obscure and unpractical." - A.C.

In the years since Crowley's death, the responsibility for deriving and transmitting the Word has necessarily fallen to others. Soror Meral, the senior living member of the Soror Estai lineage, has assumed this responsibility for many years.

A memorandum survives from the Cefalù period, describing the rules applicable to the Word of the Equinox. It is signed by Soror Alostræl¹⁴ (then the Cancellaria of the Order), and appears to have been dictated to her by Frater To Mega Therion. In part, it reads as follows:

Attention is called to the regulations of the Order pertinent to the Pass Word. The Pass Word is changed at each Equinox. It indicates the nature of the Magical energy which should predominate in the work of the Order generally and each of its members severally. It serves as a forecast of the quintessence of the event [sic] of the following 6 months.

Neophytes of the Order are entitled to receive the Word from the Chancellor.¹⁵ Praemonstrator or Orator. It is also communicated at his discretion to any person working under his direct supervision by any member of the Third Order. Anyone not in possession of the current Pass Word is not to be recognized as a member of the Order, whatever his previous standing may have been, or whatever claims he may put forward.¹⁶

In Liber Aleph, Cap. 113, Crowley briefly discussed the magical significance of the Equinox Ceremony itself, and of similar traditional ceremonies:

My Son, our Father in Heaven hath passed into the Sign of the Ram. It is Spring. I have performed the Rite of Union with Him according to the Antient Manner, and I know the Word that shall rule the Semester. Also it is given unto my Spirit to write unto thee concerning the Virtue of this Rite, and many another, of Antiquity. And it is this, that our Forefathers made of these ceremonies an Epitome Mnemonic, wherein certain Truth, or True Relation, should be communicated in a magical Manner. Now therefore by the Practice of these mayst thou awaken thy Wisdom, that it may manifest in thy Conscious Mind. And this Way is of Use even when the Ceremonies, as those of the Christians, are corrupt and deformed; but in such a Case thou shalt seek out the true antient Significance thereof. For there is That within thee which remembereth Truth, and is ready to communicate the same unto thee when thou hast Wit to evoke it from the Adytum and Sanctuary of thy Being. And this is to be done by this Repetition of the Formulæ of that Truth. Note thou further that this which I tell thee is the Defence of Formalism; and indeed thou must work upon a certain Skeleton, but clothe it with live Flesh.

¹⁴ אלֹסְטְרַאֵל, generally written as 31-666-31.

LIBER O

... he shall study and practice Liber O in all its branches. (Liber 185)

Examination in Liber O, caps. I-IV, Theoretical and Practical. (Liber 13)

The importance of Liber O and Liber E was discussed in the preceding chapter. As a Neophyte, the magician especially gains both theoretical and practical mastery of the former of these. In the Zelator Grade which follows, Liber E is emphasized.

Section I of Liber O may, on first reading, appear too vague to warrant an actual examination; but its prudent teachings should permeate all of the Neophyte's work; for they are representative of the basic tenets of Skeptical Theurgy:

1. This book is very easy to misunderstand; readers are asked to use the most minute critical care in the study of it, even as we have done in its preparation.

2. In this book it is spoken of the Sephiroth and the Paths; of Spirits and Conjurations; of Gods, Spheres, Planes, and many other things which may or may not exist.

It is immaterial whether these exist or not. By doing certain things certain results will follow; students are most earnestly warned against attributing objective reality or philosophic validity to any of them. . .

4. The student, if he attains any success in the following practices, will find himself confronted by things (ideas or beings) too glorious or too dreadful to be described. It is essential that he remain the master of all that he beholds, hears or conceives; otherwise he will be the slave of illusion, and the prey of madness...

5. There is little danger that any student, however idle or stupid, will fail to get some result; but there is great danger that he will be led astray, obsessed and overwhelmed by his results, even though it be by those which it is necessary that he should attain. Too often, moreover, he mistaketh the first resting-place for the goal, and taketh off his armour as if he were a victor ere the fight is well begun.

It is desirable that the student should never attach to any result the importance which it at first seems to possess.

Section II requires the memorization of certain Qabalistic material from Liber 777, as a foundation for understanding the Tree of Life. It then discusses the practical application of this information in the designing of magical ceremonies, encouraging originality over the slavish imitation of published rituals.

Section III teaches the methods called "Assumption of God-forms" and "Vibration of Divine Names." Technically, the latter method taught is called "Vibration of Divine Names by the Formula of the Middle Pillar." Both of these are techniques for uniting the magician's consciousness with the Divine Consciousness she seeks to invoke. The careful study, and even painting, of the visual images of the Egyptian pantheon is assigned, as preparation for the assumption of Egyptian God-forms. Obviously, any magician who feels drawn to a different pantheon is encouraged to supplement this "basic training" by similar study of the images of the gods and goddesses of the other tradition.

Section IV teaches the lesser and greater Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram.

All of these methods can be examined in detail in Liber O itself (see Appendix G).

For all the foregoing, much supplemental instruction has been published from the traditional Golden Dawn Second Order teachings. This should be explored carefully. The Neophyte is also encouraged to obtain detailed personal instruction from her immediate superior in the Order.

Examination on these points is designed by the supervising Zelator.¹⁷ Both theoretical knowledge and practical skill are to be examined.

Sections V and VI of Liber O are discussed below, under the heading, "Mastery of the Astral Plane."

BUILDING THE PANTACLE

Furthermore, he shall construct the magic Pantacle, according to the instruction in Liber A. (Liber 185)

Further, he builds up the magic Pantacle. (Liber 13)

The Pantacle is the magical implement attributed to the element of Earth. As such, it is the characteristic implement of the Neophyte.

As the Magick Cup is the heavenly food of the Magus, so is the Magick Pantacle his earthly food. . .

The name Pantacle implies an image of the All, omne in parvo; but, this is by a magical transformation of the Pantacle. . . That which is merely a piece of common bread shall be the body of God!

The Wand was the will of man, his wisdom, his word; the Cup was his understanding, the vehicle of grace; the Sword was his reason; and the Pantacle shall be his body, the temple of the Holy Ghost.¹⁸

The instruction from Liber A is as follows:

Take pure wax, or a plate of gold, silver-gilt or Electrum Magicum. The diameter shall be eight inches, and the thickness half an inch.

Let the Neophyte by his understanding and ingenium devise a symbol to represent the Universe.

Let his Zelator approve thereof.

Let the Neophyte engrave the same upon his plate with his own hand and weapon.

Let it when finished be consecrated as he hath skill to perform, and kept wrapped in silk of emerald green.

¹⁷ That Zelator is, of course, responsible to her Practicus, and should follow any specific instruction "passed down the line" on how these examinations should be conducted.

¹⁸ Book 4, Part II, Cap. IX.

In each of the five grades, Neophyte through Dominus Liminis, one of the five elemental magical implements is created: Pantacle, Dagger, Cup, Wand, and Lamp. At each stage, the magician is also required, as part of the creation of this tool, to compose, "by his understanding and ingenium" – that is, by both intuition and reason. The Qabalistic Neshamah and Ruach working in concert – some specified type of synthesis of her comprehension of the Universe up to that point in her development. For the Neophyte, this is "a symbol to represent the Universe." It must be approved in advance by the Neophyte's Zelator.

These five magical implements represent far more than would appear on the surface. "Building up the magick Pantacle" is actually the entire inner process of the Neophyte's ongoing attunement to, and assimilation of, the element of Earth. The respective chapters in Book Four, Part II provide profound analysis of the inner meanings of the various magical implements; study of those chapters is recommended.

Because the "building of the Pantacle" is an ongoing process for the Neophyte, the original "symbol to represent the Universe" often will not be the final one used. It is also possible that the Zelator will reject the Neophyte's first submission, and require the Neophyte to start over again. This usually comes from an initial misperception of what the Pantacle is to represent. Nonetheless, the Pantacle design must be truly the Neophyte's own. It is the Zelator's duty only to ensure that the assignment has been properly understood and executed.

One additional level on which the "building up of the Pantacle" is to be understood is found in Liber 185:

He shall in every way fortify his body according to the advice of his Zelator, for that the ordeal of advancement is no light one.

One example of how to approach the ceremonial consecration of the Pantacle is given in Magick in Theory & Practice, Cap. VIII, Sec. III. It is a practical application of the Neophyte Formula, and appropriately encouraged for the Neophyte, who, especially, is studying and applying this formula. Nonetheless, the actual method of consecration is, per Liber A, at the discretion of the Neophyte.

THE 4 POWERS OF THE SPHINX Malkuth & The Path of Tav

He shall pass the four tests called the Powers of the Sphinx. (Liber 185)

Examination in The Four Powers of the Sphinx. Practical. Four tests are set. (Liber 13)

To Know, To Will, To Dare, and To Keep Silent: these are the four traditional maxims of the aspiring magician, the Four Powers of the Sphinx.

These Four Powers are attributed to the four elements. They frequently are symbolized by the four Kerubic (or "Fixed") signs of the Zodiac, the images of Taurus, Leo, Scorpio, and Aquarius.

The mysterious symbolism of the Sphinx itself also is attributed to the sephirah Malkuth, especially in the sense that it is a visual and symbolic synthesis of the four elements through these governing Kerubic forms.

Different writers have allocated these Four Powers to the four elements in different ways. Nor did Crowley limit himself to one way of listing their correspondences. The exact attributions do not matter for our present purposes.

They can be evaluated by each Neophyte individually, in the process of building her own understanding of the Four Powers of the Sphinx, and in the process of evolving her own inner symbol system and magical methodology. Among Crowley's writings, the primary references for these different views can be found in De Lege Libellum, and in Liber Aleph, The Book of Wisdom & Folly, both of which were a part of the Probationer Syllabus. There is additional teaching in a document given to the Probationer on the occasion of her initiation. A still different formulation is given in Liber 777, Col. L. Another helpful reference is Magick in Theory & Practice, Cap. XXI, Sec. V.

THE PANTACLE OF FRATER ACHAD

from Ezekiel's vision are the symbolic basis of the so-called Four Powers of the Sphinx. In this illustration by Eliphas Levi, they are shown correctly as a single four-headed creature – for the Powers of the Sphinx are diverse capacities of a single living thing.

It is important to understand that these “powers” develop in ascending layers. One never “masters” them in the sense of having fully acquired them. They continue to reappear on ever-higher levels, appearing in progressively more subtle aspects.¹⁹ For this reason they are represented as the four sides of a solid, balanced foundation – the first row of brick and mortar, so to speak – of the ¹⁹ At the beginning, the names of these Four Powers mean, essentially, what they mean in everyday conventional language. Knowledge is the practical acquisition of facts; will is the firm capacity to exercise choice and execute action; courage has its conventional meaning; and silence means keeping your facts to yourself and minding your own business! On the psychological (or characterological) plane, these same principles may be viewed, for example, as encouraging within oneself such traits as promptness and activity (Air), energy and strength (Fire), flexibility and attentiveness to images (Water), and endurance and patience (Earth), while discouraging their negative counterparts.

Yet to the Adept, these Four Powers will have become nearly one. Knowledge is Gnosis; Will is the True Will; Courage is the soul's willful embrace of every experience; and Silence is the love of the Holy Guardian Angel. (These phrases, as may be suspected, mean more than appears on their surface.)

Pyramid of Initiation which the magician is building toward the stars. Without such a solid and balanced foundation, the structure eventually will topple and fall. The higher goes the building (the closer to its apex one reaches), the more likely the fall. This is as true psychologically and spiritually as it is in architecture. For this reason, the A.:A.: encourages – in fact, requires – a gradual, progressive, balanced advance in the Great Work, resting upon a solid, sure foundation. As the Probationer was taught in Liber Libræ.

Therefore. . . . Establish thyself firmly in the equilibrium of forces, in the centre of the Cross of the Elements, that Cross from whose centre the Creative Word issued in the birth of the dawning Universe.

As Liber 185 and Liber 13 tell us, the Neophyte is given four distinct practical tests in these Four Powers of the Sphinx. These tests are designed by the Neophyte's Zelator. From unpublished instruction by Crowley, we know that these Four Powers are to be attained “on the material plane.” This is consistent with the understanding that the Powers will be tested and refined as one progresses onward through the grades. Crowley's unpublished guidelines are available for Zelatores to use in designing these four tests. It would not be proper to include them here – for not all of these tests are given with the Neophyte's knowledge.

MASTERY OF THE ASTRAL PLANE The Path of Tav

Neophyte. – Has to acquire perfect control of the Astral Plane. (One Star in Sight)

He will further be examined in his power of Journeying in the Spirit Vision. (Liber 185)

☐ The Formulation of the Body of Light.
Liber O. (Liber Viarum Viæ)

The magical practice that opens, for the skilled Neophyte, the direct pathway unto the Grade of Zelator is the “mastery of the Astral Plane.” Just as the 1=10 of the old Order was symbolically admonished, so must the 1⁰=10⁰ of A.:A.: “Prepare to enter the Immeasurable region.”

The phrase “perfect control of the Astral Plane” is hyperbolic, like many similar statements in One Star in Sight. There is no more “perfect control” of

THE MAGICIAN

O Lord, deliver me from hell's great fear and gloom!
Loose thou my spirit from the larvæ of the tomb!
I seek them in their dread abodes without affright:
On them will I impose my will, the law of light.

I bid the night conceive the glittering hemisphere.
Arise, O sun, arise! O moon, shine white and clear!
I seek them in their dread abodes without affright:
On them will I impose my will, the law of light.

Their faces and their shapes are terrible and strange.
These devils by my might to angels I will change.
These nameless horrors I address without affright:
On them will I impose my will, the law of light.

These are the phantoms pale of mine astonished view,
Yet none but I their blasted beauty can renew:
For to the abyss of hell I plunge without affright:
On them will I impose my will, the law of light.

"The Magician" is Aleister's Crowley's translation of Eliphas Levi's version of a famous hymn. Originally published by Crowley in The Winged Beetle, it gives a remarkable picture of what the magician may encounter in her explorations of the astral plane, and how she must confront these.

these phenomenon than there could be of the Four Powers of the Sphinx. One increases in skill as one advances. Nonetheless, a high level of authentic and verifiable experience is required. In this, the founders of the A.:A.: substantially took their lead from their earlier Golden Dawn training. As G.:H.: Fras. D.D.C.F. and N.O.M.²⁰ wrote in Flying Roll No. 11:

An old name of Clairvoyance in our Ancient M.S.S. was "Skrying in the Spirit Vision" – "becoming a Skryer" was not simply a Seer, but one who describes what he seeks, not only the impassive receiver of visions beyond control or definition. . . .

The importance of this capacity is addressed in many of the formal writings of A.:A.: One of the most succinct discussions is given in Cap. 15 of Liber Aleph, titled "De Via Per Empyræum" (On Travel Through the Empyrean):

Concerning thy Travellings in the Body of Light, or Astral Journeys and Visions so-called, do thou lay this Wisdom to thine Heart, o my son, that in this Practice, whether Things Seen and Heard be Truth and Reality, or whether they be Phantoms in the Mind, abideth this supreme Magical Value, namely: Whereas the Direction of such Journeys is consciously willed, and determined by Reason, and also unconsciously willed, by the True Self, since without It no Invocation were possible, we have here a Cooperation or Alliance between the Inner and the Outer Self, and thus an Accomplishment, at least partial, of the Great Work.

And therefore is Confusion or Terror in any such Practice an Error fearful indeed, bringing about Obsession, which is a temporary or even it may be a permanent Division of the Personality, or Insanity, and therefore a Defeat most fatal and pernicious, a Surrender of the Soul to Choronzon.

The essential instructions for this method are given in Liber O, Caps. V-VI. Liber O makes clear that the training from its earlier chapters "should be completely mastered before the dangerous Methods of Chapter V and VI are attempted."

There is much written material, including some good material, in print about the subject of "astral travel." Personal instruction from one's Zelator also is encouraged. Ultimately, however, one must develop this capacity on one's own.

Crowley correctly viewed this as the basic practice behind all magick. He wrote of it extensively, although often only in passing, in the course of discussing other topics. The best teacher, however, is experience! As one senior magician sagely put it early in our own training, "Sonny, you just have to learn how to get out and fly. You gotta learn to travel. Then you'll know how to learn all kinds of things!"

Crowley, at different times and (presumably) with different students, employed different methods of testing this skill. Below are quotations from his writings on the method of examination, and on the technique in general:

Astral travel – development of the Astral Body is essential to research; and, above all, to the attainment of "the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel."²¹

The first step is the separation of (what we call, for convenience) the astral body from the physical body. As our experiments proceed, ²⁰ S.L. MacGregor-Mathers and W. Wynn Westcott, respectively.

²¹ Magick Without Tears, Letter G.

we find that our astral body itself can be divided into grosser and subtler components. In this way we become aware of the existence of what we call, for convenience, the Holy Guardian Angel,²² and the more we realise the implications of the theory of the existence of such a being, the clearer it becomes that our supreme task is to put ourselves into intimate communication with him.

For one thing, we shall find that in the object of sense which we examine there are elements which resist our examination. We must raise ourselves to a plane in which we obtain complete control of such.²³

It is of the utmost importance to the "Clairvoyant" or "traveller in the fine body" to be able to find his way to any desired plane, and operate therein as its ruler.

The Neophyte of the A.:A.: is examined most strictly in this practice before he is passed to the degree of Zelator.²⁴

He is tested in "the Spirit Vision" or "Astral Journeying" by giving him a symbol unknown and unintelligible to him, and he must interpret its nature by means of a vision as exactly as if he had read its name and description in the book when it was chosen.²⁵

The Master Therion's regular test is to write the name of a Force on a card, and conceal it; invoke that Force secretly, send His pupil on the Astral Plane, and make him attribute his vision to some Force. The pupil then looks at the card: the Force he has named is that written upon it.²⁶

So far as can be told from examinations that have survived from earlier in this century, Crowley gave a "final examination" to every Neophyte.

It was to investigate astrally the Qlipoth²⁷ of the Neophyte's astrological Sun-sign, a way of investigating some of the darkest aspects of the magician's own character. It may be worth saying that this is not a task to be undertaken lightly, nor without proper preparation. We only know of Crowley assigning it to those who believed they were ready for examination to pass on to the Grade of Zelator.

THE ORDEAL OF THE NEPHESH

Related to the awakening powers of astral perception, and those personal energies that accompany their awakening, are certain ordeals, common enough for Crowley to have issued special warnings:

It is even said that to every Neophyte of the Order of A.:A.: appeareth a demon in the form of a woman to pervert him; within Our own knowledge have not less than nine brethren been utterly cast out thereby.²⁸

I believed then, and believe now, that . . . the neophyte is nearly always tempted by a woman.²⁹

A few comments are warranted here.

First, in our experience and observation, this is a reasonable warning.

Second, despite the sexist and heterosexist phrasing of Crowley's remarks (possibly due, in this instance, to his having observed the phenomenon only with male Neophytes and in this form), the ordeal is as likely to appear to female Neophytes as to males, and is by no means limited to heterosexuals.

Third, the real demon with which the Neophyte struggles is within. However, this does not prevent the ordeal from manifesting as an outward projection onto an individual in the environment, if the real inner battle is not fought and won.

²² This is the manifestation of what is called "The Vision of Adonai," or "The Vision of the Holy Guardian Angel," attributed (with sound reason) to Malkuth. It is a natural occurrence of the Neophyte Grade, and an early hint of that Knowledge and Conversation which the aspirant seeks.

²⁷ Qlipoth (קליפות) literally means "shells, husks, sloughs" in the sense of an outer layer that is shed, or which drops off. In practice, the term refers to degenerate, demonic manifestations of a Qabalistic principle. The best view is, perhaps, that they are atavistic residua that have been outgrown and rightly should be shed, but have not been released, or have retained a life of their own. One paper of the R.R. et A.C. calls them "the fallen Restrictions of the Universe; the Sloughing of the Coils of the Stopping Dragon."

LIBER HHH & DIVINATION The Paths of Shin & Qoph

Liber 185 also specifies that the Neophyte "shall begin to study Liber H and some one commonly accepted method of divination." Liber H is Liber 341, more fully identified as Liber HHH.

It will be seen in later chapters that these assignments are attributed to the Paths of Shin and Qoph, respectively. In their more thorough forms, they are part of the Work of the Zelator (Shin, ♀, Liber HHH) and of the Practicus (Qoph, ♂, divination). This is the only example in the A.:A.: system where the subject matter of collateral Paths is explicitly assigned "early." However, this work is quite compatible with the Neophyte's other work, and has been assigned here explicitly.

To assist in the study of divination, the Neophyte Syllabus includes A Description of the Cards of the Tarot and Liber Gaias, A Handbook of Geomancy. Other divination instruction was included previously in the Probationer Syllabus.

THE NEOPHYTE SYLLABUS

A complete Neophyte syllabus is given in Appendix D of this book. As with our discussion of the Probationer Syllabus, we will only address selective points. Most of the documents in the syllabus are included for obvious reasons, based upon the foregoing discussion of assigned work.

Liber Septem Regum Sanctorum (The Book of the Seven Holy Kings) is provided because the Neophyte may need this ceremony for select Probationers under her care.

Energized Enthusiasm is assigned as an important aid in the practice of ceremonial magick and astral journeying. It is also the theoretical adjunct to the meditations given in Liber HHH, and a preparation for the Zelator Grade. The essay is a development of the three "frenzies" previously distinguished by Cornelius Agrippa, i.e., three means of "stirring the Astral Light," or of arousing the necessary magical force within the psyche of the magician. These are sacraments of Dionysus, Aphrodite, and Apollo, representing the application of the ecstasies of inebriation, rhythm, and love – what one generation called "wine, women, and song," and another popularized as "sex, drugs, and rock'n'roll." This art requires great subtlety; for while a genuine inflaming of the magician is essential to her work – is the very lifeblood of her work! – magick is inherently a science of control. Asceticism is a matter of self-discipline, of precise training, not of self-denial. Let the Neophyte carefully consider all of this.

A FLAMING SWORD

One of the oldest images of the Tree of Life, the Flaming Sword, or Lightning Flash, shows the One Divinity simultaneously manifested in all ten Sephiroth; that is, $1^{\circ}=10^{\circ}$. It corresponds to a critical juncture in the Neophyte initiation ceremony.

Liber Os Abysmi vel רענה (The Book of the Mouth of the Abyss, or The Book of Da'ath), is primarily a $7^{\circ}=4^{\circ}$ practice. According to the A.:A.: Curriculum in EQUINOX III:1, it is, "An instruction in a purely intellectual method of entering the Abyss." It seems out of place on the Neophyte Syllabus. Nonetheless, it was included here by the framers of the A.:A.:

system, and should not be missed by the Neophyte. For some Neophytes, a version of the practices of Liber Os Abysmi, in conjunction with Section I of Liber O, will be helpful in maintaining balance and clear thinking during their passage of the Path of Tav.

Two other references are strongly recommended to the Neophyte, although they are not on the official Syllabus.

First, Magick in Theory & Practice, almost in its entirety, deals extensively with much of the subject matter of the Neophyte Grade. In particular, Cap. XI, Sec. II discusses advanced body of light work; Cap. XVIII discusses clairvoyance, the body of light, and divination; Cap. XXI, Sec. V discusses the Four Powers of the Sphinx and other Neophyte matters, and suggests a curriculum of practice. The whole of this book should be a tremendous aid to the Neophyte for the general practice of ceremonial magick and undertaking of astral exploration.

Also, Magick Without Tears discusses much which is of use to the Neophyte, including multiple references to astral work; a discussion of geomancy (Letter 59); and a discussion of the pantacle (Letter 20).

ADVANCEMENT TO ZELATOR

According to Liber 185, "any Neophyte who has accomplished his task to the satisfaction of the A.:A.: is to be prepared for advancement to Zelator.

The Neophyte Grade lasts at least eight months, approximately. The actual earliest date of advancement is, "When the sun shall next enter the sign 240 degrees to that under which he hath been received" (Liber 185). To prepare for this, the Neophyte is instructed to deliver a copy of the Magical Record of the Neophyte period to the supervising Zelator, and, at that time, to recite the chosen chapter of Liber 7. This is to occur one month before the completion of the Neophyte period.

The Neophyte is to remain free from all other engagements for four days, which is the length of the Zelator advancement process.

Chapter 4: ($2^{\circ}=9^{\square}$)

THE ZELATOR GRADE

THE Great Work, for the Zelator, is defined as, "to obtain control of the foundations of my own being." By "foundations" is here meant the Automatic (or Lunar) Consciousness.

The word "zelator" is a rare Latin word meaning, "a zealous person."¹ In the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, it was the name of the 1=10 Grade. In their advancements to that grade, Aleister Crowley and Cecil Jones heard the name explained as meaning, "the 'Zealous Student' whose first duty was to blow the Athanor or fire which heated the Crucible of the alchemist."

Any Zelator who has performed even one hour of pranayama will identify readily with the student who was "pumping the bellows" of the alchemist's furnace!

Within the A.:A.:, the official commentary on the grade name is given in Liber 185, as follows:

Let him be mindful that the word Zelator is no idle term, but that a certain Zeal will be inflamed within him, why he knoweth not.

However, "Zelator" was not only the name of the 1=10 Grade of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. It was also the name of the first grade of its Second Order, Zelator Adeptus Minor (Z.A.M.). This is the actual reason that the name was given to the A.:A.: $2^{\circ}=9^{\square}$ Grade. Of the so-called "Golden Dawn" grade ceremonies, only two have the actual characteristics of an initiation, that is, an inauguration, these being the Neophyte (0=0) and Zelator Adeptus Minor (5=6) ceremonies which open the First and Second Orders, respectively. G.:H.: Fratres D.D.S. and O.M. dispensed with all of the old ceremonies except these two. Both the Neophyte and Z.A.M. ceremonies were reduced to an outline of their underlying magical formulae. On these derived skeletons were written anew into what became the Neophyte and Zelator ceremonies of the A.:A.:.

In the A.:A.:, therefore, the $2^{\circ}=9^{\square}$ ceremony is equivalent to the 5=6 (Second Order) initiation of the old Golden Dawn. In one of his magick workbooks, Crowley actually referred to the A.:A.: $2^{\circ}=9^{\square}$ ceremony as "the Zelator A.M. (R[osy] C[ross]) Ritual." It is clear, from this, and from certain characteristics of the Zelator Grade, that the advancement to $2^{\circ}=9^{\square}$ is a passage into not only a new grade, but an entirely new "order" of the A.:A.:. This is true in actuality, not just symbolically. The Zelator (who now, for the first time, has an unobstructed view of the luminous sphere of Beauty, Tiphereth, shining overhead) is advised to consider that the Moon's light is truly sunlight caught in reflection. Even though there are three other grades intervening between this grade and the Order of the Rosy Cross, the mysteries of self and the universe that the Zelator will come to understand are only a breath away – and yet a world removed – from the central Mystery of the Sun toward which she so zealously aspires.

One further clue of the magnitude of this step is given as an admonishment accompanying the otherwise routine statement in Liber 185 allowing a member to resign from the Order. For the Zelator, the statement reads:

¹ It enumerates to 85. Other Latin words of matching numeration are dominus, "lord," and veritas, "truth."

He may at any moment withdraw from his association with the A.:A.: simply notifying the Practicus who introduced him.

Yet let him remember that being entered thus far upon the Path, he cannot escape it, and return to the world, but must ultimate either in the City of the Pyramids or the lonely towers of the Abyss.

In other words, having entered into the Second Order which begins in Yesod and culminates in Chesed, the aspirant will – in one lifetime or another – run its full course and confront the Ordeal of the Abyss, which lies between the Second Order and the Third. “City of Pyramids” is a term for the province of Binah, the natural domain of the Master who abides in Supernal consciousness.

SYMBOLS OF THE ZELATOR GRADE

The Zelator Grade is attributed to the ninth sephirah, called Yesod, the Foundation. Yesod corresponds to the element Air, and is the Sphere of the Moon.

This grade also incorporates the symbolism of the 31st Path of Shin (ש) and the 30th Path of Resh (ר), which open (from Malkuth and Yesod, respectively) unto the sephirah Hod, preparing the way for the Zelator’s eventual advancement to the following grade, Practicus.

Shin means “tooth,” i.e., something which rends or breaks down the fabric of reality. It corresponds to the element Fire; to the element Spirit (the Akasha tattwa); and to the XXth Trump of the Tarot, popularly called The Æon, and esoterically called “The Spirit of the Primal Fire.”

Resh means “head” (specifically the face, or countenance of the Divine), the seat of consciousness, intelligence, and illumination. It corresponds to the Sun, and to the XIXth Trump of the Tarot, which is also called, popularly, The Sun and, esoterically, “The Lord of the Fire of the World.”

In discussing the attainment of Yesod in his Commentaries to The Book of the Law, the Master Therion wrote the following:

THE SERPENT OF WISDOM

The initiate will now perceive that the sum of the motions of his mind is zero, while, below their moon-like phases and their Air-like divagations, the sex-consciousness abides untouched, the true Foundation of the Temple of his body, the Root of the Tree of Life that grows from Earth to Heaven. This Book [of the Law] is now to him “as silver”. He sees it pure, white and shining, the mirror of his own being that this ordeal has purged of its complexes. To reach this sphere he has had to pass through the path of darkness where the Four Elements [Tav] seem to him to be the Universe entire. For how should he know that they are no more than the last of the 22 segments of the Snake that is twined on the Tree?

Assailed by gross phantoms of matter, unreal and unintelligible, his ordeal is of terror and darkness. He may pass only by favour of his own silent God, extended and exalted within him by virtue of his conscious act in affronting the ordeal.

ADVANCEMENT TO THE ZELATOR GRADE

Liber 185 describes the procedure for the advancement of a Neophyte to the Grade of Zelator:

Let any Neophyte who has accomplished his task to the satisfaction of the A.:A.: be instructed in the proper course of procedure: which is this: –

Let him read through this note of his office, and sign it, paying the sum of Three Guineas for the volume containing Liber CCXX, Liber XXVII and Liber DCCCXIII, which will be given him on his initiation.

Let him cause the necessary addition to be made to his Neophyte’s robe, and entrust the same to the care of his Zelator.

Let him make an appointment with his Zelator at the pleasure of the latter for the ceremony of initiation.

By the original plan, in this grade the third of the “three volumes of the Book” was presented to the aspirant. It contained three Thelemic Holy Books: The Book of the Law, Liber Trigrammaton, and Liber Ararita. As will be seen, these are, respectively, the basis of the memorization assignments for the Zelator, Practicus, and Philosophus Grades. As with Liber 65 and Liber 7, they can be found in The Holy Books of Thelema (THE EQUINOX, Vol. III, No. 9).

The robe of a Zelator is that of a Neophyte with the addition of a silver "Eye in the Triangle" to the forehead portion of the hood. In a later grade, silver rays will be added to the outside of the triangle, in the shape of a hexagram; but these are not part of the 2°=9° apparel.

The following procedure will allow you to determine the correct size of the triangle:² Draw a circle, eight inches in diameter. Within this circle, draw the largest regular hexagram ("Star of David") that you can. This is most easily done by marking off 60° intervals with a protractor, and connecting every other point to form two interlocking equilateral triangles. Measure in about one inch from each point of the upright triangle, and connect these points to form a second upright equilateral triangle within the first. This inner, or second, upright triangle is the triangle template for the hood insignia.

Having dispensed with these preliminaries, there remains only the actual ceremony of initiation.

The Zelator Initiation Ceremony

According to Liber 13, the Neophyte "passes Ritual CXX, which constitutes him a Zelator." This ritual is alternately called Liber Cadaveris and The Passing Through the Tuat.

"Tuat" (pronounced doo-ah, not nwat!) is the Egyptian name for the chambers of the dead and of night where the Sun travels between sunset and sunrise. Therefore, this ceremony of the Moon is a ceremony of night, and of the Hidden Sun of midnight. Within it is to be found, as well, the Reality of a Hidden God.

Even as the old aeon (Osirian) Z.A.M. ritual undertook to unite the aspirant with Osiris or the Christos, this present ceremony fulfills the purpose of uniting the candidate's khu ("spirit;" apparently the higher Ruach) with Ra-Hoor-Khuit.

² A good view of the finished hood is given in the next chapter, and also may be found, in larger size, in the cover photo for Israel Regardie's biography of Crowley, The Eye in the Triangle.

Liber Cadaveris is a moving ceremony, which, in the hands of an able initiator, stirs powerful currents in the subconscious, in the Yetziratic foundation of the candidate, and in the deeper aspects of her psyche. Unfortunately, it requires an elaborate temple for its staging. At a minimum, it requires only one officer, a Hierophant; but the script alludes to others being present and, for certain physical details, the Hierophant absolutely can benefit from the presence of a couple of assistants.

As was mentioned at the end of the Neophyte chapter, four days are required for this initiation. How these four days are spent, and how the candidate is then prepared for the Zelator Initiation itself, is essentially outlined in Liber 418, The Vision & the Voice, the Cry of the 18th Æthyr:

Let there be a room furnished as for the ritual of passing through the Tuat. And let the aspirant be clad in the robes of, and let him bear the insignia of, his grade. And at the least he shall be a neophyte.

Three days and three nights shall he have been in the tomb, vigilant and fasting, for he shall sleep no longer than three hours at any one time, and he shall drink pure water, and eat little sweet cakes consecrated unto the moon, and fruits, and the eggs of the duck, or of the goose, or of the plover. And he shall be shut in, so that no man may break in upon his meditation. But in the last twelve hours he shall neither eat nor sleep.

Then shall he break his fast, eating rich food, and drinking sweet wines, and wines that foam. . . .

Earlier we stated that this ceremony admits one not only into a new grade, but also into a new Order. In Liber 81, G.:H.: Frater O.M. referred to, "the Second Order which reaches from Yesod to Chesed." This idea, often confusing to students more familiar with the H.O.G.D. structure, was addressed briefly in the Introduction as well: the 2°=9° initiation in A.:A.: is broadly equivalent to the passage to 5=6 in the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. This transition from Malkuth to Yesod is of unusual – should we say epochal? – importance for two reasons.

First, it is a direct advance along the Middle Pillar of the Tree of Life. The Middle Pillar sephiroth are sometimes called "Gate Sephiroth,"³ because they open to new dimensions of awareness. By mastering the "body of light" practices associated with the Path of Tav, the Neophyte not only has moved from Malkuth to Yesod, but has awakened from the material and sensual plane of Assiah to the astral splendor of the higher (subtler, more interior) plane of Yetzirah.

³ The initiation into Tiphereth includes the passage of a "gate" into the world of Briah; and the admission to the Third Order

Second, whereas Malkuth embodies the Four Elements, or Mysteries Terrestrial (so-called), Yesod is the first of seven sephiroth that represent the Planetary Powers, or Mysteries Celestial. The former is commanded by the Pentagram; the latter by the Hexagram.⁴ (See Liber O.)

Thus, Fra. O.M.'s reference to the "Second Order" beginning in Yesod is not so confusing. The actual details of what this means will become apparent to the Zelator upon her passage through the initiation ceremony of Liber Cadaveris; and it would not be prudent to say much more in the present document, intended as it is for general circulation. However, Crowley once described his own passage into the Second Order of the H.O.G.D. (the 5=6 Grade) in a way that portrays quite an accurate feeling of this transition into the Second Order of the A.:A.: in the 2^C=9^Q Grade. In the following, from EQUINOX No. 3 in "The Temple of Solomon the King," "P." refers to Fra. Perdurabo, i.e., Crowley. The rituals referenced are those of the old Order:

By thus passing through the ritual of the [Zelator Adeptus Minor], P., in part at least, unveiled that knowledge which he had set out in the 0^C=0^Q ritual to discover. For as the first grade of the First Order endows the Neophyte with an unforgettable glimpse of that Higher Self, the Augæides, Genius, Holy Guardian Angel or Adonai; so does the first grade of the Second Order engender within him that divine spark, by drawing down upon the Aspirant the Genius in Pentecostal Flames; until it no longer enshrines him like the distant walls of through the "gate" of Daäth admits to direct Atziluthic consciousness. These terms (not readily understood except by experience) are given here to show the pattern of the working of L.V.X. in the Path of Initiation.

⁴ This was the exact qualitative distinction, by the way, between the First and Second Orders of the old Golden Dawn system as well. The First Order, operating in a four-sided room, dealt with ceremonial attunement to the four elements, and employed the Pentagram Ritual to command them. The Second Order, operating in a seven-sided room, dealt with planetary mysteries, and employed the higher frequency Hexagram Ritual to command them.

the starry abyss, but burns within him, pouring through the channels of his senses an unending torrent of glory, of that greater glory which alone can be comprehended by one who is an Adept: yet again, but the shadow of that supreme glory which is neither the shrine nor the flame, but the life of the Master.

ASANA & PRANAYAMA

Zelator. – His main work is to achieve complete success in Asana and Pranayama. (One Star in Sight)

Central to the mystery of Yesod is the idea that "change is stability and stability change." This is coded into the numerical designation of the grade, 2^C=9^Q; for 2 refers to the sephirah Chokmah, and the Law of Change (Anikka), while 9 refers to Yesod, the foundation, and the stability thereof, even as any multiple of 9 has 9 for the sum of its digits.⁵

It is the chief task of the initiate of Yesod to establish this foundation of stability. That is, where the nature of the Neophyte Grade was to "volatilize the fix," that of the Zelator Grade is to "fix the volatile." The techniques for attaining this are yoga practices of asana and pranayama.

Asana is posture (from the Sanskrit root as-, meaning "to sit"). It may be almost any posture, provided that it is firm and steady. Patanjali (Yoga Sutras, Cap. II) also characterizes an asana as "easy," but this is a description of success in the practice, not of the beginning stages. Pranayama is literally "control of prana;" but this is effected by exercising control of breathing. Specific exercises are assigned that first establish rhythm and depth of respiration, and increased awareness of the relationship between (a) different kinds of breathing and (b) the conditions of the mind and physical body. After this, more advanced practices emphasize slower cycles and greater retention of the breath between inhalation and exhalation. "By that," Patanjali asserted, "the veil of the light of the chitta [the root substance of mind; consciousness itself] is attenuated. The mind becomes fit for dharana [concentration]."

Liber E is the primary – but not exclusive – instruction for this. The student is also referred to Book Four, Part I, and to Eight Lectures on Yoga.

⁵ Similarly, "1^C=10^Q" is another way of saying "Kether is in Malkuth;" "5^C=6^Q" is another way of saying "Deus est Homo," and so forth for all the others.

Additionally, the Zelator Syllabus includes a more extensive instruction in pranayama, Liber 17 vel Spiritus (Book Ru, or The Book of the Breath).

In the practice of pranayama, it is recommended that the Zelator work directly under the supervision, and even the scrutiny, of her Practicus. Pranayama practices generally are not dangerous if done properly, but can produce serious problems if done ignorantly. The chief precaution is to be sure not to strain at any point.⁶ If Liber E and Liber Ru are followed, it will be found that they repeatedly advise that the student not go ahead to more advanced practices until the present level of work is perfectly easy. Woe be it to the eager-beaver and over zealous Zelator who ignores both her holy guru and her common sense!

Examinations in both of these practices are objective.

The primary test for asana, as given in Liber 185, is that the Zelator "shall have attained complete success. . . i.e., the chosen posture shall be perfectly steady and easy." Liber E (Cap. III, v. 9) embellishes this:

When you have progressed up to the point that a saucer filled to the brim with water and poised upon the head does not spill one drop during a whole hour, and when you can no longer perceive the slightest tremor in any muscle; when, in short, you are perfectly steady and easy, you will be admitted for examination. . .

⁸ Some people, it has been found, could not have a saucer balanced upon their head if they were dead and in rigor mor-

For pranayama, Book Four and Eight Lectures on Yoga detail the various stages of physical phenomena that mark progress in the practice. According to Liber 185, to pass examination the Zelator must have "attained the second stage. . . i.e., automatic rigidity." This refers to the second of four stages of pranayama-related phenomena itemized in The Shiva Samhita, Cap. III:

40. In the first stage of prāṇāyāma, the body of the Yogi begins to perspire. When it perspires, he should rub it well, otherwise the body of the Yogi loses its dhātu (humors).

41. In the second stage, there takes place the trembling of the body; in the third, the jumping about like a frog; and when the practice becomes greater, the adept walks in the air.

Crowley summarized these, in his various writings, as perspiration, automatic rigidity, "jumping about like a frog," and levitation. It should, perhaps, be noted, though, that these are actually phenomena not of pranayama per se, but, rather, of intensified kundalini flow. Their relationship to pranayama is only that the latter practice intensifies kundalini flow.

FORGING THE MAGICK DAGGER

. . . he shall construct the magic Dagger, according to the instruction in Liber A. (Liber 185)

Further, he forges the magic Sword. (Liber 13)

The Dagger is the magical implement attributed to the element of Air. As such, it is the characteristic implement of the Zelator.

. . . the Magick Sword is the Reason, "the Son," the six Sephiroth of the Ruach. . .

The Magick Sword is the analytical faculty; directed against any demon it attacks its complexity.⁹

⁹ is. Sawing off chunks of their skull has been judged counter-productive to the purposes of the A.:A.: training. Therefore, alternate ways of judging their success have been identified. They must, in any case, have become "perfectly steady and easy" for an entire hour.

⁹ Book 4, Part II, Cap. VIII.

Liber 185 refers to this implement as a "Dagger." Liber 13 refers to it as a "Sword." For the most part, the only difference between two such implements is their size, and some details of design. What is important in differentiating between the two implements is the symbolism attributed to each, by intent and by consecration. Usually a "dagger" is consecrated as an Air implement, whereas a "sword" is generally consecrated to Mars and Geburah. The Zelator is to prepare the Air blade. It is clear, from the following instructions in Liber A, that a small implement, only eight inches in length, is contemplated:

Let the Zelator take a piece of pure steel, and beat it, grind it, sharpen it, and polish it, according to the art of the swordsmith.

Let him further take a piece of oak wood, and carve a hilt. The length shall be eight inches.

Let him by his understanding and ingenuity devise a Word to represent the Universe.

Let his Practicus approve thereof.

Let the Zelator engrave the same upon his dagger with his own hand and instruments.

Let him further gild the wood of his hilt.

Let it when finished be consecrated as he hath skill to perform, and kept wrapped in silk of golden yellow.

For this grade, the synthesis of the magician's understanding of reality is distilled in the form of "a Word to represent the Universe." This Word must be approved in advance by the Zelator's Practicus.

As before, the aspirant is encouraged to study the appropriate chapter in Book Four, Part II, for the insight it may give on the inner significance of the implement that is being "forged." What is it within the magician that is being beaten, ground, sharpened, and polished? Note, however, that the chapter in Book Four for the Air blade calls it (awkwardly) the sword.¹⁰ Do not let the variable labels get in your way!

¹⁰ A separate chapter, discussing the dagger, treats that blade as a member of an alchemical triad of Mercury-Sulphur-Salt, along with the scourge and chain. Anyone experienced with the A.:A.: Neophyte Initiation ceremony, or its more public self-initiation adaptation in Liber Pyramidos, will understand the significance of that triad of implements.

One additional level on which the "forging of the magical blade" may be understood is found in Liber 185:

He shall in every way establish perfect control of his Automatic Consciousness according to the advice of his Practicus, for that the ordeal of advancement is no light one.

LIBER HHH The Paths of Shin & Resh

The Zelator is to practice the first two meditations in Liber HHH. These are labeled MMM and AAA. (See Appendix G.) Today they would be called "guided meditations," in which successive details are prewritten as a sequence of images and experiences that the aspirant is to duplicate by a meditative journey.

The three meditations in Liber HHH are named after the three Mother Letters of the Hebrew alphabet, Mem (M), Aleph (A), and Shin (S). These practices represent the receptive or reflective applications of the principles enunciated in the essay Energized Enthusiasm.

The first of these practices, MMM, called "The Illumination of the Sphere," is a meditative reenactment of the inner operation of the Neophyte Ceremony, Ritual 671. It is assigned to the Path of Resh.

The second of these practices, AAA, called "The Passage of the King's Chamber," corresponds (as a meditative, rather than ceremonial, practice) to the process of the Zelator Ceremony, Ritual 120. It is assigned to the Path of Shin.

The "cry of triumph" mentioned in par. 15 of AAA is Section Gg from Liber Samekh; but this would likely will be apparent to any Zelator who had passed through Liber Cadaveris.

Liber 185 requires that the Zelator "show some acquaintance with and experience of" these meditations. For purposes of examination, it specifies that "his Record shall be his witness." Liber 13 clarifies further:

Examination is only in the knowledge of, and some little practical acquaintance with, these meditations. The complete results, if attained, would confer a much higher grade.

THE FORMULA OF THE ROSY CROSS

He also begins to study the formula of the Rosy Cross. (One Star in Sight)

This short sentence from One Star in Sight, without further clear, published explication, has led to controversy and misunderstanding. We apologize in advance for "talking in circles." The limits of common language require this, if we are to discuss the matter at all.

One author of considerable erudition and intuition has gone so far as to state that, by "the formula of the Rosy Cross," Crowley simply meant sex magick. This is the most common opinion among those who have looked at the question and undertaken to form an opinion.

THE ROSY CROSS

This form shows the Cross planted deeply within the heart of the Rose. The motto refers, in part, to the Sephirah Netzach: "My Victory is in the Rosy Cross."

Unfortunately, the opinion is wrong. At the same time, it is incorrect to say that the opinion is wrong.

What is here discussed exists at once both microcosmically and macrocosmically. The Moon's light is truly sunlight caught in reflection.

In his Commentaries to The Book of the Law, Frater To Mega Therion wrote the following concerning the initiate of Yesod:

[In Yesod] he learnt that his Body was the Temple of the Rosy Cross, that is, that it was given him as a place wherein to perform the Magical Work of uniting the oppositions in his Nature.

It may be useful to consider, in this regard, that the symbol employed in the old G.D. to admit an aspirant to the mysteries of the 2=9 Grade was a form of the Caduceus of Hermes.

*Sacred twin columns of silver & gold.
Rapturous dance of our disparate essences.
Alive in the beauty of diurnal glory;
Enswathed in the pleasure of luminous night.
Water to quench the immense conflagration;
Flame to sublime the cascading desire.*

*Spiraling waves, intertwined, oscillating,
Enfolding, enswathing each other each hour.
Secret, obscure, enigmatic twin mirrors.
There is no difference; they are one — and are not.*

An important perspective can be gained by observing that, while the Zelator "begins to study" this formula, only the Adeptus Minor Within — one who has attained to the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel — "is admitted to the practice of the formula of the Rosy Cross on entering the College of the Holy Ghost" (emphasis added). If the Zelator is able to study, why does not the Zelator, or the Practicus, or the Philosophus, or the Dominus Liminis, or — at the very least! — the Adeptus Minor Without practice the formula as well?

Unless they can't.

I don't mean shouldn't. I mean can't.

By definition, only the Adeptus Minor Within is admitted to the practice of this formula of the Rosy Cross that the Zelator commences to study.

And, while there is much that we might write of this formula, in both its natural and its spiritual forms, there is no guarantee that any of it would be significant to anyone else; for the mysteries of the Rosy Cross are the most personal of all mysteries. No one can interpret them for another. They are as personal, as intimate, as subtle, as silent, as evasive, and as ubiquitous as love.

We shall content ourselves with recalling Aleister Crowley's observation that the Rosy Cross is formulated in the annihilation of the self in the Beloved.

Crowley's one direct attempt to discuss this formula in any detail, under this name, is in Magick in Theory & Practice, Cap. XII, Sec. II. This is, mostly, the text that has caused so much confusion. Most students have overlooked, or failed to understand, the statement that, "It is also extremely desirable that [the magician] have attained. . . that purity of spirit which results from a perfect understanding both of the standing both of the differences and harmonies of the planes upon the Tree of Life" (emphasis added).

It would also be beneficial to study Liber Aleph, Caps. 106-108 and 135.

In a book review published in THE EQUINOX No. 4, Crowley disclosed more about his thoughts on these symbols than in perhaps any other of his writings:

If we are in any way to shadow forth the Ineffable, it must be by a degradation. Every symbol is a blasphemy against the Truth that it indicates. A painter to remind us of sunlight has no better material than dull ochre.

So we need not be surprised if the Unity of Subject and Object in Consciousness which is Samadhi, the uniting of the Bride and the Lamb which is Heaven, the uniting of the Magus and the God which is Evocation, the uniting of the Man and his Holy Guardian Angel which is the seal upon the work of the Adeptus Minor, is symbolized by the geometrical unity of the circle and the square, the arithmetical unity of the 5 and the 6, and (for more universality of comprehension) the uniting of the Lingam and the Yoni, the Cross and the Rose. For as in earth-life the sexual ecstasy is the loss of self in the Beloved, the creation of a third consciousness transcending its parents, which is again reflected into matter as a child; so, immeasurably higher, upon the Plane of Spirit, Subject and Object join to disappear, leaving a transcendent unity. This third is ecstasy and death; as below, so above.

It is then with no uncleanness of mind that all races of men have adored an ithyphallic god; to those who can never lift their eyes above the basest plane the sacrament seems filth.

... I really fail to see much difference between this doctrine and our own of attaining the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel, or the Hindu doctrine of becoming one with God.

We are reminded also of the passage in The Book of Lies, Cap. 11, which reads: "Cast down through The Abyss is the Light, the Rosy Cross, the rapture of Union that destroys, that is The Way. The Rosy Cross is the Ambassador of Pan."

Nor should we forget the gloria that hallows one of the least read paragraphs of Liber Jugorum: "Glory to Nuit and to Hadit, and to Him that hath given us the Symbol of the Rosy Cross!" In the cosmogony of The Book of the Law, this is a reference to Ra-Hoor-Khuit, the Qabalistic "child," who is a generic symbol of the Holy Guardian Angel of each person.

The symbols exist everywhere one looks. To many of us, they are especially wondrous when expressed in the language of love and echoing the sacred rapture of earthly love. The reality behind the symbols, however, is not to be stated in coherent language. Although the Zelator has awakened to lucid perception in Yetzirah, her mind is not yet opened unto the consciousness of Briah where the inexpressible is directly perceived and known.

In our own small way we have sought to express the same ideas thus:

*And then these veils lift, or part,
like delicate tumescent folds of flesh
opening inward to admit the whole of me.
Bright star disclosed anew,
One star in sight,
Beyond death, beyond space, beyond reason,
I am lost & found
at once & forever & never.
Two, one, naught.
Naughty play as we/I/she meet in the center of ecstasy & pain, beyond light
into starlit night,
and spill,
twin fountains of silver & gold
pulsing,
pulsars, quasars,
eruptive & unceasing streams of liquid starlight,
screaming lost in Silence,
into the greater creative pulse of the boundless, soundless BEAUTY of Thee.*

So much for an explanation of the Formula of the Rosy Cross.

Within the Zelator Syllabus are several instructions designed to assist in the beginning studies of this formula. In addition to some already mentioned in this chapter, there are The Star Sapphire; The Book of Lies, falsely so-called; Energized Enthusiasm; and Thesouro Eidolon (The Treasure-House of Images). We would also suggest adding – particularly since the Path of Samekh has become visible to the initiate of Yesod – Liber Samekh and its extraordinary commentary by S.:H.: Fra. To Mega Therion.

OTHER TASKS OF THE ZELATOR

The Zelator is to commit to memory one chapter of Liber 78 vel Legis, The Book of the Law.

"Beside all this, he shall apply himself to work for the A.:A.: upon his own responsibility," according to Liber 185. This should be contrasted to the parallel responsibilities of the Probationer and Neophyte.

THE ZELATOR SYLLABUS

A few other items on the Zelator Syllabus deserve comment.

Liber Jugorum (The Book of Yokes) is an important feature of the three grades following this one (Practicus, Philosophus, and Dominus Liminis). Its presence on the Zelator Syllabus is apparently to give the 2°=9° the opportunity to work with it in advance. It also may provide a useful technique for the control of the Automatic Consciousness. In Chapter 5 of the present book, Liber Jugorum is discussed more completely, with certain precautionary advice. (Liber Jugorum is reproduced in Appendix G.)

Liber IAO apparently was never written. It was intended to complete the triptych begun by Energized Enthusiasm and Liber HHH. As they were the theoretical and the reflective, so was it to include the active aspect of the meditation of the principles discussed.

Liber Thisharb, Viæ Memoriae (The Book of the Journey of the Memory) is primarily a 7°=4° instruction in the recovery of past life memories. However, its deeper purpose, the conscious discovery of the True Will, is entirely suited to the Grade of Zelator.

ADVANCEMENT TO PRACTICUS

According to Liber 185, "any Zelator who has accomplished his task to the satisfaction of the A.:A.:" is to be prepared for advancement to Practicus.

There is no minimum time that one must remain in the Zelator Grade. One advances when ready. "The Zelator shall proceed to the grade of Practicus at any time that authority confers it," according to Liber 185. Some aspirants may pass through this grade in a matter of weeks; others may remain for many years. If the Zelator task is completed, then, as soon as "One month after his admission to the grade," he may "go to his Practicus, pass the necessary tests, and repeat to him his chosen chapter of Liber CCX," that is, of Liber Legis.

No ritual admits to the grade of Practicus, which is conferred by authority when the task of the Zelator is accomplished. (Liber 13)

When authority confers the grade, he shall rejoice therein; but beware, for that this is his first departure from the middle pillar of the Tree of Life. (Liber 185)

Chapter 5: (3^o=8^o)

THE PRACTICUS GRADE

THE Great Work, for the Practicus, is defined as, "to obtain control of the vacillations of my own being."

"Practicus" is a Latin word, generally rendered, "one who practices," or "one who takes action." It derives from the homonymous Greek praktikos, "fit for action, fit for business, business-like, practical; active, effective." The root idea is one of activity. Thus, in commenting on the grade name in Liber 185, the A.:A.: founders remarked: "Let him remember that the word Practicus is no idle term, but that Action is the equilibrium of him that is in the House of Mercury, who is the Lord of Intelligence."

By gematria (a major area of practice in this grade), the Latin word practicus enumerates to 100, or 10 × 10. This value corresponds to several important Latin phrases that reflect the symbolic goal of the Sun or Tiphereth still shining before the Practicus on the Path.¹ Among these phrases are: ad aurorum, "to the dawn"; anima solis, "soul of the Sun;" and crux aurea, "golden cross."

Directing our attention to Hebrew, we note that 100 is the value of the letter Qoph, assigned to one of the Paths of the Tree of Life which the Practicus will traverse. In consideration of the grade's attribution to water, and to the symbolism of the Magick Cup, it is significant that 100 is the value of yamim (יָמִים), "seas;" keliyim (כֵּלִים), "vases, vessels;" pak (פָּךְ), "flask, bottle;" and kaph (כַּף), the name of the eleventh letter of the Hebrew alphabet, usually translated "palm of the hand," but also meaning a curved item such as a dish or saucer. The same number corresponds to the Greek engkainia (ἐγκαινία), the name of the feast for the dedication of the temple.

One hundred is also the value, using Hebrew characters, of N.N., the name of the Rosicrucian frater who, in the legend of the Fama Fraternitatis, discovered the Mystic Vault. He was the successor of Bro. A., the head of the Rosicrucian fraternity. His initials are used, in printed Rosicrucian rituals, to represent the motto of the candidate; that is, each initiate, in his or her ripening, becomes Frater N.N.

The Greek form, πρακτικός, enumerates to 801. Probably the most important correspondence of this number is to A Ω, that is, Alpha and Omega, the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet, and a mystic symbol of that which is Eternal, which exists both "at the beginning" and "in the end."

SYMBOLS OF THE PRACTICUS GRADE

The Practicus Grade is attributed to the eighth sephirah of the Tree of Life, called Hod, Splendor. Hod corresponds to the element Water, and to the Sphere of Mercury. This grade also incorporates the symbolism of the 29th Path of Qoph (ק), the 28th Path of Tzaddi (צ), and the 27th Path of Peh (פ), which open (from Malkuth, Yesod, and Hod, respectively) unto the sephirah Netzach, preparing the way for the Practicus' eventual advancement to the Philosophus Grade.

¹ Or, they may refer to the fact that this initiate has now "known and passed," that is, assimilated, the experiences of the Path of Resh, also attributed to the Sun.

Qoph means "the back of the head," where certain brain functions are situated, especially those most operative during sleep or other so-called "unconscious" states. Qoph corresponds to the sign Pisces, and to the XVIIIth Trump of the Tarot, popularly called The Moon, and esoterically called "The Ruler of the Flux & Reflux: The Child of the Sons of the Mighty."

Tzaddi means "fish-hook." Qabalistically, a "fish-hook" is that which lifts a "fish" (Nun, 1, the fourteenth Hebrew letter, attributed to the sign Scorpio) out of the "water" (a powerful symbol of diverse significance). Tzaddi corresponds to the sign Aries, and to the IVth Trump of the Tarot, popularly called The Emperor, and esoterically called "Sun of the Morning, Chief Among the Mighty."

Peh means "mouth." This projective, penetrating, potent letter-sound especially refers to the mouth as an organ of speech, and comes from a root meaning "breathing." It corresponds to the planet Mars, and to the XVIth Trump of the Tarot, popularly called The Tower or The House of God, and esoterically called "The Lord of the Hosts of the Mighty."

ADVANCEMENT TO THE PRACTICUS GRADE

There is no admission ritual to the grades of Practicus, Philosophus, or Dominus Liminis. Although each aspirant may see fit to mark the occasion in a style, ceremonial or otherwise, that is personally significant, the actual requirements are quite simple. Advancement "is conferred by authority when the task of the Zelator is accomplished."² The details are given in Liber 185, Paper D., par. 0, as follows:

Let any Zelator be appointed by authority to proceed to the grade of Practicus.

Let him then read through this note of his office, and sign it.

Let him cause the necessary addition to be made to his Zelator's robe.

Let him make an appointment with his Practicus at the pleasure of the latter for the conferring of advancement.

The Practicus robe is identical to that of the Zelator, but with the addition of a silver hexagram of 48 rays surrounding the triangle on the hood. Refer back to the robe instructions in the previous chapter to read how this is drafted. The hexagram is that which previously was drawn within an eight-inch circle during the process of obtaining the triangle template. The shape and distribution of the 48 silver rays within this hexagram are best taken from the photograph at right.

FRATER O.M.

in the Sign of 7°=4°. The hood design is the ensign of a Practicus, 3°=8°.

One "rule" changes in the Practicus Grade. The Probationer, Neophyte, and Zelator were advised that they might resign from the A.:A.: at any time; membership is entirely voluntary (in both the popular and subtle meanings of that word). However, being away from the Middle Pillar of the Tree of Life, the Practicus and Philosophus are counseled in Liber 185 not to attempt to withdraw from their association with the A.:A.: The intent is that they persevere at least to the point of equilibrating themselves, again on the Middle Pillar, in the Grade of Dominus Liminis.

QABALAH

Practicus. – Is expected to complete his intellectual training, and in particular to study the Qabalah. (One Star in Sight)

He shall pass examinations in Liber DCCLXXVII, the Qabalah, and the Sepher Sephiroth. (Liber 185)

Instruction and Examination in the Qabalah and Liber DCCLXXVII. (Liber 13)

Hod is attributed to the planet Mercury, and to the aspirant's intellectual faculties. The Qabalah is a Hermetic system that organizes and coordinates all of one's available knowledge. It is, therefore, an appropriate study for the Practicus Grade.

At the same time, remember that the word Qabalah comes from a root that means "receiving." True Qabalah is not something learned from a book or teacher as data; it is a developed faculty of reception. Therefore, this practice also corresponds to the element of Water and the symbolism of the Magick Cup. As we shall see, there are many practices undertaken by the Practicus which not only continue to develop and control the Yetziratic consciousness to which she became more or less fully awakened in the advance to Yesod, but which also begin to make her consciously receptive to the higher Briatic consciousness which is the natural legacy of the Adept.

Liber 777 and Sepher Sephiroth are both listed as specific items of study for the Practicus. Liber 777, by this time, will have become entirely familiar to the magician. Even as a Neophyte, in her initial work with Liber O, the student was required to memorize substantial portions of this extensive catalog of Qabalistic correspondences. Sepher Sephiroth is probably also quite familiar to the aspirant even before reaching the Practicus Grade. It contains lists of Hebrew words and other correspondences, cataloged according to their numerical values. It is the foundation of most of the work with gematria (Qabalistic numerology) that the magician will undertake.³

Additionally, the Practicus Syllabus contains several other official Qabalistic instructions: Gematria (Liber 58, EQUINOX V); Liber Arcanorum (The Book of Sacred Mysteries); Liber Tav vel Kabbalæ Trium Literarum (Book Tav, or The Book of the Qabalah of Three Letters); and A Note on Genesis.

Beyond this, further studies in the Qabalah depend on the needs, interests, and inner promptings of the Practicus.

For the most part, the method of testing the Qabalistic progress is left to the supervising Philosopher. However, one specific examination is described in One Star in Sight:

In the Qabalah, the candidate must discover for himself, and prove to the examiner beyond all doubt, the properties of a number never previously examined by any student.

³ Gematria, to be of any real use beyond the decoding of ancient manuscripts, must far exceed the intellectual memorization of attributions and tabulation of calculations. It must, for each aspirant, become a living thing, an art form framed by the most acute discipline and firm definition, within which the bounds of the magician's intuition can come to flourish. Sepher Sephiroth is only the beginning of this – and an excellent one, at that!

This particular task may dovetail nicely with one assignment pertaining to the casting of the Magick Cup, which will be discussed below in the appropriate section.

GÑANA YOGA

Instruction in Philosophical Meditation
(Gnana-Yoga). (Liber 13)

Gñana yoga is usually translated, "Union by Knowledge." To a great extent, this comprises an intellectual route to attainment, albeit one that requires an illuminated intellect. However, the Sanskrit word gñana comes from the same root as the Greek word gnosis. Although literally these two words may be rendered "knowledge," or "knowing," their deeper meaning transcends the operations of the intellect. As the Shiva Samhita says in its first verse:

The Gñana alone is eternal; it is without beginning or end; there exists no other real substance. Diversities which we see in the world are results of sense-conditions; when the latter cease, then this Gñana alone, and nothing else, remains.

These words of the Shiva Samhita are attributed to Ishvara, another name for the Holy Guardian Angel.⁴ This shines a different light on the phrase, "Union by Knowledge."

Private notes by Crowley indicate that the Practicus is not only to study, but also to practice, Gñana Yoga; and, for this purpose, we can feel secure in following his own definition of Gñana Yoga in Liber 13, "philosophical meditation." Compare this to Yogi Ramacharaka's description in Gnani Yoga – Yogi Philosophy:

He who wishes to develop by "knowing" – by studying the fundamental principles, and the wonderful truths underlying Life, follows the path of "Gnani Yoga."

Qabalah is actually the Gñana Yoga of the magical tradition. However, it is clear from the separate references to the two topics in the A.:A.: foundation literature, that study and practice of Gñana Yoga were contemplated that are distinctive from the study and practice of Qabalah per se.

Crowley wrote no official instruction on Gñana Yoga. In Liber Aleph, Cap. 137, he mentioned, Gñana Yoga. . . of which I have written only here and there, as one who would strew great stones upon the Earth in Disorder, by Default of building them nobly into a Pyramid.

Since the Practicus is required to undertake its study and practice anyway, she is left to other resources, such as the Eastern source literature. Vivekananda's Jnana-Yoga is recommended.⁵

Most of the material in standard Gñana Yoga texts amounts to what we might call "occult philosophy" or "occult theory." The body of Western occultism – for example, most of the writings of Dion Fortune, and almost anyone else who came from a Theosophical background – is filled with this type of thing. Most students interested in occult or magical training stuff themselves full of this kind of theoretical teaching early in their studies. In contrast, the A.:A.: has little of it. Of the traditional Rosicrucian grade names, only that of Theoricus ("theoretician") was dropped from the system. The A.:A.: theme of, "The Method of Science, the Aim of Religion," and the empirical basis of the whole system of Scientific Illuminism or Skeptical Theurgy, certainly leaves little room for conjecture.

We find it interesting, therefore, that the required exploration of this method of Illuminism, which relies for its source material on occult or philosophical theories or models, is deferred until the fairly advanced grade of Practicus, a grade which relatively few have attained since the A.:A.: system was formulated nearly a century ago. Perhaps it was felt that the Practicus had enough experience to be able to approach the Theory Bog with adequate prophylactic skepticism.

In any case, the practice of Gñana Yoga requires more than simple acquisition of more knowledge. It is a method of meditation, of philosophical reflection, which provides an expanded and reoriented window on reality.

⁵ Within Thelemic literature, the best source material for a Gñana Yoga type of philosophical meditation is, in our opinion, The Master Therion's commentaries on The Book of the Law, published as The Law is For All, or as Magical & Philosophical Commentaries on the Book of the Law.

THE CUP OF THE STOLISTES

Many diagrams and illustration in the HOGD 3=8 Grade provided a form of Gñana Yoga, especially descriptive of the Qabalistic model of the human psyche. The diagram of the Cup of the Stolistes (at left) symbolically depicts the triad of Neshamah (superconsciousness), Ruach (ego-consciousness), and Nephesh (subconsciousness) in relationship to the ten sephiroth of the Tree of Life.

CONTROL OF SPEECH

Instruction and Examination in Control of Speech. Practical. (Liber 13)

He shall attain complete success in Liber III, Cap. 1. (Liber 185)

The actual task is "control of speech." One tool that is given for this purpose is Liber 3, which is Liber Jugorum (The Book of Yokes).⁶

Liber Jugorum is one of the earliest A.:A.: instructions. It is an instruction in "behavior modification" or "operant conditioning," written decades before those terms existed in their contemporary sense. Three of its sections are dedicated to exercises for establishing, first, control over one's speech (for the Practicus), then control over one's actions (for the Philosophus), and, finally, control over one's thoughts (for the Dominus Liminis; originally for the Adeptus Minor).

Speech is metaphorically represented by the Unicorn; action by the Horse; and thought by the Ox. Liber Jugorum teaches methods to "yoke" these beasts and bring them under one's own control.

The essential method is to set a discipline for oneself – for example, deciding that, for a particular period of time, one will not utter a certain common word such as "but" – then vigilantly witness one's success. For each failure, a razor blade is used to cut one's own arm. The cut must be in the immediate aftermath, so as to associate, unquestionably, the response with the slip. The arm then becomes, as well, a physical record of the success of the practice!

⁶ See Appendix G.

The same method is applied later for control of action and control of thought.

There are those who consider this to be a barbaric practice, however successful it might be! This criticism warrants a few remarks.

First, the underlying practice is control of speech. The Practicus is not limited to this particular way of gaining that control.

Second, there are other devices for sending a sharp pain signal and building a "vigilance reflex" (the building of which is an important part of the idea in this practice). A reasonably tight (but not constricting) rubber band worn around the wrist allows for a good sharp snap that gets the point across, and still lets one function reasonably in the business world (unlike the razor blade method!).

Third, if a blade is used, keep it antiseptic. Perseverance in this practice does not warrant unhealthful actions. (An otherwise virgin blade can be carried in a little box, folded into a sponge saturated with alcohol, for example.)

Fourth, if you are avoiding the razor because of fear of pain, fear of blood, or an aversion to cutting yourself, then, at some point, you likely will have to confront that fear and conquer it. On the other hand, if you are using the razor method because you enjoy it, or if you have any prior pattern of self-inflicted injury, you are advised to cease this practice at once and consider seeking good professional psychological help.

Fifth – which is especially important if you are really bad in your control of speech – don't be stupid. Never carry the practice, in any form, to the place where it threatens physical damage, scar tissue, serious blood loss, or anything of the kind.⁸ Do not use the blade method if you are a diabetic or hemophiliac.

Sixth, behaviorism has learned, in more recent times, that rewarding a desired behavior is generally far more effective than punishing a bad one. Liber Jugorum's methods may have been innovative for 1910 (when the paper was first published), but behavioral psychologists would consider them primitive barbarisms today. Keep attention on the underlying goal, and not so much on the method!

CASTING THE MAGICK CUP

Furthermore, he shall construct the magic Cup, according to the instruction in Liber A. (Liber 185)

Further, he casts the magic Cup. (Liber 13)

The Cup is the magical implement attributed to the element of Water. As such, it is the characteristic implement of the Practicus.

As the Magick Wand is the Will, the Wisdom, the Word of the Magician, so is the Magick Cup his Understanding.

. . . And it is also the cup in the hand of OUR LADY BABALON, and the cup of the Sacrament. . . And as the current of thought is the blood of the mind, it is said that the Magick Cup is filled with the blood of the Saints. All thought must be offered up as a sacrifice.⁹

The instruction from Liber A is as follows:

Let the Practicus take a piece of Silver and fashion therefrom a cup. The height shall be 8 inches, and the diameter 3 inches.

Let him by his understanding and ingenium devise a Number to represent the Universe.

Let his Philosophus approve thereof.

Let the Practicus engrave the same upon his cup with his own hand and instrument.

⁷ In his Confessions, Cap. 23, Crowley described an earlier and alternative form of the same practice, from the period of his early days as a 5=6 member of the old "Golden Dawn" Order: "As a member of the Second Order, I wore a certain jewelled ornament of gold upon my heart. I arranged that when I had it on, I was to permit no thought, word or action, save such as pertained directly to my magical aspirations. When I took it off I was, on the contrary, to permit no such things; I was to be utterly uninitiate. It was like Jekyll and Hyde, but with the two personalities balanced and complete in themselves. I found this practice of very great service. It was in fact essentially a beginning of systematic control of thought. The method is now incorporated in the instructions of the A.:A.: (See Liber Jugorum.)"

From these hints, the Practicus can develop numerous variations suitable to her own nature. We personally can recommend this variant practice to any magician who, in addition to her A.:A.: work, is involved in regular temple group work. The donning of the ceremonial robe or, more often, a particular ornament or insignia of one's grade or office – or, as others have suggested, the assumption of a Magick Ring – can be employed very profitably as a signal for the assumption of a magical personality in thought, word, and deed.

⁸ The practice of monitoring one's speech always can be undertaken by itself, without the "punishment" signal, just to develop, by simple vigilance and will, a fair level of skill in control before one undertakes the more extreme practice. Set yourself up for success!

⁹ Book 4, Part II, Cap. VII.

Let it when finished be consecrated as he hath skill to perform, and kept wrapped in silk of azure blue.

For this grade, synthesis of the magician's understanding of reality is formulated as "a Number to represent the Universe."

As with the Pantacle and the Dagger, the aspirant is encouraged to study the appropriate chapter in Book Four, Part II, this time on the symbolism of the Cup. One level of its inner meaning is given in Liber 185 for the guidance of the Practicus:

He shall in every way establish perfect control of his wit according to the advice of his Philosophus, for that the ordeal of advancement is no light one. . .

EXPANSION OF CONSCIOUSNESS

Liber 536 has the longest one-word name of any of the official instructions of the A.:A.:. It is called Liber Βατραχοφρενοβοοκοσμομαχία (i.e., Batrachophrenobookosmomachia), which means, "The Battle of the Frog, the Mind, the Roar, and the Universe." The humorous reference is to the classics, but likely will acquire its own particular meaning for the Practicus who practices it. Its number, 536, is the value of the word Masloth (מסלוח), the Sphere of the Fixed Stars.¹⁰

¹⁰ An explanation is warranted as to our organization of the information in this chapter. According to the Qabalistic scheme which Frs. V.N. and P. learned in the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, the Path of Heh was attributed to the IVth Tarot Trump, The Emperor, and the Path of Tzaddi to the XVIIth Trump, The Star. When Crowley received The Book of the Law, he was alerted that there was some error connected with the attribution of The Star. He eventually resolved this by discovering that the Heh and Tzaddi attributions had been wrongly given historically, and should be swapped. One result of this was that, in the early days of the A.:A.:, symbolism was attributed to the Path of Tzaddi which was still consistent with The Star rather than The Emperor. Originally, Liber 536 was attributed to the Path of Tzaddi, because it corresponded to the symbolism of Aquarius and The Star.

We have altered the labeling of two techniques, by assigning Liber 536 to Hod as essentially a practice of the Water element; and have listed Meditation SSS as the practice for Tzaddi, corresponding as it does to the exact meaning of The Emperor's symbolism. This does not at all alter the requirements of the grade, nor how anyone undertakes those prac-

This is a meditation-practice on expansion of consciousness. It provides preliminary practices to prepare the mind for its Practice C, the "main event."

C. Let the Practicus form a mental picture of the Earth, in particular striving to realize the size of the Earth in comparison with himself, and let him not be content until by assiduity he has well succeeded.

Let him add the moon, keeping well in mind the relative sizes of, and the distance between, the planet and its satellite.

He will probably find the final trick of the mind to be a constant disappearance of the image, and the appearance of the same upon a smaller scale. This trick he must outwit by constancy of endeavour.

He will then in add in turn Venus, Mars, Mercury and the Sun.

It is permissible at this stage to change the point of view to the centre of the Sun, and to do so may add stability to the conception.

The Practicus may then add the Asteroids, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune. The utmost attention to detail is now necessary, as the picture is highly complex, apart from the difficulty of appreciating relative size and distance.

Let this picture be practised month after month until it is absolutely perfect. The tendency which may manifest itself to pass into Dhyana and Samadhi must be resolutely combated with the whole strength of the mind.

Let the Practicus then re-commence the picture, starting from the Sun, and adding the planets one by one, each with its proper motion, until he have an image perfect in all respect of the Solar System as it actually exists. Let him particularly note that unless the apparent size approximate to the real, his practice is wasted. Let him then add a comet to the picture; he may find, perhaps that the path of this comet may assist him to expand the sphere of his mental vision until it include a star.

And thus, gathering one star after another, let his contemplation become vast as the heaven, in space and time ever aspiring to the perception of the Body of Nuit; yea, the Body of Nuit.

It will be noticed that at least basic skill in dharana – concentration – is a prerequisite for this practice. There has been no prior stage where the tices: it is only an effort to conform the organization of information to the Order's present view of its symbols.

aspirant has been tested in concentration. The Probationer was introduced to Liber E where dharana exercises are taught. The Zelator worked extensively with Liber E, but was not examined in that particular section. Now the preliminary test is implicit. The ability to concentrate the mind's attention is necessary for success in the present practice, and in Liber Turris (which is discussed later in this chapter).

DIVINATION The Path of Qoph

He shall further show some acquaintance with and experience of his chosen method of divination. Yet he shall be his own judge in this matter. (Liber 185)

Examination in some one mode of divination: e.g., Geomancy, Astrology, the Tarot, Theoretical. (Liber 13)

Divination is attributed to the Path of Qoph. This study and practice were inaugurated during the Neophyte period. As a Practicus, it must be brought to a high standard of perfection. One Star in Sight, in its somewhat overstated style, admonishes that, "in divination, the answer must be as precise as a scientific thesis, and as accurate as an audit." The point is that the answer has to be clear, relevant, and accurate. Fuzzy, prevaricating answers will not do. It is insufficient, when consulted by a party concerning the outcome of a competition, to say, "I foresee a great victory."

Once more, we have a practice intended to bridge the gap between the Yetziratic and Briatic modes of consciousness. Divination, properly done, both mobilizes Yetziratic faculties and potencies in a magical way, and provides a reliable channel of access to the practitioner's intuition. It is a device for increasing one's skill at listening to the Inner Voice, which is the voice of the Holy Guardian Angel.

The Master Therion's most extensive discussion of divination is in Magick in Theory & Practice, Cap. XVIII, Sec. IV (the chapter symbolically corresponding to the Path of Qoph). This extraordinary (if short) essay could serve well as the introduction to any book on divination ever written! We recommend it enthusiastically to the aspirant.

QUICKENING OF THE LIGHT The Path of Tzaddi

Further, he shall pass in the meditation practice S.S.S., in Liber HHH. (Liber 185)

Two of the structured meditations in Liber HHH were undertaken by the Zelator. Called MMM and AAA, they corresponded to Water and Air, respectively.

The Practicus must undertake the third, called SSS. It is attributed to the element Fire, and deals with the conscious raising of kundalini. (See Liber HHH in Appendix G for the full method.)

Kundalini phenomena likely will have been occurring within the aspirant for some time, in various forms. However, symbolically, these phenomena are especially characteristic of the sephirah Hod. To recognize this, one has only to observe the Caduceus symbol borne by the god Mercury, or to note the ready association of the numeral 8 (or its meaningful variation, the infinity symbol ∞) with a serpent. These developments also conform to certain transformations of the sexual force that naturally occur as part of the Practicus stage of development.

Additionally, SSS is best undertaken by one who has mastered the pranayama and asana requirements of the Zelator Grade. This guards against the worst potential problems.

This particular practice also corresponds exceedingly well to the symbolism of the Path of Tzaddi; Atu IV. The Emperor; and the zodiacal constellation Aries wherein Mars rules and the Sun is exalted. Tzaddi means "fish-hook" – the "fish" being Nun, 2, or Scorpio, one symbol of the hidden "serpent-power" or kundalini.

One of the most beloved of all divination methods among Western mystics, Tarot is a pictorial model of Qabalistic fundamentals. Mentioned in the Rosicrucian Fama Fraternalitatis under the anagram "Rota," or "wheel," Tarot comprises several wheels. Its 22 Trumps correspond to the 22 Hebrew letters; its 10 numbered cards in four suits, to the 10 Sephiroth in the Four Worlds; its 16 Court cards to permutations of the four letters of Tetragrammaton.

DESTRUCTION OF THOUGHT

The Path of Peh

He shall. . . pass examinations in the Ritual and meditation practice given in Liber XVI. (Liber 185)

He is given a meditation-practice in the destruction of thoughts. (Liber 13)

☐ The Destruction of the House of God. Liber XVI. (Liber Viarum Viæ)

Liber 16 is Liber Turris vel Domus Dei (The Book of the Tower, or The Book of the House of God). It is the "meditation-practice in the destruction of thoughts" mentioned in Liber 13.

Liber Turris is issued to the Philosophus as well as the Practicus and is one of the best preparations for the forms of Raja Yoga required of the Dominus Liminis. Success, for the Practicus, therefore, does not mean anything approaching complete success in Liber Turris. As the paper states in its opening paragraphs:

This practice is very difficult. The student cannot hope for much success unless he have thoroughly mastered Asana, and obtained much definite success in the meditation-practices of Liber E and Liber HHH.

On the other hand, any success in this practice is of an exceedingly high character, and the student is less liable to illusion and self-deception in this than in almost any other that We make known.

There follows a technique for annihilating thought as it arises in the mind, and then even more advanced techniques beyond that.

This, too, is a practice that develops control over the Yetziratic consciousness (that part categorized as thought, emotion, and images), and prepares the aspirant's mind for the reception, in its due season, of the Briatic consciousness.

OTHER TASKS OF THE PRACTICUS

In every G.:D.: grade, there is memorization from the Holy Books of Thelema. The Practicus is to commit to memory Liber Trigrammaton (The Book of Trigrams). This Class A document is "an account of the cosmic process: it describes the Course of Creation under the Figure of the Interplay of Three Principles," according to the Syllabus. It is a type of commentary on the "Stanzas of Dzyan" which are found in Blavatsky's writings.

Liber 185 additionally describes a background practice that is to characterize this stage of development:

Besides all this, he shall apply himself to a way of life wholly suited to the Path.

THE PRACTICUS SYLLABUS

Three documents on the Practicus Syllabus have not yet been addressed in this chapter.

Liber Israfel is a ritual to invoke Thoth, the Egyptian form of Mercury. It is a superb model of a ritual of invocation, and has broad, general applicability to practical magick, through adaptations that are taught in private. (See Part 2 of the "Ceremonial Magick" series, in BLACK PEARL Vol. I, No. 2.) The Master Therion wrote an analysis of the construction and use of Liber Israfel in Magick in Theory & Practice, Cap. II.

Liber Chanokh, A Brief Abstract of the Symbolic Representation of the Universe, is the A.:A.: summary instruction in the Enochian system of magick. This opens an entire new universe of study and practice! As with Liber Israfel, it provides bountiful possibilities of practical magick to the Practicus.

The Sword of Song is also included (Collected Works of Aleister Crowley, Vol. II, pp. 140-212). It is not entirely clear to us why, although it borders on the requirements for a Gñana Yoga reference. Crowley characterized it as, "A critical study of various philosophies. An account of Buddhism," according to the Syllabus.

ADVANCEMENT TO PHILOSOPHUS

According to Liber 185, the process of advancing to Philosophus and, later, to Dominus Liminis is identical to that of advancing to Practicus. There is no minimum time. There is no ritual of advancement beyond the reading of the Task and the ascription to the Oath. One advances when the work of the previous grade is finished.

Liber 185 offers one parting piece of advice, similar to that given to the Zelator approaching Hod:

THE FOUR GREAT WATCHTOWERS, OR ENOCHIAN ELEMENTAL TABLETS

Liber Chanokh, in the Practicus curriculum, is a summary of the vast Enochian system of magick, arising from the 16th Century skrying by Dr. John Dee and Edward Kelly. Much of that system is based on, or intimately related to, these four Elemental Tablets. (Original artwork by Steve Hedrick, reproduced courtesy of Temple of Thelema.)

When authority confers the grade [of Philosophus], he shall rejoice therein; but beware, for that that is his second departure from the middle pillar of the Tree of Life.

Chapter 6: (4°=7□)

THE Great Work, for the Philosophus, is defined as, "to obtain control of the attractions and repulsions of my own being."

"Philosophus" is a Latin noun meaning, "philosopher." It comes from the homonymous Greek philosophos, literally "a lover of wisdom," or, by derivation, "philosopher."

The term philosophos was used originally by Pythagoras (c. 570-475 BCE). The "philosophers" of his day designated themselves by the noun sophos, "a sage," or "one who has wisdom." Pythagoras, instead, called himself a "lover of wisdom." The term then came to mean not only "philosopher" in the contemporary sense, but also a "man of learning or of science." This remains a worthy and distinguished title for the highest grade of the Outer College of "Scientific Illuminists."

Commenting on the grade name, the authors of Liber 185 advised:

Let him remember that the word Philosophus is no idle term, but that Philosophy is the Equilibrium of him that is in the house of Venus that is the Lady of Love.

PYTHAGORAS
The First Philosophus

THE PHILOSOPHUS GRADE

This is an exact balance to the parallel admonishment given to the Practicus. (See the preceding chapter.)

SYMBOLS OF THE PHILOSOPHUS GRADE

The Philosophus Grade is attributed to the seventh sephirah, called Netzach, Victory. Netzach corresponds to the element Fire, and to the Sphere of the planet Venus.

This grade also incorporates the symbolism of the 26th Path of A'yin (𐤀), the 25th Path of Samekh (𐤎), and the 24th Path of Nun (𐤍), which open (from Hod, Yesod, and Netzach, respectively) unto the sephirah Tiphereth. These are the three pathways that link the Outer College – the Order of the Golden Dawn – with the Inner College, or Order of the Rosy Cross. They prepare the way for the aspirant's eventual advancement unto the sacred office of Adept.

A'yin, by its usual translation, means "eye." The word also means "(surface) appearances; to flow out; fountain; the sparkling of wine," etc. It corresponds to the sign Capricorn, where Saturn rules and Mars is exalted; and to the XVth Trump of the Tarot, popularly called The Devil, and esoterically called "The Lord of the Gates of Matter; The Child of the Forces of Time."

Samekh means “prop” or “support”; and “that which aids, sustains, upholds, or uplifts.” These meanings reflect the nature of the Holy Guardian Angel. The Path of Samekh opens from Yesod to Tiphereth, and specifically unites the Sun and the Moon. As we shall see later, the next grade, Dominus Liminis (which is not attributed to any sephirah on the Tree of Life), is predominantly a grade of the Path of Samekh. This path corresponds to Sagittarius, ruled by Jupiter; and to the XIVth Trump of the Tarot, popularly called Art,¹ and esoterically called “The Daughter of the Reconcilers; The Bringer-forth of Life.” It is the second leg of the “Path of the Arrow,” the direct route of mystical ascension up the Middle Pillar of the Tree of Life, unto the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel.

Nun means “fish,” or “to sprout, to grow.” Its symbolism is vast, and especially related to both religious and sexual avenues of the propagation of new life, the renewal of existence in new forms. As such, especially in the last aeon (that of Osiris), it was a symbol of the Redeemer. Nun corresponds to the sign Scorpio, ruled by Mars; and to the XIIIth Trump of the Tarot, popularly called Death, and esoterically called “The Child of the Great Transformers; The Lord of the Gate of Death.”

ADVANCEMENT TO PHILOSOPHUS

An eight-colored Calvary Cross is added to the breast of the Practicus robe, to produce the robe of a Philosophus.

There is no insignia at the center of the cross.

The cross is sized and proportioned as if it were composed of six one-inch squares. That is, the vertical bar is one inch wide and four inches high; and the horizontal bar is one inch high and three inches wide.

EQUILIBRATING THE ELEMENTS

To the 4^o=7^o robe, a 4-armed, 8-colored cross is added. In the Dominus Liminis Grade, a rose is added to its center, as above displayed. The cross is of 6 squares, and the rose of 5 petals, implying the mysteries of the 5=6 Grade, and the Knowledge & Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel.

Photographs make clear that the “eight colors” come from halving the horizontal bar horizontally, and the vertical bar vertically. The result is eight separate color zones.

From the point of view of looking at the cross,² the top bar (Air) is yellow on the right and violet on the left; the left bar (Fire) is red on the top and green on the bottom; the right bar (Water) is orange on the top and blue on the bottom; and the bottom bar (Earth) is black on the left and white on the right.

Initiates of lesser grades have been addressed as “Fratr” (brother) or “Soror” (sister). In comparison, the Philosophus is addressed as “Honored Frater” or “Honored Soror.”

As in the Practicus Grade, the Philosophus is admonished not to venture, while a member of this grade, to attempt to withdraw from association with the Order.

DEVOTION

Philosophus. – Is expected to complete his moral training. He is tested in Devotion to the Order. (One Star in Sight)

He practices Devotion to the Order. (Liber 13)

He shall in every way establish perfect control of his devotion according to the advice of his Dominus Liminis, for that the ordeal of advancement is no light one. (Liber 185)

To Netzach, the Sphere of Venus, is attributed the capacity for devotion. In most cases, the profound devotion of the aspirant to the A.:A.: would have been evident long before this; but if not, it now must be tested. In any event, the process of initiation and the course of the initiate’s life may provide its own tests, when the Philosophus expects them least.

in devotional worship.

Throughout all of these grades, it must be remembered, inner processes are working which often seem distinct from the exact requirements of the formal system. We have not discussed these even where that would have seemed possible, because they are, ultimately, individual to each person. These inner, alchemical processes, arranged and fueled by the Holy Guardian Angel, provide that which is truly needed by the aspirant. What a formal system such as A.:A.: provides, in addition to the specific training that is visible on the surface, is a "containment vessel" for the alchemical work that is underway. The Order and its requirements must be strong enough, invariable and unwavering enough, that they form an enduring and secure matrix within which the gestating Adept can develop, and against the limits of which she can struggle. In this sense, the definitions of the A.:A.: system must be maintained firmly, almost arbitrarily. On the other hand, the very reason for this is that the system is ultimately elastic where it needs to be, recognizing that the Path of the Great Work is as individual and unique for each person as are fingerprints or the formation patterns of snowflakes.

The Philosophus Grade is the final grade of the Outer College. This kindles certain inner recognitions in those who hold this grade: certain patterns appear complete, fulfilled. It is clear that Frateres O.M. and D.D.S. recognized a singular quality of this grade and its position in the system as a whole. They were, perhaps, reminded of the final words each of them heard during the ceremony of his own advancement to the analogous Philosophus Grade of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn:

Honored Frater, as a member of this important Grade, . . . you are furthermore expected, as having risen so high in the Order, to . . . study thoroughly the mysteries which have been unfolded to your view, in your progress from the humble position of a Neophyte, so that yours may be not the merely superficial knowledge which marks the conceited and ignorant man; but that you may really and thoroughly understand what you profess to know, and not by your ignorance and folly bring disgrace on that Order which has honored you so far. Your duty is also, . . . to make yourself as far as possible an ornament alike to your Temple and to your Order.

BHAKTI YOGA

He shall pass examinations in Liber CLXXV. (Liber 185)

Instruction and Examination in Methods of Meditation by Devotion (Bhakti-Yoga). (Liber 13)

Not only is the Philosophus tested in Devotion so far as the Order goes; she is also assigned, as a task central to this grade, to undertake that form of yoga, or magick, which has devotion as the core of its operation.

To define Bhakti Yoga as "Methods of Meditation by Devotion" is to paint a pale picture of a vivid and majestic landscape. Netzach is associated with Fire as well as with Venus; and, far from being the placid affection we often have heard described, Bhakti Yoga is a fiery devotion to the Divine – generally in the "person" of a particular deity whom one can regard as one's personal "Lord" or "Lady." Swami Vivekananda³ quoted Nārada as explaining, "Bhakti is intense love for God." Nor is this passionate devotion for the timid. Vivekananda continues:

The . . . means to the attainment of Bhakti-Yoga is strength. "The Atman is not to be attained by the weak," says the Sruti. Both the physical and the mental weaknesses are referred to in the above text. "The strong and the hardy," are the only fit students of religion.

To which The Book of the Law responds, "Wisdom says: be strong! Then canst thou bear more joy"; and, "The Sun, Strength & Sight, Light; these are for the servants of the Star & the Snake"; and, "Beauty and strength, leaping laughter and delicious languor, force and fire are of us."

The official A.:A.: instruction in Bhakti Yoga is Liber 175, called Liber Astarte v'el Berylli – The Book of Astarte, or The Book of the Beryl. It describes methods of union with the Divine by love, by devotion. Unlike exclusively Eastern texts on the matter, it allows for the ready incorporation of the aspirant's considerable skill and capacity in ceremonial magick. The Philosophus is to undertake the work of Liber Astarte.

Additionally, Eliphas Levi's most mature work, The Key of the Mysteries (his thesis for the Grade of Adeptus Exemptus, 7^o=4^o), is prescribed as a further aid in the attainment of Bhakti-Yoga. Its singular message is simple: The 'Key of the Mysteries' is love.

Unpublished instructions by Crowley confirm that the Philosophus is only required to pass examination in methods, not in results, of Bhakti Yoga. True, results likely will ensue if method is correct;⁴ but the perfection of this practice of "Union by Devotion" is not required until a much higher grade. (See Chapter 11.)

It perhaps need not be added that Bhakti Yoga is one of the most effective methods for awakening to the Briatic consciousness.

CONTROL OF ACTION

Instruction and Examination in Control of Action. (Liber 13)

He shall moreover attain complete success in Liber III. Cap. II. (Liber 185)

Liber Jugorum was discussed at length in the previous chapter, with reference to the Practicus' assigned task of acquiring "control of speech." Similarly, the Philosophus is required to build the same vigilance and control over her actions.

Readers are referred back to the remarks on Liber Jugorum in the Practicus chapter. The same remarks apply to the Task of the Philosophus.

CONSTRUCTING THE MAGICK WAND

Furthermore, he shall construct the magic Wand, according to the instruction in Liber A. (Liber 185)

Further, he cuts the Magic Wand. (Liber 13)

The Wand, or Baculum, is the magical implement attributed to the element of Fire. As such, it is the characteristic implement of the Philosophus. (The magician may use many different wands. This one is specifically a Fire Wand.) The instruction from Liber A is as follows:

Let the Philosophus take a rod of copper, of length eight inches and diameter half an inch.

Let him fashion about the top a triple flame of gold.

Let him by his understanding and ingenuity devise a Deed to represent the Universe.

Let his Dominus Liminis approve thereof.

Let the Philosophus perform the same in such a way that the Baculum may be partaker therein.

Let it when finished be consecrated as he hath skill to perform, and kept wrapped in silk of fiery scarlet.

For this grade, a synthesis of the magician's understanding of reality is formulated not as a symbol or word or number, but as a Deed to represent the Universe; and this Deed must be one that the Philosophus performs, incorporating the Wand – the Will – into the performance. Will becomes translated into Deed.

This is the fourth and final of the traditional magical implements; but there is one other, a fifth, known to the Dominus Liminis, which provides the Light whereby the magician can see to wield the four.

It is clear that Frateres O.M. and D.D.S. recognized a singular quality of this grade and its position in the system as a whole. They were, perhaps, reminded of the final words each of them heard during the ceremony of his own advancement to the analogous Philosophus Grade of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn:

Honored Frater, as a member of this important Grade, . . . you are furthermore expected, as having risen so high in the Order, to . . . study thoroughly the mysteries which have been unfolded to your view, in your progress from the humble position of a Neophyte, so that yours may be not the merely superficial knowledge which marks the conceited and ignorant man; but that you may really and thoroughly understand what you profess to know, and not by your ignorance and folly bring disgrace on that Order which has honored you so far. Your duty is also, . . . to make yourself as far as possible an ornament alike to your Temple and to your Order.

BHAKTI YOGA

He shall pass examinations in Liber CLXXV. (Liber 185)

Instruction and Examination in Methods of Meditation by Devotion (Bhakti-Yoga). (Liber 13)

Not only is the Philosophus tested in Devotion so far as the Order goes; she is also assigned, as a task central to this grade, to undertake that form of yoga, or magick, which has devotion as the core of its operation.

To define Bhakti Yoga as "Methods of Meditation by Devotion" is to paint a pale picture of a vivid and majestic landscape. Netzach is associated with Fire as well as with Venus; and, far from being the placid affection we often have heard described, Bhakti Yoga is a fiery devotion to the Divine – generally in the "person" of a particular deity whom one can regard as one's personal "Lord" or "Lady." Swami Vivekananda³ quoted Nârada as explaining, "Bhakti is intense love for God." Nor is this passionate devotion for the timid. Vivekananda continues:

The . . . means to the attainment of Bhakti-Yoga is strength. "The Atman is not to be at-

EVOCATION & TALISMANS

The Path of A'ayin

He shall pass examinations. . . in Construction and Consecration of Talismans and in Evocation. Yet in this matter he shall be his own judge. (Liber 185)

Instruction and Examination in Construction and Consecration of Talismans, and in Evocation. Theoretical and Practical. (Liber 13)

∴ The Sabbath of the Adepts. Liber CCCLXX. (Liber Viarum Viæ)

Two aspects of traditional ceremonial magick must be mastered at this point: evocation, and the construction and consecration of talismans.

Some experience along these lines probably was acquired long before. The Z 2 adaptations of the Neophyte Formula, studied and practiced in the 1^o=10^o Grade, begin with techniques of evocation and the consecration of talismans.

"A talisman," Crowley wrote in Magick Without Tears, "is a storehouse of some particular kind of energy, the kind that is needed to accomplish the task for which you have constructed it." In Magick in Theory & Practice he defined it more simply as, "something upon which an act of will (that is, of Magick) has been performed in order to fit it for a purpose." Most broadly speaking, any object at all may serve as a talisman, and the aspirant will likely need to understand it in this light. However, in the classical sense it has a more particular application, referring to specific "objects of power" created according to known formulae to be optimally suited to receive their charge. Examples of these, in different forms, can be found in the Lesser and Greater Keys of Solomon, and the writings of Agrippa, Barrett, Levi, and others.

Evocation is more difficult to define simply, because conflicting definitions are proffered by diverse reputable authorities. In simple terms, this is the classical method of commerce with that class of nonmaterial beings commonly titled "demons" or "spirits." Some hold that these "spirits" are objective, distinct beings. Others side with Crowley's view at the time he edited The Lesser Key of Solomon, that, "The spirits of the Goetia are portions of the human brain." Still others, more familiar with later psychologies, credit them as semi-autonomous aspects of subconsciousness. We do not undertake to resolve these differences in the present place. What can be said with general agreement is that the "spirits" in question are "elementals" in the pure sense of the word, i.e., constituent parts of a microcosm. They are evoked – called forth, or called out of oneself – whereas Divine and Archangelic beings are invoked, or called into oneself, to fill oneself. These elementary spirits are native to the densest parts of Yetzirah, verging on physical manifestation, so that they are favored by magicians who aspire to have direct magical impact on physical phenomena.

From the quotations heading this section, we know that the examination is both theoretical and practical. The magician not only must know how to make and create talismans, and how to evoke spirits, but actually must do so. However, consistent with the greater reliance that is placed on the Philosophus' inner guidance, she is herself the judge as to her success in this.

One Star in Sight gives the standards that are to be used in evaluating success:

The power to make and "charge" talismans is tested as if they were scientific instruments of precision, as they are. . . in evocation, the spirit called forth must be at least as visible and tangible as the heaviest vapours.

There are no official A.:A.: instructions specifically devoted to these topics. The Philosophus will need to consult traditional magical literature. However, in addition to the important methods of the Neophyte Formula, there are a few useful guidelines in the official instructions.

For example, a technical discussion of various methods of evocation is given in Magick in Theory & Practice, Cap. II. A discussion of talismans can be found in the same work, Cap. XVI, Part II, Sec. V, and in Magick Without Tears, Letter 20. One specialized evocation method is taught in the Class B Document Liber 24, De Nuptiis Secretis Deorum cum Hominibus. An elaborate example of ceremonial evocation by Crowley is given as The Evocation of Bartzabal in THE EQUINOX No. 9.

MEDITATION: MAHASATIPATTHANA The Path of Nun

Further, he shall apply himself to study and practice the meditations given in Liber V. (Liber 185)

He is given a meditation-practice on the Senses, and the Sheaths of the Self, and the Practice called Mahasatipatthana. (See The Sword of Song, Science and Buddhism). (Liber 13)

1 The Preparation of the Corpse for the Tomb. Liber XXV. (Liber Viarum Viæ)

Although the citations above are a little obscure, it is absolutely clear what practice is being assigned. The method is called Mahasatipatthana. It is a structured application of Buddhist methods of "mindfulness," applied to such body phenomena as breathing and walking.

The reference to Liber 5, or Liber 25, is confusing. Crowley eventually gave the number 5 (V) to a ritual called Liber Reguli. He also gave the number 25 (XXV) to his revised form of the Pentagon Ritual. The Star Ruby. Yet, years earlier, one or the other of these numbers was applied to what he expected would be an official instruction on a meditation involving the five senses.

Therefore, Liber 5, in this instance, is the essay Science & Buddhism, which can be found in Crowley's Collected Works. Similarly, Liber Viarum Viæ is speaking of the same document and the same practice when it assigns to the Path of Nun, "The Preparation of the Corpse for the Tomb. Liber XXV."

Here is the entire text of the instruction for this meditation, from Science & Buddhism:⁵

This meditation differs fundamentally from the usual Hindu methods by the fact that the mind is not restrained to the contemplation of a single object, and there is no interference with the natural functions of the body as there is, e.g., in Pranayama. It is essentially an observation-practice, which later assumes an analytic aspect in regard to the question, "What is it that is really observed?"

The Ego-idea is resolutely excluded from the start. . . The breathing, motions of walking, &c., are merely observed and recorded; for instance, one may sit down quietly and say:

"There is an indrawing of the breath." "There is an expiration," &c. Or, walking, "There is a raising of the right foot," and so on, just as it happens. The thought is of course not quick enough to note all the movements or their subtle causes. For example, we cannot describe the complicated muscular contractions, &c.; but this is not necessary. Concentrate on some series of simple movements.

When this through habit becomes intuitive so that the thought is really "There is a raising," as opposed to "I raise" . . . one may begin to analyse. . . and the second stage is "There is a sensation (Vedana) of a raising, &c." Sensations are further classed as pleasant or unpleasant.

When this is the true intuitive instantaneous testimony of consciousness (so that "There is a raising, &c." is rejected as a palpable lie),⁶ we proceed to Sañña, perception.

"There is a perception of a (pleasant or unpleasant) sensation of a raising, &c."

When this has become intuitive – why! here's a strange result! The emotions of pain and pleasure have vanished. They are subincluded in the lesser skandha of Vedana, and Sañña is free from them. And to him who can live in this third stage, and live so for ever, there is no more pain; only an intense interest similar to that which has enabled men of science to watch and note the progress of their own death-agony. Unfortunately the living in such a state is conditional on sound mental health, and terminable by disease or death at any moment. Were it not so, the First Noble Truth would be a lie.

The two further stages Sankhara and Viññanam pursue the analysis to its ultimatum. "There is a consciousness of a tendency to perceive the (pleasant or unpleasant) sensation of a raising of a right foot" being the final form. And I suppose no psychologist of any standing will quarrel with this. . . Reasoning in fact leads us to this analysis; the Buddhist goes further only so far as he may be said to knock down the scaffolding of reasoning processes, and to assimilate the actual truth of the matter.

It is the difference between the schoolboy who painfully construes "Balbus murum aedi-

⁵ Collected Works, Vol. II, pp. 252ff.

⁶ "Why should you expect Vedana to make Rupa appear illusory?" asked a friend of mine, on reading through the MS. of this essay. The reason of my omission to explain is that to me it seemed obvious. The fact had been assimilated. To meditate on anything is to perceive its unreal nature. Notably this is so in concentrating on parts of the body, such as the nose. On this phenomenon the Hindus have based their famous aphorism, "That which can be thought is not true." – A.C.

ficavit," and the Roman who announces that historic fact without a thought of his grammar.

I have called this meditation the most famous of the Buddhist meditations, because it is stated by the Buddha himself that if one practices it honestly and intelligently a result is certain. And he says this of no other.

This is one of the most effective and extraordinary techniques in the entire canon of A.:A.: methods. By itself, it allows for the transition of consciousness from one plane to the next. By the act of observing a phenomenon, you actually gain objectivity on the phenomenon, which means you begin to witness from a point of view exterior to it. You "kick yourself up a plane" from the one you are observing.

The layers, or planes, that emerge successively in this meditation are the Buddhist skandas, or characteristic-layers. From outermost inward, these are nāma-rūpa, literally the name and form of the object itself; vedanā, sensation; sañña, perception; samskāra, "tendency" or karma-based habituations; and viññanam, consciousness itself.

This method of "mindfulness" will be helpful to us in describing, in the next chapter, certain practices assigned to the Dominus Liminis.

RISING ON THE PLANES The Path of Samekh

He shall show some acquaintance with and experience of Liber O, Caps. V, VI. Whereof his Record shall be witness. (Liber 185)

Examination in Rising on the Planes (Liber O, caps. V, VI). Practical. (Liber 13)

☐ Skrying in the Spirit Vision. 'The Ladder of Jacob.' Liber O. (Liber Viarum Via)

The technique of Rising on the Planes is described in Liber O, Caps. V and VI. A further discussion on the method is given in Magick in Theory & Practice, Cap. XVIII, Sec. III.

As stated in the quotations above, the examination in this method is practical: that is, one must not merely study it, but must do it! The Philosophus' record is used to witness her practical experience, and as the basis of passing her.

As with so many of the Philosophus methods, this is a technique that directly bridges the planes between Yetzirah and Briah. The aspirant is approaching very close to the Veil that separates the First Order from the Second; that is, she is approaching very close to Tiphereth. In some ways, Rising on the Planes (using the Middle Pillar of the Tree of Life as one's basis, rather than a particular sephirah) is the whole of the Great Work, embodying within itself, when successful, a direct transition between the Four Worlds.

CLASS C DOCUMENTS & THE PHILOSOPHUS SYLLABUS

In the catalog of official A.:A.: instructions, Class C consists of matter that is to be regarded rather as suggestive than anything else. Plays, poetic works, and allegory constitute the majority of these instructions.

Although Class C documents per se are not assigned to the Philosophus Grade, several of them are found on the Philosophus Syllabus. These include, The Chymical Jousting of Brother Perardua: The Sword of Song: Across the Gulf; The High History of Good Sir Palamedes the Saracen Knight and of his following of the Questing Beast; Aha!; and Adonis. These works apparently are intended to fulfill the expectation that the Philosophus study philosophy. Most of them map, allegorically, the course of the Great Work.

OTHER TASKS OF THE PHILOSOPHUS

As usual, there is a memorization assignment from the Thelemic Holy Books. As stated in Liber 185, the Philosophus is to commit to memory one of the seven chapters of Liber 813. This is Liber Ararita, which is also given the number 570.

813 is the value of the Hebrew notariqon Ararita (אראריהא). The seven words of which it is the abbreviation are:

אחד	Ehad	One.
ראש	rosh	the Beginning of
אחדות	ahē'dutho	His Unity [One-ness],
ראש	rosh	the Beginning of
יחודות	yihudutho	His Uniqueness,
תמורות	t'muratho	His Permutation
אחד	ehad	One

⁷ Or, at least, there is a consciousness of a tendency to perceive the existence of an idea that this is so.

The number 570 is part of the actual title of Liber Ararita sub figurá DLXX, and apparently was "channeled" along with the rest of the Holy Book. It is of no apparent Qabalistic significance unless we consult the Latin Qabalah Simplex (which was unknown to Crowley), where it is found to be the value of the phrase, Visita Interiora Terræ Rectificando Invenies Occultum Lapidem ("Visit the interior of the earth, by rectification thou shalt find the Hidden Stone.") The initials of this latter sentence form the important alchemical notariqon VITRIOL. This is a striking correspondence. Both ARARITA and VITRIOL are seven-letter notariqons of similar alchemical import. In his notes on The Vision & the Voice, Crowley described Liber Ararita as follows:

The use of this Name and Formula is to equate and identify every idea with its opposite: thus being released from the obsession of thinking any one of them as "true" (and therefore binding), one can withdraw oneself from the whole sphere of the Ruach. [...] Contrast each verse in Cap. I with the corresponding verse of Cap. II for the first of these methods. Thus in Cap. III (still verse by verse correspondence), the Quintessence of the ideas is extracted: and in Cap. IV they are withdrawn each one into the one beyond it. In Cap. V they have disappeared into the Method itself. In Cap. VI they reappear in the Form appointed by the Will of the Adept. Lastly, in Cap. VII they are dissolved, one into the next until all finally disappear in the Fire Qadosh, the Quintessence of Reality.

"Besides all this," we read in Liber 185, "he shall make constant and profound reflections upon the Path." This is a habit that likely will have evolved much earlier than Philosophus, but is especially called for here.

ADVANCEMENT TO DOMINUS LIMINIS

Authority grants advancement from Philosophus to Dominus Liminis when the Task of the Philosophus has been satisfactorily completed. As with the preceding grade, there is no minimum time and no ritual of advancement.

"When the title of Dominus Liminis is conferred upon him," Liber 185 counsels, "let him rejoice exceedingly therein; but beware, for that it is but the false veil of the moon that hangs beneath the Sun."

Chapter 7

THE DOMINUS LIMINIS GRADE

THE Great Work, for the Dominus Liminis, is defined as, "to obtain control of the aspirations of my own being."

Dominus Liminis is a grade of aspiration. It is attributed to no sephirah on the Tree of Life. It would be accurate, however, to attribute it to the Path of Samekh, which opens from the Sphere of the Moon unto the Sphere of the Sun.

We occasionally receive questions as to whether the Dominus Liminis Grade is considered part of the Outer College (G.:D.:) or part of the Inner College (R.:C.:). Philosophically, this is actually an important question. The best answer is, "both and neither." Technically, the Dominus Liminis Grade remains part of the Outer College; yet, it is also just as accurate to consider it the probationary phase of the Adeptus Minor Grade, and therefore linked to the Inner College. The Dominus Liminis stands in exactly the same relationship to the Order of the Rosy Cross as does the Probationer with respect to the Order of the Golden Dawn.

This paradox is symbolized on the Dominus Liminis robe. It is still the black robe of the Outer College; yet upon its breast, for the first time, is the symbol of a red five-petaled Rose upon the six-squared Cross of the Elements.

The nature of this "bridge grade" is probably best understood in terms of the analogous Portal Grade of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. The Portal Ceremony consists of two parts, or "points." The First Point is a symbolic summary of the Outer College grades through which the initiate already has passed, balancing, equilibrating, and synthesizing the Four Elements into a central unity. Following this, the Second Point is primarily a ritual of the Path of Samekh, dramatizing the direct approach toward the sephirah Tiphereth. Like the Dominus Liminis Grade, it bridges between the Outer and the Inner.

These are, of course, only metaphors of what actually is occurring. However, an understanding of this symbolism is occasionally quite helpful to the Dominus Liminis, who may at times feel like a fully equipped ship at sea, yet with no perceptible place to sail. Discovering, without doubt, "where to sail" is part of her Task.

There is a further reason for regarding the Dominus Liminis as a "Probationer Adeptus Minor." To the Path of Samekh, Qabalists attribute a mode of consciousness called the Intelligence of Probation. Recall, from Chapter 2, that "probation" comes from a root meaning "to prove," or "to be tried." One manuscript of the traditional Portal Ceremony comments that the Path of Samekh, "is the prime test, by which the Creator tries the devotion of all who aspire to be worthy of the title, 'Master of Compassion.' The essence of this trial is the ever present temptation to depart the straight and narrow way of single-hearted devotion to the One." That "One" is, of course, what we term the Holy Guardian Angel.

"Dominus Liminis" is Latin for "Master of the Threshold." It is synonymous with the Hebrew name of the old Portal Grade, Ba'al Sha'ar, "Lord of the Gate.”¹ In whichever form it appears, this grade name refers to the position of the aspirant immediately upon – not before, but actually upon – the threshold of the Inner College, the Order of the Rosy Cross. As comment on the grade name, we find in Liber 185:

Besides all this, he shall abide upon the Threshold. Let him remember that the word Dominus Liminis is no idle term, but that his mastery will often be disputed, when he knoweth it not.

By Latin Qabalah Simplex, Dominus Liminis enumerates to 162. This is the value of several other phrases that directly refer to the Inner College and the pending initiation of Tiphereth. Among these phrases are the following:

Frater Rosæ Rubæ, “Brother of the Ruby Rose”

Lumen in Centrum, “The Light in the Center”

Lapidem angulorum, “cornerstone,” a Hermetic metaphor (with Biblical roots) for an Adept

Corpus Christi, lit. “Body of Christ;” the name of the conventional holiday which Mathers’ Second Order employed as its “Day C,” an annual festival intimately related to the Adeptus Minor Grade

Mercurius sum, “I am Mercury”

For completeness, we should mention that this unnumbered grade also is called, historically, Philosophus Major, or 4⁰=7⁰ Major; however there is no record of these terms actually being used in the A.A.A.. The Master Therion did, on occasion, refer to the Dominus Liminis by its other traditional designation, “Lord (or Lady) of the Paths of the Portal of the Vault of the Adepts.”

LIBER MYSTERIORUM

Let him receive Liber Mysteriorum. . . He shall accept an office in a Temple of Initiation, and commit to memory a part appointed by the Imperator of the A.A.A.. (Liber 185)

He receives Liber Mysteriorum and obtains a perfect understanding of the Formulæ of Initiation. (Liber 13)

The original A.A.A. document called Liber Mysteriorum has not survived under that name into modern times. Many hold that it never existed.² However, there is sufficient evidence for us to identify it, with certainty, as the confidential ritual manual for A.A.A. initiation officers.

The title Liber Mysteriorum means “The Book of the Mysteria.” Mysteria is the plural of the Latin word mysterium, which means “secret religion, secret rite or worship, divine mystery;” that is, what the ancient world knew as “the Mysteries,” or formal rites of initiation.

Fortified with this information, it is, thus, self-evident how, upon receiving Liber Mysteriorum, the Dominus Liminis “obtains a perfect understanding of the Formulæ of Initiation.” By all indications it is the initiates of this grade (and higher) who are expected to serve as the officers for Neophyte and Zelator initiations.

Accordingly, although no Class A Document is assigned for memorization purposes in this grade, the memorization assignment is of an officer’s role in one of the A.A.A. initiation ceremonies, as appointed by the Imperator of the A.A.A.. Since there is no longer one Imperator for all branches of the A.A.A., in this matter the Dominus Liminis shall receive her assignment from the Imperator of her own A.A.A. lineage; or, if there be none, then from her Superior who is an Adeptus Minor.

PRATYAHARA & DHARANA: CONTROL OF THOUGHT

He shall pass examination in Liber III, Cap. III. (Liber 185)

He is given meditation-practices on the Control of Thought, and is instructed in Raja Yoga. (Liber 13)

Liber Jugorum was discussed in the Practicus chapter, with reference to the task of acquiring “control of speech.” The Philosophus similarly undertook to gain “control of actions.” The Domi-

² It must not be confused with the John Dee diary titled Liber Mysteriorum, though this may have been – and probably was – the source of the title.

nus Liminis is required to build the same vigilance and control over her thoughts.³

This "control of thought," the main theme of Raja-Yoga, takes a particular form. One Star in Sight explains that the Dominus Liminis "Is expected to show mastery of Pratyahara and Dharana."⁴

Dharana is simple concentration. It is described in Liber E, and practiced from the Probationer Grade onward. A significant measure of success in dharana is prerequisite to certain practices assigned to the Practicus and Philosophus.⁵

Pratyahara takes this a big step further. However, it has been defined variously and ambiguously.⁶ As Frater Perdurabo wrote in Book Four, Part I, Cap. 4:

The word is used by different authors in different senses. The same word is employed to designate both the practice and the result. It means for our present purpose a process rather strategical than practical: it is introspection, a sort of general examination of the contents of the mind which we wish to control: Asana having been mastered, all immediate exciting causes have been removed, and we are free to think what we are thinking about. . .

. . . we must consider what is meant by success in Pratyahara. This is a very extensive subject, and different authors take widely divergent views. . . However, the main point is to acquire some sort of inhibitory power over the thoughts.

From a practical point of view, we would describe pratyahara as "mindfulness of mind." The ³ Therefore, the rumors are true that the A.:A.: practices "thought control." What differentiates this system of training from certain others, however, is that you are expected to learn to control your own thoughts, not those of your students.

⁴ In addition to Liber E, these yoga practices are discussed at length in Book Four, Part I, and in Eight Lectures on Yoga.

⁵ In Raja Yoga, dharana, dhyana, and samadhi are three stages collectively called samyama. Dharana is the method that eventuates in the other two. Also, pratyahara is generally given as an earlier stage than dharana. This is the result of varying classical definitions: that is, there is a vast difference between simple introspection and the arresting of thought!

⁶ Literally, the word is probably best translated as "withdrawing" or "holding back" (of the thought); from prati, "back," + hāra, "to hold." This does not, however, do full justice to the actual method.

Philosophus who has mastered the method of Mahasatipatthana will understand entirely what we mean by this, and will be well prepared to undertake it. But this does not mean that it is suddenly easy! Heisenberg's principle of uncertainty or indeterminacy applies no place better than in the observation of the contents of the mind. It is, hopefully, self-evident that it is impossible to make any observations about the contents of one's mind without instantly altering the observed phenomenon. Nonetheless, one must try. And in the trying, and in the accomplishment thereof, there will come the success which the Dominus Liminis seeks.

We have yet to make clear, however, what level constitutes success in pratyahara. Frater Perdurabo discussed this at the end of the same chapter of Book Four:

In some people this inhibitory power may flower suddenly in very much the same way as occurred with Asana. Quite without any relaxation of vigilance, the mind will suddenly be stilled. There will be a marvelous feeling of peace and rest, quite different from the lethargic feeling which is produced by over-eating. It is difficult to say whether so definite a result would come to all, or even to most people. The matter is one of no very great importance. If you have acquired the power of checking the rise of thoughts⁷ you may proceed to the next stage [emphasis added].

EQUILIBRIUM OF KNOWLEDGE & POWER

He shall meditate on the diverse knowledge and Power that he has acquired, and harmonize it perfectly. And in this matter shall he be judged by the Præmonstrator of the A.:A.:.

(Liber 185)

This grade is one of equilibration. All four elements having been mastered – all parts of the puzzle having been placed on the table – the Dominus Liminis now must bring them into proportion with each other.

At the time that Jones and Crowley passed through the old Portal ceremony of the Hermetic ⁷ Liber Turris, issued in prior grades, is the chief instruction in this.

Order of the Golden Dawn, it included the following admonishment, as part of a comment on Atu XIV, "Temperance":

Let this remind you once more that only in and by the reconciliation of opposing forces is the pathway made to true occult knowledge and practical power.

The balance that the Dominus Liminis must reach involves not only knowledge and power, but all "opposing forces." What is sought here is nothing less than a balancing and integration of all the forces within the magician's personality, a harmonious synthesis of all that she is.

Inasmuch as there is no longer one Præmonstrator for all branches of the A.:A.:, in this matter the Dominus Liminis is to be judged by the Præmonstrator of her own lineage; or, if there be none, then by her Superior, who is an Adeptus Minor.

LIGHTING THE MAGICK LAMP

... he shall construct the magic Lamp, according to the instruction in Liber A. (Liber 185)

Further, he lights the Magic Lamp. (Liber 13)

Whereas the Pantacle, Dagger, Cup, and Wand correspond to the four arms of the Elemental Cross, there is also a fifth, quintessential point of Spirit, which transforms this Cross into a Pentagram. It is the unity that transcends their diversity. As it is written in Liber Legis, Cap. II, v. 49:

This is of the 4: there is a fifth who is invisible, & therein am I as a babe in an egg.

To this fifth point is attributed the magician's Lamp. Liber A provides the following instruction:

Let the Dominus Liminis take pure lead, tin, and quicksilver, with platinum, and, if need be, glass.

Let him by his understanding and ingenuity devise a Magick Lamp that shall burn without wick or oil, being fed by the Aethyr.

This shall he accomplish secretly and apart, without asking the advice or approval of his Adeptus Minor.

THE MAGICAL LAMP
as conceived by Eliphas Levi, here shown with wand, sword, and crescent-handled dagger.

Let the Dominus Liminis keep it when consecrated in the secret chamber of Art.

This then is that which is written: "Being furnished with complete armour and armed, he is similar to the goddess."

And again, "I am armed, I am armed."

As this is to be accomplished "without asking the advice or approval" of even the Dominus Liminis' Superior in the Order, we will not comment further on this assignment.

CONTROL OF INTUITION

He shall in every way establish perfect control of his intuition, according to the advice of his Adeptus Minor, for that the ordeal of advancement is no light one. (Liber 185)

This assignment will be clear enough; and the Dominus Liminis is otherwise to consult the Adeptus Minor who is her Superior.

LUMEN IN CENTRUM

Perhaps it will have become apparent by now that all of these tasks are essentially the same One Task.

The Dominus Liminis, we have seen, is required

- to "abide upon the Threshold."
- to obtain control of the aspirations of her being.
- to control the flow of her thoughts.
- to harmonize the unreconciled forces within herself.
- to control her intuition, and
- to light the Magick Lamp.

Within their seeming diversity, these tasks display a unity.

But I have burnt within thee as a pure flame without oil. In the midnight I was brighter than the moon; in the daytime I exceeded utterly the sun; in the byways of thy being I flamed, and dispelled the illusion.⁸

By her practices of magical and mystical art, therefore, let the Dominus Liminis find this unity: yea, let her find the Unity.

THE DOMINUS LIMINIS SYLLABUS

According to the A.:A.: Curriculum given in THE EQUINOX, Vol. III, No. 1, the Dominus Liminis is to be examined in certain instructions including Liber Legis, The Wake World, John St. John, Liber 8, Liber NV, Liber H A D, and Liber IOD.

Two points are of special interest about this curriculum.

First, the explanation given for their assignment is that they are "specially adapted to facilitate the Task proper to the Grade of Adeptus Minor, the Attainment of Raja-Yoga and of the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel." This is unique among the grade syllabi. In all other cases, the assigned materials pertain to the grade for which the work is assigned.

Second, a number of papers appear for the first time on the Dominus Liminis syllabus. Recall that the Probationer syllabus contained most of the fundamental instructions through Philosophus, but not including the Dominus Liminis material. Although the assiduous student likely will have encountered all of these instructions before, not one of them (except for Liber Legis and Liber Ar-morum) was assigned in any previous grade.

Liber 8 is derived from the Cry of the 8th Æthyr from The Vision & the Voice. It will be discussed more extensively in the next chapter, and is reproduced in Appendix G.

Liber NV and Liber H A D are practical instructions based on the first two chapters of Liber Legis. We heartily recommend these wonderful instructions to anyone. Something of particular interest in each of them concerns the imprimatur page: Both Liber NV and Liber H A D are labeled, "For the Winners of Ordeal X," referring to a passage in Liber Legis, Cap. III, v. 22, where Heru-Ra-Ha is represented as saying,

I am the visible object of worship: the others are secret: for the Beast & his Bride are they: and for the winners of the Ordeal x. What is this? Thou shalt know.

Thelemites have debated the exact meaning of this passage for decades; nor do we propose an absolute interpretation at this point. Nonetheless, the phrase "Ordeal x" has usually been interpreted as hinting at O X, i.e., the various meanings applied to the symbolic union of a Circle and Cross (especially as ⊗ or ⊕). Among other things, this is a well-known equivalent for the symbol of the Rosy Cross. Inasmuch as Liber NV and Liber HAD are first officially issued in the A.:A.: to the Dominus Liminis – and that as an aid in undertaking the work of an Adeptus Minor – G.:H.: Frater O.M. very likely was interpreting the "Winners of the Ordeal X" as those who had gained authentic admission to the Order of the Rosy Cross.

Liber IOD contains a series of practices, both of magick and of yoga, for bringing all things together to a single point: that is, of "reducing the manifold consciousness to the unity," according to the Curriculum.

Liber A'ash vel Capricorni Pneumatici is a Class A Document, included here because of a colophon which appeared with it in THE EQUINOX, No. 6, referring the book to this present grade.

⁸ Liber Cordis Cincti Serpente, Cap. V, v. 9.

ADVANCEMENT TO ADEPTUS MINOR

Advancement from the Grade of Dominus Liminis to the Adeptus Minor Grade is granted, by authority, when the Task of the Dominus Liminis has been satisfactorily completed. There is no minimum or maximum time in the grade per se. However, according to Liber 185, the Dominus Liminis must wait until at least six months after admission to this grade before he may "go to his Adeptus Minor, pass the necessary tests, and repeat to him his appointed part in the Temple of Initiation."⁹

The advancement we are discussing here is to the subgrade called Adeptus Minor Without, the first grade of the Inner College, the Order of the Rosy Cross. It is from the platform of that new grade that the aspirant will undertake to complete the Great Work of attaining to the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel.

Liber 185 puts this long-sought, hard-earned, joyous step into perspective: "When at last he hath attained to the grade of Adeptus Minor, let him humble himself exceedingly."

⁹ The records of Frank Bennett, variously known in the A.:A.: as Fra. Sapientia Amor Potentia, Fra. Progradior, Fra. 176, and V.:H.: Fra. Ahah (אהאח), demonstrate that Crowley, as Imperator, could waive this six month rule, at least under some circumstances. But Brother Bennett was an unusual case. Crowley wrote of him, in his Confessions, that, "My success with him is enough to wipe out a dozen failures and more." Living in Australia during World War I, Bennett was out of direct communication with his Superior (Fratr Achad, residing in Canada) for nearly a decade. As a result of this, he fulfilled many of the conditions of the grades 2^C=9^C through 5^C=6^C before he was ever formally passed to the 1^C=10^C Grade in February 1920 e.v. Therefore, when he resided with Crowley for several months in 1921 e.v., at the Abbey of Thelema in Cefalù, he was able to make unusually good use of the time. Accordingly, Crowley advanced Fra. Progradior to Zelator in July, soon after his arrival; and to Practicus, Philosophus, Dominus Liminis, and Adeptus Minor by the end of October, based on work actually done. Crowley later identified Bennett as a 6^C=5^C, indicating further advancement beyond what was accomplished at Cefalù. A footnote in The Confessions of Aleister Crowley, Cap. 81, is a moving, if brief, testimonial to this Adept.

FRANK BENNETT

V.:H.: Frater אהאח

"G.H. Frater AHAH 6^C=5^C R.R. et A.C. is the humblest of the Brethren of the Order. He has worked with his hands since he was nine years old and he understands and loves the Law and its Logos as a child does its mother and father. He has my respect and affection as no other of my Brethren: for he represents to me mankind incarnate at its weakest (and therefore strongest) and noblest (and therefore most 'common'). He is, in a word, that 'Man' of whom I am, being 666 (the number of a man) and whom I love and serve. An illuminating incident: he cannot spell, but under inspiration writes as none has ever done save one — John Bunyan!"

ORDO R.:C.:

THALIA

*Solar-serpent caressing my heart.
 Tongue of inspiration darting teasingly and pleasingly within the expanding vault of my soul, unsealing its warded mysteries from behind their brazen plaque.
 My passion rises from timorous flame to surging solar fury until, head flung back, my sweat-soaked mane tossed madly about in concert with the thrashing rhythm of my rider,
 I surrender
 to the blinding shaft of insupportable splendor,
 That floods me, slays me, flays, betrays me with its resurgent venomous coruscations.*

*My mind reeling in the intoxication of this madness.
 The grape's royal blood infuses veins made void of corpuscular life.
 Wine blazes through my soul,
 its moist fire spreading from my center, outward, to poison
 every cell every memory every dream*

*With the ineradicable kiss, imprint, and seal of this muse whose elixir of inspiration unleashes me, whose Genius releases me,
 Pregnant with Life unguessed.*

Chapter 8: (5⁰=6[□])

THE ADEPTUS MINOR GRADE (WITHOUT)

THE Great Work, for the Adeptus Minor, is "to attain to the knowledge and conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel." As an examination of Liber 185 and Liber 13 will show, this is the sole task of the junior Adeptus Minor, the Adeptus Minor Without.

Truly, this is the definition of the Great Work for every man and every woman from the beginning of their journey on the mystical path. Now, however, the preliminaries are over. Now the tools are all in hand. Skills have been acquired, wonders have been witnessed, magical adventures have been experienced, all part of the sometimes beautiful, sometimes horrific passage through one's own Inner Kingdom, safari for one's own hidden Beast, expedition up one's own Mystic Mountain, trek to one's own distant Star. This is the only voyage, the one true adventure. It is nearly always represented as a journey, because the Fifth Power of the Sphinx, the power of Spirit, the power of a god who Knows, Wills, Dares, and is Silent, is the power To Go.

THE DOVE & THE ROSE

The Latin word adeptus is the past participle of adipiscor, "to reach, get, attain, win." An adeptus is "one who has attained."

Adeptus enumerates to 78 by the Latin Qabalah Simplex. This is a number of great sanctity. It is the total number of arcana in the full Tarot pack, representing thereby the consummate Qabalistic model of the universe. It is the value of the Latin word libertas, "liberty;" and an Adept is certainly one who has gained freedom. In Hebrew it is the value of mezla (מזל), the influence from Kether, which is the First Matter of creation; of Hekel Ahabah (היכל אהבה), "Temple (or Palace) of Love;" of chanok (חנך), "to initiate," the name we know as Enoch; and of both lekhem (לחם), "bread," and melakh (מלח), "salt," the two halves of the Eucharist of Substance.

The complete title, Adeptus Minor, simply means "lesser adept." It is a comparative, contrasting with the name of the grade that follows, that of the "greater adept." Yet, Adeptus Minor enumerates to 139. This is identical with the value of Ipsissimus, the title of the 10⁰=1[□] Grade, attributed to Kether! Ipsissimus means, "he that is most himself." At its own (lesser) level, the accomplishment of the Adeptus Minor seems deserving of this description as well.¹ In any case, the "center" or "self" attained by the initiate of Tiphereth is a reflection of Kether on this lesser plane.

The number 139 is also the value of the Latin phrases custos rosæ, "guardian of the rose,"² and stat veritas, "truth endures," both of which have clear relevance to the Adeptus Minor Grade. Finally, in Greek, it is the value of ἡ πελεια, "the dove," a symbol of mystical revelation, of grace, of love, of that Divine Seed which fertilizes the prepared Virgin, of "the Holy Ghost" – in short, of all that descends the 13th Path of Gimel, 2, from Kether unto Tiphereth.

¹ As Tiphereth has been called "the Sun of the Soul," Kether may be considered "the SUN behind the Sun." Kether is represented as the ultimate "center of Self;" yet to one who is not yet a full adept, Tiphereth is rightly regarded as the "heart" of the self, the "center" toward which the aspirant journeys. Either is beyond the limits of reason to define. The metaphors applied to each scarcely differ from those of the other except as to arbitrary distinctions of magnitude or finality.

We should mention that the Mystic Title of the 5^o=6^o Grade is Hodos Chamelionis, "Path of the Chameleon." This refers not only to the mystical phenomenon called (among other things) the "Path of the Rainbow," but also to the basic Rosicrucian policy of blending into one's surroundings and conforming to the customs and practices of a place. Camouflage can be the Adept's best friend! As Liber Legis states it,

Yet there are masked ones my servants: it may be that yonder beggar is a King. A King may choose his garment as he will: there is no certain test: but a beggar cannot hide his poverty.³

As a formality, the Adeptus Minor is addressed as "Very Honored Frater" or "Very Honored Soror."

THE ADEPTUS MINOR INITIATION

Advancement to the junior Adeptus Minor Grade is a matter of reading the task and subscribing to its oath. Thereafter, the Adeptus Minor initiation is a process of self-initiation. It must be so, in a way that does not apply to any prior grade: for the further initiation of the Adept, to the Grade of Adeptus Minor Within, is identical with the attainment of the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel.

In the original plan of the A.:A.: system, a formal 5^o=6^o initiation ceremony was contemplated. This was later changed.

As was explained in Chapter 4, the 5=6 (Zelator Adeptus Minor) ceremony of the old Order was adapted by the A.:A.: founders into the A.:A.: 2^o=9^o (Zelator) initiation ceremony, Liber Cadaveris. In his initial 1908 written outline of the A.:A.: system, Crowley then penned, regarding the advancement to Adeptus Minor, "Then follows a ritual = real R.C. ritual." It is likely that, at that time, he contemplated that this would be "The Bornless Ritual," an ancient Græco-Egyptian ceremony which he himself had employed successfully in 1906 for the attainment of the Knowl-

Such was his thinking in 1908.

Then, about a year later, in December 1909, Crowley undertook the series of initiatory visions which eventually were published as Liber 418, The Vision & the Voice. These were mystical sojournings of the 30 Æthyrs (essentially, "concentric dimensions"), which constitute one aspect of the Enochian system of magick. This experience resulted in Crowley attaining to the 8^o=3^o Grade, Magister Templi. Of these 30 visions, that of the 8th Æthyr constituted a direct communication from Crowley's own Holy Guardian Angel, Aiwass, who had dictated to him The Book of the Law five and a half years earlier. In this "Cry of the 8th Æthyr," Aiwass described the self-initiation process whereby – it was promised – all can complete the Great Work. "And to him that understandeth," Aiwass said to the new Magister Templi, "at last do I deliver the secrets of truth in such wise that the least of the little children of the light may run to the knees of the mother and be brought to understand. And thus shall he do who will attain unto the mystery of the knowledge and conversation of his Holy Guardian Angel. . . ."

The method given is a refinement – we would say, the quintessence – of the methods traditionally attributed to Abra-Melin the Mage.

The Book of the Sacred Magic of Abra-Melin the Mage is a 15th Century classic of High Magick. It gives, in fine detail, a method of concentrated and profound worship and devotion that can lead to the attainment of the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel. Its authorship is credited to an Adept named Abraham, a student of a great magician named Abra-Melin. This book was translated into English, from a French manuscript, by S.L. Mathers, and was well known to the senior members of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. At the recommendation of Cecil Jones, Aleister Crowley first began to apply its methods in early 1900, and resumed them and brought them to fulfillment in 1906 during a sojourn across China. Then, three years later, during his investigation of the 8th Æthyr, he received the instruction from Aiwass, now under discussion.

³ Liber Legis, Cap. II, v. 58.

⁴ Crowley included this ritual as a "Preliminary Invocation" in his edition of The Goetia. As such, it was discussed briefly in Chapter 1. In 1921 he issued his personalized version of the ritual as Liber Samekh, which was given the number 800 – even as the 5^o=6^o initiation was to be numbered 8.

which refined the system and promised to bring it to perfection.⁵

This Vision of the 8th Æthyr was then labeled Liber 8, or Ritual 8, and became the central official A.:A.: instruction provided for the Adeptus Minor Without. (See Appendix G.) The following spring, when Liber Graduum Montis Abiegni was published in THE EQUINOX, it specifically stated that the Adeptus Minor "is to follow out the instruction given in the Vision of the Eighth Æthyr for the attainment of the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel."

However, of all magical operations that can be undertaken, none is more personal than this, none more individual. As Fra. O.M. later wrote in One Star in Sight,

It is impossible to lay down precise rules by which a man may attain to the knowledge and conversation of His Holy Guardian Angel; for that is the particular secret of each one of us; a secret not to be told or even divined by any other, whatever his grade. It is the Holy of Holies, whereof each man is his own High Priest, and none knoweth the Name of his brother's God, or the Rite that invokes Him.

Liber 8, hardly constitutes "precise rules." It is a highly elastic methodology that provides ample opportunity, and even requirement, for the Adept to design her own personal and unique methods of operation.

Even within this liberal, flexible approach, however, and even with the promises from Aiwass that this recommended method is suitable for all, it may be that the method recommended in Liber 8 is foreign to what a particular Adept requires. Having completed the work of a Dominus Liminis, the new Adeptus Minor is certainly in a place to trust her intuition, her inner guidance, in designing the approach she will use to attain to this Knowledge and Conversation. Ultimately, the Adept simply must decide what to do, following her inner promptings. It is the universal testimony of Adepts that the Holy Guardian Angel will, itself, guide the Adept in this matter, will instruct the Adept in how to effectuate the approach of the Angel. Although the Adeptus Minor can still definitely benefit from

THE LAMEN

Though its creation is not required by any formal instruction, the lamen is a traditional magical 'tool' of the Adept. It symbolizes Tiphereth, and the Great Work itself is the subject of the design. "In this Lamen," Crowley wrote in Book Four, "the Magician must place the secret keys of his power." Above, the lamen of Frater Achad.

the counsel and experience of her Superior in the Order, it is, unquestionably, the A.:A.: policy to support the Adept's own decision of how to undertake this operation. No one else can make such a decision. "Success is your proof."

One Star in Sight continues:

The Masters of the A.:A.: have therefore made no attempt to institute any regular ritual for this central Work of their Order, save the generalized instructions in Liber 418 (the 8th Æthyr) and the detailed Canon and Rubric of the Mass actually used with success by FRATER PERDURABO in His attainment. This has been written down by Himself in Liber Samekh. . . They have taken the only proper course; to train aspirants to this attainment in the theory and practice of the whole of Magick and Mysticism, so that each man may be expert in the handling of all known weapons, and free to choose and to use those which his own experience and instinct dictate as proper when he essays the Great Experiment.

All of the A.:A.: work to this point – every detail of theory and practice in every grade so far – has been aimed at equipping the magician for this moment, this hour. She will draw on what she has learned, and will apply what she judges best.

In the paragraph last quoted above from One Star in Sight, mention is made of Liber Samekh. This document was written and issued in 1921 for the use of the Adeptus Minor. As stated previously, it is Frater Perdurabo's personal revision of a very ancient Greek ritual called "The Bornless One," the actual ritual that he used as his own invocation during the season of his performance of the Sacred Magick of Abra-Melin the Mage in 1906. It incorporates well into the format of Liber

⁵ Liber 8 appears to presume thorough familiarity with The Book of the Sacred Magic of Abra-Melin the Mage. In any case, even if the adept elects to follow Liber 8 meticulously, we certainly would encourage thorough study and familiarity with its medieval parent.

8, if the magician is so directed to proceed in that fashion. Crowley's commentary ("scholion") to Liber Samekh, is arguably the finest, most insightful, most helpful, and most exalted discussion of High Magick ever published.

The tools of an Adeptus Minor are, therefore, Liber 8 and Liber Samekh; but also they include the entire range of skills and capacities developed during the whole course of magical training. By this stage it will have become even more obvious that Liber E and Liber O have been the foundation of virtually every other aspect of the training and, even now, are the basis for what carries the Adept forward. Additionally, recall that the Dominus Liminis syllabus was selected to be "adapted to facilitate the Task proper to the Grade of Adeptus Minor, the Attainment of Raja-Yoga and of the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel." All of these Dominus Liminis instructions, therefore, deserve particular consideration by the Adept as to their possible usefulness in her Great Work.

THE HOLY GUARDIAN ANGEL

What is this Holy Guardian Angel, whose knowledge and conversation⁶ the Adept seeks? Is it a separate being, a great Agent of God, celestial lover and companion, sent forth to guide, lead, and protect the Adept? Or is it best categorized as an exalted aspect of the Adept's higher consciousness? Or does this question even matter?

From his earliest commitment to teach humanity, Crowley pointedly elected not to attempt to resolve the raging conflict between the numerous phrases historically employed to describe the goals of magical, mystical, or religious attainment. The Great Work is utterly individual, utterly personal, particular, specific, and unique to each who undertakes it. Whether the object of aspiration is personified as the True Self, the Augoeides, the Genius, Ishvara, the Logos, the Christos, Atman, Adonai, the Holy Guardian Angel, or any of 56 other possibilities: whether the goal is called adeptship, attainment, initiation, mastership, cosmic consciousness, samadhi, union with God, spiritual development, mahatmaship, moksha, liberation, or whatever: it is nonetheless true that, deep within each seeker is the Key to THAT which is sought, and which, though perhaps ultimately identical for each that has attained, is also utterly unique for each that aspires. Each name, each label, implies a rational or metaphysical theory that, being rational, cannot be true. By choosing the title of "the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel" which had been employed by Abra-Melin, Crowley admittedly elected a term that he felt had the least metaphysical baggage, and yet was so simple that even a child could relate to it.

A private letter written by Crowley, and reproduced on pp. 159-60 of THE EQUINOX No. 1, itemized his thinking on this point:

Lytton calls him Adonai in 'Zanoni,' and I often use this name in the note-books.

Abramelin calls him Holy Guardian Angel. I adopt this:

1. Because Abramelin's system is so simple and effective

2. Because since all theories of the universe are absurd it is better to talk in the language of one which is patently absurd, so as to mortify the metaphysical man.

3. Because a child can understand it.

Theosophists call him the Higher Self,⁷ Silent Watcher, or Great Master.

The Golden Dawn calls him the Genius.

Gnostics say the Logos.

Egyptians say Asar Un-nefer.

Zoroaster talks about uniting all these symbols into the form of a Lion – see Chaldean Oracles.

Anna Kingsford calls him Adonai (Clothed with the Sun). Buddhists call him Adi-Buddha – (says H.P.B.)⁸

The Bhagavad-Gita calls him Vishnu (chapter xi.).

The Yi King calls him "The Great Person."

The Qabalah calls him Jechidah.⁹

We also get metaphysical analyses of His nature, deeper and deeper according to the subtlety of the writer: for this vision – it is all one same phenomenon, variously coloured by

⁸ H.P. Blavatsky. In her Theosophical Glossary she defined Adi-Buddha as, "The First and Supreme Buddha. . . The Eternal Light."

⁹ יְחִידָה, Yechidah, lit. "the only one."

⁶ Both of these words are synonymous with sexual intercourse. What is sought is intimate union.

our varying Ruachs¹⁰ – is, I believe, the first and the last of all Spiritual Experience. For though He is attributed to Malkuth, and the Door of the Path of His overshadowing. He is also in Kether (Kether is in Malkuth and Malkuth in Kether – “as above, so beneath”), and the End of the “Path of the Wise” is identity with Him.

So that while he is the Holy Guardian Angel. He is also Hua¹¹ and the Tao.¹²

For since *Intra Nobis Regnum del*¹³ all things are in Ourselves, and all Spiritual Experience is a more or less complete Revelation of Him.

Yet it is only in the Middle Pillar that His manifestation is in any way perfect.

The Augoeides invocation¹⁴ is the whole thing. Only it is so difficult: one goes along through all the fifty gates of Binah at once, more or less illuminated, more or less deluded. But the First and the Last is this Augoeides Invocation.

As the foregoing, hopefully, has made clear, even this basic elected term of the A.A.A. – the Holy Guardian Angel – must not be taken by the aspirant to imply any specific dogmatic or sectarian theory. As the Probationer was advised at the beginning of this quest, in Liber Causæ:

Therefore by the order of D.D.S. did P. prepare all things by his arcane science and wisdom, choosing only those symbols which were common to all systems, and rigorously rejecting all names and words which might be supposed to imply any religious or metaphysical theory. To do this utterly was found impossible, since all language has a history, and the use (for example) of the word “spirit” implies the Scholastic Philosophy and the Hindu and Taoist theories concerning the breath of man. So was it difficult to avoid implications of some undesirable bias by using the words “order,” “circle,” “chapter,” “society,” “brotherhood,” or any other to designate the body of initiates.

Deliberately, therefore, did he take refuge in vagueness. Not to veil the truth to the Neophyte, but to warn him against valuing non-essentials. Should therefore the candidate hear the name of any God, let him not rashly assume that it refers to any known God, save only the God known to himself. Or should the ritual speak in terms (however vague) which seem to imply Egyptian, Taoist, Buddhist, Indian, Persian, Greek, Judaic, Christian, or Moslem philosophy, let him reflect that this is a defect of language; the literary limitation and not the spiritual prejudice of the man P.

Especially let him guard against the finding of definite sectarian symbols in the teaching of his master, and the reasoning from the known to the unknown which assuredly will tempt him.

We labor earnestly, dear brother, that you may never be led away to perish upon this point: for thereon have many holy and just men been wrecked. By this have all the visible systems lost the essence of wisdom.

This question of the exact nature of the Holy Guardian Angel, although only resolvable by the experience of each Adept, is, nonetheless, a reasonable and expected question from any aspirant to this attainment. We will limit ourselves, here, to

ADONAI HA-ARETZ

To the Neophyte 1^c=10^c comes the “Vision of the HGA.” While not to be confused with the 5^c=6^c’s “Knowledge & Conversation,” it is an early stage of the same class of phenomena. Above, a representation of ‘God’ in Malkuth, Adonai ha-Aretz, as one aspirant’s conception of this Angel (based on a technique of the H.O.G.D.).

¹⁰ “Ruach: the third form, the Mind, the Reasoning Power, that which possesses the Knowledge of Good and Evil.” [Un-attributed footnotes to this passage given as direct quotations are from THE EQUINOX and were written either by Crowley or by J.F.C. Fuller.]

¹¹ “The supreme and secret title of Kether.” [Heb. הוּא, Hu, lit. “He.”]

¹² “The great extreme of the Yi King.”

¹³ “I.N.R.I.” [This is a Latin phrase meaning, “The Kingdom of God is Within Us.”]

¹⁴ In other words, the Invocation of the Holy Guardian Angel. At that time, Crowley understood this (for himself, at least) as meaning “The Bornless Ritual,” as later written down by him in Liber Samekh. According to one of Crowley’s standard references, Blavatsky’s Theosophical Glossary, “Augoeides” is defined as follows: “Bulwer Lytton calls it the ‘Luminous Self,’ or our Higher Ego. But Occultism makes of it something distinct from this. It is a mystery. The Augoeides is the luminous divine radiation of the EGO which, when incarnated, is but its shadow – pure as it is yet. . . .”

Crowley's answers. Crowley provided different answers at different times, depending on what it seemed necessary for the particular student to hear. For example, in Magick Without Tears, a book aimed especially at beginners, he made the following statements:

There is only one point of theory which matters to our practice. We may readily concur that the Augoeides, the "Genius" of Socrates, and the "Holy Guardian Angel" of Abramelin the Mage, are identical. But we cannot include this "Higher Self"; for the Angel is an actual Individual with his own Universe, exactly as a man is. . . . He is not a mere abstraction, a selection from, and exaltation of, one's own favourite qualities, as the "Higher Self" seems to be. The trouble is (I think) that the Hindu passion for analysis makes them philosophize any limited being out of existence.

This matter is of importance, because it influences one's attitude to invocation. I can, for instance, work myself up to a "Divine Consciousness," in which I can understand, and act, as I cannot in my normal state. I become "inspired"; I feel, and I express, ideas of almost illimitable exaltation. But this is totally different from the "Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel," which is the special aim of the Adeptus Minor. It is ruin to that Work if one deceives oneself by mistaking one's own "energized enthusiasm" for external communication. The parallel on the physical plane is the difference between Onanism and Sexual Intercourse. (Letter 42)

... the Holy Guardian Angel. . . is a Person, a macrocosmic Individual. (We do not know about his birth and so on; but that is because he is, so speak a private God; he only appears to the world at all through some reference to him by his client; for instance, the genius or Augoeides of Socrates.) (Letter 76)

Also, Letter 43 discusses the question of "The Holy Guardian Angel as an Objective Individual."

In seeming contrast, we have the scholion appended to Liber Samekh, specifically prepared for the study of the Adeptus Minor. The following passages are excerpted from that commentary:

The Holy Guardian Angel is the Unconscious Creature Self – the Spiritual Phallus.

[In this ritual, the magician's Will is to be] understood thoroughly as the dynamic aspect of his Creative Self. . .

The Angel is 'King', the One who 'can', the 'source of authority and the fount of honour'; also the King (or King's Son) who delivers the Enchanted Princess, and makes her his Queen. He is 'Ruler', the 'unconscious Will'; to be thwarted no more by the ignorant and capricious false will of the conscious man. And He is 'Helper', the author of the infallible impulse that sends the Soul sweeping along the skies on its proper path with such impetus that the attraction of alien orbs is no longer sufficient to swerve it.

THE SUN OF THE SOUL

One representation of the Holy Guardian Angel (Original artwork by Angela Wixtrom, from Black Pearl 1:6.)

... His Angel is indeed himself, with intimacy so intense as to become identity, and that not in a single Ego, but in every unconscious element that shares in that manifold uprush.

The main purpose of the Ritual is to establish the relation of the subconscious self with the Angel in such a way that the Adept is aware that his Angel is the Unity which expresses the sum of the Elements of that Self, that his normal consciousness contains alien enemies introduced by the accidents of environment, and that his Knowledge and Conversation of His Holy Guardian Angel destroys all doubts and delusions, confers all blessings, teaches all truth, and contains all delights.

... recognition of the Angel as the True Self of his subconscious self, the hidden Life of his physical life.

Tiphereth is the Sun, and the Angel is the spiritual Sun of the Soul of the Adept.

... this Name [of the H.G.A.], understood rightly and fully, declareth the nature of the Angel in every point, wherefore also that Name is the formula of the perfection to which the Adept must aspire, and also of the power of Magick by virtue whereof he must work.

This then is the true aim of the Adept in this whole operation, to assimilate himself to his Angel by continual conscious communion. For his Angel is an intelligible image of his own true Will, to do which is the whole of the law of his Being.

... the Angel is in truth the Logos or articulate expression of the whole Being of the Adept, so that as he increases in the perfect understanding of His name, he approaches the solution of the ultimate problem, Who he himself truly is.

In his New Comment to The Book of the Law, written during the 1920s,¹ Frater To Mega Therion made numerous additional comments upon the nature of the Holy Guardian Angel. These short passages are also particularly important because (unlike the other passages quoted above), they specifically integrate the symbolism of the Thelemic pantheon, introduced in The Book of the Law, with the more universal and Aeon-transcending phenomena of the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel. Commenting on Cap. I, v. 7, he wrote:

... the "Small Person" of Hindu mysticism, the Dwarf, insane yet crafty, of many legends in many lands, is also this same "Holy Ghost," or Silent Self of a man, or his Holy Guardian Angel.

He is almost the "Unconscious" of Freud², unknown, unaccountable, the silent Spirit, blowing "whither it listeth, but thou canst not tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth." It commands with absolute authority when it appears at all, despite conscious reason and judgment.

Aiwass³ is then, ... the "minister" of this Hoor-paar-Kraat, that is of the Saviour of the World in the larger sense, and of mine own "Silent Self" in the lesser. ... He was the intelligible medium between the Babe God – the New Aeon about to be born – and myself. ... But on [Hoor-paar-Kraat's] appearing, He assumes the active form twin to Harpocrates, that of Ra-Hoor-Khuit. The Concealed Child becomes the Conquering Child, the armed Ho-rus avenging his father Osiris. So also our own Silent Self, helpless and witless, hidden within us, will spring forth, if we have craft to loose him to the Light, spring lustily forward with his Cry of Battle, the Word of our True Wills.

This is the Task of the Adept, to have the Knowledge and Conversation of His Holy Guardian Angel, to become aware of his nature and his purpose, fulfilling them.

From the especially important commentary on Cap. III, v. 22:

There are to be no regular temples of Nuith and Hadit, for They are incommensurables and absolutes. Our religion, therefore, for the People,⁴ is the Cult of the Sun, who is our particular star in the Body of Nuit, from whom, in the strictest scientific sense, comes this earth, a chilled spark of Him, and all our Light and Life. His viceregent and representative in the animal kingdom is His cognate symbol the Phallus,⁵ representing Love and Liberty. Ra-Hoor-Khuit, like all true Gods, is therefore a Solar-Phallic deity. But we regard Him as He is in truth, eternal; the Solar-Phallic deities of the old Aeon, such as Osiris, 'Christ,' Hiram, Adonis, Hercules, &c., were supposed, through our ignorance of the Cosmos, to 'die' and 'rise again.' Thus we celebrated rites of 'crucifixion' and so on, which have now become meaningless. Ra-Hoor-Khuit is the Crowned and Conquering Child. This is also a reference to the 'Crowned' and Conquering 'Child' in ourselves, our own personal God. Except ye become as little children, said 'Christ,' ye shall not enter into the Kingdom of God. The Kingdom is Malkuth, the Virgin Bride, and the Child is the Dwarf-Self, the Phallic consciousness, which is the true life of Man, beyond his 'veils' of incarnation. We have to thank Freud – and especially Jung – for stating this part of the Magical Doctrine so plainly, as also of their development of the connection of the Will of this 'child' with the True or Unconscious Will, and so for clarifying our doctrine of the 'Silent Self' or 'Holy Guardian Angel.' They are of course totally ignorant of magical phenomena,⁶ and could ² "Unconscious" but not "subconscious." Frankl's "spiritual unconscious" is the better example.

³ Crowley's own Holy Guardian Angel, and the messenger who delivered The Book of the Law: "the minister of Hoor-paar-kraat," or "the Voice of the Silence."

⁴ That is, the general populace, as distinct from the initiates.

⁵ This is not a sexist statement. What is really meant here by "phallus" is equally present in men and women. Its nature is also unmistakably "solar."

⁶ In the 1920s this may have been still true of C.G. Jung, though the criticism would not apply to later stages of his life.

hardly explain even such terms as 'Augoeides'; and they are seriously to blame for not stating more openly that this True Will is not to be daunted or suppressed; but within their limits they have done excellent work.

Finally, in comment to Cap. III, v. 68, Frater To Mega Therion made clearly self-referential statements which say much about his own view of certain doctrines:

As for my true self, silent, abiding its hour, is not this Book [of the Law] the very incarnation of Beauty? What is Beauty but the perfect expression of one's own Truth? And is not this Book the Word of . . . mine Holy Guardian Angel, the master of my Silent Self, His virgin bride on whom His love hath wrought the mystery of Identity?

It is certainly possible that, by providing this range of commentary, we have done nothing more than confuse the sincere aspirant. Admittedly – given our view that the experience of what we call the Holy Guardian Angel is “utterly individual, utterly personal, particular, specific, and unique to each” – the only wholly consistent approach would be to say nothing about it at all. We have elected to balance this consideration against our responsibility to teach, by pointedly inviting every student to ignore any of the interpretations we have offered here unless they “strike home” as personally relevant.

Furthermore, this discussion is primarily aimed at those who are on the earlier stages of the Path. The Adeptus Minor surely already will have drawn (conscious or unconscious) conclusions about what it is that is sought, conclusions so inherent to her own nature that they may be entirely unconscious.

The real substance of this present chapter is that the Adeptus Minor has one task, the one task at which she has been aiming from her first entry onto the Path; and that now, prepared, she is pledged to undertake it.

Let, then, the Adeptus Minor undertake the Great Work and attain to the Knowledge and Conversation of her Holy Guardian Angel.

Chapter 9: (5^o=6[□])*T*HE *A*DEPTS *M*INOR *G*RADE (WITHIN)

The Grade of Adeptus Minor is the main theme of the instructions of the A.A.A.. It is characterized by the Attainment of the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel. . . This is the essential work of every man; none other ranks with it either for personal progress or for power to help one's fellows. This unachieved man is no more than the unhappiest and blindest of animals. He is conscious of his own incomprehensible calamity, and clumsily incapable of repairing it. Achieved, he is no less than the co-heir of gods, a Lord of Light. He is conscious of his own consecrated course, and confidently ready to run it. The Adeptus Minor needs little help or guidance from his superiors in our Order.

(One Star in Sight)

ATTAINMENT of the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel (often abbreviated as "K&C of the HGA") distinguishes the junior Adeptus – the Adeptus Without – from the senior Adeptus – the Adeptus Within.

As a member of the Order, the Adept is still beholden to that Adept who is her immediate Superior, and who has had a hand in guiding her thus far. Most especially does the new Adept bear responsibility to her Superior for the students of lesser grades that have been entrusted to her care. Also, the Superior still bears to the Adept the duty of providing further guidance and direction. Nonetheless, this latter responsibility has now been primarily abrogated, for the real teacher, the one to whom the Adept will turn, increasingly, for all answers, is the Holy Guardian Angel. This change in the relationship is briefly addressed in Liber 13:

[The K&C of the HGA] is in truth the sole task: the others are useful only as adjuvants to and preparations for the One Work.

Moreover, once this task has been accomplished, there is no more need of human help or instruction; for by this alone may the highest attainment be reached.

This point is reinforced in one of Crowley's personal magical workbooks, from which the following quote is reproduced because of the very informative language employed:

We have no more to add, once the adept is in the charge of His Holy Guardian Angel, consciously and at will.

These few words are worthy of careful consideration by the Adept. They are startlingly revelatory.

It is important to realize that a tremendous change has occurred within the individual who has reached this particular stage of attainment. This requires a comparable change in how we discuss these grades. The nature of the Work has changed, for the Adept is now "consciously and at will" under the direction of the Angel. The nature of evaluation and advancement have also changed; for within the Inner College, it is no longer possible to specify so clearly, a priori, the exact requirements of each grade, nor those signposts which mark the transition from one grade to the next. There are no standards for how rapidly one may progress through the grades; the archives of the Order record that any one of them may require one or more entire lifetimes to perfect. The Great

Work of each Adept being different in form, each will be led through the Paths and sephiroth by those particular experiences which the Holy Guardian Angel determines are necessary to complete the corresponding inner transformations. Almost always, these "assignments" or "tests" from the Angel (ordeals which, by appearance, are raised by the circumstances and flow of the initiate's life) will be recognizable and identifiable as they arise¹ – or, at least, after one has passed them! Certainly, this type of experience has accompanied previous grades as well, and the aspirant's increasing ability to observe and witness these subtle workings of the HGA is one mark of the growing rapport between an initiate and her Angel.

Although the Adeptus Minor Within has, without doubt, entered into conscious relationship ("linkage") with the Holy Guardian Angel, this union can, under no circumstances, be considered "perfect" at this point. By the nature of the relationship, such perfection of the rapport is not possible below the Third Order, that of the Silver Star, to which the Adept has only now begun her aspiration. In fact, the course of the three Adept Grades (Adeptus Minor, Major, and Exemptus) continues to ripen and fulfill this relationship between the Adept and the Angel. As a Qabalistic reminder of this, we note that the highest influence under which the Adept now is working, that which leads her forward in the Way of the Great Work, is through the Path of Gimel; and Gimel, usually translated as the noun "camel," is also a verb that means, "to ripen" or "to wean."

ADEPT'S ROSY CROSS

Similar to the ensign on the Dominus Liminis' breast, the cross on the robes of the Order of the Rosy Cross ($5^{\circ}=6^{\square}$ through $7^{\circ}=4^{\square}$) is gold, not 8-colored.

Adephood is a process, not an event,² notwithstanding the fact that the events that inaugurate adephood utterly change the universe that the aspirant occupies. The same can be said of the event of birth! – which, after all, is only a commencement, not the whole of the incarnation.

Most students of the life and work of Aleister Crowley fail to place in perspective this gradual unfolding and fulfillment of the process of adephood. Although Crowley's personal development (in fact, the unique path of any particular Adept) cannot be taken as a standard against which to gauge anyone else's progress, it is, nonetheless, informative to study the gradual assimilation unto the Light of this individual who most influenced the formalization of the A.:A.: grade system. We may, thereby, better understand in context the definitions he employed, and what they meant to him at the time. For example, by September 1908 Crowley's magical and mystical attainments were considerable. He had studied, and essentially mastered, the technical methods of East and West alike. He had received The Book of the Law in 1904. He completed the Sacred Magick of Abra-Melin (the operation which makes one an Adeptus Minor Within) in 1906, and wrote that he had succeeded in this on October 9 of that year. In late 1907, he had received eight of the remaining Thelemic Holy Books, including two of the greatest, Liber 65 and Liber 7. And yet still, in the autumn of 1908, as he commenced a Greater Magical Retirement for the purpose of initiating himself to the Grade of Adeptus Major (see John St. John, published in THE EQUINOX, Vol. I, No. 1³), he described the progress of his adepthood to that date as follows:

² An almost universally reported characteristic of the experience of cosmic consciousness is that it exists outside of, and separate from, any consideration of Time. The "plane" on which occurs the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel is not limited to three dimensions, nor to temporal linearity. But the Adept otherwise lives a life which is time-linear, and which can be described objectively only in terms of the passage of time.

³ John St. John is also available in a new edition from the College of Thelema.

I begin to collect and direct my thoughts. . . to the question of retreat and communion with that which I have agreed to call the Holy Guardian Angel, whose Knowledge and Conversation I have willed, and in greater or lesser measure enjoyed, since Ten Years.⁴

. . . But I do indeed ask for a Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel which is not left so much to be inferred from the good results in my life and work; I want the Perfume and the Vision. . . I want that definite experience in the very same sense as Abramelin had it; and what's more, I mean to go on till I get it.

This may come as a surprise to many, who have assumed that "that definite experience in the very same sense as Abramelin had it" had been Crowley's years before; but, according to his own record, this was not so.

In consideration of this evolving process, we easily can state what is the foremost duty of the full Adeptus Minor: It is to persevere in the tending, strengthening, and deepening of the intimacy of her Knowledge and Conversation with the Holy Guardian Angel. As was quoted, in the last chapter, from the Scholion to Liber Samekh, "This then is the true aim of the Adept in this whole operation, to assimilate himself to his Angel by continual conscious communication" (emphasis added).

We shall see, in the later sections on the Paths of Mem and Lamed, that this continuing process of assimilating oneself unto the HGA is intimately related to the particular Paths of advancement which lead toward the next grade beyond.

⁴ In this quotation, Crowley is measuring his K&C from the date of his Neophyte (0=0) initiation into the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn in November 1898. This "first meeting" is mentioned in Liber Liberi, Cap. VII, vv. 15-16: "I remember a certain holy day in the dusk of the year, in the dusk of the Equinox of Osiris, when first I beheld Thee visibly; when first the dreadful issue was fought out; when the Ibis-headed One charmed away the strife. I remember Thy first kiss, even as a maiden should. Nor in the dark byways was there another: Thy kisses abide." Crowley's commentary to Liber Liberi simply labels this verse, "November, 1898."

THE VOICE IN THE SILENCE

Besides Aleister Crowley, few other Western Adepts have made openly available their thoughts, perspectives, and experiences on the evolving process of their adepthood. A rare and valuable look into this territory is offered in the letters of one of the most private of Thelema's Adepts, Karl J. Germer – Frater Saturnus, who had been recognized by Crowley first as an Adeptus Minor 5^C=6[□], and then, some years later, as a Master of the Temple 8^C=3[□].

In response to specific questions concerning the Holy Guardian Angel, Germer wrote a long letter to Jane Wolfe (Soror Estai) early in January 1951. The following passages are excerpted from the letter, which is quoted in full in IN THE CONTINUUM, Vol. IV, No. 9 (Spring, 1991 e.v.):

From my present knowledge I am sure that I reached Tiphereth (5^C=6[□]) in June, 1927. It was a great experience. . . but though I had in the years following some surprising – shall I call it "manifestations" – I never realised that communications came from the HGA. It was only in 1946 – I think it was, or possibly 1945 – when I was actually taken by the hand and forced against my will to act in certain ways, which subsequently proved to have been extremely beneficial to me. That led to correspondence between A.C. and myself on the subject which deepened my understanding. . .

The mistake we all seem to make when hearing about this HGA and the various stories about it is, I believe, that we expect to get to a stage where we can hear the voice, or get the vision, of another fellow, or of His Majesty the HGA, like when we are talking to someone on this plane. Soon after my experience in 1927, when my HGA noticed that I had no notion that he was talking with my soul, I was informed that in order to understand His language one has to adapt one's own speech and mode of thought to His plane. In other words, that one has to reach ever subtler spheres to be able to be in constant communication with Him [emphasis added]. I did not follow this advice – out of stubbornness, aided, probably, by a specially earth nature.

A.C. gave me some practical examples of the HGA's intervention. One, in 1946, when his needle broke, and he was alone in Netherwood, could not make an adequate injection, was lying on the floor. . . and a man. . . came through a blinding snowstorm without any apparent cause or reason, to his house a mile or two away, and found him prostrate: he phoned the one doctor who knew alone what was needed and had it with him, who came and saved his life. A quarter hour later and he would have been dead. – These are special cases. What we have to learn and make ourselves ready for, is to hear the speech in ordinary things of our lives [emphasis added].

... Once you get the working of the universe on higher planes into your blood the apparent command and power of the HGA of such other media becomes quite natural.

... Intense practices and invocations make the soul capable to react and understand the language of the HGA better and clearer.

It may, perhaps, be good to add some further remarks. I am sure that A.C.'s realisations in full consciousness have matured very slowly on this problem. His diaries show that his HGA often sent him the clearest messages through women like Ouarda the Seer, Mary d'Este, ... and other media. He insisted on cross-questioning the messenger with all the analytical power of his brilliant mind, so that the party that tried to convey certain important things to him, became unwilling at the stupidity and had to give up.

We should all take courage from this and not despair if we have been a failure so far, but learn how to improve on our own state.

– If you knew how even 666 groped for light often enough, and not he alone, we all do! At the best we can attain to one single ray of light of those billions and trillions that are sent out by the Sun – without charge – daily. We can pick up only that particular ray that lies in our nature as an individual. The ray we can grasp is different from that of the next. Van Gogh's was different from Gauguin's, and so forth. Don't be disheartened! You ought not to be less than anyone else! You possess everybody's love, respect, and admiration! It is another thing that you are dissatisfied with yourself. Such a state is the very condition preceding a birth. Ask any artist, statesman, or even businessman when a great decision is at stake. ... I have taken some pains to answer your doubts and uncertainty. The reason is that I myself have revolved this problem in my mind for twenty or more years. I have asked A.C. several times questions, but I would not have understood his answers; you must understand the subject from the inside out: each one must "grope in the horror of the groves" all by himself; the solution comes at the end of all aspiration, or striving. ...

Germer's letter to Phyllis Seckler (Soror Meral), dated July 7, 1952, was written in the immediate aftermath of her own attainment to the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel on July 1. In the two letters from which the following excerpts are taken, we see Germer emerging as a mentor to the new, young Adept.

... Dear child: your questions go to the bottom of one of the deepest problems that have puzzled and tortured all initiated men and women from time immemorial, as you could find out from reading the records of the Saints (men or women), the great men of genius and so forth. I suppose it is the conflict with being human, with a body of flesh, and the fact that you have risen to or above Tiphereth⁵ where the voice of the Secret Guide is gradually taking over and begins to speak to your soul. The 20th Aethyr, I think it is, initiates this phase. I am a very poor teacher along these lines. I had this experience in 1927. But I am so dull and dumb (have you seen my horoscope? If not I'll send you the main data.) with so much Earth weighing it down, that I paid no attention to the guide, and its voice, until, let me say, 1947-48!!! This may sound unbelievable to you. But then, my case may be different. My connection with A.C., the man, was so close and intimate, that I all the time thought that the impulses came from the man A.C., and, thinking so, I obstructed. The moment the man died, the interpretation changed. Do not follow me, obstruction to the impulses and the Voice has become second nature to me, through so many years, and I may have suffered for this obstruction badly, very badly, and made my life miserable without need. Learn to follow the voice instantly, without questioning unduly. Did I quote that old saying of Mystics: "Perinde ac cadaver!" If not, I repeat it and explain: the idea is that once one has heard the Voice of the HGA one must learn to follow INSTANTLY, even to the perishing of the "Cadaver" which is the mere body, and the rational mind which reasons against it.

I believe it is the hardest lesson to learn. I shall be happy if I can make one human's life happier for teaching a lesson, which I have too much failed to learn!

As you progress in the typing of Liber 418,⁶ you will discover that the HGA grows ever more and more. In other words the path is unending. Your views and your understanding at this moment will not be the same as years hence. Do not think for one moment that

A.C.'s conceptions about this problem were the same when he was 50 as at 70!!! "Strive ever to more . . . and if thou art truly mine . . ." etc.

All you can do is to remain in the intimacy of your HGA, train your finer senses and your soul to receive ever finer and subtler impulses [emphasis added]; sometimes they appear, or may appear, atrocious (as you grow). Never mind. Your HGA looks farther ahead than mortals can. The only danger is that there are other beings in the invisible universe who are sent to (test or) thwart your true path; that is where constant inflaming yourself in prayer is so important, by the method that your HGA will indicate you.

Yes: one is alone in this task, it seems, as long as one does not fully realise the intimacy with one's constant companion. . . .

Some day, if it comes about, and if we should move the documents to the West I may be able to show you some of A.C.'s records on similar matters, and how he disregarded messages which were given to him. We should all learn to do better and not make the same mistakes. Yes; but Liber VII is my favourite: do learn it. . . .

The following is from Frater Saturnus' letter to Soror Meral dated May 5-6, 1953:

. . . I like your spiritual growth. Leave yourself to your HGA and you can find no better guide for further progress.

. . . In the early stages our primitive natures require actual, visible, sensible proof of an outer being contacting us. I remember in my early period I sometimes asked for a definite sign in order to (a) reassure me in a sort of weak phase (b) to give evidence that I was on the right track. Yet: (this is important in my case!) I never connected such signs as coming from a definite outer being, I just took it as from 'God' or such things. My conception of the HGA has probably only been condensed after A.C.'s death. Funny? Unbelievable? It is so! The HGA has been taking almost violent, desperate means to bring me to the realisation of his existence and presence, and operation. But my hide was, and still is, too dense, so that A.C. once in the 1927 period wrote: "instead of a skin you have a carapace!" And this not as a joke, but rather in despair.

⁵ Germer had intuited Sor. Meral's reaching of the Adeptus Minor (Without) stage before this time. In a letter to Jane Wolfe dated June 24, 1952 - exactly one week before Phyllis' full experience of the K&C of the HGA - he wrote, "I find Phyllis's statement [about a certain matter] a definite message, to be heeded, as I have been doing, or trying to do, all along. You know that I have a high regard for P.'s attainment. I'm sure she has gone through 5^o=6^o some time ago. I'm sure she is under guidance."

⁶ She was, at the time, typing the manuscript of The Vision & the Voice for what was to become the Barstow edition published by Germer.

⁷ He quotes, from memory, Liber Legis, Cap. II, v. 72, hence the small errors. The quotation is given here exactly as in his original letter.

Be, and feel, happy that you are better constituted! Later, the messages become more subtle, and so that one cannot distinguish them from what we call 'conscience' in many cases. There are people who carry on definite conversations, they hear voice- or other type-messages: the difficulty remains, however, to verify the source.

Achad⁸ got messages to the last; but they were, since his turning away from 666, not from his HGA, but its shadow, the Evil Persona. As it is hard to follow the voice of the HGA in later stages, because often things are demanded that seem outrageous, against all morals and ethics, there is the danger of falling prey to the sweet whisper of the other guy (cf. Jesus and the high mountain; in Achad's case it was the promise that he was to be the bloke of AL III:45 (the child), and A.C. seduced him, and fortified this conviction (a magical test!) by writing Liber Aleph.)

"Neglect not the Dawn Meditation!" is one of the most important injunctions of A.C. (I only repeat: I don't do it myself! I can't meditate.) It is well to practice this as a routine, so as to be prepared when the HGA arranges a phase for one of the — let me call it — technical initiations or illuminations. . . In my Concentration Camp phase I was alone in my cell (when the crucial weeks came). I worked with hardly any interruption; sleep was broken up so that I never slept more than 3 hours at a time; and that "sleep" was light, and I snapped instantly back into work. If you read John St. John in Equinox I, you have the same idea: except that A.C. did his op[eration] by an effort of will and in 12 days. What I want to say is that such high water marks are secretly arranged by the HGA: then the conditions are right and will bring the result about. But the training of one's mind to waken instantly and fully, at a touch, is always helpful.

SYMBOLS OF THE ADEPTUS MINOR GRADE

As should be apparent by now, the Adeptus Minor Grade is attributed to the sixth sephirah, called Tiphereth. Beauty. Tiphereth corresponds to the Sphere of the Sun and the element of Air.

This grade also incorporates the symbolism of the 23rd Path of Mem (𐤌) and the 22nd Path of Lamed (𐤌), which open (from Hod and Tiphereth, respectively) unto the sephirah Geburah, preparing the way for the Lesser Adept's eventual advancement to the grade of Adeptus Major.

Mem means "water" and, in fact, corresponds to the element Water. It is also associated with the XIIth Trump of the Tarot, popularly called The Hanged Man, and esoterically called "The Spirit of the Mighty Waters."

Lamed means "ox-goad" and "to instruct, train, discipline, chastise." To understand this fully, recall that the first letter of the Hebrew alphabet,

CRUCIFIXION

The descent of L.V.X. along the Path of Gimel unto the Adept in Tiphereth.

Aleph, means "ox," and represents (among other things) the eternal movement of the spiritual aspect of the aspirant. Insofar as Aleph is Tao, Lamed is Teh. Lamed corresponds to the sign Libra, and to the VIIIth Trump of the Tarot, popularly called Adjustment and, esoterically, "The Daughter of the Lords of Truth; The Ruler of the Balance."

THE ADEPT AS MYSTIC

In at least three separate ways, the Next Step for the Adeptus Minor may be seen as a distinctly mystical path, consistent with this aim of intensifying her conscious assimilation unto the relationship with the Holy Guardian Angel.

First, the Path most visible to the Adeptus Minor, that by which the union with the Divine was forged, is that of Gimel. The High Priestess of the Tarot. This is a Path of pure mysticism.

Also, the next Path that the Adept is scheduled to traverse in her normal progress through the Tree of Life is that of Mem, attributed to Water, and to The Hanged Man of the Tarot. As will be explained more fully later, this, too, is a mystic way; and the attribution of Mem to Water should make that idea clear enough in general terms.

⁸ C.S. Jones, 8^C=3^C A.:A.:.

Finally, the entire focus of the aspiration now has altered. Until this point, the whole of the soul has been aiming itself toward the attainment in Tiphereth. The symbols along the way have been, chiefly, those of the Sun, or symbols cognate. The very name of the Order has depicted a Golden Dawn. However, now that has changed. Although the main work continues to be that of increasing the intimacy of one's relationship with the Holy Guardian Angel, this is now viewed under the symbol of Lovers, under the title of the Rosy Cross. As an Adept of the Inner College, the spiritual object of aspiration now becomes the sephirah Binah, the opening point of the Third Order, that of the Silver Star. To Binah, then, is the Adept now ultimately directed.⁹ Hers is the task of becoming the Holy Grail, a dedicated, conscious receptacle of Briatic consciousness, open to receive that which flows forth from the Supernal Triad in Atziluth.

Whether symbolized by Binah, Gimel, or Mem, the task is the same. It is a mystical assimilation unto an increasingly profound union with THAT which is the goal.

The Master Therion, by all appearances, understood the distinctly mystical quality of this grade, although he wrote little of it. At one point in his magical record, he posted a warning for those who would come after him. This occurred during a magical retirement on Æsopus Island, during which he recovered memories of several past lives. In a brief passage, discussing a spiritual error he had made when previously incarnated as Dr. John Dee's assistant, Edward Kelley, he remarked:

... Kelley, grasping at $6^{\circ}=5^{\square}$, failed to get much of the result of the $5^{\circ}=6^{\square}$ attainment of the previous incarnation,¹⁰ so [a subsequent incarnation] lived a nameless mystic life, going through all the trances and reaching vie unitive at about 22 years old.

¹⁰ The $6^{\circ}=5^{\square}$ Grade confers a general mastery of practical Magick Power.

SPECIFIC TASKS OF THE ADEPTUS MINOR GRADE

Additional landmarks are identified with respect to the Adeptus Minor Grade. We give these below, without comment. The first is a discussion of the attainment of Tiphereth from The Master Therion's Commentaries on The Book of the Law. The remaining two, from One Star in Sight, depict specific duties of the Adeptus Minor Within.

as an interpretation of the sacred word
ARARITA
(אַרְאִיְתָּא)

The next sphere reached by the aspirant is named Beauty, numbered 6, and referred to the heart, to the Sun, and to Gold. Here he is called an "Adept". The secret Truth in this place is that God is Man, symbolized by the Hexagram (in which two triangles are interlaced).

In [Yesod] he learnt that his Body was the Temple of the Rosy Cross [emphasis added], that is, that it was given him as a place wherein to perform the Magical Work of uniting the oppositions in his Nature. Here he is taught that his Heart is the Centre of Light [emphasis added]. It is not dark, mysterious, hollow, obscure even to himself, but his Soul is to dwell there, radiating Light on the six spheres which surround it: these represent the various powers of his mind. The Book [of the Law] now appears to him as Gold; it is the perfect metal, the symbol of the Sun itself. He sees God everywhere therein.

To this sphere hath the aspirant come by the Path called Temperance, shot as an arrow from a Rainbow. He hath beheld the Light, but only in division. Nor had he won to this sphere except by Temperance, under which name we mask the art of pouring freely forth the whole of our Life, to the last spilt of our blood, yet losing never the least drop thereof.

Adeptus (within). – Is admitted to the practice of the formula of the Rosy Cross on entering the College of the Holy Ghost.¹¹

His work is to manifest the Beauty of the Order to the world, in the way that his superiors enjoin, and his genius dictates.

¹¹ See Chapter 4 for a discussion of this. The "College (or Collegium, "fellowship, society") of the Holy Ghost" is a traditional name of the hidden Rosicrucian Sanctuary to which one gains access on being admitted into the true Order of the Rosy Cross.

There is a further task, technically present from the beginning, but which has had little relevance until this present stage. The following is from One Star in Sight:

No attainment soever is officially recognized by the A.:A.: unless the immediate inferior of the person in question has been fitted by him to take his place.

This rule is not rigidly applied in all cases, as it would lead to congestion, especially in the lower grades where the need is greatest, and the conditions most confused; but it is never relaxed in the Order of the R.C. or of the S.S.: save only in One Case.

Beginning with the 1⁰=10⁰ Grade of Neophyte, all members of A.:A.: accept a duty of service to those who come behind them. Implicit in one's membership in A.:A.: is, therefore, some aspect of a Will to Teach. Each member is a link in an eternal chain, reaching both backwards and forwards, immeasurably, through time. This continuity need not limit itself to one particular form or manifestation of the Order, but to that ONE ORDER, true and invisible, which is behind all outward manifestations, and of which they are but vehicles. However, only upon admission to the Order R.C. is the rule firmly administered preventing one from passing on until another has been prepared to take one's place. An Adeptus Minor may not – can not – pass to the Grade of Adeptus Major without first assisting another to raise themselves to the Grade of Adeptus Minor.

This is more than an administrative detail pertaining to "recognition" of the next grade. When interpreting the so-called "rules" of the A.:A.: it is most useful to examine how they represent "facts of life," or automatic laws of Nature. It generally will be found that, until one has replaced oneself in a position, one cannot be entirely free of it. Furthermore, there is a fulfillment or culmination of a stage which is obtained by witnessing, and especially by facilitating, a similar process in another. (This relates to the alchemical, more than the psychological, process of projection.)

THE PATH OF MEM

□ The Sleep of Siloam. Liber CDLI. (Liber Viarum Viæ)

We have observed in previous chapters that the Paths leading to a subsequent grade form a significant part of the aspirant's experience of the grade that she is in. For example, a significant part of the work for the Practicus is the mastery of the Paths of Qoph, Tzaddi, and Peh that lead to Netzach and the Philosophus Grade.

The same continues to be true in the R.C. Order. Assimilating the experiences of the Paths of Mem and Lamed constitute a basic feature of the Adeptus Minor Grade.

This has been found true of the Adeptus Minor Without as well as the Adeptus Minor Within. The common elements of Mem and Lamed are the particular assistance that they lend the Adept in deepening her relationship with the HGA.

Assigned to Mem is the specific method called the "Sleep of Shiloam." Crowley refers to this several places in his writings, both public and private. Shiloam, or Siloam, is commonly treated as a variant pronunciation of שלום, shalom or salem, corresponding to "the marriage, or equilibration [ל], of Fire [ש] and Water [מ]." By this interpretation, then, the Sleep of Siloam is the "Sleep of Peace." Yet the actual origin of this word is the Greek Σιλωαμ, the name of a pool in Jerusalem referenced in John 9, which reads, in part:

And as he [Jesus] passed by, he saw a man that was blind from his birth. And his disciples asked him, saying, "Rabbi, who did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?" Jesus answered, "Neither has this man sinned, nor his parents: but it is so that the works of God may be made manifest in him. I must work the works of the One that sent me, while it is day: for the night comes, when no one can labor. As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world."

After thus speaking, he spat on the ground, and made clay from the spittle, and he smeared the clay upon the blind man's eyes and said to him, "Go, wash in the pool of Siloam. . . ." He departed, therefore, and washed, and came seeing.

What is extraordinary in this passage, saturated with mystically poignant phrases, is that Siloam (Σιλωαμ) enumerates to 1,081 – exactly the same as the Hebrew תִּפְּרֶת, Tiphereth! One who could not see was anointed by the Holy Guardian Angel, “the Light of the World,” and then told to submerge himself in the Sphere of Beauty, the Sphere of the Sun; and, doing so, he gained sight.

It is such a mystical pool that the Adept is to submerge herself, repeatedly and profoundly.

Crowley’s best discussion of the practice is given in Liber Aleph, Cap. 18, De Somno Lucido (“On Lucid Sleep”):

... to him whose physical Needs (of whatsoever kind) are not truly satisfied cometh a physical or lunar Sleep appointed to refresh and recreate by Cleansing and Repose; but on him that is bodily pure the Lord bestoweth a solar or lucid Sleep, wherein move Images of pure Light fashioned by the True Will. And this is called by the Qabalists the Sleep of Shiloam, and of this doth also Porphyry make mention, and Cicero, and many other Wise Men of Old Time.

Compare, o my Son, with this Doctrine that which was taught thee in the Sanctuary of the Gnosis concerning the Death of the Righteous; and learn moreover that these are but particular Cases of an Universal Formula.

We also find mention of this state in the Class A document, Liber 65 (Cap. IV, vv. 9-10):

In the garden of immortal kisses, O thou brilliant One, shine forth! Make Thy mouth an opium-poppy, that one kiss is the key to the infinite sleep and lucid, the sleep of Shi-loh-am.

In my sleep I beheld the Universe like a clear crystal without one speck.

In his commentary on these verses, The Master Therion wrote:

A garden usually symbolizes a place of cultivated beauty; Oriental poets use it to express a collection of poems or wise sayings. The immortal kisses are the tokens of the operation of “love under will” which is perpetual. The Angel calls upon the Adept to display his brilliance as if the Knowledge and Conversation were a transcendental sacrament beyond that implied in all acts. The opium poppy is a symbol of peace, exaltation, and delight, the giver of sleep, by which is meant the silencing of all possible distractions. The mouth of the Adept, the organ by which he is nourished, expresses his thoughts, and symbolizes his passion; by the kiss of this mouth is meant its surrender to the Angel, the act of marriage, and this is the key to the infinite sleep and lucid. Sleep has been explained above [in reference to a prior verse]. It is infinite, being freed from the limitations of condition, and lucid as being characterized by pure vision. Shi-loh-am: the word means peace. $\Psi = \Delta$, $\lambda = \underline{\Delta}$, $\mu = \nabla$, σ .

The Angel explains that (in the reposeful ecstasy of love, I might even say in the orgasm of love, the reference is to the particular Samadhi of the attainment of the K. and C. of the HGA) in his “sleep” he obtained the vision of the Universe as a continuous and immaculate phenomenon. This is contrasted implicitly with the effect of the same act on the Adept, to whom it simply means Union with Godhead. The Angel has found perfection in his own Adept: this completes Perfection.

These texts, and personal experience, should be adequate to instruct the Adept. The key is that this “lucid sleep” arises from surrender to the union (“marriage”) with the Holy Guardian Angel: Libra uniting Fire and Water, the Angel and the Adept, to produce the symbol of the Hexagram. Shalom also means “wholeness” or “completion.”

Reference is made, in various places, to a Liber Siloam, which was given the important number 451. This document, if extant, has not been identified unambiguously. There are three theories on this.

One theory is that Liber 451 is the brief chapter in De Arte Magica on “Eroto-comatose Lucidity,” a technique of producing repeated sexual satisfaction to the point of utter exhaustion. The sleep ensuing, all other things being in order, satisfies the preliminary physical requirements mentioned in Liber Aleph above.

A second theory is that Liber Siloam is a ritual found in one of Crowley’s private ritual books from about 1909. The ceremony is a rather classic style of Temple preparation and preliminary invocation, rising in intensity, until the Holy Guardian Angel appears. One may then either extrovert awareness toward a work of evocation, or introvert awareness by inducing the Sleep of Siloam. Although the ritual has some interesting features, it is a very yang ceremony, which by style and action is more inductive of the conditions of Fire and Air than of Water. Although we suspect that this document is the original one intended to bear the name, Liber Siloam, it is not likely that many would find

Holiest Lord of my Life
 Most desirable! Most beautiful!
 Thou whose kisses are penetrating as the fire, subtle as the air, holy as the lustrous dew!
 Angel great and magnificent!
 Soul of Splendour!
 Aspiration of my Spirit!
 My true Self!
 I adore thee and I invoke thee!
 Manifest thyself visibly even unto mortal eyes!
 Be thou with me and of me! Forever beyond the ages!
 White Flame!
 Mighty River of the Waters of Eternity!
 Wind of the World!
 Mountain of my Universe!
 Great Beauty and Harmony of Desire!
 Order in multiform motion!
 Silence from myriad musics!
 I adore thee and I invoke thee!
 All holiest Gods that are of me!
 All bright archangels!
 All angels strong and beautiful!
 All influences of the pure Spirit of the Elohim!
 All fountains of the Supernal Influx!
 Infinity in Unity! Unity in Infinity!
 I adore and I invoke!
 Khabs am Pekht!
 Konx om Pax!
 Light in Extension!

An invocation of the Holy Guardian Angel, from Liber Siloam. This is, perhaps, the most beautiful passage in a somewhat pedantic ritual.

would find it effective in inducing the state of consciousness that we are discussing.

A third theory is that, although Crowley had the essential theory intact, he never wrote the document nor devised a specific technique for use by A.:A.: Adepts in this regard.

Implementation, therefore, must be left to the individual Adeptus Minor. What is important is the attaining of this particular trance state and partaking of the sublimity of the "marriage" with the Holy Guardian Angel.

Overall, the symbolism of the Path of Mem pertains to the element Water, and to the XIIth Atu, The Hanged Man. This Trump is one of the most important symbols of adepthood. It symbolizes the condition of surrendering to the Inner Light, of conforming oneself to the Voice of the Holy Guardian Angel. It also shows the complete "reversal" of perspective (one might better say, being turned inside out!) that accompanies the transition to adepthood. The Tarot figure of The Hanged Man is in the form of a Cross over a Triangle, a symbol from the Neophyte Grade of the old Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, a symbol on which both Frater V.N. and Frater P. took their first magical obligations. All of these points must be considered to understand The Master Therion's discussion, in the paragraph below from One Star in Sight, of the work of the Adeptus Minor with respect to Mem:

... he must keep silence, while he nails his body to the tree of his creative will, in the shape of that Will, leaving his head and arms to form the symbol of Light, as if to make oath that his every thought, word and deed should express the Light derived from the God with which he has identified his life, his love and his liberty – symbolized by his heart, his phallus and his legs.

Having discovered her True Will in the Voice of her Angel, the Adept now must fully conform herself, consciously, to that Will. There always will be resistances in the personality, especially at the beginning; but she must overcome this, must "bind" herself, as by an obligation, conforming her conscious choices to the Word of her Angel. This is an ongoing process, a Taoist way of living, which must grow in the Adept until, automatically and by intense conditioning, her personality – expressed in every thought, word, and deed – is a clear channel for that Holy Guardian who is her Light, her Life, her Love, and her Liberty. Each must find her own ways to produce this result; but the essential approach is to lose (what one has called) oneself in the beatific Silence that is union with the Angel.¹²

There are those who object that this is an acquiescence of one's will, which one has sworn to do. However, the "will" exercised by the personality is an illusion. Can it possibly be an "abdication of will" to be entirely true to oneself? Of course not! And how much less, then, to be true to one's Self?

¹² In his discussion of this Path in The Book of Thoth, The Master Therion, commenting on "the hope that lies in love," explained, "That depends on the formulation of the Rose and Cross, of the annihilation of the self in the Beloved, the condition of progress."

This is the principle of the Sleep of Siloam applied to life, and the actual living thereof.

THE PATH OF LAMED

↳ The Passing of the Hall of the Balances.
Liber XXX. (Liber Viarum Viæ)

In One Star in Sight, The Master Therion wrote:

To attain the Grade Adeptus Major, he must accomplish . . . the equilibration of himself, especially as to his passions, so that he has no preference for any one course of conduct over another, and the fulfillment of every action by its complement, so that whatever he does leaves him without temptation to wander from the way of his True Will.

Having found her True Will and known her Angel, and committed herself to the performance of the former in the service of the latter, the Adeptus Minor must develop those character strengths and habits of action that will enable her to fulfill the commitment.

Lamed is Libra, and symbolizes the Lords of Karma. Liber Viarum Viæ assigns to Lamed, "The Passage of the Hall of the Balances," an evocative image out of the Egyptian Book of the Dead. To assist in this passage, Liber Libræ is prescribed, an important work on magical ethics originally issued to the Probationer. Lamed is concerned with the purification of the personality. It is not unusual for important karmic issues to seek equilibration, to require resolution, during the sojourn of this Path. The above instructions from One Star in Sight are to be taken literally; that is, the Adept's passions, above all, must be mastered here, and in the fashion depicted.

The inner disciplines of Mem and Lamed not only make the passage unto Geburah possible, they also make it safe. It is worth contemplating, with no little trepidation, the advancement of an Adept to the Sphere of Mars without the character purifications represented by the Paths of Mem and Lamed. Fortunately, in nature, safeguards prevent anyone so ill prepared from exercising the full power of the Major Adept. One is tempted to say that, without these real preparations of the soul, advancement to Geburah is not possible. Yet history records numerous examples, which come all too easily to mind, of what appear to be fallen Major Adepts, individuals who experienced a genuine, transforming epiphany, then later degenerated into tragic abominations of violence, tyranny, cruelty, and murderous destruction. One can long debate whether these apparent adepts actually ascended unto Geburah, or fell back upon the Path of Peh (below Tiphereth), where the forces of Mars still battle at the personality level, not adequately mastered or equilibrated. Any imbalance in an Adept's personality will only be exacerbated and intensified by the growing pressure of the spiritual forces flooding into his psyche from higher levels.

For this reason, the acquisition of this balance – symbolized either by Lamed, or by Tiphereth itself – is absolutely necessary for the Adept to go on safely. The Adeptus Minor must become master of all the Paths below Tiphereth in their psychological, as well as spiritual, sense. And while any disequilibrium is risky (even an overbalance in the ways of Love and Wisdom), there is no more dangerous excess for an Adept than an unbalanced personality drive for power. When her soul is finally opened unto the mighty spiritual forces of the sephirah Geburah, it must be prepared, by the depth of its inner peace, to assimilate the awakened energies of Justice and Strength. Absolute power corrupts absolutely because it loses sight of Higher Power. Let, then, the Adeptus Minor never lose this sight but, by the art of her grade, come ever more fully to rest within the embrace of her Holy Guardian Angel.

THE ADEPTUS MINOR SYLLABUS

By now, the various items on the Adeptus Minor syllabus should be fairly obvious. Liber 8 and Liber Samekh were the primary instructions assigned to the junior Adeptus Minor for performing the essential work. Liber Samekh, in particular, may then continue to serve the accomplished

Adeptus Minor in the deepening and extending of the relationship with the HGA, the ongoing “assimilation” of oneself to the Angel “by continual conscious communion.”

Liber Libræ and Liber Siloam have been discussed with respect to the Paths of Lamed and Mem, respectively.

Finally, mention needs to be made of Liber Collegii Internii, which appears on every grade syllabus of the Inner College. This “Book of the Inner Society,” was intended to be, for the Order R.C., what Liber Collegii Sancti (Liber 185) is for the Outer College, a description of the tasks of the respective grades. This document was never written during Crowley’s lifetime. However, we do have copies of Crowley’s earliest notes from which he probably intended to write this document. These early ideas obviously changed over the years, as he actually explored the grades more carefully. For most practical purposes, Liber Collegii Internii is One Star in Sight – Appendix C of the present book – which exactly fulfills the purpose intended for the original.

Chapter 10: ($6^{\circ}=5^{\square}$)

THE ADEPTUS MAJOR GRADE

UNTO the Adeptus Major is granted the fulfillment, the flowering, of that which was first attained by the Adeptus Minor. As it is written in the Zohar, in Geburah there is gold.¹ The very name Geburah (גבורה) enumerates to 216, or $6 \times 6 \times 6$, the “solid” (materialization) of sunlight – a number otherwise worth extensive exploration for its holiness. And, in the science of heraldry, it is the red color of Mars that is employed to represent the metallic color gold.

What we intend to communicate by these various tokens is that, although the Adeptus Major Grade is attributed to Geburah, one must not fail to regard it, foremost, as a grade of adepthood. As Tiphereth is the opening unto the middle triad of the Tree of Life, and unto the Inner College of the Great Order, so does Tiphereth characterize the whole of that triad. These three grades – $5^{\circ}=6^{\square}$, $6^{\circ}=5^{\square}$, and $7^{\circ}=4^{\square}$ – represent adepthood entered upon, ripened, and perfected. Each is characterized by the Living Light of the Sun, and by the rapture of the Rosy Cross.

Within the present Æon of the Child, this mystery may be seen more clearly than in earlier times. In the present Æon, the archetypal image of that Solar Child, and of that communion in Tiphereth of which we speak under the veil of the Holy Guardian Angel, is the god Horus, the great Egyptian divinity who is most naturally attributed to the planet Mars, to the sephirah Geburah, and to the Grade of Adeptus Major. “Wisdom says: be strong”, The Book of the Law instructs us in Cap. II, v. 70. “Then canst thou bear more joy.”

Even as the Adeptus Minor Within is like unto the Zelator of this Order of the Rosy Cross, so is the Major Adept its Practicus; and, as we shall see later, the Adeptus Exemptus is truly the Philosopher among the adepti.

Understand that the Mars of Geburah is not the Mars of the Path of Peh, which the Practicus traversed in the Outer College, the Order of the Golden Dawn. This point was discussed briefly near the end of the previous chapter.

To this new grade is attributed tremendous magick Power; and the Adept, being human, will not act the Adept every hour of every day. There will continue to be times when her behavior does not reflect the Beauty of her attainment. She still has a personality, and is still in the process of balancing it; and, in Geburah, there is much ongoing balancing to do if she is to remain master of the mighty forces she directs. Most negative Mars personality patterns come from weakness, and the reactive overcompensation resulting therefrom. Also, absolute power corrupts absolutely, for the specific reason that it loses sight of Higher Power – of an Author superior to one’s own ego. It is the Holy Guardian Angel that performs the “works of wonder” of the Adept, not the aggregate of tenuous personality threads that pass for the person. The Ordeal of this Grade is to be strong enough to bear the increasing Light, glory, force, and ecstasy of the Holy Guardian Angel. In this way, the ascent unto $6^{\circ}=5^{\square}$ truly is a progress in the Way of that Union.

LOVE UNDER WILL

The phrase Adeptus Major (lit., "Greater Adept") enumerates, by the Latin Qabalah Simplex, to 128. This is the value of $\aleph\eta\eta$, the Hebrew Divine Name usually pronounced "Adonai Eloheanu," and referring to "the Eternal ONE" ($\aleph\eta\eta$). Among Greek words of this value we find $\kappa\eta\rho$, "heart," which should need no further explanation. But perhaps most interesting are the corresponding Latin phrases, which include both pater et mater, "father and mother," and filius et filia, "son and daughter." These phrases (which play an important role in the Rosy Cross ritual called The Star Sapphire) allude to the two halves of the Tetragrammaton, Yod-Heh and Vav-Heh. Both Latin phrases indicate a union of opposites, an alchemical fusion. They assume even greater importance when we reflect that the traditional "password" of the Adeptus Major Grade² is Yah, spelled $\eta\eta$, Yod Heh. It is the union of the Supernal Father and Mother, and the Divine Name attributed to Chokmah, associated thereby with both primal creation and True Will.

Of deeper significance, Yod-Heh symbolizes the conjugal union of the World of Atziluth (attributed to the letter Yod) with the World of Briah (attributed to Heh). It thereby forms an important token of the real nature of the Work which the Adeptus Major will undertake, the strengthening and molding of her awakened Briatic consciousness to be an ever-perfecting vehicle whereby the purely Divine Consciousness can obtain satisfaction and expression. By "purely Divine Consciousness" we mean the Silent Self, or Secret Seed, symbolized by Yod and Atziluth; the Holy Guardian Angel, whose Voice is the Adept's True Will. This union is of the nature both of Thelema and of Agape – of Will (Fire, Yod) and of Love (Water, Heh). The symbol of their coition is the Rosy Cross.

If we write, in this chapter, more in symbolic than in concrete terms, it is partly a consequence of the level now under discussion. The level of the Major Adept's work, being predominantly Briatic, is inherently symbolic, virtually archetypal (but no less real than, say, the disciplines of yoga that were drilled and mastered in earlier grades). Consequences on the Yetziratic and Assiatic planes are secondary. Additionally, there is less concrete guidance (in the official A.:A.: literature) for this grade than for any other. Crowley's own $6^{\circ}=5^{\square}$ process is virtually undocumented.³ Nor have we more than passing information concerning M.:H.: Frater Semper Paratus (James Thomas Windram) and M.:H.: Frater Ahah (Frank Bennett), two of Crowley's students who attained to the $6^{\circ}=5^{\square}$ Grade; and prudence has been necessary with the records of living Major Adepts of the present generation. Therefore, as far as the Adep-

³ We do, however, have information from Crowley's diaries about his recollections of the half dozen or so prior incarnations during which he struggled with the Adeptus Major Grade. The record develops some interesting points. These can be summarized here only in the briefest way. (For the full available record, see The Magical Link, VI:4.)

By the early 16th century, the being who later would incarnate as Aleister Crowley had attained to the $5^{\circ}=6^{\square}$ Grade of Adeptus Minor. The record then documents an incarnation as Edward Kelley (1555-1595), John Dee's psychic assistant in bringing forth the Enochian system of magick. Kelley was strongly drawn to magick powers, and so sought to push ahead (prematurely) to $6^{\circ}=5^{\square}$. Furthermore, Kelley apparently did not embrace the new teachings the Enochian angels had conveyed to him, which were, in part, an early disclosure of the Law of Thelema. As a result of this, he stepped back a grade in his next incarnation where, as a frail and malformed young man (subjected to ill health and abuse), he nonetheless lived a profoundly mystical life, obtaining a very high and pure mystical attainment by age 22. There then followed two incarnations of failing in his attempt to assimilate the Geburah level of attainment. First, he was a Russian called Father Ivan, profoundly steeped in magick, but laden with extreme vices, abusive of his magick powers, subject to rages, and author of horrible cruelties – all being extreme imbalances of the Geburan energies. Following this, he was a Heinrich van Dorn, an incarnation only partially remembered for reasons reportedly involving "some serious magical error connected with the grade of Adeptus Major," an abuse of black magical forces "in an entirely futile way. It is a tale of grimoires and vain evil rites, of pacts at which Satan was mocked, and crimes unworthy even of witches," Crowley wrote. He hanged himself at about age 27. Following this suicide, he "passed through a dreadfully dark purgation," also described as "a profound horror and gloom." Upon completing this cleansing, he was born as Cagliostro (1748-1795). His karma having been equilibrated by his purgatory, Cagliostro reached a "very full" attainment of the $6^{\circ}=5^{\square}$ Grade. His blind spot in that incarnation, in his celebration of his mighty attainment, appears to have been a failure to see that something entirely Other lay beyond the Second Order – "not knowing or caring about the Abyss above me." After Cagliostro, he incarnated as Eliphas Levi (1810-1875) who comfortably reattained the Adeptus Major Grade (summarizing his knowledge in The Dogma & Ritual of High Magic), then attaining the $7^{\circ}=4^{\square}$ Grade of Exempt Adept before his death.

tus Major Grade is concerned, we will limit ourselves to the fruits of honest scholarship coordinated with the use of general or universal symbols that each can interpret progressively for himself or herself.

SYMBOLS OF THE ADEPTUS MAJOR GRADE

As was indicated previously, the Grade of Adeptus Major is attributed to the fifth sephirah of the Tree of Life, most commonly called Geburah, meaning "Strength" or "Severity." The sephirah is also called Din, "Justice," and Pachad, "Fear." All of these titles designate various manifestations of the same red, martial force in Nature and in human consciousness. Geburah corresponds to the Sphere of Mars, and the element of Fire. Its chief lineal ensign is the Pentagram.

The Adeptus Major is addressed formally as "Magne Honoratus Frater" or "Magne Honorata Soror." The most literal translation of this is "Greatly Honored," a title usually reserved for the Adeptus Exemptus Grade.

Therefore, and to preserve the "M.H." initials, the Adeptus Major's honorific title is commonly rendered, in English, as "Most Honored."

This grade also incorporates symbolism of the 21st Path of Kaph (כ), the 20th Path of Yod (י), and the 19th Path of Teth (ט), which open (from Netzach, Tiphereth, and Geburah, respectively) unto the sephirah Chesed, preparing the way for the Adeptus Major's eventual advancement to the Grade of 7^o=4^o, Adeptus Exemptus. The symbolic importance of these three Paths will be discussed in their respective sections below, after we have examined those aspects of this grade which corresponds most directly to the sephirah Geburah; namely, the acquisition of magical power, and the practice of Karma Yoga.

MAGICK POWER

Adeptus Major. – Obtains a general mastery of practical Magick, though without comprehension. . . . The Grade of Adeptus Major confers Magical Powers (strictly so-called) of the second rank. His work is to use these to support the authority of the Exempt Adept his superior. (One Star in Sight)

Inasmuch as the chief characteristic of the Adeptus Major Grade is the acquisition of magical power, we must ask both the nature of this power, and the source of its acquisition.

Even as a Neophyte, the aspirant will have practiced ceremonial magick, perhaps of a very high quality. As a Practicus and, especially, Philosophus, she will have been examined in practical results of invocation, evocation, and the creation and consecration of talismans. What is the difference between this and the "mastery of practical Magick" which inheres to the Major Adept?

The answer to this rhetorical question, by now, should be obvious. The difference is that the Adeptus Major is an Adept. All of her magick is now rightly performed as the menstruum for the Word of the Holy Guardian Angel. The difference between this and the magick of the most technically skilled Neophyte is immeasurable.

Crowley's definition of "magick power," and a relevant discussion thereof, is given in Magick in Theory & Practice, Chapter VII. Discussing 'The Formula of the Holy Graal,' he wrote:

The Cup is said to be full of the Blood of the Saints: that is, every 'saint' or magician must give the last drop of his life's blood to that cup. It is the original price paid for magick power. And if by magick power we mean the true power, the assimilation of all force with the Ultimate Light, the true Bridal of the Rosy Cross, then is that blood the offering of Virginity, the sole sacrifice well-pleasing to the Master, the sacrifice whose only reward is the pain of child-bearing unto him.

"Magick power," or "the true power," is, he said, "the assimilation of all force with the Ultimate Light, the true Bridal of the Rosy Cross."

What, then, is the source of the Major Adept's power? It is the work that was undertaken in the Paths of Mem and Lamed. In brief, Mem and Lamed represent the conscious conforming of oneself to the Will of the Holy Guardian Angel. Among the results of this are that the conscious choices of the Adept's human will, the decisions of the Adept's human reasoning, are in accord with the omnipotent, omniscient, and omnipresent force which is the Holy Guardian Angel.

THE PENTAGRAM

Or, to put this in psychological terms, by the work of the previous grade, the Adept is now essentially free of internal conflict. The Will is unimpeded by conscious or unconscious interference.

We also know that the new level of magical capacity is inherent in the attainment of the grade, rather than something learned. In Cap. XXI, Sec. III of Magick in Theory & Practice, The Master Therion, discussing diverse magical operations, stated that, "The Adeptus Major will easily understand how to perform them if necessary." In a footnote to this sentence, he added, "Moral: become an Adeptus Major."

Sammavayamo: Right Energy

Another perspective on this inner evolution is provided by Aleister Crowley's 1903 essay, Science & Buddhism. In Sec. X, he discussed the Noble Eightfold Path, which is (to use a Western description) the plan of eight classical Buddhist initiatory steps. Although a perfect concurrence cannot be forced between the corresponding stages of different systems, there is, nonetheless, a close equivalency between these eight steps and the A.:A.: grades $1^{\circ}=10^{\square}$ through $8^{\circ}=3^{\square}$, when each system is examined in its own terms. Apparent differences between the two systems are most pronounced in the lower levels, whereas similarities are most visible in the advanced grades.

One of the closest correspondences in these eight phases is between the A.:A.: $6^{\circ}=5^{\square}$ Grade, and the Sixth Step of the Noble Eightfold Path, called Sammavayamo. The latter is described in Science & Buddhism as follows:

To him who has lived [in a devoted and holy fashion approximately equivalent to the Adeptus Minor Grade] . . . there comes a power which is unknown to ordinary men. Long training and restraint have given him conquest of his mind, he can now bring all his powers with tremendous force to bear upon any one object he may have in view, and this ability to so use the energies of his being to put forth a constant and tremendous effort of the will, marks the attainment of the Sixth Stage, Sammavayamo, usually translated Right Effort, but perhaps Right Will-power would come nearer to the meaning, or Right Energy, for effort has been made even to attain to Sammaditthi.⁴ And this power being gained, by its use he is enabled to concentrate all his thoughts and hold them always upon one object – waking or sleeping, he remembers who he is and what his high aim in life. . . .

The final sentence above actually blends into the more advanced stage of Sammāsati, the "constant recollection and keeping in mind of holy things," essentially equivalent to the memory-themed Adeptus Exemptus Grade; but we have included the transition here to preserve the lucidity of the passage.

What this all means is that the Adeptus Minor, knowing her True Will, and having the Knowledge and Conversation of her Holy Guardian Angel, has committed herself totally to do that Will, and it alone. Being one-pointed, and without lust of result, her Will is Law. Thus is the Major Adept's magick a continuous process of intensifying her relationship with the Holy Guardian Angel, of becoming ever more intimately the medium for the transmission of the Angel's Voice. Thus is the Work of the $6^{\circ}=5^{\square}$ not an end in itself but, rather, a stage in the advance toward the Adept's eventual surrender to the Abyss.

Karma Yoga

The Adeptus Major Grade ($6^{\circ}=5^{\square}$) may be seen as a necessary complement to and fulfillment of the Adeptus Minor Grade ($5^{\circ}=6^{\square}$), extroverting the mystical joining attained therein and bringing it into a more complete union, or integration, of the planes. The siddhis, or magick powers, are but a side issue; though necessary and catalytic to the companionship of the Adept and the Angel.

Although there is no specific reference to Karma Yoga in any official A.:A.: instruction for the $6^{\circ}=5^{\square}$ Grade, its practice integrates all of the Grade's various themes, including those of power, ritual magick, and the uncompromised expression of True Will. The practice of Karma Yoga is the Grade of Adeptus Major – the identity is that close.

⁴ A "holding of right views," the First Stage of the Eightfold Path. The meaning here is that "right effort" is required for any level of the Work, even from the beginning.

Karma means "action" or "deed." The popular understanding of Karma in the West, as a sort of cosmic reward-and-punishment scheme, has been distorted, in its filtering through Western thought, into little more than Judeo-Christian ideas of Heaven and Hell, with a little reincarnation tossed in. But "karma" refers to nothing other than our actions – which include thoughts and words, as well as deeds – and the inherent consequences thereof. This seemingly dual meaning (of actions and consequences) exists because, in the philosophical context from which the word arises, it is understood that there is no difference between our actions and their consequences. The relationship is not one of linear cause-and-effect, but of uninterrupted continuity, or even identity. This relationship is recognized in most Latin-based languages (but not in English!) in that there is no distinction between the verbs⁵ meaning "to do" and "to make" – what you do is what you make. Awareness of this identity becomes the continuing living reality of the Major Adept.

Much of this was likely already experienced by the aspirant as a Neophyte, or even Probationer. Karma, "action," is synonymous with the Hebrew assiah (עשה), the name of the World of Action. But the more precise Hebrew equivalent, as a technical term, is the related ma'aseh (מעשה), which means, "a deed or action," or "that which one makes or does." This word, ma'aseh, is attributed in Qabalah⁶ to the letter Lamed, the Path of Justice or karmic Adjustment; and it was in "crossing" the Path of Lamed that the Lesser Adept was trained to undertake the Great Work of the sephirah Din, "justice" – an alternate name for Geburah.

Karma Yoga is "Union by Action." That is, it refers to the increasingly profound union of the Adept with the Holy Guardian Angel that is wrought in the translation of the Angel's Word into Action. All of the classical components of the practice of Karma Yoga are subsumed within this simple concept which, in turn, synthesizes all of the main threads of the Adeptus Major Grade.

Though not listed in the official curriculum, Swami Vivekananda's book Karma Yoga is, therefore, recommended by us as a central instruction of the 6^o=5^o Grade of A.:A.:. We can advise no better "survival guide" to any 6^o=5^o than to study, practice, and take to heart what is written in this classic. Those who have not studied it may be surprised to discover how intimately this practice is connected to the expression of Power by which Crowley defined the 6^o=5^o Grade, and with the progressive growth therefrom, through the Paths of Kaph, Yod, and Teth, unto the 7^o=4^o Grade that naturally succeeds it. We can only give a small sampling of the more obvious quotations that may hint at this:

THE FLOOR OF THE VAULT OF THE ADEPTI

The journey of increasing intimacy with Adonai is a journey within, a travelling through unconsciousness, Amenti, Hell – the Hidden Place. Many symbols of Geburah are classic symbols of 'Hell.' The traditional floor of the Vault of the Adepti from the R.R. et A.C. displays a great red dragon of seven heads, symbolizing the fiery, serpentine energies locked in subconsciousness. The Adept must exercise dominion over these forces within herself, while employing them "under will" as the foundation of her ascent to the Highest.

Karma in its effect on character is the most tremendous power that man has to deal with. Man is, as it were, a centre and is attracting all the powers of the universe towards himself, and in this centre is fusing them all and again sending them off in a big current. Such a centre is the real man, the almighty and the omniscient. He draws the whole universe towards him: good and bad, misery and happiness, all are running towards him and clinging round him. And out of them he fashions the mighty stream of tendency called character and throws it outwards. As he has the power of drawing in anything, so has he the power of throwing it out.

⁵ For example, the Latin facere, or the French faire.

Every man should take up his own ideal and endeavour to accomplish it; that is a surer way of progressing than taking up other men's ideals, which he can never hope to accomplish. . . . Not all the men and women in any society are of the same mind, capacity, or power to do things; they must have different ideals, and we have no right to sneer at any ideal. Let everyone do the best he can to realize his own ideal. Nor is it right that I should be judged by your standard or you by mine. The apple tree should not be judged by the standard of the oak, nor the oak by that of the apple. . . . Unity in variety is the plan of creation

One idea comes out of all of this: the condemnation of all weakness. This is a particular idea in all our teachings which I like, whether in philosophy or in religion or in work. If you read the Vedas you will find one word always repeated: "fearlessness." Fear nothing. Fear is a sign of weakness. A man must go about his duties without taking notice of the sneers and the ridicule of the world.

Later on we shall find that . . . the greatest work is done only when there is no selfish motive to prompt it. Yet it is work through the sense of duty that leads us to work without any idea of duty. Then work becomes worship – nay, something higher; then work is done for its own sake. We shall find that the goal of duty, either from the standpoint of ethics or of love, is the same as in all the other yogas, namely, to attenuate the lower self so that the Higher Self may shine forth, and to lessen the frittering away of energies on the lower plane of existence so that the soul may manifest them on the higher planes.

. . . ritual is in fact concretized philosophy. This ritual is karma. . . . In the world's ritualistic symbols we have an expression of the religious thought of humanity. It is easy to say that there is no use for rituals and temples and all such paraphernalia; every baby says that in modern times. But it must be easy for all to see that those who worship inside a temple are in many respects different from those who will not worship there. Therefore the association of particular temples, rituals, and other concrete forms with particular religions has a tendency to bring into the minds of the followers of those religions the thoughts for which those concrete things stand as symbols The study and practice of these things naturally form a part of karma-yoga.

What is karma-yoga? The knowledge of the secret of work. . . . What does it say? Work incessantly, but give up all attachment to work. Do not identify yourself with anything. Hold your mind free. . . . As soon as we identify ourselves with the work we do, we feel miserable; but if we do not identify ourselves with it, we do not feel that misery.

A final point: The foundation of the philosophy of Karma Yoga, as perhaps of all Yoga, is ahimsa, or "harmlessness." This is neither obsessiveness over the inadvertent stepping on ants, nor a denial that in real life all people, at times, wound each other. Nor is it even a condemnation of battle or conflict when that battle is one's duty, or to restore freedom or justice, or to test and hone the strength of equals through competition, etc. No, ahimsa is simply a recognition of the inseparability of our actions from their consequences. The Major Adept lives in intimate awareness of these consequences and their impact on self and other – they compose the fabric of her life, the substance of the First Matter of her magick. Despite the identification, by The Book of the Law, of the Lord of the present Æon as a warrior god, ahimsa is the essence of Thelemic philosophy, for it expresses the fulfillment, by each being, of his or her True Will in a harmonious universe where each of us is a star in the body of infinite space – and wherein each extends to all others the same freedom that one claims for oneself.

In summary, then, the essence of the Adeptus Major Grade is the mature expression and enacting of the True Will in the world. Ultimately there is no other "magick power" for one to master. Ritual magick, per se, is the formally assigned method; but it is also a veil of the real process and purpose, the natural Next Step beyond the attaining of the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel. That Next Step is to incarnate and carry forth, into action, the Word of the Angel that has been heard – to "do the Work the Angel has assigned," so to speak. In this, one has all power to do that which one must do.

THE PATHS OF KAPH, YOD & TETH

In every grade hitherto discussed, at every step of each grade, we have known, and been able to convey, (a) the nature of an assignment, (b) where its instruction can be found, and (c) the conformation of the examination which confirms an initiate's assimilation or attainment of that stage. This information already has been developed in the formulation of the A.:A.: system, and clearly conveyed in the official instructions. It is, largely, the crisp, lucid, unambiguous descriptions of assignments and tests that imbue the A.:A.: system with its vast capacity to extend the Light of initiation. A guideline employed in writing the previous chapters was the careful communication of these three pieces of information for every Path of the Tree of Life examined.

However, with the Adeptus Major Grade this is not possible.

Despite basic descriptions, in One Star in Sight, of the tasks attributed to Kaph, Yod, and Teth, (a) the nature of the task is usually unclear, (b) there is no indication where the practical instruction is to be found, and (c) we are given no information on the nature of the examination.

It may seem that this change is the result of the lofty level which we now discuss, and that perhaps these higher grades were inadequately explored and developed by the initial principals of the A.:A.: However, this would be a wrong generalization. We shall see, in the next chapter, that the assignments, instructions, and test standards in the 7°=4° Grade are more or less as lucid as any that have gone before.

The Grade of Adeptus Major appears to be a blind spot in the A.:A.: system. Having indulged in lengthy private speculation on why this may have been a blind spot for Crowley in particular, we have concluded that such speculation, though entertaining, was nonproductive. Nor is it relevant to the subject now before us.

Therefore, for the three sections that follow, we have elected to follow a different standard than in other parts of this book. In each case, we have given a preliminary introduction to the Tarot and other symbolism corresponding to the Hebrew letter, and then have reproduced the relevant material from One Star in Sight, with whatever commentary has seemed apropos. Thereafter, we have added our own analysis of the inner process of the path under discussion, usually in more abstract terms.

We have not, however, sought to invent or propose tasks other than what has been assigned in the original source literature. It would be the easiest thing in the world to interpret any of these Paths at the Yetziratic level and give variations of well-established methods suitable to each; but that is not our present role. Nor is it the primary level at which the Adeptus Major's progress is effected. The course of initiation for an Adept of any grade is Briatic – either per se, or in the increasing linkage between Briah and Yetzirah, or in the increasingly intimate relationship between Briah and Atziluth.

Even in the presence of more formal requirements (such as are delineated in the next chapter for the Adeptus Exemptus), the Adept ultimately must traverse these Paths under the guidance of her own angelic Holy Guardian. As explained before, the alchemy essential to perfect this transition is unique and particular to the nature and karma of each person who essays the course of initiation. Certainly, therefore, our own supplemental comments in the sections that follow should be taken as no more than convenient road signs, as resources to be used or ignored as your own inner guidance dictates.

KAPH: The Three Gunas

▷ The Evocation of the Mighty Ones. Liber ... (Liber Viarum Viæ)

Kaph means "hand," particularly the palm or grasping aspect thereof; and, more generally, any curve or cycle, and thus the concept of circularity. It corresponds to the planet Jupiter. Kaph is also associated with the Xth Trump of the Tarot, popularly called The Wheel of Fortune, and esoterically called "The Lord of the Forces of Life."

Upon this Xth Trump, we find a spoked wheel whereon are three symbolic figures, representing the alchemical principles of Sulphur, Salt, and Mercury; or their Eastern cognates, the Gunas, named (respectively) Rajas, Tamas, and Sattva.⁸ The two triads are not entirely equivalent, but do bear a strong resemblance to each other, and similarities of meaning. In The Book of Thoth, The Master Therion discussed the Gunas as follows:

The word "Guna" is untranslatable.⁹ It is not quite an element, a quality, a form of energy, a phase, or a potential; all of these ideas enter into it. All the qualities that can be predicated of anything¹⁰ may be ascribed to one or more of these Gunas: Tamas is darkness, inertia, sloth, ignorance, death and the like; Rajas is energy, excitement, fire, brilliance, restlessness; Sattvas is calm, intelligence, lucidity and balance. They correspond to the three principal Hindu castes.

One of the most important aphorisms of Hindu philosophy is: "the Gunas revolve". This means that, according to the doctrine of continual change, nothing can remain in any phase where one of these Gunas is predominant; however dense and dull that thing may be [Tamas], a time will come when it begins to stir [Rajas]. The end and reward of the effort is a state of lucid quietude [Sattvas], which, however, tends ultimately to sink into the original inertia [Tamas].

Atu X, The Wheel of Fortune, is a depiction of the constant revolution of these three principles, the eternal turning of the Wheel of Life. The inherent mystical task or challenge is to shift to a higher plane of operation than this triad so that one is no longer caught in their tag-team rhythms; that is, to attain the center or axle upon which the Wheel turns. At the same time, the challenge is how to live within their whirling patterns.

In One Star in Sight, Frater O.M. described the primary task for the Path of Kaph in terms of these three principles:

[The Adeptus Major must attain] the comprehension and use of the Revolution of the wheel

⁹ Guna literally means "thread" or "strand." Functionally, it is rendered "quality, characteristic, attribute," etc.

of force, under its three successive forms of Radiation, Conduction and Convection (Mercury, Sulphur, Salt; or Sattva, Rajas, Tamas), with their corresponding natures on other planes.

Unfortunately, clearer statements never were provided as to what this "comprehension and use" constitute, the means by which they are attained, nor the means of their examination. In fact, the sentence just quoted, and one further fragmentary remark about "the conquest of the Gunas," is all that was given out.¹¹

According to traditional Hindu teachings, perseverance in the methods of Raja Yoga eventuates in this "conquest." The Adept's samadhi, deepened by repetition, provides the necessary "vitriol" or "universal solvent" (to borrow terms from alchemy). The Shiva Samhita, Cap. V, vv. 22-29,¹² discusses progressive meditative techniques intended to produce this very result, whereby the yogi "conquers all the three qualities [Gunas]." Chapter 3 of Patanjali's Yoga Sutras provides practices toward the same end.¹³

Additionally, we can indicate more generally that, from the point of view of magical practice, Kaph corresponds to some of the most important secrets the Adeptus Major could employ. This Hebrew letter signifies all cycles, rhythms, and turnings. It therefore refers both to the cycles of time and the rhythms of Nature within which the magician must operate; and to all forms of circulation of vital force, whether in blood and breath, or in the macrocosm, or in those meeting points between microcosm and macrocosm which are called the chakras, or "Wheels." Of course, even the Neophyte can learn and apply the principles of how solar, lunar, and other natural cycles affect magical phenomena; and the Zelator is well informed, by experience, concerning the consequences of the subtle physical and astral rhythms of the body. Here, within the Inner College, these things are seen from a different perspective.

¹² Students investigating this particular instruction in the Shiva Samhita, Cap. V may wish to compare its progressive stages to symbolism of the Tree of Life Paths leading to Chesed.

¹³ We are provided a further avenue of exploration in the 6⁰=5⁰ syllabus through the Class A document Liber B vel Magi, vv. 15-17.

Kaph is also closely related to the tantric mysteries. As the Path opening from Netzach to Chesed, it signifies the sanctification of desire in the recollection that the Holy Guardian Angel is the One Desire reflected in each individual desire. A mnemonic of this interpretation is that the Hebrew letters spelling 'Kaph' (כּ, Kaph Pheh, or KP) are cognate to the Greek ΚΦ, Kappa Phi, the initials of κτεῖς, kteis, and φαλλος, phallos. It was surely with this in mind that Crowley, in The Book of Thoth, said that Kaph "may also be interpreted as a Unity of supreme attainment and delight."

In general, to the Adeptus Major, the words "comprehension and use of the Revolution of the wheel of force" may acquire a remarkable significance within the practice of her magical art.

YOD: Self-Reliance

* The Absorption of the Emanations. Liber DCCCXI [sic]. (Liber Viarum Viæ)

Yod, like Kaph, means "hand," but more in its tactile and digital sense. The same word, in Hebrew, conveys other, associated ideas, including "power" and "assistance." It also means "axle." In the Path of Yod, the Adept will discover the Axle about which the Wheel of Fortune turns.

Yod is the initial of the Tetragrammaton, יהוה, the Divine Name from which the entire body of Qabalistic ideas ultimately is derived. It is the simplest Hebrew letter, the primitive brush stroke from which all 21 other letters are constructed. Yod corresponds to the sign Virgo, where Mercury both rules and is exalted. It is also associated with the IXth Trump of the Tarot, popularly called The Hermit, and esoterically called "The Prophet of the Eternal; The Magus of the Voice of Power."

GRASPING THE CURRENTS*

A female figure, most likely a lunar divinity (from a headdress associated with the goddess Cybele), is here shown balancing the powers of the Moon and Sun, and of Venus (7) and Mars (5); presumed to be of Gnostic or Ophian origin. From R.P. Knight, A Discourse on the Worship of Priapus.

According to One Star in Sight, to master the Path of Yod, the Adept must demonstrate the acquisition of absolute Self-Reliance, working in complete isolation, yet transmitting the word of his superior clearly, forcibly and subtly.

Now, this particular task at least can be understood by normal intelligence. Any person who has served effectively as an assistant or second-in-command will understand what it means to carry out the intent of one's superior without constant consultation. In purely human terms, we can see the relationship of an Adeptus Major to her superior, an Adeptus Exemptus.

This also depicts very clearly the relationship of the Order's Imperator (a 6^c=5^d office) to the Præmonstrator (a 7^c=4^d function). The Imperator is the governor of the Order. Even though the Præmonstrator, the Chief vested with ultimate responsibility for the teachings, is of higher rank, it is the Imperator who administers the actual operation of the Order, in accordance with principles established by the Præmonstrator.

One Star in Sight helps us to place this responsibility of the Adeptus Major to her superior in a larger perspective:

This is not to be understood as an obligation of personal subservience or even loyalty; but as a necessary part of his duty to assist his inferiors. For the authority of the Teaching and Governing Adept is the basis of all orderly work.

However, the meaning here intended is subtler than organizational administration. This simple instruction has meaning on more than one plane. For, while the Greater Adept still bears important responsibilities to her superior in the Order (as to those who come after her), the "superior" mentioned in the passage from One Star in Sight is, especially, the Adept's Holy Guardian Angel. "Self-Reliance" is reliance on the SELF. If the quoted passage is read again with this in mind, it will disclose a great deal to the discerning eye of the Adept. What it discloses is entirely consistent with the basic point we sought to make previously, in the sections on Magick Power and Karma Yoga. It means nothing different than to do one's True Will only, to persist in conforming oneself ever more finely to the Word of the Angel, and to employ every resource of one's humanity and divinity alike to that end wherein that Word and that Will are united: – the fulfillment, in action, of what was gained pristinely as an Adeptus Minor.

What is really sought here may become clearer if we reflect on the basic symbols of the letter Yod, and of Atu IX, The Hermit, to which it corresponds. Although the Path of Yod is positioned on the Tree of Life as the bridge between Tiphereth and Chesed, it is also symbolically assigned (as the first letter of the Tetragrammaton) to Kether and Chokmah. Kether (the number 1) represents a single Point, infinitesimal and unextended, without dimension. It represents that which is called the god Hadit in The Book of the Law, who, it will be recalled, identified Himself as "the axle [Yod] of the wheel." This Kether idea is also often represented as a single spark, or an Inmost Flame, or a Virginal Purity. As Chokmah, Yod corresponds to the number 2, representing a line, or shaft, of infinite length (two points, in plane geometry, define a line). This is the Magick Wand, the symbol of Infinite Will, the immortal Shiva Lingam, the eternal Path of Going. These ideas are depicted in all representations of The Hermit, whose chief emblems are a Lamp and a Staff or Wand. With respect to the Axle, Kether refers to the idea of the Center, and Chokmah to the idea of the Shaft.

It is no wonder that M.:H.: Frater Eliphas Levi stated, in Cap. IX of The Magical Ritual of the Sanctum Regnum:

The magician should not attempt any serious ceremonial until he has grasped the Wand, and illumined the Lamp. . .

As the Path opening from Tiphereth to Chesed, Yod represents the sanctification of the idea of the ego or self (Tiphereth) in the recollection that the Holy Guardian Angel is the One Self that is reflected in each other expression of self. (Again, see Atu IX, The Hermit.)

Before concluding, we should mention that Liber Viarum Viæ assigns to the Path of Yod, "The Absorption of the Emanations, Liber DCCCXI." Liber 811 would be Energized Enthusiasm. Most likely, though, this reference was a typographical error and should have read Liber DCCCXXI – that is, Liber Iod, which was first assigned to the Dominus Liminis, and which has an obvious relevance to the present path and its task.

TETH: Babalon & the Beast Conjoined

Teth means "serpent;" or, more explicitly, "that which is coiled like a serpent." It corresponds to the sign Leo, ruled by the Sun; and to the XIth Trump of the Tarot, popularly called Lust (in some decks, Strength) and, esoterically, "The Daughter of the Flaming Sword."

Here is the emblem of royal dominion, the solar lion-serpent of the Gnostics and the kundalini of the yogis. It is also a further symbol of Hadit, who described Himself in The Book of the Law as "the secret Serpent coiled about to spring".

Crowley's early views concerning the Path of Teth were sparse and undeveloped. However, by the time One Star in Sight was written, his ideas had evolved substantially. Unfortunately, they were conveyed with such exalted (nearly archetypal) symbolism that it is difficult to sort the material details from the subtle meaning. The instructions are readily viewed on more than one plane. A purely physical interpretation is certainly not justified for the highest path of the Second Order. The passage follows:

Thirdly, [the Adeptus Major] must exert his whole power and authority to govern the Members of lower Grades with balanced vigour and initiative in such a way as to allow no dispute or complaint: he must employ to this end the formula called 'The Beast conjoined with the Woman' which establishes a new incarnation of deity. . . He must set up this ideal for the orders which he rules, so that they may possess a not too abstract rallying-point suited to their undeveloped states.

Crowley's thinking in this matter was probably influenced by Chapter XI (i.e., the chapter attributed to the XIth Trump of the Tarot) in Eliphas Levi's Rituel (Part II of his Transcendental Magic). Titled "The Triple Chain," the chapter begins:

The Great Work in Practical magic, after the education of the will and the personal creation of the Magus, is the formation of the magnetic chain, and this secret is truly that of priesthood and of royalty. To form the magnetic chain is to originate a current of ideas which produces faith and draws a large number of wills in a given circle of active manifestation. A well-formed chain is like a whirlpool which sucks down and absorbs all. The chain may be established in three ways – by signs, by speech and by contact.

Experience in many magical organizations has taught us that the inner condition of a group's governor(s) will be reflected invariably in the current health of the group itself. This is true whether of a single lodge or temple, or a large magical order. Nor is this principle limited to magical groups. The balanced harmony which the Major Adept is to obtain among "the Members of lower Grades" can only arise if the Adept, as well, exerts her whole power and authority to govern the many "lower Grade" aspects of herself "with balanced vigour and initiative in such a way as to allow no dispute or complaint" among them.

It is impossible for us to convey the sublimity of the Path of Teth. Corresponding to the sign Leo, ruled by the Sun, it is a dynamic perfection of Tiphereth. Its chief symbolism is of the Sun, and of the solar lion-serpent Abraxas. It is that of which The Chaldean Oracles speak:¹⁴

A similar Fire flashing extending through the rushings of Air, or a Fire formless whence cometh the Image of a Voice, or even a flashing Light abounding, revolving, whirling forth, crying aloud. Also there is the vision of the fire-flashing Courser of Light, or also a Child, borne aloft on the shoulders of the Celestial Steed, fiery or clothed with gold, or naked, or shooting with the bow shafts of Light, and standing on the shoulders of the horse; then if thy meditation prolongeth itself, thou shalt unite all these Symbols into the Form of a Lion.

When thou shalt behold that holy and formless Fire shining flashingly through the depths of the Universe: HEAR THOU THE VOICE OF FIRE.

Teth, opening from Geburah unto Chesed, represents the sanctification of one's strength and volition (Geburah) in the recollection that the Holy Guardian Angel is the One Strength and the One Will reflected in each manifest expression of strength and volition.

By its intersection with the Path of Gimel, which is the Path of the Moon, Teth perfects the highest symbolism of the Rosy Cross. Qabalists call it "the Intelligence of the Secret of all Spiritual Activities," and the Key to the highest vision and application of magick. This Key is love, especially the white-hot intensity of the higher Bhakti Yoga, which is the central work in Chesed to which Teth finally admits – a uniting of subject and object reflected onto Teth from that complete dissolution and conjugal union in Da'ath. To speak symbolically, in Da'ath (which means "knowledge," including "sexual knowledge"), Babalon is wholly united with Her Belovéd on every plane.

This being the climactic Path of the Second Order, we perceive already the maturing relationship between the Briatic and Atziluthic Worlds. On a lower plane, a parallel may be seen in the practices of the 3rd=8th Grade which generally sought to prepare the Yetziratic consciousness for its awakening to the Briatic, to the reechoing Voice of the Holy Guardian Angel. Here, on the Path of Teth, the ultimate aspiration of the Adept unto the Third Order may take shape in ecstatic images related to Binah. The Central Truth that abides within the SILENCE of the World of Atziluth is, by now, much ripened in its informing of the World of Briah, and in its igniting or illuminating the truly archetypal images rooted therein.

Even as Kaph is the Wheel – the image of cyclic, rhythmical turning – and Yod is the shaft of illimitable length whereon that Wheel spins, so does

Teth emerge as their union – the union of the Circumference and the Center, of Nuit and Hadit, of Shakti and Shiva or

LION-HEADED SERPENT

A Gnostic gem representing the same principle as the letter Teth: a solar-lion-serpent, balancing the reciprocal powers of the Sun and Moon. (The 6-pointed star represents the Sun.)

Babalon and the Beast – in a spiral, or corkscrew, of infinite duration.¹⁵ This is the great coiled serpent, the "Secret Savior," and an image of that One Energy, or Great Magical Agent, on which every magician necessarily relies.

ADEPTUS MAJOR SYLLABUS

Several items listed on the Adeptus Major syllabus warrant brief discussion.

Thien Tao (from the book Konx Om Pax) is an essay on the art of government, and the technique of releasing genius more or less at will. It pertains to the administrative or governing responsibilities of the Adeptus Major, and additionally serves as an instruction in Karma Yoga.

The Mass of the Phoenix is a form of personal Mass. Its catalog number, 44, is the value of dam, דם, the Hebrew word for "blood," and is a number sacred to Horus, representing the manifestation of the Magical Current (11) through the Four Elements. This ritual, published in both The Book of Lies and Magick in Theory & Practice, has a more subtle interpretation than appears on its surface.

Liber Viarum Viæ (reproduced at right, in variation), to which we have referred many times throughout this work, is a tabulation of magical powers or practices classified according to the symbolism of the 22 Paths or 22 Tarot Trumps. It is designed to serve the Greater Adept in the work of practicing and assimilating the various classical magical powers. When it is written that the Major Adept is expected to "possess all the siddhis shown in the lower paths, without doubt," it means (in part, but importantly) that all of the Paths previously worked must be revisited and "brought up to speed." Each inferior element must be brought under control, as a pre-requisite to what happens thereafter. Below Tiphereth, development generally has been no higher than Yetziratic. After attaining the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel, these Paths all need to be reworked, at least to some extent, so that they can be "lifted up" unto Briah. The key is to conform them to the rapport one has with the Holy Guardian Angel, in a way the non-adept could not have done. The sides of the Pyramid, which are the Four Powers of the Sphinx, are builded at a higher level, another layer of mortar having been slapped down atop the prior.

Three Thelemic Holy Books (A.:A.: Class A documents) are also assigned here: Liber Magi, Liber Stellæ Rubeæ, and Liber Cheth.

Liber B vel Magi (Book B, or The Book of the Magus: Liber 1) was mentioned earlier in this chapter. Its relevance to the practice of magick is obvious, upon examination. Primarily, this Holy Book is an instruction for the Grade of Magus, 9^c=2[□], attributed to the sephirah Chokmah. However, Chokmah, the Root of Fire, reflects its fiery principle downward into Geburah, pouring forth, from the Third Order unto the Second, qualities of Will and of Magical Energy. Liber Magi may, therefore, have a thing or two to teach the Adeptus Major.

Liber Stellæ Rubeæ (The Book of the Ruby Star: Liber 66), one of the earliest of the Thelemic Holy Books, discloses much about the Secret Force which the Greater Adept employs. It also bears a renewed promise regarding the Adept's relationship with the Holy Guardian Angel (vv. 62-66):

But I will overcome thee: the New Life shall illumine thee with the Light that is beyond the Stars.

Thinkest thou? I, the force that have created all, am not to be despised.

And I will slay thee in my lust.

Thou shalt scream with the joy and the pain and the fear and the love – so that the ΛΟΓΟΣ of a new God leaps out among the Stars.

There shall be no sound heard but this thy lion-roar of rapture: yea, this thy lion-roar of rapture

Liber Cheth vel Vallum Abiegni (Book Cheth, or The Book of the Wall of Abiegnus: Liber 156) pertains to the Path of Cheth, and has greater relevance to the Adeptus Exemptus. Nonetheless, the Formula of the Holy Graal, which it discloses, has particular relevance to 6^c=5[□] as well. This formula is an expression of that draw toward Binah which is inherent in all adepthood, and which kicks into high gear in the Adeptus Major. One must dedicate and devote the whole of one's life – every drop – to Babalon (the Divine as expressed in Binah). Who preserves this "blood" (or life) in Her "cup" (the World of Briah). Even psychologically, we can see that when all of one's competing forces are fermented together, by the heat of love, and returned to the core of one's being to nourish and refresh the Central Self or True Will, we are renewed, empowered, and rejuvenated.

Besides this formal syllabus, there are other official writings that we believe would be of particular use to the Greater Adept. For example, John St. John (Liber 860) is the record of Frater O.S.V.'s self-initiation into the 6^c=5[□] Grade. Magick in Theory & Practice applies directly and obviously to this grade's magical work. Eliphas Levi's Dogme et Rituel de la Haute Magie (Transcendental Magic) was Levi's thesis for the Adeptus Major Grade, and reflects the fullness of his own understanding of the grade.

Furthermore, Crowley threw a twist into his discussion of the 6^c=5[□] curriculum that has had people arguing for years over exactly what he might have been saying (if anything) between the lines. His precise statement in the A.:A.: Curriculum is as follows:

It is highly desirable that Aspirants to this grade [Adeptus Major] should have attained the 9th degree of O.T.O., in which case much secret knowledge is offered them besides that openly published. The methods of examination for the Inner College differ therefore from those employed in the Outer.

Occasionally someone has suggested that, by this statement, Crowley communicated that the O.T.O. IX^c is somehow equivalent to the A.:A.: 6^c=5[□] Grade. In fact, he was saying something much simpler. In the O.T.O. IX^c, a practical magical method was taught which Crowley came to value immensely. Because the task of the Adeptus Major is "the attainment of the full Magical Power," he wanted to communicate the IX^c methodology. However, he was under an oath of secrecy in this matter, unless the Major Adept also held the IX^c of O.T.O.

ADVANCEMENT TO ADEPTUS EXEMPTUS

From the beginning, in the Probationer Grade, the rule of advancement in A.:A.: has been the same: When the Great Work of one grade is accomplished, one passes to the next. Ultimately, there is no other criterion of advancement.

For the stage now under discussion we may say, paraphrasing a line from earlier grades, that the Adeptus Major shall proceed to the grade of Adeptus Exemptus at any time that authority confers it. However, in the Order of the Rosy Cross, the word "authority" must be viewed differently than, say, for the Zelator. Nor is this advancement necessarily attained in a single lifetime.

Although the A.:A.: plan calls for the greatest objectivity possible on the pattern of advancement, this is less possible with the Adeptus Major, for reasons discussed previously. The most objective criterion is that one's successor must be raised from Minor Adept to Major Adept before one can pass thence to Exempt Adept; but this, obviously, is not the whole story.

The criterion for advancing to the 7^o=4^o Grade is given, in One Star in Sight, as the accomplishment of the tasks assigned to Kaph, Yod, and Teth. We have seen the difficulties of objectifying these tasks. At the present time, this is simply a further hurdle that the Major Adept must overcome.

The Exempt Adept must be one who has become perfect in the essential practices or steps of all preceding grades, and who is suited to become executor of the Inheritance of Wisdom that is the fountainhead of the Order's teachings.

Let, then, the Adeptus Major look beyond her immediate Work, alike with unshaken strength and steadfast humility, unto the Palace of Love which is Chesed, where she may say:

May the A.:A.: crown the work, lend me of Its wisdom in the work, enable me to understand the work!

And here and now may I be admitted to the knowledge and conversation of the A.:A.:!

Chapter 11: (7⁰=4[□])

THE ADEPTUS EXEMPTUS GRADE

This is the whole forthpouring which hath emanated all emanations, and because of which all Mysteries exist. This is the Lingam of Shiva, and the Lance of the Sun, and the WORD that is the Phoenix Fire transmitted from generation to generation. Archives of Truth. Mystery of Mystery. Come unto us, for we are the heirs of the Inheritance of Wisdom. Come unto us for we are one with Thee...

ADEPTUS EXEMPTUS literally means "exempt Adept." Exemptus is the past participle of the Latin verb eximo, which means, "to take out, take away, remove; to exempt; to free, release, let off; to make exception of." Exempt first came into English as meaning "isolated" or "set apart," in addition to its less obsolete definition of "excused or freed from an obligation required of others."

Recalling the Latin roots adipiscor eximo, we ascertain that an Adeptus Exemptus is one who has attained to freedom or liberation.

Of course, these words could equally well describe other stages of development, both before and beyond the 7⁰=4[□] Grade. In human life, freedom is never perfect; it is always potentially greater. We then need to understand the distinctive way that the words "attainment to freedom" are representative of this highest grade of the Order of the Rosy Cross.

Inevitably, when the 7⁰=4[□] Grade is discussed, someone asks, "From what is the Exempt Adept exempt?" The correct answer is, "From many things." Only the Adept herself can appreciate the number and nature of things from which she has won freedom. Yes (as others have written), this freedom is especially from many kinds of delusion, or maya; but, as great as this Adept's accomplishments may be, her freedom from delusion is hardly perfect. The illusion of duality, for example, is not fully overcome below the Abyss that separates the Second Order from the Third. And, as Liber Magi informs us, even the Magus 9⁰=2[□] is not free from maya but, rather, fulfills the duty of her grade within and by virtue of the very fabric of illusion.

Yet, having now awakened to the supreme sephirah of those which lie beneath the Abyss, the Exempt Adept has become especially emancipated from her prior slavery to the intellect and to knowledge; that is, to the complexes of the Ruach. In that respect if no other, the slave has become the master.

EXEMPTION FROM INCARNATION?

Often it is stated that the Exempt Adept has attained to full release from her karma, and from the necessity of further incarnation. The theory of exemption from further reincarnation seems to come from the fact that the Adeptus Exemptus has successfully passed the Path of Kaph, which symbolizes the Wheel of Rebirth, a Hindu concept pertaining to a requirement² to reincarnate until one's karma has been resolved.

If "release from karma" means release from one's personal karma, then there is a certain (limited) amount of truth in the proposition for those who pass beyond this stage. Beyond Chesed, the term "personal" scarcely applies any further, because of the fullness of the Adept's assimilation into the Universal Light, or Great Sea, or Self-fed Circle of Eternal Flame – however one chooses to symbolize the Supernal Love. There is nothing "personal" that one may take with one into the Abyss that marks the gulf between Chesed and Binah.

However, it is surely not correct to speak here of a final resolution of the Adept's karma at any deeper level. It is the destiny of each great Star – each Divine Being embracing the experience of incarnation – to continue its initiatory course even unto that which is represented by the sephirah Kether, a perfected assimilation into that which, ultimately, is Itself.³

Much of the foregoing remains theoretical. It also may be entirely moot: for every $7^C=4^D$ of which we have a clear record is known to have taken the vow of a bodhisattva.⁴ That is, they have sworn to incarnate repeatedly, with little pause between lives, that they may continue to serve humanity in its spiritual progress. We do not at all say that this obligation is necessary for the $7^C=4^D$ Grade – indeed, were it obligatory, then it could not be offered freely! – only that it is commonplace to those Exempt Adepts for whom we have an adequate magical record.⁵

² The Hindu theory is cited here solely for its expository value. Despite our respect for the Vedanta philosophy, some of its implicit premises must be questioned if intended literally. Incarnation is always a matter of Choice, if by that word we understand the willed consequence of the inherent nature of the incarnating Being.

³ This does not even consider the cultural, racial, species, and planetary dimensions of karma which specifically apply to the Magus $9^C=2^D$, that great Master who has retraced the "river of the soul" closest to its source, beyond the personal branchings of its tributaries. The Magus' Word is, therefore, the common Root-Will of all.

⁴ Lit., bodhi – sattva, or "wisdom-essence." One who has renounced nirvana in order to aid humanity; usually understood to mean an "enlightenment hero," one who pledges to reincarnate continually to aid others in their liberation.

⁵ From the record of Aleister Crowley's past life recollections, summarized in the previous chapter, we find some interesting

There are those who hold that the Oath of a Neophyte – "to observe zeal to the Probationers under me, and to deny myself utterly on their behalf" – is inherently a bodhisattva's vow. We would not care to interpret this oath (and the half dozen others which resemble it) for any other person. The meaning of a magical obligation in a reasonable world depends upon its conventional interpretation in the light of reason; but for the highest matters affecting a Being's spiritual destiny, the meaning depends on the soul in question and how it unites with the Oath of its Grade,⁶ in the context of its own inherent nature, the threads of its karma, and the purpose it lives to serve.

SYMBOLS OF THE ADEPTUS EXEMPTUS GRADE

The Grade of Adeptus Exemptus is attributed to the fourth sephirah of the Tree of Life, called Chesed (usually translated "Mercy") or Gedulah ("Divine majesty, magnitude, greatness, magnificence"). Chesed corresponds to the Sphere of Jupiter, and the Element of Water.

The common translation of "Chesed" as "mercy" can be misleading. This has fed a misinterpretation of the relationship between Geburah and Chesed. To emphasize the polarity that occurs naturally between opposed sephiroth, Chesed is translated "mercy" against Geburah's "severity." Similarly, Geburah corresponds to Fire, and Chesed to Water; Geburah is said to be "the king in time of war and hardship," and Chesed "the king in time of peace and bounty." Although useful on their own level, these complements are often misconstrued to render Chesed passive, even emasculated. Compassion, which should be characterized by a potent vitality or virility, becomes confused with weakness. Genuine goodness and kindness, truly wonderful human traits, become denigrated as insincere and naive refuges for the pathetic. Love loses its ardor and, ultimately, love itself is lost.

facts on this point of "continuous incarnation." Cagliostro, who only attained to Adeptus Major, died in 1795 and was not born again as Alphonse Louis Constant (Eliphas Levi) until 1810, fifteen years later. But Levi, who attained to Adeptus Exemptus, died in 1875, only six months before his rebirth as Aleister Crowley.

⁶ Every magical oath is an act of "love under will."

What is overlooked too often in this view is that an Adeptus Exemptus is also an Adeptus Major. The attainment of Chesed subsumes all lesser attainments. A Buddhist view of compassion includes both mercy and severity, because it means the giving unto a being whatever it truly needs – and a painful confrontation with reality is often every bit as compassionate as is sympathetic understanding. This idea concurs entirely with a Qabalistic aphorism of Chesed which reads, "From the exhaustless riches of its Limitless Substance, I draw all things needful, both spiritual and material."

Chesed (חסד) is a Hebrew word derived from an identically spelled root, chasad (חֶסֶד). According to the great Hebrew scholar Dr. William Gesenius, the primary significance of the word chasad is eager and ardent desire, a passion and virility compatible with this central sephirah of the Tree of Life's Pillar of Force which mediates the flow of consciousness between Chokmah and Netzach. Gesenius went on to define chasad as meaning to love (or have desire toward) a person. Additionally, he translated it as (a) to emulate or envy, (b) to put (a thing) to shame, and (c) to show oneself to be gracious, all of which are psychological correspondences of the planet Jupiter. Chesed itself he then translated as primarily meaning desire or ardor. In a positive sense, it means zeal toward anyone – love and kindness – especially in the form of benignity, benevolence, mercy, or pity. In a negative sense, chesed similarly means zeal or ardor against a person, hence envy or reproach. Chesed specifically means the "piety of men towards God," and "the grace, favor, mercy of God towards men."

As can be seen, this goes far beyond the simple idea of "mercy;" nor is it at all inconsistent with the idea of "strength." Our own favorite translation of "Chesed" is "Benevolence," which literally means good will – with emphasis on the dynamic aspect of the Will. The relationship between humanity and Deity, mentioned in the definitions above, converges exactly with the fiery and devotional love intended by the word bhakti. Adding the full range of positive and negative traits, we complete our understanding of the word chesed by remembering the zeal and ardor that are fundamental to its meaning.

The words Adeptus Exemptus enumerate to 187. In the Hebrew Qabalah, this is the value of zaqeph (זקף), which literally means, "to raise up," and figuratively means, "to comfort (the afflicted)." Both of these meanings are clearly consistent with the meaning of Chesed.

Also, 187 is the value of ophanim (אופנים), "wheels." This title refers to the symbolism of the Wheel of Fortune, the Path of Kaph, which the Exempt Adept recently has passed and which shares with this present Grade a correspondence to the planet Jupiter. Additionally, the Ophanim are the Angels attributed to the sephirah Chokmah from which Chesed derives its current of Wisdom. Much of Chesed's symbolism is a reflection of the Paternal Wisdom of Chokmah articulated downward from the Supernal Triangle.

But perhaps the most important correspondence of this number 187, for purposes of the present discussion, is to the Latin phrase Collegium Rosæ Rubæ, "College of the Ruby Rose." This traditional title of the feminine aspect of the Rosy Cross Mysteries is a strong confirmation of the predominantly mystical and devotional orientation of the Adeptus Exemptus Grade.

Chesed (חסד) enumerates to 72, one of the most important numbers of practical magick. The Wheel of the Zodiac (attributed to Chokmah) is traditionally divided into 72 pentades, or 5° segments, to which categories various benevolent and malevolent forces are attributed. Foremost of these is the Shem ha-Mephorash, or 72-fold GREAT NAME OF GOD (as it is written, "as if affirming God as merciful"). Furthermore, 72 is the value of ה"ה ה"ה ה"ה, the special way that the Tetragrammaton is spelled in plenitude in the World of Atziluth; and, thus, of Ob (עב), the "Secret Name"

CHIEF ADEPT'S WAND

In the HOGD's Second Order, this staff, bearing the winged globe atop a hilt of the five elements, was the ensign of the Chief Adept, or 7=4 officer, who was vested in a blue mantle. Compare this to Nuit's words of ordination to Crowley during the dictation of Liber L: "The winged globe, the starry blue, / Are mine, O Ankh-af-na-khonsu!"

of the World of Atziluth; and of be-Sod (בסוד), "in The SECRET" (referring to the Supreme Secret of the Mysteries, which Qabalists hide in the word sod and refer especially to the Path of Teth). In Greek, 72 is ἡ ἀλήθεια, hé alétheia, "the truth;" which reminds us that the word Chesed is most often seen in the Old Testament used in juxtaposition to emeth (אמת), "truth." In Latin, 72 is the value of such words as Abiegnus, the symbolic Rosicrucian Mountain of Initiation; vacuum, "empty, void, free, clear," referring to the Sublime NAUGHT, or Supernal SILENCE, by which is symbolized certain very advanced mystical states; and verbum, "the Word," synonymous with the Greek λογος, logos.

These associations are no surprise. Chesed corresponds to the highest attainments of the Order of the Rosy Cross, the apex of that great Pyramid that the aspirant has built symbolically from the Neophyte Grade onward, and which we now may imagine as standing, complete, silent, and majestic, aimed perfectly upward at the beautiful rarified night sky an immeasurable distance above. . . and waiting. As it is written in Liber 65, Cap. V, v. 51:

Let not the failure and the pain turn aside the worshippers. The foundations of the pyramid were hewn in the living rock ere sunset; did the king weep at dawn that the crown of the pyramid was yet unquarried in the distant land?

And, in Cap. II, vv. 57-60, 62:

The prophet cried against the mountain: come thou hither, that I may speak with thee!

The mountain stirred not. Therefore went the prophet unto the mountain, and spake unto it. But the feet of the prophet were weary, and the mountain heard not his voice.

But I have called unto Thee, and I have journeyed unto Thee, and it availed me not.

I waited patiently, and Thou wast with me from the beginning. . . to await Thee is the end, not the beginning.

The Adeptus Exemptus Grade also incorporates the symbolism of the 17th Path of Zayin (ז) and the 18th Path of Cheth (ח), which open (from Tiphereth and Geburah, respectively) unto the sephirah Binah, preparing the way for the Adeptus Exemptus' eventual advancement to the Grade of 8^o=3^o, Magister Templi. The symbolic importance of these two Paths will be discussed in their respective sections later in this chapter.

The Adeptus Exemptus is addressed as "Greatly Honored Frater" or "Greatly Honored Soror."

THE SUMMIT OF ABIEGNUS

The Grade of Adeptus Exemptus confers authority to govern the two lower Orders of R.C. and G.D. . . .

He will have attained all but the supreme summits of meditation, and should be already prepared to perceive that the only possible course for him is to devote himself utterly to helping his fellow creatures. (One Star in Sight)

As the 6^o=5^o Grade was said to confer "Magical Powers (strictly so-called) of the second rank" – second, that is, only to the Magus 9^o=2^o who is "pre-eminently the Master of Magick," according to One Star in Sight – so is the 7^o=4^o said to have "attained all but the supreme summits of meditation." (The "supreme summits" themselves are the domain of the Magister Templi Grade, 8^o=3^o, "pre-eminently the Master of Mysticism.")

Chesed is defined in terms of mysticism, to counterbalance Geburah's magical orientation. The assimilation of the Adept unto the relationship with her Holy Guardian Angel is all but perfect, her samadhi more mature (and less distinguishable from her workaday consciousness). The key to this deepening meditation is the primary practice of this grade, Bhakti Yoga.

BHAKTI YOGA

Bhakti Yoga is the primary hallmark of the Adeptus Exemptus Grade. As has been said previously, the Hebrew word chesed is nearly synonymous with the Sanskrit bhakti, "passionate love of God." Furthermore, the "Vision of Love" is the mystical experience related to the attainment of Chesed.⁸ In the 8^o=3^o Oath, wherein one clause is attributed to each sephirah, the line corresponding to Chesed is, "That I will Love all things."

⁸ See Liber 777, Col. XLV, Rows 0-10, for the "magical powers" (more correctly, mystical attainments) corresponding to each sephirah.

As was explained in Chapter 6, the Philosophus is required to study and practice Bhakti Yoga; but the Philosophus is only required to be examined in methods, not results. In contrast, in Frater O.M.'s unpublished diary notes on the requirements of the A.:A.: grades, he wrote of the 7^C=4^D that, "Chesed is majesty and love. His Bhakti-Yoga must be perfect." The preparatory, outer, ritualistic forms of Bhakti Yoga, called gauni-bhakti, are assigned in Netzach; but the higher perfection of Bhakti Yoga, called para-bhakti, is natural to the Adeptus Exemptus, the initiate of Chesed.

What is this para-bhakti? Recall that the faculty of memory is attributed, by Qabalists, to Chesed, in the same sense that desire is attributed to Netzach, or intellect to Hod.⁹ This is important because the essential characteristic of Bhakti Yoga is recollection or remembering.¹⁰

To remember is exactly the opposite of to dismember; hence the considerable psychological and mythological meaning in the old joke that the last, dying words of the dismembered Osiris to his bride Isis were, "Re-member me always." (And she does!)

In his classic Bhakti-Yoga, Chapter 1, Swami Vivekananda explained this relationship by quoting Bhagavan Ramanuja's comments on one of the Hindu sutras:

Meditation again is a constant remembrance (of the thing meditated upon) flowing like an unbroken stream of oil poured out from one vessel to another. When this kind of remembering has been attained (in relation to God) all bondage breaks. Thus it is said in the scriptures, regarding constant remembering as a means to liberation. This remembering, again, is of the same form as seeing, because it is of the same meaning, as in the passage, 'When He Who is far and near is seen, the bonds of the heart are broken, all doubts vanish, and all effects of work disappear'. Now He, Who is near can be seen, but He Who is far can only be remembered. Nevertheless the Scripture says that we have to see Him who is near, as well as Him who is far, thereby indicating to us that this kind of remembering is as good as seeing. This remembrance when exalted assumes the same form as seeing. . . . worship is constant remembering [emphasis added] . . . Knowing, which is the same as repeated worship, has been described as constant remembering. . . . Thus the memory, which has attained to the height of what is as good as direct perception, is spoken of in the Sruti as a means of liberation. 'This Atman'¹¹ is not to be reached through various sciences, nor by intellect, nor by such study of the Vedas. Whomsoever this Atman desires, by him is the Atman attained, unto him this Atman discovers himself.' Here after saying that mere hearing, thinking, and meditating are not the means of attaining this Atman, it is said, 'Whom this Atman desires, by him the Atman is attained.' The extremely beloved alone is desired; by whomsoever this Atman is extremely loved, he alone becomes the most beloved of the Atman. That this beloved may attain the Atman, the Lord himself helps. For it has been said by the Lord: 'Those who are constantly attached to Me and worship Me with love – I give that direction to their will by which they come to Me.' Therefore it is said that to whomsoever this remembering, which is of the same form as direct perception [emphasis added], becomes of itself very dear, for the reason that it is dear to the Object of such memory-perception, he is desired by the Supreme Atman, that is to say, by him alone the Supreme Atman is attained. This constant remembrance is denoted by the word bhakti [emphasis added].

In brief, Bhakti Yoga, in its para ("supreme") form, is a continuous recollection of the Belovéd, an uninterrupted union-by-recollection with Deity-as-Love, and a continuing participation in that Love. It is, at root, identical with the d'vequth (דבקות, "adherence, intense devotion") of the Chassidim¹². Both bhakti and d'vequth have outer and inner aspects of worship wherein ritualistic forms serve initially to establish the conscious awareness of this relationship with the root of all love and, later, serve as a stimulus to its continuing recollection; but the essence of the higher

¹⁰ The "mem-" of "memory" means "mind." "Memory" literally means "mindfulness" – keeping something in mind, or bringing it back to mind. To "re-member" a thing is "to be mindful (of it) again." "Mindfulness" is a term common to Buddhism to represent the state of continuing awareness that is a measurable goal of its practices.

¹¹ Yechidah, or Self. Here it appears to be used in a way that is interchangeable with the idea of the Holy Guardian Angel.

¹² דבקות, from the same root as דבוק.

practice is simply the continuing awareness of, and abiding within, the interminable Love itself. As it is written in Liber Legis, Cap. II, v. 43:

A feast every day in your hearts in the joy of my rapture! A feast every night unto Nu. and the pleasure of uttermost delight!

This state has long been described by mystics, of East and West alike, as one essential characteristic of the extreme ripening of adepthood implied by the grade attributed to the sephirah Chesed. The davaqah regards this intimate relationship as being with "God." The bhakti regards it as being with Ishvara. We say it is with "the Holy Guardian Angel." All of this is the same, but for the words.

The Adeptus Exemptus surely needs little help or guidance in this, even from her incarnate superiors in the Order: for in the Holy Guardian Angel she is given the most perfect instructor one could desire in the ways of Love.

THE ADEPTUS EXEMPTUS THESIS

The Exempt Adept will possess a thorough knowledge of all these courses [Student Grade through Adeptus Major Grade], and present a thesis of his own, as a general Epitome of his own Attainment as reflected in the sphere of the Mind. (Curriculum, THE EQUINOX No. XI)

The Adept must prepare and publish a thesis setting forth His knowledge of the Universe, and his proposals for its welfare and progress. He will thus be known as the leader of a school of thought. (One Star in Sight)

This assignment is self-explanatory; but perhaps the reasons for it are not entirely clear.

Certainly there are enough practical reasons. The Exempt Adepts are "senior statesmen of the spirit," the best trained, most learned, most advanced magicians, mystics, and philosophers of the Inner College. Furthermore, such a person will have ripened his or her own unique perspective of the Great Work. Every person has a unique point of view, and every window on the Divine gazes upon a different aspect, a different vista. Each spiritually mature expression of such a view constitutes one of the great philosophical treasures of the world.

Examples of these writings include Clef des Grands Mystères by Eliphas Levi; The Cloud Upon the Sanctuary by Karl von Eckartshausen¹³; Utrinsque Cosmi Histori by Robert Fludd; Themis Aurea and Scrutinium Chymicum by Michael Maier; Euphrates by Thomas Vaughan; The Spiritual Exercises by St. Ignatius of Loyola; Three Dialogues by Bishop Berkeley; The Fourth Dimension by H. Hinton; and other works by Swedenborg, Paracelsus, Valentine, Newton, Bolyai, and numerous others.¹⁴

¹⁴ Students of Crowley's life will discover a strange twist on this one particular task. When the time came for him to pen his 7^c=4^c thesis, he had gathered his notes and formulated his essential themes – then discovered Levi's Clef des Grands Mystères, which covered exactly the same points Crowley had

THE PYRAMID OF INITIATION
What rejected stone shall crown it?

But beyond these benevolent considerations, there is a further need that this thesis be written now, a need deeply rooted in the Adept's natural development in the path of initiation. The $7^{\circ}=4^{\square}$ has attained to the highest sephirah attributed to the Ruach (the distinctly human part of the psyche, including the reasoning mind). This is that "certain exalted grade whereby a man becomes master of knowledge and intelligence, and no more their slave" (Liber 61, v. 18). The Exempt Adept is preparing to cross a threshold into the Third Order – the Ordeal of the Abyss – to which only the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel is of comparable significance. Crossing this Abyss requires full ripening of all that has gone before, a drawing to a head of everything constituting the Adept, of all that makes her what she distinctly is. Here, once more, is the symbol of the Pyramid of Initiation that the aspirant has been carefully building, now reaching completion, converging on the final point at its apex. Only thus may the Adeptus Exemptus be prepared for the great step ahead – of which more anon.

intended to explain. Therefore, instead of writing a new book, he translated Levi's!

By this standard, we would have to recognize Mme. Isabella de Steiger (V.J.H.: Sor. Alta Peto, $5=6$ of the old G.D.) as an Adeptus Exemptus for her wonderful translation of Eckhartshausen's The Cloud Upon the Sanctuary!

Whatever the truth of the Crowley-Levi story, Crowley certainly published numerous works that brilliantly satisfy the requirements for this great assignment. He first assumed a full Adeptus Exemptus function upon commencing to publish THE EQUINOX. His New Commentary on The Book of the Law exactly fulfills the requirements of a $7^{\circ}=4^{\square}$ thesis: as, certainly, does his mammoth Book Four when all four sections are considered. His role in forging the system of the A.A., for his and future generations, may, perhaps, be regarded as a "thesis" in another medium than the written word. There is no question that he did the work, many times over.

THE PATH OF ZAYIN

To attain the Grade of Magister Templi, he must perform two tasks: [the first is] the emancipation from thought by putting each idea against its opposite, and refusing to prefer either. . . . (One Star in Sight)

† The Utterance of the Pythoness, Liber MCXXXIX (Liber Viarum Viarum)

Zayin means "sword," symbolic of the human intellect and representative of division and multiplicity. It corresponds to the sign Gemini, and to the VIth Trump of the Tarot, popularly called The Lovers, and esoterically called "The Children of the Voice: The Oracle of the Mighty Gods."¹⁵

Gemini, "Twins," implies the number two. A sword is an implement of severing or cleaving. Yet the title, The Lovers, implies intimate union. A passage in The Book of the Law (Cap. 1, vv. 29-30) addresses this apparent paradox:

For I am divided for love's sake, for the chance of union.

This is the creation of the world, that the pain of division is as nothing, and the joy of dissolution all.

The descent of the Path of Zayin, from Binah to Tiphereth, is the coming forth of creation by division: i.e., by the formulation of the human intellectual function, which is ultimately binary.¹⁶ Of this formulation, "the pain of division is as nothing." However, we now focus our attention on the complementary operation, the opening from Tiphereth unto Binah. In this, the many are united into the One. Duality is overcome. In particular, intellectual polarities resolve into a single Truth; "the joy of dissolution is all."

¹⁵ Zayin is related to the principle of prophecy. Even in simple terms, this is understandably a facet of the relationship between the rational mind (Tiphereth, 7) and an informing intuition (Binah, 3). Furthermore, the Gemini Twins in the mythologies of varying cultures (often called "Children of the Sun") are frequently associated with the function of prophecy. Evidently for this reason, in Liber Viarum Viarum, Crowley assigned to the Path of Zayin a practice or power called "The Utterance of the Pythoness," for which he assigned an instruction labeled Liber 1139. This instruction is inextant and unidentifiable. Its number is the value of the Greek word δελφός, "womb," the root of οἰδελφοί, "brothers" (lit., children of the same womb). Based on the title of Liber 1139, a pun probably was also intended on Δελφοί, Delphi, the site of the most famous oracle of antiquity, sacred to the Sun god.

¹⁶ All knowledge reduces either to the statement $A=B$ or the statement $A \neq B$.

In addition to the normal meditative methods of yoga, the practical instruction for this Task of the Path of Zayin is Liber Os Abyssi vel 𐤆𐤊𐤃: The Book of the Mouth of the Abyss or The Book of Da'ath (Knowledge). It is a technique for employing the intellect, isolated from the intuitive faculty, to destroy its own compelling hold on the soul. The climax of the operation proper is described in Liber Da'ath as follows:

Then will all phenomena which present themselves to him appear meaningless and disconnected, and his own Ego will break up into a series of impressions having no relation one with the other, or with any other thing.

Let this state then become so acute that it is in truth Insanity, and let this continue until exhaustion. . .

It may end in real insanity, which concludes the activities of the Adept during this present life, or by his rebirth into his own body and mind with the simplicity of a little child.

And then shall he find all his faculties unimpaired, yet cleansed in a manner ineffable.

And he shall recall the simplicity of the Task of the Adeptus Minor,¹⁷ and apply himself thereto with fresh energy in a more direct manner. . .

And with the reappearance of the Holy Guardian Angel¹⁸ he may be granted the highest attainments. . .

Thence may he enter into a real communion with those that are beyond, and he shall be competent to receive communication and instruction from Ourselves directly.

Thus shall We prepare him for. . . the Ordeal of the Abyss, when we have received him into the City of Pyramids.¹⁹

¹⁷ To attain to the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel.

¹⁸ The Angel has been, as it were, expelled from the conscious psyche by the terms of the practice, which required the employment of the powers of reason utterly divorced from the spiritual faculties.

¹⁹ This is a reference to Binah.

THE PATH OF CHETH

To attain the Grade of Magister Templi, he must perform. . . the consecration of himself as a pure vehicle for the influence of the order to which he aspires. (One Star in Sight)

¶ The Ritual of the Holy Grail. Liber CLVI. (Liber Viarum Viæ)

Cheth means "hedge" or "fence," that which defines a territory; or an enclosure or field thus delimited. It corresponds to the sign Cancer, and to the VIIth Trump of the Tarot which is called, popularly, The Chariot and, esoterically, "The Child of the Powers of Water: The Lord of the Triumph of Light."

This Chariot is the human personality and its associated higher "vehicles." The Charioteer is the Holy Guardian Angel. The word Cheth (𐤇𐤈) enumerates to 418, the number that, in the present Æon, symbolizes the perfection of the Great Work. This, then, is the "Triumph of Light" to which the esoteric title alludes.

The task for this Path, quoted above from One Star in Sight, is entirely clear. However, each person must discover his or her own method for its accomplishment. Cheth is the final Path traversed²⁰ before admission of the Adept into the Third Order and the Grade of Magister Templi, even as Samekh was the last traversed within the Outer College. The step yet before the Adeptus Exemptus compares to adepthood (to the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel) as that Knowledge and Conversation compares to the Neophyte's initial aspiration within the First Order.

A certain assistance is given to the Adept in these matters.

First, as Liber Viarum Viæ confirms, for this "Ritual of the Holy Grail" we are given the horrible-beautiful Class A document Liber Cheth vel Vallum Abiegni. "This book," Crowley wrote in the Syllabus in EQUINOX XI, "is a perfect account of the task of the Exempt Adept considered under the symbols of a particular plane, not the intellectual."

²⁰ Zayin opens unto Binah from Tiphereth, and Cheth from Geburah. There is no Path that passes directly from Chesed to Binah. This is one of the symbols of the Abyss of which we speak. How to make the leap? By no reasonable means. Yet to one who returns to the simplicity of the perspective of the Adeptus Minor, the way will not be hard to find, even as a young child runs unhesitatingly into the arms of its mother.

Another document from the Adeptus Exemptus Syllabus also may be of assistance in the basic task of this Path, the self-consecration of the Adept as a pure vehicle for the influence of the Third Order to which she aspires. The document is Liber Thisharb Via Memoria (The Book of the Journey of the Memory). "Thisharb" – הישארב – is Berashith (the Hebrew title of Genesis, i.e., "in the beginning") spelled backwards.

As already stated, among the planetary sephiroth Chesed is attributed to the function of memory, and many associate a certain resolution of karma with this Grade. It should come as no surprise, therefore, that a technique is given for encouraging the recovery of past life memories. These memories well may have arisen, to some extent, much earlier in the course of training. Often they are a side effect of meditation; or they may serve as a device for the Holy Guardian Angel to employ in guiding the aspirant to go in certain directions.

One factor makes it especially likely that the Exempt Adept will be able to recover these memories: The inner grades are not typically attained in quick succession, within one lifetime, unless there has been substantial attainment previously. It is likely that an Adeptus Exemptus was at least a Minor or Major Adept in a prior life. Souls of such maturity assimilate much more of their human life, personality, and memories into the spiritual core of their being, which passes from life to life, thereby making the recovery of these memories easier.

The ultimate purpose of Liber Thisharb is the discovery of the True Will in a very pure way, and the rendering of it comprehensible to the powers of reason; or, as Liber Thisharb itself describes the practice, "its results define the separate being of the Exempt Adept from the rest of the Universe, and discover his relation to that Universe." The full, formal method given for accomplishing this involves the recovery of past life memories so that the Adept can see a greater length of the road she has been traversing. The Adept's powers of meditation then are applied to the analysis of what has been learned, to the end of identifying who she is and what service she is able to offer to the Third Order, or Silver Star.

Several passages from Liber Thisharb help put into perspective its considerable importance for the Exempt Adept:

It is of such importance to the Exempt Adept that We cannot overrate it. Let him in no wise adventure the plunge into the Abyss until he have accomplished this to his most perfectest satisfaction.

For in the Abyss no effort is anywise possible. The Abyss is passed by virtue of the mass of the Adept and his Karma. Two forces impel him: (1) the attraction of Binah, (2) the impulse of his Karma; and the ease and even the safety of his passage depend on the strength and direction of the latter.

Should one rashly dare the passage, and take the irrevocable Oath of the Abyss, he might be lost therein through Æons of incalculable agony; he might even be thrown back upon Chesed, with the terrible Karma of failure added to his original imperfection.

Let then the Adept who finds the result of these meditations unsatisfactory refuse the Oath of the Abyss, and live so that his Karma gains strength and direction suitable to the task at some future period...

All this being perfected, so that the memory reaches back into æons incalculably distant, let the Exempt Adept meditate upon the fruitlessness of all those years, and upon the fruit thereof, severing that which is transitory and worthless from that which is eternal. And it may be that he being but an Exempt Adept may hold all to be savourless and full of sorrow.

This being so, without reluctance will he swear the Oath of the Abyss.

... Having then perfected in his mind these conceptions, let him apply them to his own career, forging the links of memory into the chain of necessity.

And let this be his final question: To what purpose am I fitted? Of what service can my being prove to the Brothers of the A.:.A.: if I cross the Abyss, and am admitted to the City of the Pyramids?

There follows an instruction in how that question is to be approached; then,

THE HOLY GRAIL
The Mysteries of Chesed are those of the Holy Grail. (From The Chalice of Ecstasy by Frater Achad.)

There is no minutest atom of his composition which can be withdrawn without making him some other than he is, no useless moment in his past. Then what is his future? [...]

So the adept has military genius, or much knowledge of Greek: how do these attainments help his purpose, or the purpose of the Brothers? He was put to death by Calvin, or stoned by Hezekiah; as a snake he was killed by a villager, or as an elephant slain in battle under Hamilcar. How do such memories help him? Until he have thoroughly mastered the reason for every incident in his past, and found a purpose for every item of his present equipment, he cannot truly answer even those Three Questions that were first put to him, even the Three Questions of the Ritual of the Pyramid²¹: he is not ready to swear the Oath of the Abyss.

But being thus enlightened, let him swear the Oath of the Abyss; yea, let him swear the Oath of the Abyss.

BEYOND THE ROSY CROSS

Adeptus (Exemptus). – Completes in perfection all these matters [of previous grades]. He then either (a) becomes a Brother of the Left Hand Path or, (b) is stripped of all his attainments and of himself as well, even of his Holy Guardian Angel, and becomes a Babe of the Abyss, who, having transcended the Reason, does nothing but grow in the womb of its mother.

He must then decide upon the critical adventure of our Order: the absolute abandonment of himself and his attainments. He cannot remain indefinitely an Exempt Adept: he is pushed onward by the irresistible momentum that he has generated.

– One Star in Sight

Despite our editorial decision to let this book climax, or come to a natural rest, in the 7^o=4^o Grade, it has been impossible to draft these words without constant reference to the grades beyond, and to the Third Order which they constitute.

Repeatedly, in many writings, Aleister Crowley told us until we could not forget it, that the Exempt Adept may not stay an Adept forever. There is a necessity to go on, a momentum or inner pressure that carries one forward. It is only necessary to equip oneself for the inevitable, and to make a certain critical choice along the way: whether to surrender oneself (one's ego) entirely to the annihilation of the Abyss, or to hold on, to resist disintegration and absorption, to strive to survive as the separate ego-center that one has always thought oneself to be.

The Exempt Adept is the highest stage that a being can attain and still be definable in human (i.e., in personality) terms. It is an apex: but the whole course of the spiritual training has been aimed, inevitably, at exceeding even that.

His Angel shall lead him anon²² to the summit of the Order of the R.C. and make him ready to face the unspeakable terror of the Abyss which lies between Manhood and Godhead: teach him to Know that agony, to Dare that destiny, to Will that catastrophe, to keep Silence for ever as he accomplishes the act of annihilation.²³

As the old alchemical aphorism goes, "First the stone, then the plant, then the animal, then the human – then the God." Timeless samadhi ripens into the timeless sea of Nirvana: but to enter that sea, one must divest oneself of far more than one's knickers. One must divest oneself of all that one has ever considered oneself to have or to be.

From the Abyss comes No Man forth, but a Star startles the Earth, and our Order rejoices above that Abyss that the Beast hath begotten one more Babe in the Womb of Our Lady, His Concubine, the Scarlet Woman, BABALON.

There is no need to instruct a Babe thus born, for in the Abyss it was purified of every poison of personality: its ascent to the highest is assured, in its season, and it hath no need of seasons for it is conscious that all conditions are no more than forms of its fancy.²⁴

The transition from Chesed to Binah is unique in a couple of ways. For one (already mentioned), there is no direct Path marking this transition on the Tree of Life. For another, both Chesed and ²² From the initial Knowledge and Conversation, which characterizes the Lesser Adept.

²³ One Star in Sight.

²⁴ Ibid. "No Man" (Lat. Nemo) is the generic title of the Magister Templi, 8^o=3^o. 'Beast' and 'Babalon' may be understood here as Yod and Heh, Chokmah and Briah. Their Union is in Da'ath.

Binah are attributed to Water. At no other point on the Tree has the transition been from a sephirah of a given element into another of the same element. In this is a particular symbol, which the Exempt Adept easily will understand.

There are those, however, who are unwilling to make the transition. Their ego-centers still hold sway over their deeper being. Ultimately, they are afraid to die. This is the same as saying that they are afraid to love, which is equally true. Even as the self is lost in the Belovèd in the depths of love – even as the ego softens or surrenders its warding and defining barriers in the rapture of orgasm – so is the Fear of Death always a Fear of Love. Those who thus fear are known as the Black Brothers.²⁵ This is not the same as a “black magician,” who is generally of a much lower grade, and a much more ridiculous phenomenon. Nor is it the same as the Black School of Magick, which, with the White and Yellow Schools, form a triad of root philosophies among the world’s initiates.²⁶ Finally, the term is not racially motivated. The basis for the “black” metaphor will be evident in the quotations that follow. For now, you simply need to know that a Black Brother is a very advanced initiate, an Adeptus Exemptus, who from an unexpunged fear (often masked by other, hollow motives) resists the natural forward momentum that otherwise would have carried her, naturally and in the proper hour, into the embrace of the Third Order.

We find this natural process (which the Black Brother resists) documented in the A.:A.:’s History Lecture, Liber 61, vv. 27-28:

In the fullness of time, even as a blossoming tree that beareth fruit in its season, all these pains were ended, and these adepts [Fras. D.D.S. and O.M.] and their companions obtained the reward which they had sought – they were to be admitted to the Eternal and Invisible Order that hath no name among men.

²⁵ In contrast to the “Great White Brotherhood” by which the A.:A.: identifies itself. These terms are not in the least racist in original intent, although (with today’s resurgence of violent and intolerant “white supremacist” bigotry), we tend to employ the term “Great White Brotherhood” very sparingly. I suppose recalcitrant female Adepts Exempti are legitimately called “Black Sisters,” despite the entirely different mental picture that phrase brings to mind!

²⁶ See “The Three Schools of Magick” in Magick Without Tears, letters 6-8.

THE MASTER THERION

They therefore who had with smiling faces abandoned their homes, their possessions, their wives, their children in order to perform the Great Work, could with steady calm and firm correctness abandon the Great Work itself; for this is the last and greatest projection of the alchemist.

The phenomena of the Black Brothers are discussed in many places, including The Vision & the Voice: Magick in Theory & Practice, Cap. XXI, Sec. 1 and elsewhere; Magick Without Tears, Letters 12 and 50 and elsewhere; and Liber Aleph in diverse places.

We close this section with two lengthy passages on this final choice.

From Liber Aleph, Cap. 104:

Of the Black Brothers, o my Son, will I write these Things following. I have told thee already concerning Change, how it is the Law, because every Change is an Act of Love under Will. So then he that is Adept Exempt, whether in Our Holy Order or another, may not remain in the Pillar of Mercy, because it is not balanced, but is unstable. Therefore is the Choice given unto him, whether he will destroy his Temple, and give up his Life, extending it to Universal Life,²⁷ or whether he will make a Fortress about that Temple, and abide therein, in the false Sphere of Daäth, which is in the Abyss. And to the Adepts of Our Holy Order this Choice is terrible, by cause that they must abandon even Him whose Knowledge and Conversation they have attained. Yet, o my Son, they have much Help of Our Order in this Æon, because the General Formula is Love, so that their Habit itself urgeth them to the Bed of Our Lady BABALON. Know then the Black Brothers by these True Signs of their Initiation of iniquity, that they resist Change, restrict and deny Love, fear Death. Percutantur.

²⁷ See Liber Cheth, v. 3. The Exempt Adept remains a discrete individual, albeit living in service to the Universal.

From Magick in Theory & Practice, Cap. VII, Sec. I (a portion of which has been quoted already in the preceding chapter):

The Hieroglyph shewn in the Seventh Key of the Tarot (described in the 12th Æthyr, Liber 418, Equinox I, V) is the Charioteer of OUR LADY BABALON, whose Cup or Graal he bears.

Now this is an important formula. It is the First of the Formulæ, in a sense, for it is the formula of Renunciation.²⁸ It is also the Last!

The Cup is said to be full of the Blood of the Saints; that is, every "saint" or magician must give the last drop of his life's blood to that cup. It is the original price paid for magick power. And if by magick power we mean the true power, the assimilation of all force with the Ultimate Light, the true Bridal of the Rosy Cross, then is that blood the offering of Virginity, the sole sacrifice well-pleasing to the Master, the sacrifice whose only reward is the pain of child-bearing unto him.

But 'to sell one's soul to the devil', to renounce no matter what for an equivalent in personal gain,²⁹ is black magic. You are no longer a noble giver of your all, but a mean huckster.

This formula is, however, a little different in symbolism, since it is a Woman whose Cup must be filled. It is rather the sacrifice of the Man, who transfers life to his descendants...

But here the formula implies much more even than this. For it is his whole life that the Magus offers to OUR LADY. The Cross is both Death and Generation, and it is on the Cross that the Rose blooms. The full significance of these symbols is so lofty that it is hardly fitted for an elementary treatise of this type. One must be an Exempt Adept, and have become ready to pass on, before one can see the symbols even from the lower plane. Only a Master of the Temple can fully understand them.

(However, the reader may study Liber CLVI in Equinox I, VI, the 12th and 2nd Æthyrs in Liber 418 in Equinox I, V, and the Symbolism of the V^c and VI^c in O.T.O.)³⁰

Of the preservation of this blood which OUR LADY offers to the ANCIENT ONE, CHAOS³¹ the All-Father, to revive him, and of how his divine Essence fills the Daughter (the soul of Man) and places her upon the Throne of the Mother, fulfilling the Economy of the Universe, and thus ultimately rewarding the Magician (the Son) ten thousandfold, it would be still more improper to speak in this place. So holy a mystery is the Arcanum of the Masters of the Temple, that it is here hinted at in order to blind the presumptuous who may, unworthily, seek to lift the veil, and at the same time to lighten the darkness of such as may be requiring only one ray of the Sun in order to spring into life and light.

CONCLUSION

There is no conclusion. The Way of the Spirit is a way of eternal going – of movement and change.

And this change, this evolution, is the consequence of love. Evolution is always the consequence of love. By surrendering ourselves – passionately, not passively – to the evolving circumstances presented to us by the textured fabric of life, we become ever larger than any circumstances that oppress us. The whole is always greater than the sum of its parts.

In our way of Love, we pour forth the very essence of ourselves into that which we love most. We embrace it, take it in, become filled with it.

²⁸ "There is no moral implication here. But to choose A implies to refuse not-A: at least, that is so, below the Abyss." – A.C.

³⁰ The V^c of O.T.O. is Sovereign Prince or Princess of Rose-Croix (cf. 18^c of the Scottish Rite). The O.T.O. VI^c is the degree of the Knight (Templar) Kadosh, or Dame Companion of the Holy Graal (a reinterpretation of the Scottish Rite 30^c).

³¹ "CHAOS is a general name for the totality of the Units of Existence; it is thus a name feminine in form. Each unit of CHAOS is itself All-Father." – A.C.

surrendering to it the whole of what we are; for the one condition of progress, as has been said previously, is annihilation of the self in the Beloved.

Thus far the Rosy Cross.

What sweeter words are there than these from Liber 65, Cap. III, v. 51:

O Thou light and delight, ravish me away into the milky ocean of the stars!

Or these from Liber 7, Cap. VII, vv. 41-45:

Come, O my God, in one last rapture let us attain to the Union with the Many!

In the silence of Things, in the Night of Forces, beyond the accursed domain of the Three, let us enjoy our love!

My darling! My darling! away, away beyond the Assembly and the Law and the Enlightenment unto an Anarchy of Solitude and Darkness!

For even thus must we veil the brilliance of our Self.

My darling! My darling!

Never before in the history of the world have the inner pathways of the Journey been so finely mapped, nor the Way so clearly marked. One has but to enter upon it with courage, love, intelligence, and determination. But we cannot take the Journey for you. Only your own labor can raise the Pyramid of your spirit. Work has virtue for its own sake; and how much more this Great Work, O brothers and sisters of the Morning Light?

In the bonds of our common humanity and of our common divinity, I invite all who are ready, to undertake the Journey; and all others to undertake to make themselves ready.

Love is the law, love under will.

"So therefore the beginning is delight, and the End is delight, and delight is in the midst, even as the Indus is water in the cavern of the glacier, and water among the greater hills and the lesser hills and through the ramparts of the hills and through the plains, and water at the mouth thereof when it leaps forth into the mighty sea, yea, into the mighty sea."

— Liber A'sh, v. 39

Epilogue
DAUGHTER OF THE LANTERN

I

Surrender.

*I stand, or lay, or but exist in the presence of something of inordinate magnitude, and wonder, and awesome, thund'rous peace which I have hitherto held back but now admit, timorously, tenderly, feeling my child-caution expectant and happy and thrilled.
I trust it, and seek to hold it and be made secure, or else,
to be miraculously touched beyond my preconceptions.*

II

*There stands a Daughter of the Lantern, silent, wise,
biding her tongue and time, yet ever going before me,
the love of her eyes aflame & luminous with starlight
- waiting until I wake and take her hand.
She is guide and mistress, inspiration of fantasy and certainty of reality.
She is as much myself as am I,
yet somehow separate,
unknowable while totally Known, as the flame that fills me wholly.*

III

*The flame burns & sings & dances within my soul.
 That which was water and mystery, now, within the sacred sanctuary, is light and wonder and amazement,
 a purifying fire,
 a love
 unquenchable & inextinguishable, passionate & chaste, self-subsuming & all-consuming,
 patient & impatient,
 purging me of dross,
 cleansing, transforming, freeing.
 One flame. One dance. One miracle.
 Certainty. Peace. Passion. Life.*

*Goddess, central flame, illuminator, teacher, healer, song of beauty & fire of knowing
 – I love you!*

IV

*A breath caresses my cheek and startles me awake, awake as I have rarely been,
 to stare, mind stopped, senses staggered, into the wondrous and splendid majesty of the star of her being.
 How shall it be that of all the multitude of the unceasing heavens, this one star should so fill and fulfill what my hungering soul desires, requires, devours, embraces, and loves?
 At but the thought of Her,
 across these miles,
 the delicate breeze or breath dances on all my skin, through walls, through clothes, through excuses, through incredulity, and plays its birthing reveille 'pon each of my inner senses.
 Her charade, her persona, are all gone, and I see but Her star, Her inner fires, Her beauty.
 And it is before this Beauty that all my speech fails.
 What I want to say!
 What I hunger to reflect, to utter, to declare,
 so that she may know I KNOW & love & honor,
 beyond my frail and inadequate powers of expression.*

V

*Diaphanous veils descend & cloak that argent & ardent splendor.
They weave & shift & pass,
each imaging another face, another view.
Where but an hour ago,
or a day,
I oh so clearly saw Her
- now I see only the intervening warp & woof of our dance, the veils that seductively cloak her reality and chastely conceal its naked miracle.*

VI

*Each movement of mine and hers is balanced, anticipated, reciprocated by the other.
Does she move in foresighted anticipation to make space,
to receive my next thrust of being,
as Yin moves on to make way for Yang's new wave of penetration?
Or I her?
Or is the dance so wrought, the dancers so matched, that the yielding or vacuity of either is at once filled precisely by the other, each providing in unconscious rhythmic flow, the context for the other's Way?
Two jig-saw realities interlocked in some far vaster puzzle.
Satisfaction.
Dynamic complementation.
Mystery.
Unpardonable love.*

VII

*And then these veils lift, or part,
like delicate tumescent folds of flesh
opening inward to admit the whole of me.
Bright star disclosed anew.
One star in sight.
Beyond death, beyond space, beyond reason,
I am lost & found
at once & forever & never.
Two, one, naught.
Naughty play as we/I/she meet in the center of ecstasy & pain, beyond light
into starlit night,
and spill,
twin fountains of silver & gold
pulsing,

eruptive & unceasing streams of liquid starlight,
screaming lost in Silence,
into the greater creative pulse of the boundless, soundless BEAUTY

51. Let not the failure and the pain turn aside the worshippers. The foundations of the pyramid were hewn in the living rock ere sunset; did the king weep at dawn that the crown of the pyramid was yet unquarried in the distant land?

52. There was also an humming-bird that spake unto the horned cerastes, and prayed him for poison. And the great snake of Khem the Holy One, the royal Uræus serpent, answered him and said:

53. I sailed over the sky of Nu in the car called Millions-of-Years, and I saw not any creature upon Seb that was equal to me. The venom of my fang is the inheritance of my father, and of my father's father; and how shall I give it unto thee? Live thou and thy children as I and my fathers have lived, even unto an hundred millions of generations, and it may be that the mercy of the Mighty Ones may bestow upon thy children a drop of the poison of eld.

54. Then the humming-bird was afflicted in his spirit, and he flew unto the flowers, and it was as if naught had been spoken between them. Yet in a little while a serpent struck him that he died.

55. But an Ibis that meditated upon the bank of Nile the beautiful god listened and heard. And he laid aside his Ibis ways, and became as a serpent, saying Peradventure in an hundred millions of millions of generations of my children, they shall attain to a drop of the poison of the fang of the Exalted One.

56. And behold! ere the moon waxed thrice he became an Uræus serpent, and the poison of the fang was established in him and his seed even for ever and for ever.

GRADUUM MONTIS ABIEGNI

A SYLLABUS OF THE STEPS UPON THE PATH

1. The Probationer. His duties are laid down in Paper A, Class D. Being without, they are vague and general. He receives Liber LXI. and LXV.

[Certain Probationers are admitted after six months or more to Ritual XXVIII.]

At the end of the Probation he passes Ritual DCLXXI., which constitutes him a Neophyte.

2. The Neophyte. His duties are laid down in Paper B, Class D. He receives Liber VII.

Examination in Liber O, Caps. I.-IV., Theoretical and Practical.

Examination in The Four Powers of the Sphinx. Practical.

Four tests are set.

Further, he builds up the magic Pentacle.

Finally he passes Ritual CXX., which constitutes him a Zelator.

3. The Zelator. His duties are laid down in Paper C, Class D. He receives Liber CCXX., XXVII., and DCCCXIII.

Examinations in Posture and Control of Breath (see EQUINOX No. 1). Practical.

Further, he is given two meditation-practices corresponding to the two rituals DCLXXI. and CXX.

(Examination is only in the knowledge of, and some little practical acquaintance with, these meditations. The complete results, if attained, would confer a much higher grade.)

Further, he forges the magic Sword.

No ritual admits to the grade of Practicus, which is conferred by authority when the task of the Zelator is accomplished.

4. The Practicus. His duties are laid down in Paper D, Class D.

Instruction and Examination in the Qabalah and Liber DCCLXXVII.

Instruction in Philosophical Meditation (Gna-na-Yoga).

Examination in some one mode of divination: e.g., Geomancy, Astrology, the Tarot. Theoretical. He is given a meditation-practice on Expansion of Consciousness.

He is given a meditation-practice in the destruction of thoughts.

Instruction and Examination in Control of Speech. Practical.

Further, he casts the magic Cup.

No ritual admits to the grade of Philosophus, which is conferred by authority when the Task of the Practicus is accomplished.

5. The Philosophus. His duties are laid down in Paper E, Class D.

He practices Devotion to the Order.

Instruction and Examination in Methods of Meditation by Devotion (Bhakti-Yoga).

Instruction and Examination in Construction and Consecration of Talismans, and in Evocation.

Theoretical and Practical.

Examination in Rising on the Planes (Liber O, Caps. V., VI.). Practical.

He is given a meditation-practice on the Senses, and the Sheaths of the Self, and the Practice called Mahasatipatthana.

(See The Sword of Song, "Science and Buddhism.")

Instruction and Examination in Control of Action.

Further, he cuts the Magic Wand.

Finally, the Title of Dominus Liminis is conferred upon him.

He is given meditation-practices on the Control of Thought, and is instructed in Raja-Yoga.

He receives Liber Mysteriorum and obtains a perfect understanding of the Formulæ of Initiation.

He meditates upon the diverse knowledge and power that he has acquired, and harmonises it perfectly.

Further, he lights the Magic Lamp.

At last, Ritual VIII. admits him to the grade of Adeptus Minor.

The Adeptus Minor. His duty is laid down in Paper F, Class D.

It is to follow out the instruction given in the Vision of the Eighth Æthyr for the attainment of the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel.

[NOTE. This is in truth the sole task; the others are useful only as adjuvants to and preparations for the One Work.

Moreover, once this task has been accomplished, there is no more need of human help or instruction; for by this alone may the highest attainment be reached.

All these grades are indeed but convenient landmarks, not necessarily significant. A person who had attained them all might be immeasurably the inferior of one who had attained none of them; it is Spiritual Experience alone that counts in Result; the rest is but Method.

Yet it is important to possess knowledge and power, provided that it be devoted wholly to that One Work.]

A.:A.: The Task of a Probationer.

0. Let any person be received by a Neophyte. the latter being responsible to his Zelator.
1. The period of Probation shall be at least one year.
2. The aspirant to the A.:A.: shall hear the Lection (Liber LXI) and this note of his office; IF HE WILL, shall then procure the robe of a Probationer; shall choose with deep forethought and intense solemnity a motto.
3. On reception, he shall receive the robe, sign the form provided and repeat the oath as appointed, and receive the First Volume of the Book.
4. He shall commit a chapter of Liber LXV to memory; and furthermore, he shall study the Publications of the A.:A.: in Class B, and apply him self to such practices of Scientific Illuminism as seemeth him good.
5. Beside all this, he shall perform any tasks that the A.:A.: may see fit to lay upon him. Let him be mindful that the word Probationer is no idle term, but that the Brothers will in many a subtle way prove him, when he knoweth it not.
6. When the sun shall next enter the sign under which he hath been received, his initiation may be granted unto him. He shall keep himself free from all other engagements for one whole week from that date.
7. He may at any moment withdraw from his association with the A.:A.: simply notifying the Neophyte who introduced him.
8. He shall everywhere proclaim openly his connection with the A.:A.: and speak of It and Its principles (even so little as he understandeth) for that mystery is the enemy of Truth.
One month before the completion of his year, he shall deliver a copy of the Record of his year's work to the Neophyte introducing and repeat to him his chosen chapter of Liber LXV.
9. He shall hold himself chaste, and reverent toward his body, for that the ordeal of initiation is no light one. This is of peculiar importance in the last two months of his Probation.
10. Thus and not otherwise may he attain the great reward: YEA, MAY HE OBTAIN THE GREAT REWARD!

The Oath of a Neophyte.

I, _____ [old motto], being of sound mind and body, and prepared, on this _____ day of _____ [An _____ ☉ in _____ ° of _____] do hereby resolve: in the Presence of _____ a Zelator of the A.:A.: To prosecute the Great Work: which is, to obtain control of the nature and powers of my own being.

Further, I promise to observe zeal in service to the Probationers under me, and to deny myself utterly on their behalf.

May the A.:A.: crown the work, lend me of Its wisdom in the work, enable me to understand the work!

Reverence, duty, sympathy, devotion, assiduity, trust do I bring to the A.:A.: and in eight months from this date may I be admitted to the knowledge and conversation of the A.:A.:!

The Task of a Neophyte.

0. Let any Probationer who has accomplished his task to the satisfaction of the A.:A.: be instructed in the proper course of procedure: which is: – Let him read through this note of his office, and sign it, paying the sum of One Guinea for Liber VII which will be given him on his initiation, and One Guinea for this Portfolio of Class D publications, B-G. Let him obtain the robe of a Neophyte, and entrust the same to the care of his Neophyte.

He shall choose a new motto with deep forethought and intense solemnity, as expressing the clearer consciousness of his Aspiration which the year's Probation has given him.

Let him make an appointment with his Neophyte at the pleasure of the latter for the ceremony of Initiation.

1. The Neophyte shall not proceed to the grade of Zelator in less than eight months; but shall hold himself free for four days for advancement at the end of that period.
2. He shall pass the four tests called the Powers of the Sphinx.
3. He shall apply himself to understand the nature of his Initiation.
4. He shall commit to memory a chapter of Liber VII: and furthermore, he shall study and practice Liber O in all its branches; also he shall begin to study Liber H and some one commonly accepted method of divination. He will further be examined in his power of Journeying in the Spirit Vision.
5. Beside all this, he shall perform any tasks that his Zelator in the name of the A.:A.: and by its authority may see fit to lay upon him. Let him be mindful that the word Neophyte is no idle term, but that in many a subtle way the new nature will stir within him, when he knoweth it not.
6. When the sun shall next enter the sign 240° to that under which he hath been received, his advancement may be granted unto him. He shall keep himself free from all other engagements for four whole days from that date.
7. He may at any moment withdraw from his association with the A.:A.:, simply notifying the Zelator who introduced him.
8. He shall everywhere proclaim openly his connection with the A.:A.: and speak of It and Its principles (even so little as he understandeth) for that mystery is the enemy of Truth.

Furthermore, he shall construct the magic Pentacle, according to the instruction in Liber A.

One month before the completion of his eight months, he shall deliver a copy of his Record to his Zelator, pass the necessary tests, and repeat to him his chosen chapter of Liber VII.

9. He shall in every way fortify his body according to the advice of his Zelator, for that the ordeal of advancement is no light one.
10. Thus and not otherwise may he obtain the great reward: YEA, MAY HE OBTAIN THE GREAT REWARD!

Let him read through this note of his office, and sign it, paying the sum of Three Guineas for the volume containing Liber CCXX, Liber XXVII and Liber DCCCXIII, which will be given him on his initiation.
Let him cause the necessary addition to be made to his Neophyte's robe, and entrust the same to the care of his Zelator.
Let him make an appointment with his Zelator at the pleasure of the latter for the ceremony of initiation.
1. The Zelator shall proceed to the grade of Practicus at any time that authority confers it.
2. He shall pass Examinations in Liber E, Posture and Breathing. He shall have attained complete success in the former, i.e., the chosen posture shall be perfectly steady and easy; and attained the second stage in the latter, i.e., automatic rigidity.
3. He shall further show some acquaintance with and experience of the meditations given in Liber HHH. And in this his Record shall be his witness.
4. He shall commit to memory a chapter of Liber CCXX: he shall pass examinations in Liber HHH.
5. Beside all this, he shall apply himself to work for the A.:A.: upon his own responsibility.
Let him be mindful that the word Zelator is no idle term, but that a certain Zeal will be inflamed within him, why he knoweth not.
6. When authority confers the grade, he shall rejoice therein; but beware, for that that is his first departure from the middle pillar of the Tree of Life.
7. He may at any moment withdraw from his association with the A.:A.: simply notifying the Practicus who introduced him.
Yet let him remember that being entered thus far upon the Path, he cannot escape it, and return to the world, but must ultimate either in the City of the Pyramids or the lonely towers of the Abyss.

ONE STAR IN SIGHT.

*Thy feet in mire, thine head in murk.
O man, how piteous thy plight.
The doubts that daunt, the ills that irk.
Thou hast nor wit nor will to fight –
How hope in heart, or worth in work?
No star in sight!*

*Thy Gods proved puppets of the priest.
"Truth? All's relation!" science sighed.
In bondage with thy brother beast,
Love tortured thee, as Love's hope died
And Love's faith rotted. Life no least Dim star descried.*

*Thy cringing carrion cowered and crawled
To find itself a chance-cast clod
Whose Pain was purposeless; appalled
That aimless accident thus trod
Its agony, that void skies sprawled
On the vain sod!*

*All souls eternally exist,
Each individual, ultimate Perfect – each makes itself a mist
Of mind and flesh to celebrate
With some twin mask their tender tryst Insatiate.*

*Some drunkards, doting on the dream,
Despair that it should die, mistake
Themselves for their own shadow-scheme.
One star can summon them to wake
To self; star-souls serene that gleam
On life's calm lake.*

*That shall end never that began.
All things endure because they are.
Do what thou wilt, for every man
And every woman is a star.
Pan is not dead; he liveth, Pan!
Break down the bar!*

*To man I come, the number of
A man my number, Lion of Light;
I am The Beast whose Law is Love.
Love under will, his royal right –
Behold within, and not above,
One star in sight!*

ONE STAR IN SIGHT.

SVB FIGVRÂ
CDLXXXIX

A glimpse of the structure and system of the Great White Brotherhood.

A.:A.:².

Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the Law.

1. The Order of the Star called S.S. is, in respect of its existence upon the Earth, an organised body of men and women distinguished among their fellows by the qualities here enumerated. They exist in their own Truth, which is both universal and unique. They move in accordance with their own Wills, which are each unique, yet coherent with the universal will.

They perceive (that is, understand, know, and feel) in love, which is both unique and universal.

2. The order consists of eleven grades or degrees, and is numbered as follows: these compose three groups, the Orders of the S.S., of the R.C., and of the G.D., respectively.

The Order of the S.S.

Ipsissimus 10°=1□
Magus 9°=2□
Magister Templi 8°=3□

The Order of the R.C.

(Babe of the Abyss – the link)

Adeptus Exemptus 7°=4□
Adeptus Major 6°=5□
Adeptus Minor 5°=6□

The Order of the G.D.

(Dominus Liminis – the link)

Philosophus 4°=7□
Practicus 3°=8□
Zelator 2°=9□
Neophyte 1°=10□
Probationer 0°=0□

(These figures have special meanings to the initiated and are commonly employed to designate the grades.)

The general characteristics and attributions of these Grades are indicated by their correspondences on the Tree of Life, as may be studied in detail in the Book 777.

Student. – His business is to acquire a general intellectual knowledge of all systems of attainment, as declared in the prescribed books. (See curriculum in Appendix I.)

Probationer. – His principal business is to begin such practices as he may prefer, and to write a careful record of the same for one year.

Neophyte. – Has to acquire perfect control of the Astral Plane.

Zelator. – His main work is to achieve complete success in Asana and Pranayama. He also begins to study the formula of the Rosy Cross.

Practicus. – Is expected to complete his intellectual training, and in particular to study the Qabalah.

Philosophus. – Is expected to complete his moral training. He is tested in Devotion to the Order.

Dominus Liminis. – Is expected to show mastery of Pratyahara and Dharana.

Adeptus (without). – Is expected to perform the Great Work and to attain the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel.

Adeptus (within). – Is admitted to the practice of the formula of the Rosy Cross on entering the College of the Holy Ghost.

² The Name of the Order and those of its three divisions are not disclosed to the profane. Certain swindlers have recently stolen the initials A.:A.: in order to profit by its reputation. [But see the Introduction to the present volume. – Ed.]

Adeptus (Major). – Obtains a general mastery of practical Magick, though without comprehension.

Adeptus (Exemptus). – Completes in perfection all these matters. He then either (a) becomes a Brother of the Left Hand Path or, (b) is stripped of all his attainments and of himself as well, even of his Holy Guardian Angel, and becomes a Babe of the Abyss, who, having transcended the Reason, does nothing but grow in the womb of its mother. It then finds itself a Magister Templi. – (Master of the Temple): whose functions are fully described in Liber 418, as is this whole initiation from Adeptus Exemptus. See also "Aha!" His principal business is to tend his "garden" of disciples, and to obtain a perfect understanding of the Universe. He is a Master of Samadhi.

Magus. – Attains to wisdom, declares his law (See Liber I. vel Magi) and is a Master of all Magick in its greatest and highest sense.

Ipsissimus. – Is beyond all this and beyond all comprehension of those of lower grades.

But of these last three Grades see some further account in The Temple of Solomon the King, Equinox I to X and elsewhere.

It should be stated that these Grades are not necessarily attained fully, and in strict consecution, or manifested wholly on all planes. The subject is very difficult, and entirely beyond the limits of this small treatise.

We append a more detailed account.

3. The Order of the S.S. is composed of those who have crossed the Abyss: the implications of this expression may be studied in Liber 418, the 14th, 13th, 12th, 11th, 10th and 9th Æthyrs in particular.

All members of the Order are in full possession of the Formulæ of Attainment, both mystical or inwardly-directed and Magical or outwardly-directed. They have full experience of attainment in both these paths.

They are all, however, bound by the original and fundamental Oath of the Order, to devote their energy to assisting the Progress of their Inferiors in the Order. Those who accept the rewards of their emancipation for themselves are no longer within the Order.

Members of the Order are each entitled to found Orders dependent on themselves on the lines of the R.C. and G.D. orders, to cover types of emancipation and illumination not contemplated by the original (or main) system. All such orders must, however, be constituted in harmony with the A.:A.: as regards the essential principles.

All members of the Order are in possession of the Word of the existing Æon, and govern themselves thereby. They are entitled to communicate directly with any and every member of the Order, as they may deem fitting.

Every active Member of the Order has destroyed all that He is and all that He has on crossing the Abyss; but a star is cast forth in the Heavens to enlighten the Earth, so that he may possess a vehicle wherein he may communicate with mankind. The quality and position of this star, and its functions, are determined by the nature of the incarnations transcended by him.

4. The Grade of Ipsissimus is not to be described fully; but its opening is indicated in Liber I vel Magi.

There is also an account in a certain secret document to be published when propriety permits. Here it is only said this: The Ipsissimus is wholly free from all limitations soever, existing in the nature of all things without discriminations of quantity or quality between them. He has identified Being and not-Being and Becoming, action and non-action and tendency to action, with all other such triplicities, not distinguishing between them in respect of any conditions, or between any one thing and any other thing as to whether it is with or without conditions.

He is sworn to accept this Grade in the presence of a witness, and to express its nature in word and deed, but to withdraw Himself at once within the veils of his natural manifestation as a man, and to keep silence during his human life as to the fact of his attainment, even to the other members of the Order.

The Ipsissimus is pre-eminently the Master of all modes of existence; that is, his being is entirely free from internal or external necessity. His work is to destroy all tendencies to construct or to cancel such necessities. He is the Master of the Law of Unsubstantiality (Anatta).

The Ipsissimus has no relation as such with any Being: He has no will in any direction, and no

Consciousness of any kind involving duality, for in Him all is accomplished; as it is written "beyond the Word and the Fool, yea, beyond the Word and the Fool."

5. The Grade of Magus is described in Liber I vel Magi, and there are accounts of its character in Liber 418 in the Higher Æthyrs.

There is also a full and precise description of the attainment of this Grade in the Magical Record of the Beast 666.

The essential characteristic of the Grade is that its possessor utters a Creative Magical Word, which transforms the planet on which he lives by the installation of new officers to preside over its initiation. This can take place only at an "Equinox of the Gods" at the end of an "Æon;" that is, when the secret formula which expresses the Law of its action becomes outworn and useless to its further development.

(Thus "Suckling" is the formula of an infant: when teeth appear it marks a new "Æon," whose "Word" is "Eating.")

A Magus can therefore only appear as such to the world at intervals of some centuries; accounts of historical Magi, and their Words, are given in Liber Aleph.

This does not mean that only one man can attain this Grade in any one Æon, so far as the Order is concerned. A man can make personal progress equivalent to that of a "Word of the Æon;" but he will identify himself with the current word, and exert his will to establish it, lest he conflict with the work of the Magus who uttered the Word of the Æon in which He is living.

The Magus is pre-eminently the Master of Magick, that is, his will is entirely free from internal diversion or external opposition; His work is to create a new Universe in accordance with His Will. He is the Master of the Law of Change (Anicca).

To attain the Grade of Ipsissimus he must accomplish three tasks, destroying the Three Guardians mentioned in Liber 418, the 3rd Æthyr: Madness, and Falsehood, and Glamour, that is, Duality in Act, Word and Thought.³

6. The Grade of Master of the Temple is described in Liber 418 as above indicated. There are full accounts in the Magical Diaries of the Beast 666, who was cast forth into the Heaven of Jupiter, and of Omnia in Uno, Unus in Omnibus, who was cast forth into the sphere of the Elements.

The essential Attainment is the perfect annihilation of that personality which limits and oppresses his true self.

The Magister Templi is pre-eminently the Master of Mysticism, that is, His Understanding is entirely free from internal contradiction or external obscurity; His word is to comprehend the existing Universe in accordance with His own Mind. He is the Master of the Law of Sorrow (Dukkha).

To attain the grade of Magus he must accomplish Three Tasks: the renunciation of His enjoyment of the Infinite so that he may formulate Himself as the Finite; the acquisition of the practical secrets alike of initiating and governing His proposed new Universe and the identification of himself with the impersonal idea of Love.⁴ Any neophyte of the Order (or, as some say, any person soever) possesses the right to claim the Grade of Master of the Temple by taking the Oath of the Grade. It is hardly necessary to observe that to do so is the most sublime and awful responsibility which it is possible to assume, and an unworthy person who does so incurs the most terrific penalties by his presumption.

7. The Order of the R.C. The Grade of the Babe of the Abyss is not a Grade in the proper sense, being rather a passage between the two Orders. Its characteristics are wholly negative, as it is attained by the resolve of the Adeptus Exemptus to surrender all that he has and is for ever. It is an annihilation of all the bonds that compose the self or constitute the Cosmos, a resolution of all complexities into their elements, and these thereby cease to manifest, since things are only knowable in respect of their relation to, and reaction on, other things.

8. The Grade of Adeptus Exemptus confers authority to govern the two lower Orders of R.C. and G.D.

The Adept must prepare and publish a thesis setting forth His knowledge of the Universe, and ³ These refer, respectively, to the Paths of 8, The Fool; 2, The Magus; and 2, The Priestess, which attain to Kether. — ED.

⁴ These three tasks refer, respectively, to the Paths of 7, The Star; 1, The Hierophant; and 7, The Empress. — ED.

his proposals for its welfare and progress. He will thus be known as the leader of a school of thought.

(Eliphas Levi's Clef des Grands Mystères, the works of Swedenborg, von Eckartshausen, Robert Fludd, Paracelsus, Newton, Bolyai, Hinton, Berkeley, Loyola, etc., etc., are examples of such essays.)

He will have attained all but the supreme summits of meditation, and should be already prepared to perceive that the only possible course for him is to devote himself utterly to helping his fellow creatures.

To attain the Grade of Magister Templi, he must perform two tasks⁵: the emancipation from thought by putting each idea against its opposite, and refusing to prefer either; and the consecration of himself as a pure vehicle for the influence of the order to which he aspires.

He must then decide upon the critical adventure of our Order: the absolute abandonment of himself and his attainments. He cannot remain indefinitely an Exempt Adept; he is pushed onward by the irresistible momentum that he has generated.

Should he fail, by will or weakness, to make his self-annihilation absolute, he is none the less thrust forth into the Abyss; but instead of being received and reconstructed in the Third Order, as a Babe in the womb of our Lady BABALON, under the Night of Pan, to grow up to be Himself wholly and truly as He was not previously, he remains in the Abyss, secreting his elements round his Ego as if isolated from the Universe, and becomes what is called a "Black Brother." Such a being is gradually disintegrated from lack of nourishment and the slow but certain action of the attraction of the rest of the Universe, despite his now desperate efforts to insulate and protect himself, and to aggrandise himself by predatory practices. He may indeed prosper for a while, but in the end he must perish, especially when with a new Æon a new word is proclaimed which he cannot and will not hear, so that he is handicapped by trying to use an obsolete method of Magick, like a man with a boomerang in a battle where everyone else has a rifle.

9. The Grade of Adeptus Major confers Magical Powers (strictly so-called) of the second rank.

His work is to use these to support the authority of the Exempt Adept his superior. (This is not to be understood as an obligation of personal subservience or even loyalty; but as a necessary part of his duty to assist his inferiors. For the authority of the Teaching and Governing Adept is the basis of all orderly work.)

To attain the Grade of Adeptus Exemptus, he must accomplish Three Tasks⁶: the acquisition of absolute Self-Reliance, working in complete isolation, yet transmitting the word of his superior clearly, forcibly and subtly; and the comprehension and use of the Revolution of the wheel of force, under its three successive forms of Radiation, Conduction and Convection (Mercury, Sulphur, Salt; or Sattvas, Rajas, Tamas), with their corresponding natures on other planes. Thirdly, he must exert his whole power and authority to govern the Members of lower Grades with balanced vigour and initiative in such a way as to allow no dispute or complaint; he must employ to this end the formula called "The Beast conjoined with the Woman" which establishes a new incarnation of deity: as in the legends of Leda, Semele, Miriam, Pasiphæ, and others. He must set up this ideal for the orders which he rules, so that they may possess a not too abstract rallying-point suited to their undeveloped states.

10. The Grade of Adeptus Minor is the main theme of the instructions of the A. A. A. It is characterised by the Attainment of the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel. (See the Equinox, The Temple of Solomon the King; The Vision and the Voice 8th Æthyr; also Liber Samekh, etc. etc.) This is the essential work of every man: none other ranks with it either for personal progress or for power to help one's fellows. This unachieved, man is no more than the unhappiest and blindest of animals. He is conscious of his own incomprehensible calamity, and clumsily incapable of repairing it. Achieved, he is no less than the co-heir of gods, a Lord of Light. He is conscious of his own consecrated course, and confidently ready to run it. The Adeptus Minor needs little help or guidance even from his superiors in our Order.

⁶ These pertain, respectively, to the Paths of ♍, Virgo, The Hermit; ♃, Jupiter, The Wheel of Fortune; and ♌, Leo, Lust, which attain unto Chesed. — ED.

His work is to manifest the Beauty of the Order to the world, in the way that his superiors enjoin and his genius dictates.

To attain the Grade Adeptus Major, he must accomplish two tasks⁷; the equilibration of himself, especially as to his passions, so that he has no preference for any one course of conduct over another, and the fulfilment of every action by its complement, so that whatever he does leaves him without temptation to wander from the way of his True Will.

Secondly, he must keep silence, while he nails his body to the tree of his creative will, in the shape of that Will, leaving his head and arms to form the symbol of Light, as if to make oath that his every thought, word and deed should express the Light derived from the God with which he has identified his life, his love and his liberty – symbolised by his heart, his phallus, and his legs. It is impossible to lay down precise rules by which a man may attain to the knowledge and conversation of His Holy Guardian Angel; for that is the particular secret of each one of us; a secret not to be told or even divined by any other, whatever his grade. It is the Holy of Holies, whereof each man is his own High Priest, and none knoweth the Name of his brother's God, or the Rite that invokes Him.

The Masters of the A.:A.: have therefore made no attempt to institute any regular ritual for this central Work of their Order, save the generalised instructions in Liber 418 (the 8th Æthyr) and the detailed Canon and Rubric of the Mass actually used with success by FRATER PERDURABO in His attainment. This has been written down by Himself in Liber Samekh. But they have published such accounts as those in The Temple of Solomon the King and in John St. John. They have taken the only proper course; to train aspirants to this attainment in the theory and practice of the whole of Magick and Mysticism, so that each man may be expert in the handling of all known weapons, and free to choose and to use those which his own experience and instinct dictate as proper when he essays the Great Experiment.

He is furthermore trained to the one habit essential to Membership of the A.:A.: he must regard all his attainments as primarily the property of those less advanced aspirants who are confided to his charge.

No attainment soever is officially recognised by the A.:A.: unless the immediate inferior of the person in question has been fitted by him to take his place.

The rule is not rigidly applied in all cases, as it would lead to congestion, especially in the lower grades where the need is greatest, and the conditions most confused; but it is never relaxed in the Order of the R.C. or of the S.S.: save only in One Case.

There is also a rule that the Members of the A.:A.: shall not know each other officially, save only each Member his superior who introduced him and his inferior whom he has himself introduced.

This rule has been relaxed, and a "Grand Neophyte" appointed to superintend all Members of the Order of the G.D. The real object of the rule was to prevent Members of the same Grade working together and so blurring each other's individuality; also to prevent work developing into social intercourse.

The Grades of the Order of the G.D. are fully described in Liber 185⁸ and there is no need to amplify what is there stated. It must however, be carefully remarked that in each of these preliminary Grades there are appointed certain tasks appropriate, and that the ample accomplishment of each and every one of these is insisted upon with the most rigorous rigidity.⁹

Members of the A.:A.: of whatever grade are not bound or expected or even encouraged to work on any stated lines, or with any special object, save as has been above set forth. There is however an absolute prohibition to accept money or other material reward, directly or indirectly, in respect of any service connected with the Order, for personal profit or advantage. The penalty is immediate expulsion, with no possibility of reinstatement on any terms soever.

⁸ This book is published in the Equinox Vol. III No. 2.

⁹ Liber 185 need not be quoted at length. It is needful only to say that the Aspirant is trained systematically and comprehensively in the various technical practices which form the basis of Our Work. One may become expert in any or all of these without necessarily making any real progress, just as a man might be first-rate at grammar, syntax, and prosody without being able to write a single line of good poetry, although the greatest poet in soul is unable to express himself without the aid of those three elements of literary composition.

But all members must of necessity work in accordance with the facts of Nature, just as an architect must allow for the Law of Gravitation, or a sailor reckon with currents.

So must all Members of the A.:A.: work by the Magical Formula of the Æon.

They must accept the Book of the Law as the Word and the Letter of Truth, and the sole Rule of Life.¹⁰ They must acknowledge the Authority of the Beast 666 and of the Scarlet Woman as in the book it is defined, and accept Their Will¹¹ as concentrating the Will of our Whole Order. They must accept the Crowned and Conquering Child as the Lord of the Æon, and exert themselves to establish His reign upon Earth. They must acknowledge that "The word of the Law is Θελημα" and that "Love is the law, love under will."

Each member must make it his main work to discover for himself his own true will, and to do it, and do nothing else.¹²

He must accept those orders in the Book of the Law that apply to himself as being necessarily in accordance with his own true will, and execute the same to the letter with all the energy, courage, and ability that he can command. This applies especially to the work of extending the Law in the world, wherein his proof is his own success, the witness of his Life to the Law, that hath given him light in his ways, and liberty to pursue them. Thus doing, he payeth his debt to the Law that hath freed him by working its will to free all men; and he proveth himself a true man in our Order by willing to bring his fellows into freedom.

¹⁰ This is not in contradiction with the absolute right of every person to do his own true Will. But any True Will is of necessity in harmony with the facts of Existence; and to refuse to accept the Book of the Law is to create a conflict within nature, as if a physicist insisted on using an incorrect formula of mechanics as the basis of an experiment.

¹¹ "Their Will" – not, of course, their wishes as individual human beings, but their will as officers of the New Æon.

¹² It is not considered "essential to right conduct" to be an active propagandist of the Law, and so on; it may, or may not, be the True Will of any particular person to do so. But since the fundamental purpose of the Order is to further the Attainment of humanity, membership implies, by definition, the Will to help mankind by the means best adapted thereto.

By thus ordering his disposition, he will fit himself in the best possible manner for the task of understanding and mastering the divers technical methods prescribed by the A.:A.: for Mystical and Magical attainment.

He will thus prepare himself properly for the crisis of his career in the Order, the attainment of the Knowledge and Conversation of his Holy Guardian Angel.

His Angel shall lead him anon to the summit of the Order of the R.C. and make him ready to face the unspeakable terror of the Abyss which lies between Manhood and Godhead; teach him to Know that agony, to Dare that Destiny, to Will that catastrophe, and to keep Silence for ever as he accomplishes the act of annihilation.

From the Abyss comes No Man forth, but a Star startles the Earth, and our Order rejoices above that Abyss that the Beast hath begotten one more Babe in the Womb of Our Lady, His Concubine, the Scarlet Woman, BABALON.

There is no need to instruct a Babe thus born, for in the Abyss it was purified of every poison of personality; its ascent to the highest is assured, in its season, and it hath no need of seasons for it is conscious that all conditions are no more than forms of its fancy.

Such is a brief account, adapted as far as may be to the average aspirant to Adeptship, or Attainment, or Initiation, or Mastership, or Union with God, or Spiritual Development, or Mahatmaship, or Freedom, or Occult Knowledge, or whatever he may call his inmost need of Truth, of our Order of A.:A.:.

It is designed principally to awake interest in the possibilities of human progress, and to proclaim the principles of the A.:A.:.

The outline given of the several successive steps is exact; the two crises – the Angel and the Abyss – are necessary features in every career. The other tasks are not always accomplished in the order given here; one man, for example, may acquire many of the qualities peculiar to the Adeptus Major, and yet lack some of those proper to the Practicus.¹³ But the system here given shows the correct order of events, as they are arranged in Nature; and in no case is it safe for a man to neglect to master any single detail, however dreary and distasteful it may seem. It often does so, indeed; that only insists on the necessity of dealing with it. The dislike and contempt for it bear witness to a weakness and incompleteness in the nature which disowns it; that particular gap in one's defences may admit the enemy at the very turning-point of some battle. Worse, one were shamed for ever if one's inferior should happen to ask for advice and aid on that subject and one were to fail in service to him! His failure – one's own failure also! No step, however well won for oneself, till he is ready for his own advance!

Every Member of the A.:A.: must be armed at all points, and expert with every weapon. The examinations in every Grade are strict and severe: no loose or vague answers are accepted. In intellectual questions, the candidate must display no less mastery of his subject than if he were entered in the "final" for Doctor of Science or Law at a first class University.

In examination of physical practices, there is a standardised test. In Asana, for instance, the candidate must remain motionless for a given time, his success being gauged by poising on his head a cup filled with water to the brim; if he spill one drop, he is rejected.

He is tested in "the Spirit Vision" or "Astral Journeying" by giving him a symbol unknown and unintelligible to him, and he must interpret its nature by means of a vision as exactly as if he had read its name and description in the book when it was chosen.

special "Grace" was placeted so as to admit him to matriculation. Similarly a brilliant Exorcist might be an incompetent Diviner. In such a case the A.:A.: would refuse to swerve from its system; the Aspirant would be compelled to remain at the Barrier until he succeeded in breaking it down, though a new incarnation were necessary to permit him to do so. But no technical failure of any kind soever could necessarily prevent him from accomplishing the Two Critical Tasks, since the fact of his incarnation itself proves that he has taken the Oath which entitled him to attain to the Knowledge and Conversation of his Holy Guardian Angel, and the annihilation of this Ego. One might therefore be an Adeptus Minor or even a Magister Templi, in essence, though refused official recognition by the A.:A.: as a Zelator owing to (say) a nervous defect which prevented him from acquiring a Posture which was "steady and easy" as required by the Task of that grade.

The power to make and "charge" talismans is tested as if they were scientific instruments of precision, as they are.

In the Qabalah, the candidate must discover for himself, and prove to the examiner beyond all doubt, the properties of a number never previously examined by any student.

In invocation the divine force must be made as manifest and unmistakable as the effects of chloroform; in evocation, the spirit called forth must be at least as visible and tangible as the heaviest vapours; in divination, the answer must be as precise as a scientific thesis, and as accurate as an audit; in meditation, the results must read like a specialist's report of a classical case.

By such methods, the A.:A.: intends to make occult science as systematic and scientific as chemistry; to rescue it from the ill repute which, thanks both to the ignorant and dishonest quacks that have prostituted its name, and to the fanatical and narrow-minded enthusiasts that have turned it into a fetish, has made it an object of aversion to those very minds whose enthusiasm and integrity make them most in need of its benefits, and most fit to obtain them.

It is the one really important science, for it transcends the conditions of material existence and so is not liable to perish with the planet, and it must be studied as a science, sceptically, with the utmost energy and patience.

The A.:A.: possesses the secrets of success; it makes no secret of its knowledge, and if its secrets are not everywhere known and practised, it is because the abuses connected with the name of occult science disincline official investigators to examine the evidence at their disposal.

This paper has been written not only with the object of attracting individual seekers into the way of Truth, but of affirming the propriety of the methods of the A.:A.: as the basis for the next great step in the advance of human knowledge.

Love is the law, love under will.

¹⁰ The Chiefs both of the A.:A.: lineage that has undertaken to publish EQUINOX Vol. IV, and of the Soror Estai lineage, have designated An Evocation of Bartzabal, the Spirit of Mars as Liber 325. The two versions, however, are not identical. The version in EQUINOX IV:2 is actually a retitled expansion of the original version published in EQUINOX I:9, to include diary notes and other supplemental material. Because it was packaged as a diary, they gave it a Class C designation. On the other hand, we have continued to circulate the original, and have designated it as Class B, on the basis that it represents an example or model on which to construct other rituals of its type. The original publication had neither Document Class nor number assigned.

Catalogue of Official Documents
FRATERNITAS A.:A.:

CLASS A

Class A consists of books of which may be changed not so much as the style of a letter: that is, they represent the utterance of an Adept entirely beyond the criticism of even the Visible Head of the Organization. (All are included in The Holy Books of Thelema. Those marked by † are contained in OEAHMA, published by College of Thelema.)

- I 1 Liber B vel Magi (Book B, or The Book of the Magus)
This is an account of the Grade of Magus, the highest grade that it is ever possible to manifest in any way whatever upon this plane: or so it is said by the Masters of the Temple. [6⁰=5⁰]
- VII † 7 Liber Liberi vel Lapidis Lazuli, Adumbratio Kabbalæ Egyptiorum
(The Book of Wine, or The Book of Lapis Lazuli, Outline of Egyptian Qabalah)
An account of the voluntary emancipation of a certain Exempt Adept from his Adeptship. These are the birth words of a Master of the Temple. The nature of this book is sufficiently explained by its title. It gives in magical language an account of the initiation of a Master of the Temple. Its seven chapters are referred to the seven planets in the following order: Mars, Saturn, Jupiter, Sol, Mercury, Luna, Venus. This book is the only parallel, for beauty of ecstasy, to Liber LXV. [1⁰=10⁰]
- X 10 Liber Porta Lucis (The Book of the Gate of Light)
This book is an account of the sending forth of the Master by the A.:A.: and an explanation of his mission. [0⁰=0⁰]
- XXVII † 27 Liber Trigrammaton (The Book of Trigrams)
A book of Trigrams of the mutations of the TAO with the YIN and the YANG. An account of the cosmic process: it describes the course of Creation under the figure of the interplay of three principles. The book corresponds to the "Stanzas of Dzyan" in another system. [3⁰=8⁰]
- LXV † 65 Liber Cordis Cincti Serpente (The Book of the Heart Girt with a Serpent)
An account of the relations of the aspirant with her Holy Guardian Angel. This book is given to Probationers, as the attainment of the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel is the Crown of the Outer College. (Similarly Liber 7 is given to Neophytes, as the grade of Master of the Temple is the next resting-place, and Liber 220 to Zelatores, since that carries her to the highest of all possible grades. Liber 27 is given to the Practicus, as in this book is the ultimate foundation of the highest theoretical Qabalah, and Liber 813 to the Philosophus, as it is the foundation of the highest practical Qabalah.) [0⁰=0⁰]
- LXVI † 66 Liber Stellæ Rubeæ (The Book of the Ruby Star)
A secret ritual, the Heart of IAO-OAI, delivered unto V.V.V.V.V. for his use in a certain matter of Liber Legis, and written down under the figure LXVI. [6⁰=5⁰]
- XC 90 Liber Tzaddi vel Hamus Hermeticus
(Book Tzaddi, or The Book of the Hermetic Fish-Hook)
An account of Initiation, and an indication as to those who are suitable for the same. [0⁰=0⁰]

- IX 9 Liber E vel Exercitiorum (Book E, or The Book of Exercises)
This book instructs the aspirant in the necessity of keeping a record. Suggests methods of testing physical clairvoyance. Gives instruction in asana, pranayama and dharana, and advises the application of tests to the physical body, in order that the student may thoroughly understand her own limitations. [1^o=10^o, 2^o=9^o]
- XXI Khing Kang King, or The Classic of Purity
By Ko Hsuen. A new translation from the Chinese by the Master Therion.
- XXIV 24 De Nuptiis Secretis Deorum cum Hominibus
(On the Secret Marriages of Gods with Men) (O.T.O.)
A Secret Instruction of the VIII^c of O.T.O. This instruction is not officially published.
- XXX 30 Liber Libræ (The Book of the Balance)
An elementary course of morality suitable for the average person. [5=6]
- LVIII 58 "The Temple of Solomon the King"
A magical biography of Fra. Perdurabo and his early career, including his Path of Initiation, the reception of The Book of the Law, and his crossing of the Abyss; serialized in THE EQUINOX, Vol. I. It contains many useful rituals, and summaries of the studies and practices that marked his course.
- [LVIII] [58] "Gematria"
This is an article on the Qabalah in "The Temple of Solomon the King," EQUINOX V. [3^o=8^o]
- LXIV 64 Liber Israfel
An instruction in a suitable method of preaching. An example of ceremonial invocation of a God-force. (Formerly called Liber Anubis.) [3^o=8^o]
- LXXI 71 The Voice of the Silence / The Two Paths / The Seven Portals (H.P. Blavatsky)
With an elaborate commentary by Frater O.M., 7^c=4^o, the most learned of all the Brethren of the Order, who had given eighteen years to the critical study of this masterpiece.
- LXXVIII 78 A Description of the Cards of the Tarot
A complete treatise on the Tarot, giving a description of the correct designs of the cards with their attributions and symbolic meanings on all the planes. Also includes a method of divination by their use. [1^o=10^o]
- LXXXIV 84 Liber Chanokh (The Book of Enoch)
A brief abstraction of the Symbolic representation of the Universe derived by Dr. John Dee through the scrying of Sir Edward Kelley. [3^o=8^o]
- XCVI 96 Liber Gaias, A Handbook of Geomancy (The Book of the Earth)
Gives a simple and fairly satisfactory system of divination by Geomancy. [1^o=10^o]
- CI 101 An Open Letter to those who may wish to join the Order (O.T.O.)
A promulgation of O.T.O., enumerating the duties and privileges of membership therein.

- CXI 111 Liber Aleph, The Book of Wisdom or Folly
An extended and elaborate commentary on The Book of the Law, in the form of a letter from the Master Therion to his magical son. This book contains some of the deepest secrets of initiation, with a clear solution of many cosmic and ethical problems.
- CLVII 157 Tao Teh Ching
A new translation, with a commentary, by the Master Therion. This is the most exalted and yet practical of the Chinese classics.
- CLXV 165 A Master of the Temple
An account of the attainment of a Master of the Temple: given in full detail by Frater O.I.V.V.I.O. This is the Record of a man who actually attained by the system taught by the A.:A.:.
- CCVII 207 A Syllabus of the Official Instructions of A.:A.: & Curricula of the Grades.
An enumeration of the Official Publications of the A.:A.: with a brief description of the contents of each book joined to the assigned curricula of the various Grades.
This paper, in its present form, is a modern composite and expansion of two earlier, less complete papers. It was administratively revised by the Imperator of the Soror Estai lineage of A.:A.: in 1997 E.V., and internally assigned to Class B. (The original Liber 207 is the Syllabus published in EQUINOX X. The original Curriculum was published in EQUINOX XI.)
- CCXVI 216 The I Ching (The Book of Changes)
A new translation, with a commentary, by the Master Therion. Confucius said that if his life were to be prolonged by a few years, he would give fifty of them to the study of this book.
- CCXXVIII 228 De Natura Deorum (On the Nature of the Gods) (O.T.O.)
A Secret Instruction of the VII° of O.T.O. This instruction is not officially published.
- CCCXXV 325 An Evocation of Bartzabal, the Spirit of Mars.
Its nature is sufficiently explained by its title. [4°=7°]
(Originally, neither catalogue number nor Document Class was assigned. These have been assigned internally within the Sor. Estai lineage. A "classic" list of official documents would not include this Document.)
- CCCLXVII 367 De Homunculo (On the Homunculus) (O.T.O.)
A Secret Instruction of the X° of O.T.O. This instruction is not officially published.
- CDLXXIV 474 Liber Os Abysmi vel פֶּעַךְ
(The Book of the Mouth of the Abyss, or The Book of Daäth)
An instruction in a purely intellectual method of entering the Abyss. [1°=10°, 7°=4°]
- CDLXXXIX 489 One Star in Sight
A glimpse of the structure and system of the Great White Brotherhood, A.:A.: The best description available of the Tasks of the Grades of the Orders R.:C.: and S.:S.: and the practical substitute for Liber Collegii Interni. [ALL GRADES]
(Originally, neither catalogue number nor Document Class was assigned. These have been assigned internally within the Sor. Estai lineage. A "classic" list of official documents would not include this Document, except through its inclusion in Magick in Theory & Practice.)

- D 400 Sepher Sephiroth
A dictionary of Hebrew words arranged according to their numerical value. [3^o=8^o]
- DXXXVI 536 Liber Βατραχοφρενοβοσκοσομομαχια
(The Book of the Battle of the Frog, the Mind, the Roar, and the Universe)
An instruction in expansion of the field of the mind. [3^o=8^o]
- DCLXVI 666 Liber Artemis Iota vel De Coitu Scholia Triviae
(The Book of Artemis Iota; or, On Sexual Union, Commentaries on Trivia)
An essay on sex-morality, and the relationship of its instincts and forces to the Path of Attainment. (Trivia is not the English isonym, but a variant Latin name of the goddess Diana, or Artemis.)
- DCCLXXVII 777 777 vel Prolegomena Symbolica ad Systemam Sceptico-Mysticæ Viæ Explicandæ, Fundamentum Hieroglyphicum Sanctissimorum Scientiæ Summæ
(A Compilation of Symbols, Towards a Systematization of the Skeptical-Mystical Way Set Forth. A Hieroglyphic Foundation of the Most Holy Things of the Higher Knowledge)
A complete dictionary of the correspondences of all magical elements, reprinted with extensive additions, making it the only standard comprehensive book of reference ever published. It is to the language of occultism what Webster or Murray is to the English language. [3^o=8^o]
- DCCCLXVIII 868 Liber Viarum Viæ (The Book of the Byways of Life)
A graphic account of magical powers, classified under the Tarot trumps. [6^o=5^o]
- CMXIII 913 Liber Thisharb, Viæ Memoriae (The Book of the Journey of the Memory)
Gives methods of attaining the magical memory or memory of past lives, and an insight into the function of the aspirant in this present life. [2^o=9^o, 7^o=4^o]
- MCCLXIV 1.264 The Greek Qabalah
A complete dictionary of all sacred and important words and phrases given in the Books of the Gnosis and other important writings, both in the Greek and the Coptic.

CLASS A-B

Some publications are composite, and pertain to more than one class.

- CDXV 415 Opus Lutetianum (The Paris Working)
The Book of the High Magick Art that was worked by Frater O.S.V. 6^o=5^o and Frater L.T. 2^o=9^o. (Lutetia is the name originally given to Paris by the Celts, and by which it was first known to the Romans.) [0^o=0^o]
- CDXVIII 418 Liber XXX Ærum vel Sæculi, The Vision and the Voice
Being the Vision and the Voice of the Angels of the thirty Æthyrs. Besides being the classical account of the thirty Æthyrs and a model of all visions, the cries of the Angels should be regarded as accurate, and the doctrine of the function of the Great White Brotherhood understood as the foundation of the aspiration of the Adept. The account of the Master of the Temple, in particular, should be taken as authentic.

The instruction in the 8th Æthyr pertains to Class D; that is, it is an official ritual. The same remarks apply to the account of the proper method of invoking the Æthyrs given in the 18th Æthyr. [0°=0°]

CLASS A and B

- CMLXIII 963 Θεσσαυρου Ειδωλων (The Treasure-House of Images)
Ecstatic hymns to the 12 Signs of the Zodiac, by Fra. N.S.F. They are a most astonishing achievement in symbolism. The effect is to carry away the performer into the sublimest ecstasy. It possesses all the Magick of oriental religious rites, but the rapture is purely religious. It is not to be confused with eroticism, and that although many of the symbols are of themselves violently erotic. (Only the short note pertains to Class A.) [0°=0°, 2°=9°]

CLASS C

Class C consists of matter that is to be regarded rather as suggestive than anything else.

- XXXIII 33 An Account of A.∴A.∴
First written in the language of his period by the Councilor Von Eckartshausen, and now revised and rewritten in the Universal Cipher. An elementary suggestive account of the work of the Order in its relation to the average person. [0°=0°]
- XLI 41 Thien Tao (The Way of Heaven), or The Synagogue of Satan
An advanced study of attainment by the method of equilibrium on the ethical plane. [6°=5°]
- LV 55 The Chymical Jousting of Brother Perardua
An account of the mystical and magical Path in the language of Alchemy. [4°=7°]
- LIX 59 Across the Gulf
A fantastic account of a previous incarnation. Its principal interest is that its story of the overthrowing of Isis by Osiris may help the reader to understand the meaning of the overthrowing of Osiris by Horus in the present Æon. [4°=7°]
- LXVII 67 The Sword of Song
A critical study of various philosophies. An account of Buddhism. [3°=8°, 4°=7°]
- XCv 95 The Wake World
A poetical allegory of the relations of the soul and the Holy Guardian Angel. [Dom Lim]
- CXLVIII 148 The Soldier & the Hunchback
An essay on the method of equilibrium on the intellectual plane.
- CXCVII 197 The High History of Good Sir Palamedes the Saracen Knight and of his following of the Questing Beast
A poetic account of the Great Work, and enumeration of many obstacles. [4°=7°]

- CCXLII 242 Aha!
An exposition in poetic language of several of the ways of attainment and the results obtained. [4^o=7^o]
- CCCXXXIII 333 The Book of Lies, falsely so-called
With an extended commentary by the Master Therion. This book contains some of the most valuable mystic epigrams ever written, and also some very important secret rituals. (Its Chapters KE, AF and MA are in Class D.) It is the official textbook of A.:A.: for "Babes of the Abyss," but is recommended even to beginners as highly suggestive. [2^o=9^o]
- CCCXXXV 335 Adonis
This gives an account in poetic language of the struggle of the human and divine elements of consciousness, giving their harmony following upon the victory of the latter. [4^o=7^o]
- DCCXXIX 729 The Amalantrah Working
(This book has not been published.)
- DCCCXI 811 Energized Enthusiasm
A Note on Theurgy. An adumbration of the practical instructions contained in Liber IAO and Liber HHH, with which it completes a triad. [1^o=10^o, 2^o=9^o]
- DCCCLX 860 John St. John
A model of what a magical record should be, so far as accurate analysis and fullness of description are concerned. [DomLim]
- MMCMXI 2.911 A Note on Genesis
A model of Qabalistic ratiocination. [3^o=8^o]

CLASS D

Class D consists of Official Rituals and Instructions.

- [no number] Liber Mysteriorum (The Book of the Sacred Rites)
The confidential initiation ritual manual for A.:A.: initiation officers. See Chapter 7 of the present book. [DomLim] (Designated Class D internally within the Soror Estai lineage. A "classic" list of Class D documents would not include this.)
- III 3 Liber Jugorum (The Book of Yokes)
An instruction for the control of speech, action and thought. [0^o=0^o, 2^o=9^o, 3^o=8^o, 4^o=7^o, DomLim]
- V 5 Liber 5 vel Reguli (The Book of the Prince)
Being the Ritual of the Mark of the Beast: an incantation proper to invoke the energies of the Æon of Horus, adapted for the daily use of the magician of whatever grade.

- VIII 8 Ritual 8
The official ritual of Initiation to the 5^o=6^o Grade of Adeptus Minor. The 8th Æthyr from The Vision & the Voice. [DomLim, 5^o=6^o]
- XI 11 Liber Nu
An instruction for attaining Nuit. [DomLim]
- XIII 13 Liber Graduum Montis Abiegni (The Book of the Slopes of Mt. Abiegnus)
An account of the task of the Aspirant from Probationer to Adept. [ALL GRADES]
- XVI 16 Liber Turris vel Domus Dei
(The Book of the Tower, or The Book of the House of God)
An instruction for attainment by the direct destruction of thoughts as they arise in the mind. [3^o=8^o, 4^o=7^o]
- XVII 17 Liber I.A.O. (inextant)
Gives three methods of attainment through a willed series of thoughts. This book has not been published. It is the active form of Liber H H H. The article "Energized Enthusiasm" is an adumbration of this book. [2^o=9^o]
- XXV 25 The Star Ruby
This is the chapter called the "Star Ruby" in The Book of Lies. It is an improved form of the "lesser" ritual of the Pentagram. [1^o=10^o]
- XXVIII 28 Liber Septem Regum Sanctorum
(The Book of the Seven Holy Kings) (unpublished)
A ritual of Initiation bestowed on certain select Probationers. [1^o=10^o]
- XXXVI 36 The Star Sapphire
This is the chapter called "The Star Sapphire" in The Book of Lies, giving an improved ritual of the Hexagram. [2^o=9^o]
- XLIV 44 The Mass of the Phoenix
This is Chapter MΔ of The Book of Lies. An instruction in a simple and exoteric form of Eucharist. [6^o=5^o]
- LXI 61 Liber Causæ (The Book of Origins)
The Preliminary Lection, including the History Lection. A manuscript giving an account of the history of the A.:A.: in recent times. This history contains no mythology; it is a statement of facts susceptible of rational proof. The object of the book is to discount mythopoeia. [0^o=0^o, 1^o=10^o]
- LXX 70 Σταυρος Βατραχου (The Cross of the Frog)
The ceremonies proper to obtaining a familiar spirit of a Mercurial nature as described in the Apocalypse of St. John the Divine, from a frog or toad.
- C 100 Liber Ἄγανη vel C vel Azoth, Sal Philosophorum,
The Book of the Unveiling of the Sangraal, or Liber 𐄂 (O.T.O.)
A Secret Instruction of the IX^c of O.T.O. Has not been, and at present will not be, published.

- CXX 120 Liber Cadaveris (The Book of the Corpse), or Passing Through the Tuat
The Ritual of Initiation of the 2^o=9^o Grade of Zelator. [2^o=9^o, 5^o=6^o]
- CLXXV 175 Liber Astarte vel Berylli (The Book of Astarte, or The Book of the Beryl)
An instruction in attainment by the method of devotion. [0^o=0^o, 4^o=7^o]
- CLXXXV 185 Liber Collegii Sancti (The Book of the Holy Society)
Being the tasks of the grades and their Oaths proper to Liber XIII. This is the set of official papers of the various grades from Probationer through Adeptus Minor. [0^o=0^o through 5^o=6^o]
- CC 200 Liber Resh vel Helios (Book Resh, or The Book of the Sun)
An instruction for adorations of the Sun four times daily, with the object of composing the mind to meditation and of regularizing the practices. [0^o=0^o]
- CCVI 206 Liber רך vel Spiritus (Book Ru, or The Book of the Breath)
Full instruction in pranayama. [0^o=0^o, 2^o=9^o]
- CCCXI 341 Liber HHH
Gives three methods of attainment through a willed series of thoughts. [1^o=10^o, 2^o=9^o, 3^o=8^o]
- CDXII 412 Liber A vel Armorum (The Book of Arms or Tools)
An instruction for the preparation of the Elemental Instruments. [0^o=0^o through Dom Lim]
- [CDXVIII] 418 [A passage from Liber 418, the 18th Æthyr]
- CDXIX 419 Liber Collegii Interni (The Book of the Inner Society)
Not yet published. See One Star in Sight. [5^o=6^o through 8^o=3^o]
(This catalogue number and Document Class were assigned internally within the Sor. Estai lineage of A. A. A., to which the extant edition is distinctive. According to one archivist, Crowley tentatively designated Liber Collegii Interni as Liber 811, a number already assigned to another official instruction. A "classic" list of official documents would not include this Document, or would list it as inextant.)
- CDLI 451 Liber Siloam
A direct method of inducing trance. Not yet published. [5^o=6^o]
- DLV 555 Liber H A D
An instruction for attaining Hadit. [DomLim]
- DCLXXI 671 Liber חרעא (The Book of the Gate)
The ritual of the initiation of the 1^o=10^o Grade of Neophyte. It includes sub-rituals numbered from 672 to 676. [1^o=10^o]
- DCLXXI 671 Liber Pyramidos (The Book of the Pyramid)
A self-initiation adaptation of Liber חרעא, written by Fra. O.M. for use in his own advancement to the 6^o=5^o Grade of Adeptus Major. [1^o=10^o]

- DCCC 800 Liber Samekh, Theurgia Goetia Summæ, Congressus cum Dæmone
(Book Samekh, The Highest Goetic Theurgy, Congress with the Genius)
 This is the Preliminary Invocation (so-called) of The Goetia, with a complete explanation of the barbarous names of evocation used therein, and the secret rubric of the ritual, by the Master Therion. This is the most potent invocation extant, and was the ritual employed by the Master Therion himself for the attainment of the Knowledge and Conversation of his Holy Guardian Angel during the semester of his performance of the Operation of the Sacred Magick of Abramelin the Mage. [5°=6°]
- DCCCXXXI 831 Liber IOD
 An instruction giving three methods of reducing the manifold consciousness to the Unity. (Formerly called Liber Vesta.) [DomLim]

CLASS E

Class E documents deal especially with the propagation of the Law of Thelema.

- II 2 The Message of the Master Therion
 It explains the essence of the new law in a very simple manner. [0°=0°]
- [IV] 4 The Equinox of the Gods (Book Four, Part IV)
 Part IV of Book IV (Liber ABA). (The remainder of Liber IV is unclassified.) [0°=0°]
- CL 150 Liber CL vel 𐄂𐄃𐄄, A Sandal, De Lege Libellum (The Law of Liberty)
 A short explanation of the Law, extolling its sublime virtue. By the Master Therion. [0°=0°]
- CCC 300 Khabs am Pekht
 An Epistle of Therion 9°=2°, a Magus of A.:A.:, to His Son, being an Instruction in a matter of all importance, to wit, the means to be taken to extend the Dominion of the Law of Thelema throughout the whole world. [0°=0°]
- DCCCXXXVII 837 The Law of Liberty
 This is a further explanation of The Book of the Law in reference to certain ethical problems. [0°=0°]

* Although none of these documents has been classified officially (and we do not undertake to do so now), many of these documents closely resemble the type of instructional material contained in the several classes. Documents resembling Class B include Libri 265, 343, 614, 536, and 888. Documents resembling Class C include Libri 46, 51, 73, 81, 93, 106, 633, and 800. Documents resembling Class D include Libri 15, 365, and 850; also Liber 132 which, however, was written as a private instruction for one initiate, and Liber 194, which only has ceremonial significance within O.T.O. Those documents resembling Class E include Libri 52, 77, and 161.

† Part IV of Book Four is in Class E. Parts I-III, though never classified, most closely resemble material otherwise placed in Class B. Some Class A, B, and D material is incorporated in the appendices of Part III.

UNNUMBERED DOCUMENTS

Below are important works that did not come under the original system of classification, including some works written after the official Syllabus was published. All are by Aleister Crowley. Most or all contain information relevant to the A.:A.: system. They are included here for completeness, but were never normalized as official A.:A.: instructions; that is, they never have been given a number, a class, or a position in the formal instructional system.

A.:A.: Robes,
Grade Signs
& Officers

A.:A.: ROBES, GRADE SIGNS & OFFICERS

Because the A.:A.: does not function as a lodge system, many of the accouterments of other systems – such as secret handshakes and tokens of admission – are not part of it. There are other details, however – such as the distinctive gestures or apparel – which are historically attributed to each grade and have become an established part of the system.

Admittedly, these details are far less important than, say, the nature of the practices or the underlying Qabalistic model of the system. But this does not mean that they are without importance altogether. This Appendix is devoted to their explanation.

From the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, the A.:A.: inherited and retained some of these details, discarding others. The so-called Grand Words of each grade are actually the Divine Names attributed to the corresponding sephiroth, and are tabulated in Liber 777, Col. V. The Mystic Numbers and Passwords are similarly tabulated in Liber 777, Cols. X and CXIV respectively. Not much use is made of these latter details; but they are part of the Qabalistic traditions of the Order and do occasionally emerge in Crowley's writings, so that it is useful to be familiar with them and to derive such personal significance from them as one can.

Similarly, the Mystic Titles of the grades can, in most cases, be found in published Golden Dawn rituals. Crowley frequently made use of these, as in his attribution of the Unicorn to Hod and the Practicus Grade. This attribution is incomprehensible unless one already knows that the traditional Mystic Title of the Practicus is a phrase that translates, "Unicorn From the Stars."

In the remainder of this Appendix, we will discuss, in some detail, three of these supplemental topics: specifically, the robes and signs of each grade, and the traditional governmental structure of the Order.

ROBES

As in other magical Orders, there is, in the A.:A.:, a distinctive robe for each Grade.

No one source has survived giving a complete, detailed description of these robes. The most complete (but not detailed) single source known to us is a half-page of notes that Israel Regardie typed on behalf of Aleister Crowley when serving as his secretary. Regardie permitted us to copy off these notes in 1980. They agree completely with the more obscure descriptions given in an advertisement that appeared in various issues of THE EQUINOX, Vol. I (see page 239 following). Here are the descriptive notes as Regardie received them from Crowley:

- 0=0 White Tau-robe, no hood. Gold braid along bottom hem, cuffs, neck. Pentagram on front, hexagram on back.
- 1=10 Black with hood, no insignia
- 2=9 Add silver eye in triangle to hood
- 3=8 Add silver hexagram of 48 rays to hood
- 4=7 Add Calvary cross to breast
- D.L. Add 5-petalled rose to center of cross
- 5=6 (without) Same as Probationer, add symbol
- 5=6 (within) White robe, with D.L. insignia
- 6=5 As for 5=6 but red
- 7=4 As for 5=6 but violet

Further information – primarily fine points and details – has been garnered and collated from multiple sources. Except for two variant statements concerning the Probationer robe, made by Aleister Crowley in Magick Without Tears (near the end of his life), all of the consulted sources confirm each other.¹

In Book Four, Part II, Cap. XII, "The Robe," Crowley discussed the magical robe in broad terms; and, as is true of most of the matters discussed in Book Four, Part II, the particulars he described are distinctly A.:A.: particulars. "The Robe of the Magician may be varied according to his grade and the nature of his working," he observed; but there are two primary robes, one white and unhooded, and the other black and hooded. Both are Tau-shaped, extending fully to the feet, with long, generous sleeves that widen or flare toward the wrists. For freedom and elegance of movement, this classic Tau pattern is hard to beat!

During the period when Volume I of THE EQUINOX was being published (1909-1913 e.v.), the official robe tailor of the A.:A.: was William Northam in London. A correspondent has informed us that the firm of William Northam was still in business in recent years, though at a different address; and it may be that original design specifications remain on file with that office. We appeal, therefore, to any of our British readers to research this matter for us, so that more accurate information can be made available in the future.

A.:A.: robes serve three purposes. First, they are the characteristic robes worn by aspirants in the different stages of their progress. As a review of Liber 185 will confirm, obtaining the proper robe is one of the formal prerequisites for admission to each successive grade. Second, they are worn in magical ceremonies corresponding to the grade symbol. For example, the robe of a Philosopher 4^o=7^o, corresponding to the sephirah Netzach and the planet Venus, may be worn in a ritual of Venus; or that of a Neophyte 1^o=10^o, corresponding to the sephirah Malkuth (the Sphere of the Elements), may be worn in a ritual of the Elements, or of chthonic forces. Third, they are worn by specific officers in the various A.:A.: initiation (and other) ceremonies. Thus, in the official notice of A.:A.: grade robes published in various numbers of THE EQUINOX, it was stated: "Any of these robes may be worn by a person of whatever grade on appropriate occasions."

Numerous black-and-white photographs of these robes have survived – especially of Outer College robes – and are published in many available books. These pictures have allowed us to confirm verbal descriptions and, especially, to more finely tune our knowledge of proportions and measurements.

The reader will notice, in the discussions below, that the robes for the grades of 1^o=10^o through Dominus Liminis are described as being the same robe, but with the progressive addition of various symbols. Some may wish to acquire a separate robe for each grade, acquiring thereby a closet full of planetary magical robes; but on a more conservative budget, and in any case for a generally more practical approach, it is suggested that one black robe be prepared, and that the separate symbols be constructed separately and attached by black snaps or Velcro.

PROBATIONER ROBE.

This is the only white robe in the Order G.D. As mentioned in Chapter 2, it is actually the robe of the Adeptus Minor. Photographs of both the front and the back of this robe have been reproduced in Chapter 2. There is more exacting and detailed published information on this robe than on any of the others.

It is a white Tau robe, without hood. The neck, sleeves, and hem are trimmed with gold. Upon the breast is a scarlet Pentagram. Upon the back is a Hexagram, formed of the interlocking of a red triangle upward-pointed and a blue triangle downward-pointed. In the center of the Hexagram is a golden Greek Tau (that is, a standard English T, sans serif). Surviving photographs show the Hexagram large, covering much of the back above the waistline, and the Pentagram similarly proportioned to the front.

Thus has it been written: "Before me flames the Pentagram, and behind me shines the Six-Rayed Star."

And, in Liber 8: "the star of flame showeth forth Ra Hoor Khuit openly upon the breast, and secretly the blue triangle that descendeth is Nuit, and the red triangle that ascendeth is Hadit. And I [the Holy Guardian Angel] am the golden Tau in the midst of their marriage."

¹ It is worth noting that, with one exception, all of Aleister Crowley's literary descriptions – especially those in his novel Moonchild – are consistent with the other available descriptions of these robes. The one exception is the implication in Moonchild that each grade's robe had a distinctive color. Although this is true in the Inner College (R.C.), it is not true of the Outer College (G.D.): it is certain that the robes for Neophyte through Dominus Liminis are all black, differing only by the particular symbols placed thereon.

WILLIAM NORTHAM

Robemaker

MR NORTHAM begs to announce that he has been entrusted with the manufacture of all robes and other ceremonial apparel of members of the A.:A.: and its adepts and aspirants.

The Probationer's robe is fitted for performance of all general invocations and especially for the I. of the H. G. A. ; a white and gold nemmes may be worn. These robes may also be worn by Assistant Magi in all composite rituals of the White.

The Neophyte's robe is fitted for all elemental operations. A black and gold nemmes may be worn. Assistant Magi may wear these in all composite rituals of the Black.

The Zelator's robe is fitted for all rituals involving I O, and for the infernal rites of Luna. In the former case an Uraeus crown and purple nemmes, in the latter a silver nemmes, should be worn.

The Practicus' robe is fitted for all rituals involving I I, and for the rites of Mercury. In the former case an Uraeus crown and green nemmes, in the latter a nemys of shot silk, should be worn.

The Philosophus' robe is fitted for all rituals involving O O, and for the rites of Venus. In the former case an Uraeus crown and azure nemmes, in the latter a green nemmes, should be worn.

The Dominus Liminis' robe is fitted for the infernal rites of Sol, which must never be celebrated.

The Adeptus Minor's robe is fitted for the rituals of Sol. A golden nemmes may be worn.

The Adeptus' robe is fitted for the particular workings of the Adeptus, and for the Postulant at the First Gate of the City of the Pyramids.

The Adeptus Major's robe is fitted for the Chief Magus in all Rituals and Evocations of the Inferiors, for the performance of the rites of Mars, and for the Postulant at the Second Gate of the City of the Pyramids.

The Adeptus Exemptus' robe is fitted for the Chief Magus in all Rituals and Invocations of the Superiors, for the performance of the rites of Jupiter, and for the Postulant at the Third Gate of the City of the Pyramids.

The Babe of the Abyss has no robe.

For the performance of the rites of Saturn, the Magician may wear a black robe, close-cut, with narrow sleeves, trimmed with white, and the Seal and Square of Saturn marked on breast and back. A conical black cap embroidered with the Sigils of Saturn should be worn.

The Magister Templi robe is fitted for the great Meditations, for the supernal rites of Luna, and for those rites of Babylon and the Graal. But this robe should be worn by no man, because of that which is written: "Ecclesia abhorret a sanguine."

Any of these robes may be worn by a person of whatever grade on appropriate occasions

According to an ad that first ran in EQUINOX I, "Mr. W. Northam, Robe Maker and Tailor, Begs to inform those concerned that he has been entrusted by the A.:A.: with the manufacture of the necessary robes and other appurtenances of members of the Society." His later, more detailed ad (above) is the basis of most that was known about the A.:A.: robes for many years. Read carefully, it discloses quite a lot of information!

A white and gold nemyss may be worn with this robe. Besides being the characteristic robe of the Probationer, it is also fitted:

(a) for the performance of all general invocations and especially for the Invocation of the Holy Guardian Angel; and

(b) for any Assistant Magus in all composite rituals of the White.

NEOPHYTE ROBE (Malkuth).

The Neophyte robe is a black Tau robe without insignia of any kind. It has a very full hood, which may be drawn over the entire head. (This may optionally be made detachable if separate hoods are desired corresponding to separate grades. For some purposes, it is desirable to have eye slits cut into the hood.)

A black and gold nemyss may be worn with this robe. It is also fitted:

(a) for all Elemental operations; and

(b) for any Assistant Magus in all composite rituals of the Black.

ZELATOR ROBE (Yesod).

The Zelator robe is identical to the Neophyte robe, with the addition of a further symbol. This symbol is a silver "eye in the triangle" added to the front of the hood, as described in Chapter 4.

Numerous photographs survive in print showing this triangle as part of the more complex Practicus hood. The triangle is the same size and design whether it appears alone or as part of the Practicus design.

This robe is also fitted:

(a) for all rituals involving I O, for which an Uræus crown and purple nemyss should be worn with it; and

(b) for the infernal rites of Luna, for which a silver nemyss should be worn.

PRACTICUS ROBE (Hod).

The Practicus robe is identical to the Zelator robe, with the addition of a further symbol. This symbol is a silver hexagram of 48 rays, surrounding and encompassing the Zelator triangle. Numerous photographs survive, which show this design quite clearly. The hexagram is drawn to fit exactly within an implicit 8" circle.

This robe is also fitted:

(a) for all rituals involving I I, for which an Uræus crown and green nemyss should be worn with it; and

(b) for rites of Mercury, for which a nemyss of shot silk should be worn.

PHILOSOPHUS ROBE (Netzach).

The Philosophus robe is identical to the Practicus robe, with the addition of a further symbol. This symbol is a six-squared, eight-colored cross, added to the center of the breast.

The cross is a standard six-squared (or "Calvary") cross. The vertical bar is 4" high and 1" wide; the horizontal bar is 1" high and 3" wide. Each bar is halved length-wise. The essential pattern can be seen in many published photographs, which should be consulted for this purpose.

The four arms of the cross correspond to the flashing colors of the Four Elements. For the following description, envision that you are looking at the cross, rather than wearing it. The bottom arm is black on the left and white on the right. The left arm is red on the top and green on the bottom. The top arm is yellow on the right and violet on the left. The right arm is blue on the bottom and orange on the top.

This robe is also fitted:

(a) for all rituals involving O O, for which an Uræus crown and azure nemyss should be worn with it; and

(b) for rites of Venus, for which a green nemyss should be worn.

DOMINUS LIMINIS ROBE.

The Dominus Liminis robe is identical to the Philosophus robe, with the addition of a further symbol. This symbol is a red five-petaled rose added to the center of the cross. The complete Dominus Liminis robe appears in numerous published photographs.

This robe is also fitted for the infernal rites of Sol, which must never be celebrated.

ADEPTUS MINOR (WITHOUT) ROBE.

The robe of the Adeptus Minor (without) is identical to the Probationer robe. There is, however, one obscurity or conflict of detail. One source states that a further symbol now is added; yet, the robe description given in Liber 8, the chief instruction issued for the Adeptus Minor Without, says that the Probationer robe is used per se.

This detail, therefore, must be left to the Adepts' judgment. This is wholly appropriate, inasmuch as the main function of this robe is in the Invocation of the Holy Guardian Angel.

This robe is also fitted for the rituals of Sol. A golden nemyss may be worn with it.

ADEPTUS (WITHIN) ROBE (Tiphereth).

The robe of the full Adeptus Minor is an entirely different robe than has been worn before. It is a white robe, edged with gold at the cuffs, hem, and collar. Upon the breast is a six-squared cross of gold united with a five-petaled ruby rose. (These are proportioned exactly as are the rose and cross on the Dominus Liminis robe.)²

The Adeptus robe is also fitted:

(a) for the particular workings of the Adeptus; and

(b) for the Postulant at the First Gate of the City of the Pyramids.

ADEPTUS MAJOR ROBE (Geburah).

The Adeptus Major robe is identical in every respect to the robe of an Adeptus Minor Within, except that the robe itself is red instead of white. This robe is also fitted:

(a) for the Chief Magus in all Rituals and Evocations of the Inferiors;³

(b) for the performance of rites of Mars; and

(c) for the Postulant at the Second Gate of the City of the Pyramids.

² According to one minor source, this robe is yellow rather than white, all other details being exactly as given above. However, the description given here concurs with that, conveyed to me verbally by Israel Regardie, of an A.:A.: Adeptus robe which he personally saw C.S. Jones (Frater Achad) wear. I believe the occasion was a public reading, by Jones, of Crowley's works. Not only was Frater Achad one of Crowley's most conscientious students, he was, at that time, Cancellarius of the A.:A.:.

³ For an example of the intended practical use of these robes, see An Evocation of Bartzabel, The Spirit of Mars by Frater Perdurabo in EQUINOX, Vol. I, No. 9. The Chief Magus wore the robe of a Major Adept, and the Uræus crown and nemyss. The Assistant Magus and Magus Adjuvant each wore a Probationer's robe with a white and gold nemyss (see supra).

It may be suspected, with good reason, that the Chief Magus wore the 6^o=5^o robe because this is an evocation of the Spirit of Mars. However, the more comprehensive reason is that the magician is advised to wear this robe "in all Rituals and Evocations of the Inferiors." Compare the pattern of the similar (yet different) traditional Golden Dawn attire in V.:H.: Fra. Iehi Aur's Ritual for the Evocation Unto Visible Appearance of the Great Spirit Taphthartharath (the Spirit of Mercury) in No. 3 of THE EQUINOX, wherein the Chief Magus (there called "Mighty Magus of Art") wore, inter alia, a red mantle over the basic robe; and each Assistant Magus wore the basic white 5=6 robe of that Order.

ADEPTUS EXEMPTUS ROBE (Chesed).

The Adeptus Exemptus robe is identical in every respect to the robe of an Adeptus Major or of an Adeptus Minor Within, except that the robe itself is violet. This robe is also fitted:

(a) for the Chief Magus in all Rituals and Invocations of the Superiors;

(b) for the performance of rites of Jupiter; and

(c) for the Postulant at the Third Gate of the City of the Pyramids.

The Babe of the Abyss has no robe.

For the performance of rites of planetary (as distinct from Supernal) Saturn, the Magician is advised to wear a black robe, close-cut, with narrow sleeves, trimmed with white, and the Seal and Square of Saturn marked on breast and back. A conical black cap embroidered with the Sigils of Saturn should be worn.

The Magister Templi robe (not here described) is fitted:

(a) for the great Meditations;

(b) for the supernal rites of Luna; and

(c) for rites of Babalon and the Graal.⁴

SIGNS

A.:A.: Grade signs are substantially the same as those employed in the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn up through the grade of 5^o=6^o. Beyond Adeptus Minor, the A.:A.: has its own distinctive signs which were not employed in the old Order.

These signs are not used, in the Masonic fashion, as "recognition signs" on the physical plane. There is, therefore, no need for secrecy concerning them; and Crowley published most of them openly at one time or another. They are employed primarily as magical "forms" which kinesthetically key the magician's consciousness to the sephirothic and other principles corresponding to the various grades; and as such, they are employed in various rituals. Any of these signs may be employed by a person of whatever grade on appropriate occasions.

The A.:A.: Grade Signs fall into three broad categories, these being: four Elemental signs (all corresponding to Outer College grades); four signs (all corresponding to the Adeptus Minor Grade) called L.V.X. Signs (from lux, the Latin word for "light"); and five signs (corresponding to the Grades $6^{\circ}=5^{\square}$ through $8^{\circ}=3^{\square}$) called N.O.X. Signs (from nox, the Latin word for "night"). Interwoven with these, to the three "portal" grades that are preliminary to the three Orders – that is, Probationer, Dominus Liminis, and Babe of the Abyss – are attributed distinctive pairs of complementary, or mutually equilibrating, signs.

⁴ "But this robe should be worn by no man, because of that which is written: 'Ecclesia abhorret a sanguine.'"

Small variations in these signs exist in varying contexts. Many of them were employed in the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, and also have been used by other initiating orders. Inasmuch as they all refer to classical images of Egyptian deities, these signs are subject to some individual interpretation, and are appointed slightly differently from order to order.

The descriptions below are taken mostly from Liber O and Liber Reguli. Illustrations of many of these signs are given in Liber O and in the front of Magick in Theory & Practice. In a few cases, the information given below should be supplemented by oral instruction.

SIGNS OF THE PROBATIONER $0^{\circ}=0^{\square}$

The Sign of the Enterer, or Sign of Attack. Standing upright, the feet together, draw both hands back to the side of the eyes and let them shoot out, at the same time throwing the body forward and advancing the left foot about 12". (Characteristic attitude of Horus.)

The Sign of Silence, or Sign of Defense. Next, withdraw the left foot, and place the right (or as some say, the left) forefinger (or as some say the thumb, the fingers being closed) upon the lips. (Characteristic attitude of Harpocrates.)

SIGN OF THE NEOPHYTE $1^{\circ}=10^{\square}$

The Sign of Set. Advance the right foot, stretch out the right hand upwards and forwards, the left hand downwards and backwards, the palms open. (Attitude of the god Set fighting.)

SIGN OF THE ZELATOR $2^{\circ}=9^{\square}$

The Sign of Shu. Standing upright, the feet together, stretch both arms upwards and outwards, the elbows bent at right angles, the hands bent back, the palms upwards as if supporting a weight. (Attitude of the god Shu supporting the sky.)

SIGN OF THE PRACTICUS $3^{\circ}=8^{\square}$

The Sign of Auramoth. Standing upright, the feet together, raise the arms till the elbows are on a level with the shoulders, bring the hands across the chest, touching the thumbs and tips of fingers so as to form a triangle, apex downwards, over the heart.

SIGN OF THE PHILOSOPHUS $4^{\circ}=7^{\square}$

The Sign of Thoum-Æsh-Neith. Standing upright, the feet together, raise the arms above the head and join the hands, so that the tips of the fingers and of the thumbs meet, formulating a triangle over the forehead.

SIGNS OF THE DOMINUS LIMINIS

The Signs of the Rending & Closing of the Veil. Standing upright, the feet together, extend the hands in front of you, palms outwards; separate them as if in the act of rending asunder a veil or curtain; and then bring them together as if closing it up again, and let the hands fall to the side.

SIGNS OF THE ADEPTUS MINOR $5^{\circ}=6^{\square}$

The Sign of Osiris Slain. Standing upright, the feet together, extend the arms in the form of a cross.⁵

The Sign of the Mourning of Isis. Next, raise the right arm to point upwards, keeping the elbow square, and lower the left arm to point downwards, keeping the elbow square, while turning the head over the left shoulder looking down so that the eyes follow the left forearm. (Svastika.)

The Sign of Typhon and Apophis. Next, raise the arms at an angle of 60° to each other above the head, which is thrown back. (Trident.)⁶

⁵ These four signs are, collectively, known as the Signs of L.V.X. The Sign of Osiris Slain, being in the form of a Cross, subsumes the other three, because the letters L, V, and X can each be derived from ✕. The last three signs of this grade then represent, respectively and by their physical shape, the individual letters L (Isis), V (Apophis), and X (Osiris Risen). They reflect the entire diurnal solar course, measured from sunset. There are many other interpretations as well.

⁶ We believe, although without documentary verification, that this is also the Sign of Set Triumphant mentioned in Liber 36, The Star Sapphire. Its use in combination with the Sign of Babalon (or "Isis in Welcome") symbolizes the union of Set and Isis; the "triumphant" aspects of both the $5^{\circ}=6^{\square}$ and $8^{\circ}=3^{\square}$ formulae; and certain mysteries derived from the letters Y and X, which are the basic shapes of these two signs.

The Sign of Osiris Risen. Next, cross the arms on the breast, right over left, the fingertips touching the shoulders, and bow the head. (Pentagram.)

SIGN OF THE ADEPTUS MAJOR 6°=5°

The Sign of Puer. Standing with feet together and head erect, let the right hand be raised (the thumb extended at right angles to the fingers), the forearm vertical at a right angle with the upper arm, which is horizontally extended in the line joining the shoulders. Let the left hand, the thumb extended and the fingers clenched, rest at the junction of the thighs.⁷ (Attitude of the Gods Khem, Horus, Mentu, etc.; the Roman N.)

SIGN OF THE ADEPTUS EXEMPTUS

7°=4°

The Sign of Vir. Standing with feet together, the hands are held to the temples, with clenched fingers and thumbs thrust out forwards; the head is then bowed and pushed out, as if to symbolize the butting of a horned beast. (Attitude of Pan, Bacchus, Amoun, etc.; the Greek ω.)

SIGNS OF THE BABE OF THE ABYSS

The Sign of Puella. Standing with feet together and head bowed, shield the groin area with the left hand, and the heart area with the right hand. (Attitude of the Venus de Medici.)

⁷ A (probably unintentional) commentary on this sign was included in Albert G. Mackey's Encyclopedia of Freemasonry, originally published in 1909. Mackey's brief entry for 'Khem' reads, "The Egyptian Deity, Amon, in the position that is metaphorically used in representations of Buddha and by the Hermetic philosophers, extends one hand toward Heaven and the other toward Nature." This equates the Adeptus Major sign with the classic Tarot posture of The Magician. It is of no small interest that Crowley's first known reference to this sign is written, undated, in his personal grimoire between an entry known to have been written in October, 1908, and another dated November, 1909; it merely says, "N, as Khem."

In the unlikely chance that Crowley was not familiar with Mackey's encyclopedia in 1909, it is absolutely certain that he was familiar with Kenneth Mackenzie's earlier The Royal Masonic Cyclopædia, on which many of Mackey's entries were based. For 'Khem,' Mackenzie – an associate of Eliphas Levi's, whom some credit as the real source of the Golden Dawn practical formulæ – wrote, "The ithyphallic deity of Egypt, or the generating Ammon. He is representing standing – his right arm raised in the attitude of a sower, and his hand open. . . This is analogous to the hands in the Hermetic figures – one raised on high to indicate heaven, and the other pointing to the earth, where the operations of nature and germination take place. The figure of Buddha is the same."

The Sign of Mulier, or Sign of Isis in Welcome. Then separate the feet widely, raise the arms to suggest a crescent, and throw back the head. (Attitude of Baphomet, Babalon, Isis in Welcome, the Microcosm of Vitruvius: the Latin X or Hebrew ך (Tzaddi final) as its cognate.)⁸

SIGN OF THE MAGISTER TEMPLI

8°=3°

The Sign of Mater Triumphans, or Sign of Isis Rejoicing. Stand with the feet together, the left arm curved as if supporting a child; the thumb and index finger of the right hand pinch the nipple of the left breast, as if offering it to that child. (Attitude of Isis with the babe Horus.)

OFFICERS

Government of A.:A.: was vested originally in several officers modeled after those of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn.

The main governing officers are traditionally four in number: three Chiefs titled Cancellarius, Imperator, and Praemonstrator; and one above them all titled Praemonstrator-General.

This structure of "one above three" dates from at least the early 17th Century. The Fama Fraternitatis provided the basic pattern, in its legend of the founding of the Order.

The definitions of the attributions, natures, and duties of the A.:A.: Chiefs are substantially the same as those of their namesakes in the old Golden Dawn. The descriptions given in Golden Dawn documents (such as the 5=6 instruction Z I) agree in broad terms with the duties of corresponding A.:A.: officers as discussed in One Star in Sight and elsewhere.

Cancellarius means "chancellor." Within the A.:A.:, the form "Chancellor" is actually used much more often than "Cancellarius," especially with respect to communication with the interested public, and also within official documents such as Liber 185.⁹ This office – symbolically corresponding to the Egyptian god Thoth, as scribe and recorder – is primarily of a secretarial nature and responsible for all major communications, circulation of approved instructions, and overall record-keeping within the Order. The Seal of the Cancellarius, which is impressed into rose pink wax (Tiphereth in the King Scale), is the Eye in the Triangle design within a circle comprising twelve sets of three rays, around which are placed the initials of the officer's motto.

⁸ These two Babe of the Abyss signs, corresponding, respectively, to Venus and Isis, would seem to symbolize the intersection, on the Tree of Life, of the Paths of Daleth and Gimel.

⁹ Chancellor and Cancellarius (the only Chief name mentioned in the Fama Fraternitatis) have relevance in Freemasonry, which affected the H.O.G.D.'s usage, and also (either directly or indirectly) that of the A.:A.:. The terms are found

Imperator means "commander, director, ruler." It is the basis of such related English words as emperor and imperative. It designates the officer primarily responsible for the "hands-on" management of the Order.¹⁰ The Seal of the Imperator, which is impressed into orange wax (Geburah in the King Scale), is an Egyptian-styled right eye within a triangle having two points upward (a so-called "water triangle"), all within a circular field. The initials of the officer's motto are about the points of the triangle.

The Seal of the Imperator

Praemonstrator means "director, guide, teacher," from the Latin monstrare, "to show, exhibit, teach, advise," etc. His duties primarily involve responsibilities for the preservation of the form and pattern of the Order, and for the promulgation of its actual teachings, under the direction of the Order S.:S.:. The Seal of the Praemonstrator, which is pressed into purple wax (Chesed in the King Scale), is a shield containing an Egyptian-styled left eye. The initials of the officer's motto are contained within the points of the shield.

Respectively, these officers correspond to the 5^o=6^o Grade of Adeptus Minor; the 6^o=5^o Grade especially in Medieval Templarism, referring to a territorial or provincial officer who handled correspondence, was "the proper custodian of the mysteries, and had to instruct novitiate knights in their duties. . ." (Mackenzie). This description resembles those employed in the H.O.G.D. and its successors.

of Adeptus Major; and the 7^o=4^o Grade of Adeptus Exemptus. Their symbols and insignia partake of the symbolism, respectively, of the sephiroth Tiphereth, Geburah, and Chesed. Ideally, the Chiefs should hold these corresponding grades; and if they do not, their authority is more symbolic than actual. Nonetheless, the A.:A.:s Founders did, when necessary, appoint a person to an Honorary Grade so that he could assume the responsibilities of one of these offices and assist in the governmental responsibilities.¹¹

Above these three Chiefs is the Praemonstrator-General. By tradition, this officer must be at least a 7^o=4^o. Only one occasion is known to us of Crowley openly acting as Praemonstrator-General to authorize a document's issuance.¹² On that occasion he signed himself as "N.:," which stands for Nemo, a generic name of all who hold the Grade of Magister Templi 8^o=3^o. During the same period, several other A.:A.: documents were promulgated in THE EQUINOX under the imprimatur of "N.: Fra. A.:A.:," that is, "Nemo, a brother of the Third Order (A.:A.: proper)."

There are, also, several lesser officers, which need not be discussed extensively here. One Star in Sight adequately describes the optional office of Grand Neophyte. Occasional mention is made, in various official documents, of an Orator and a Treasurer, among others; but the four here mentioned are the most important.

In most circumstances, these officers have little official contact with members of the Order below the Grade of Dominus Liminis. The A.:A.: system rests substantially on the solitary relationship of each aspirant to the Superior who admitted her.

¹¹ The most obvious example of this was the appointment of J.F.C. Fuller – who as Frater Per Ardua resigned, still a Probationer, on October 27, 1910 – as an honorary 5^o=6^o so that, as V.:H.: Frater Non Sine Fulmine, he could serve as the first Cancellarius of the Order.

¹² Book Four, Part 1, circa 1912.

The intrusion of titular authority is more likely to disrupt that relationship than to strengthen it. Furthermore, as a rule, there is no direct communication between the Chiefs and any member below the 2^o=9^o Grade.¹³ As a careful inspection of Liber 185 will make clear, a Zelator advancing a Probationer to Neophyte is to return that Neophyte's signed oath directly to the Cancellarius. A similar procedure is employed in all later grades of the G.:D.:. In contrast, however, a Neophyte admitting a Probationer does not return the signed oath directly to the Cancellarius but, rather, returns it through the agency of her Zelator. This is possibly more of a symbolic act than a functional one: for the Zelator represents the consciousness of Yesod which, on the Tree of Life diagram, has a direct linkage to Tiphereth (the Cancellarius), and Malkuth (the Neophyte) does not.

We can best trace the historical identities of the main A.:A.: governors through the imprimaturs (official authorizations for publication) prefixed to various A.:A.: documents as they were issued in THE EQUINOX and elsewhere.

From EQUINOX Nos. 1 and 2 we learn unequivocally that the initial Chiefs were as follows:

Praemonstrator D.D.S. 7^o=4^o
(George Cecil Jones)

Imperator O.S.V. 6^o=5^o
(Aleister Crowley)

Cancellarius N.S.F. 5^o=6^o
(J.F.C. Fuller)

Fuller's grade was honorary, as stated before. Jones and Crowley were at least 7^o=4^o at the time.

The same individuals, listed a little differently, authorized the publication of the first edition of the three-volume vellum edition of ΘΕΛΗΜΑ a few months earlier, in late 1908 or early 1909:

V.V.V.V.V. Pro Coll. Summ.

D.D.S. Pro Coll. Int.
O.M.

V.N. Pro Coll. Ext.
P.
P.A.

¹³ An exception is the twice-yearly communication of the Word of the Equinox to every Neophyte, by the Cancellarius, Orator, or Praemonstrator.

O.S.V.,
Imp.

Neither Grades nor officer titles are listed in ΘΕΛΗΜΑ, though the structure is similar to that in THE EQUINOX. Jones, Crowley, and Fuller are identified by their First Order mottoes of Volo Noscere, Perdurabo, and Per Ardua, respectively, and appear Pro Collegio Exteriore, "for the Outer College." The only specified Chief role is Crowley, as Fra. O.S.V., serving as Imperator. Jones and Crowley, under their 7^o=4^o identities, appear Pro Collegio Interiore, "for the Inner College." V.V.V.V.V. – which was later Crowley's 8^o=3^o motto but which, at this point, he regarded as an outside contacting entity, the parent of most of the Thelemic holy books – appears Pro Collegio Summo.

George Cecil Jones (Fra. D.D.S. or V.N.) was the Praemonstrator of the Order from its founding until his death in the early 1950s. He was actively listed (in print) as Praemonstrator as late as 1936, and never stepped down from the post nor was replaced during his life. Fuller, on the other hand, was out of the picture by late 1910. When Liber Legis was published, in 1913 in EQUINOX No. 10, a Frater I.M. was listed as Cancellarius. We do not know the identity of this brother.¹⁴

It was after Fuller's departure and Jones' retirement from visibility in 1911 that Crowley emerged as Praemonstrator-General.

When EQUINOX Vol. III, No. 1 appeared in 1919, a substantially expanded officer structure was displayed, closer to the form in ΘΕΛΗΜΑ. On behalf of the Outer College (Pro Coll. Ext.) were still listed a Praemonstrator, an Imperator, and a Cancellarius. The first two were, of course, Cecil Jones and Aleister Crowley, identified once more as V.N. and P., respectively. The Cancellarius, however, was new. It was "Crowley's other Jones," Charles Stansfeld Jones, under the name by which he is best known, Frater Achad.

Also listed at this time were three governing officers for the Inner College (Pro Coll. Int.), untitled but corresponding to the Chief Adept, Second Adept, and Third Adept who governed the R.R. et A.C. of the old Mathers Second Order. These A.:A.: officers were G.C. Jones (Fra. D.D.S.) and Crowley (Fra. O.M.), both listed as 7^o=4^o;

¹⁴ His gender is known because he is referenced again by Charles Stansfeld Jones in a letter dated September, 1918, as "Fra. J.M., 5^o=6^o."

Crowley (Fra. O.S.V.) at $6^{\circ}=5^{\square}$; and C.S. Jones (Fra. Parsifal) at $5^{\circ}=6^{\square}$.

Additionally, there now were three officers listed on behalf of the Third Order (Pro Coll. Summ.). These were given as 777, $8^{\circ}=3^{\square}$ (C.S. Jones); 666, $9^{\circ}=2^{\square}$ (Crowley); and 93, $10^{\circ}=1^{\square}$ (presumably Aiwass, 117).¹⁵

This three-tiered governmental structure was mostly repeated in the imprimatur of The Equinox of the Gods, published in 1936. The only exceptions were in the Inner College officers, where the name of Fra. D.D.S. was replaced by that of Sor. I.W.E. (Martha Kuntzel).¹⁵

For some period between these publication dates (1919 and 1936), in the early 1920s when Crowley was operating his Abbey of Thelema in Cefalù, Sicily, the Cancellaria was S.:H.: Soror Alostrael $8^{\circ}=3^{\square}$ (Leah Hirsig), according to documents surviving from that period.

During the last decade of his life, Crowley issued some official instructions solely from his office of Imperator (which office he held from the founding of A.:A.: until his death). Some examples of this include the Khing Kang King and The Heart of the Master. In 1944, The Book of Thoth was published under the imprimatur of Crowley as Fra. O.M. $7^{\circ}=4^{\square}$, and of an unidentified Frater or Soror I.A.: $5^{\circ}=6^{\square}$. (This could not have been V.:H.: Fra. Iehi Aur, who was dead by that date).

After Crowley's death in 1947, his authority in both O.T.O. and the lesser-known Order of Thelemites passed to Karl J. Germer (S.:H.: Frater Saturnus, who was already a X° O.T.O. and $8^{\circ}=3^{\square}$ A.:A.:). However, there appears not to have been any similar explicit authorization with respect to the general governance of A.:A.:,¹⁶ despite the fact that Germer was the senior known living member of A.:A.: on the planet at that time – except for G.:H.: Fra. D.D.S. who, at age 74, appears not to have been taking a visible role. Germer never assumed any official senior function, although he acted as mentor to many serious Thelemites of that time, including Jane Wolfe and Phyllis Seckler; Germer's own student, Marcelo Motta; and others.

¹⁶ Crowley did extend to Germer a "power of attorney" on July 18, 1941 (when Germer was already living in the United States), "to be my personal agent and representative in the United States of America," specifically authorizing and empowering him "to initiate, carry through, and conclude all contracts that he may see fit to make on my behalf, especially as concerns my work as a writer and lecturer." It is a letter of

When Germer died in October 1962, the senior known living member of A.:A.: was Phyllis Seckler (Soror Meral),¹⁷ who followed Germer's pattern and asserted no authority in A.:A.: except with respect to her own students.

We can conclude confidently, therefore, that there has been no single incarnate governing Chief of A.:A.: worldwide since December 1947. For the most part, this lack of visible Chiefs causes no problems. Perpetuation of the A.:A.: system rests primarily on the continuity of responsibility from person to person, i.e., from a given teacher to a given student.

Yet, some portions of the formal A.:A.: system require a Chief structure, if they are to function optimally and according to the plan originally established by its Founders. In response to these needs, senior members of some continuing lineages have assumed Chief functions and responsibilities within their individual lines. (This has been done, for example, in that branch of A.:A.: descending from Frater To Mega Therion through Soror Estai to Soror Meral.) It must be strongly emphasized, however, that such intralinear Chiefs cannot reasonably be held to have any formal standing outside of their own lineages.

agency, not of successorship. In the same letter he stated that, "All persons in authority under me in connection with the A.:A.: and O.T.O. are to recognize him as their chief."

¹⁷ Occasionally one encounters a claim that Motta was the senior member at Germer's death, based on his having listed himself, in the front of the Brazil edition of Liber Aleph, as a $6^{\circ}=5^{\square}$ and Imperator. The theory that Germer, his A.:A.: Superior, recognized him as such is exploded by a letter from Germer to Motta in June 1962 – after Liber Aleph came out, and about four months before Germer's death – in which he told Motta, "you are at best a Neophyte!" (i.e., a $1^{\circ}=10^{\square}$).

FRATER SATURNUS, $8^{\circ}=3^{\square}$

Real authority, in any case, is the consequence of actual spiritual stature, not assumed titles. Even the Adepts of A.:A.: have not the authority to modify or remake it. Rather, their first duty is the preservation of the mystical and magical system of the A.:A.: as it was delivered unto us all by our predecessors, and its intact transmission to their successors and heirs – that is, to all who dearly seek the Light.

1. Had! The manifestation of Nuit.
2. The unveiling of the company of heaven.
3. Every man and every woman is a star.
4. Every number is infinite: there is no difference.
5. Help me, o warrior lord of Thebes, in my unveiling before the Children of men!
6. Be thou Hadit, my secret centre, my heart & my tongue!
7. Behold! it is revealed by Aiwass the minister of Hoor-paar-kraat.
8. The Khabs is in the Khu, not the Khu in the Khabs.
9. Worship then the Khabs, and behold my light shed over you!
10. Let my servants be few & secret: they shall rule the many & the known.
11. These are fools that men adore: both their Gods & their men are fools.
12. Come forth, o children, under the stars, & take your fill of love!
13. I am above you and in you. My ecstasy is in yours. My joy is to see your joy.
14. Above, the gemmed azure is
 The naked splendour of Nuit:
 She bends in ecstasy to kiss
 The secret ardours of Hadit.
 The winged globe, the starry blue,
 Are mine, O Ankh-af-na-khonsu!
15. Now ye shall know that the chosen priest & apostle of infinite space is the prince-priest the Beast; and in his woman called the Scarlet Woman is all power given. They shall gather my children into their fold: they shall bring the glory of the stars into the hearts of men.
16. For he is ever a sun, and she a moon. But to him is the winged secret flame, and to her the stooping starlight.
17. But ye are not so chosen.

18. Burn upon their brows, o splendid serpent!

19. O azure-lidded woman, bend upon them!

20. The key of the rituals is in the secret word which I have given unto him.

21. With the God & the Adorer I am nothing: they do not see me. They are as upon the earth; I am Heaven, and there is no other God than me, and my lord Hadit.

22. Now, therefore, I am known to ye by my name Nuit, and to him by a secret name which I will give him when at last he knoweth me. Since I am Infinite Space, and the Infinite Stars thereof, do ye also thus. Bind nothing! Let there be no difference made among you between any one thing & any other thing; for thereby there cometh hurt.

23. But whoso availeth in this, let him be the chief of all!

24. I am Nuit, and my word is six and fifty.

25. Divide, add, multiply, and understand.

26. Then saith the prophet and slave of the beauteous one: Who am I, and what shall be the sign? So she answered him, bending down, a lambent flame of blue, all-touching, all penetrant, her lovely hands upon the black earth, & her lithe body arched for love, and her soft feet not hurting the little flowers: Thou knowest! And the sign shall be my ecstasy, the consciousness of the continuity of existence, the omnipresence of my body.

27. Then the priest answered & said unto the Queen of Space, kissing her lovely brows, and the dew of her light bathing his whole body in a sweet-smelling perfume of sweat: O Nuit, continuous one of Heaven, let it be ever thus; that men speak not of Thee as One but as None; and let them speak not of thee at all, since thou art continuous!

28. None, breathed the light, faint & faery, of the stars, and two.

29. For I am divided for love's sake, for the chance of union.

30. This is the creation of the world, that the pain of division is as nothing, and the joy of dissolution all.

31. For these fools of men and their woes care not thou at all! They feel little: what is, is balanced by weak joys; but ye are my chosen ones.

32. Obey my prophet! follow out the ordeals of my knowledge! seek me only! Then the joys of my love will redeem ye from all pain. This is so: I swear it by the vault of my body; by my sacred heart and tongue; by all I can give, by all I desire of ye all.

33. Then the priest fell into a deep trance or swoon, & said unto the Queen of Heaven: Write unto us the ordeals; write unto us the rituals; write unto us the law!

34. But she said: the ordeals I write not: the rituals shall be half known and half concealed: the Law is for all.

35. This that thou writest is the threefold book of Law.

36. My scribe Ankh-af-na-khonsu, the priest of the princes, shall not in one letter change this book: but lest there be folly, he shall comment thereupon by the wisdom of Ra-Hoor-Khu-it.

37. Also the mantras and spells: the obeah and the wanga; the work of the wand and the work of the sword: these he shall learn and teach.

38. He must teach; but he may make severe the ordeals.

39. The word of the Law is Θελημα.

40. Who calls us Thelemites will do no wrong, if he look but close into the word. For there are therein Three Grades, the Hermit, and the Lover, and the man of Earth. Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the Law.

41. The word of Sin is Restriction. O man! refuse not thy wife, if she will! O lover, if thou wilt, depart! There is no bond that can unite the divided but love: all else is a curse. Accurséd! Accurséd be it to the aeons! Hell.

42. Let it be that state of manyhood bound and loathing. So with thy all: thou hast no right but to do thy will.

43. Do that, and no other shall say nay.

44. For pure will, unassuaged of purpose, delivered from the lust of result, is every way perfect.

45. The Perfect and the Perfect are one Perfect and not two; nay, are none!

46. Nothing is a secret key of this law. Sixty-one the Jews call it; I call it eight, eighty, four hundred & eighteen.

47. But they have the half: unite by thine art so that all disappear.

48. My prophet is a fool with his one, one, one: are not they the Ox, and none by the Book?

49. Abrogate are all rituals, all ordeals, all words and signs. Ra-Hoor-Khuit hath taken his seat in the East at the Equinox of the Gods; and let Asar be with Isa, who also are one. But they are not of me. Let Asar be the adorant, Isa the sufferer: Hoor in his secret name and splendour is the Lord initiating.

50. There is a word to say about the Hierophantic task. Behold! there are three ordeals in one, and it may be given in three ways. The gross must pass through fire: let the fine be tried in intellect, and the lofty chosen ones in the highest. Thus ye have star & star, system & system: let not one know well the other!

51. There are four gates to one palace: the floor of that palace is of silver and gold: lapis lazuli & jasper are there; and all rare scents: jasmine & rose, and the emblems of death. Let him enter in turn or at once the four gates: let him stand on the floor of the palace. Will he not sink? Amn. Ho! warrior, if thy servant sink? But there are means and means. Be goodly therefore: dress ye all in fine apparel: eat rich foods and drink sweet wines and wines that foam! Also, take your fill and will of love as ye will, when, where and with whom ye will! But always unto me.

52. If this be not aright: if ye confound the space-marks, saying: They are one; or saying, They are many; if the ritual be not ever unto me: then expect the direful judgments of Ra Hoor Khuit!

53. This shall regenerate the world, the little world my sister, my heart & my tongue, unto whom I send this kiss. Also, o scribe and prophet, though thou be of the princes, it shall not assuage thee nor absolve thee. But ecstasy be thine and joy of earth: ever To me! To me!

54. Change not as much as the style of a letter: for behold! thou, o prophet, shalt not behold all these mysteries hidden therein.

55. The child of thy bowels, he shall behold them.

56. Expect him not from the East, nor from the West; for from no expected house cometh that child. Aum! All words are sacred and all prophets true; save only that they understand a little; solve the first half of the equation, leave the second un-attacked. But thou hast all in the clear light, and some, though not all, in the dark.

57. Invoke me under my stars! Love is the law, love under will. Nor let the fools mistake love; for there are love and love. There is the dove, and there is the serpent. Choose ye well! He, my prophet, hath chosen, knowing the law of the fortress, and the great mystery of the House of God.

All these old letters of my Book are aright; but Σ is not the Star. This also is secret: my prophet shall reveal it to the wise.

58. I give unimaginable joys on earth: certainty, not faith, while in life, upon death; peace unutterable, rest, ecstasy; nor do I demand aught in sacrifice.

59. My incense is of resinous woods & gums; and there is no blood therein: because of my hair the trees of Eternity.

60. My number is 11, as all their numbers who are of us. The Five Pointed Star, with a Circle in the Middle, & the circle is Red. My colour is black to the blind, but the blue & gold are seen of the seeing. Also I have a secret glory for them that love me.

61. But to love me is better than all things: if under the night-stars in the desert thou presently burnest mine incense before me, invoking me with a pure heart, and the Serpent flame therein, thou shalt come a little to lie in my bosom. For one kiss wilt thou then be willing to give all; but whoso gives one particle of dust shall lose all in that hour. Ye shall gather goods and store of women and spices; ye shall wear rich jewels; ye shall exceed the nations of the earth in splendour & pride; but always in the love of me, and so shall ye come to my joy. I charge you earnestly to come before me in a single robe, and covered with a rich head-dress. I love you! I yearn to you! Pale or purple, veiled or voluptuous, I who am all pleasure and purple, and drunkenness of the innermost sense, desire you. Put on the wings, and arouse the coiled splendour within you: come unto me!

62. At all my meetings with you shall the priestess say – and her eyes shall burn with desire as she stands bare and rejoicing in my secret temple – To me! To me! calling forth the flame of the hearts of all in her love-chant.

63. Sing the rapturous love-song unto me! Burn to me perfumes! Wear to me jewels! Drink to me, for I love you! I love you!

64. I am the blue-lidded daughter of Sunset; I am the naked brilliance of the voluptuous night-sky.

65. To me! To me!

66. The Manifestation of Nuit is at an end.

II

1. Nu! the hiding of Hadit.

2. Come! all ye, and learn the secret that hath not yet been revealed. I, Hadit, am the complement of Nu, my bride. I am not extended, and Khabs is the name of my House.

3. In the sphere I am everywhere the centre, as she, the circumference, is nowhere found.

4. Yet she shall be known & I never.

5. Behold! the rituals of the old time are black. Let the evil ones be cast away; let the good ones be purged by the prophet! Then shall this Knowledge go aright.

6. I am the flame that burns in every heart of man, and in the core of every star. I am Life, and the giver of Life, yet therefore is the knowledge of me the knowledge of death.

7. I am the Magician and the Exorcist. I am the axle of the wheel, and the cube in the circle. "Come unto me" is a foolish word: for it is I that go.

8. Who worshipped Heru-pa-kraath have worshipped me; ill, for I am the worshipper.

9. Remember all ye that existence is pure joy; that all the sorrows are but as shadows; they pass & are done; but there is that which remains.

10. O prophet! thou hast ill will to learn this writing.

11. I see thee hate the hand & the pen; but I am stronger.

12. Because of me in Thee which thou knewest not.

13. for why? Because thou wast the knower, and me.

14. Now let there be a veiling of this shrine; now let the light devour men and eat them up with blindness!

15. For I am perfect, being Not; and my number is nine by the fools; but with the just I am eight, and one in eight: Which is vital, for I am none indeed. The Empress and the King are not of me; for there is a further secret.

16. I am The Empress & the Hierophant. Thus eleven, as my bride is eleven.

17. Hear me, ye people of sighing!
The sorrows of pain and regret
Are left to the dead and the dying.
The folks that not know me as yet.

18. These are dead, these fellows; they feel not.
We are not for the poor and sad: the lords of the earth are our kinsfolk.

19. Is a God to live in a dog? No! but the highest are of us. They shall rejoice, our chosen: who sorroweth is not of us.

20. Beauty and strength, leaping laughter and delicious languor, force and fire, are of us.

21. We have nothing with the outcast and the unfit: let them die in their misery. For they feel not. Compassion is the vice of kings: stamp down the wretched & the weak: this is the law of the strong: this is our law and the joy of the world. Think not, o king, upon that lie: That Thou Must Die: verily thou shalt not die, but live. Now let it be understood: If the body of the King dissolve, he shall remain in pure ecstasy for ever. Nuit! Hadit! Ra-Hoor-Khuit! The Sun, Strength & Sight, Light: these are for the servants of the Star & the Snake.

22. I am the Snake that giveth Knowledge & Delight and bright glory, and stir the hearts of men with drunkenness. To worship me take wine and strange drugs whereof I will tell my prophet, & be drunk thereof! They shall not harm ye at all. It is a lie, this folly against self. The exposure of innocence is a lie. Be strong, o man! lust, enjoy all things of sense and rapture: fear not that any God shall deny thee for this.

23. I am alone: there is no God where I am.

24. Behold! these be grave mysteries: for there are also of my friends who be hermits. Now think not to find them in the forest or on the mountain; but in beds of purple, caressed by magnificent beasts of women with large limbs, and fire and light in their eyes, and masses of flaming hair about them: there shall ye find them. Ye shall see them at rule, at victorious armies, at all the joy; and there shall be in them a joy a million times greater than this. Beware lest any force another, King against King! Love one another with burning hearts: on the low men trample in the fierce lust of your pride, in the day of your wrath.

25. Ye are against the people, O my chosen!

26. I am the secret Serpent coiled about to spring: in my coiling there is joy. If I lift up my head, I and my Nuit are one. If I droop down mine head, and shoot forth venom, then is rapture of the earth, and I and the earth are one.

27. There is great danger in me; for who doth not understand these runes shall make a great miss. He shall fall down into the pit called Because, and there he shall perish with the dogs of Reason.

28. Now a curse upon Because and his kin!

29. May Because be accursed for ever!

30. If Will stops and cries Why, invoking Because, then Will stops & does nought.

31. If Power asks why, then is Power weakness.

32. Also reason is a lie; for there is a factor infinite & unknown: & all their words are skew-wise.

33. Enough of Because! Be he damned for a dog!

34. But ye, o my people, rise up & awake!

35. Let the rituals be rightly performed with joy & beauty!

36. There are rituals of the elements and feasts of the times.

37. A feast for the first night of the Prophet and his Bride!

38. A feast for the three days of the writing of the Book of the Law.

39. A feast for Tahuti and the child of the Prophet – secret, O Prophet!

40. A feast for the Supreme Ritual, and a feast for the Equinox of the Gods.

41. A feast for fire and a feast for water: a feast for life and a greater feast for death!

42. A feast every day in your hearts in the joy of my rapture!

43. A feast every night unto Nu, and the pleasure of uttermost delight!

44. Aye! feast! rejoice! there is no dread hereafter. There is the dissolution, and eternal ecstasy in the kisses of Nu.

45. There is death for the dogs.

46. Dost thou fail? Art thou sorry? Is fear in thine heart?

47. Where I am these are not.

48. Pity not the fallen! I never knew them. I am not for them. I console not: I hate the consoled & the consoler.

49. I am unique & conqueror. I am not of the slaves that perish. Be they damned & dead! Amen. [This is of the 4: there is a fifth who is invisible, & therein am I as a babe in an egg.]

50. Blue am I and gold in the light of my bride: but the red gleam is in my eyes; & my spangles are purple & green.

51. Purple beyond purple: it is the light higher than eyesight.

52. There is a veil: that veil is black. It is the veil of the modest woman: it is the veil of sorrow. & the pall of death: this is none of me. Tear down that lying spectre of the centuries: veil not your vices in virtuous words: these vices are my service: ye do well. & I will reward you here and hereafter.

53. Fear not. o prophet. when these words are said. thou shalt not be sorry. Thou art emphatically my chosen: and blessed are the eyes that thou shalt look upon with gladness. But I will hide thee in a mask of sorrow: they that see thee shall fear thou art fallen: but I lift thee up.

54. Nor shall they who cry aloud their folly that thou meanest nought avail: thou shall reveal it: thou availest: they are the slaves of because: They are not of me. The stops as thou wilt: the letters? change them not in style or value!

55. Thou shalt obtain the order & value of the English Alphabet: thou shalt find new symbols to attribute them unto.

56. Begone! ye mockers: even though ye laugh in my honour ye shall laugh not long: then when ye are sad know that I have forsaken you.

57. He that is righteous shall be righteous still: he that is filthy shall be filthy still.

58. Yea! deem not of change: ye shall be as ye are. & not other. Therefore the kings of the earth shall be Kings for ever: the slaves shall serve. There is none that shall be cast down or lifted up: all is ever as it was. Yet there are masked ones my servants: it may be that yonder beggar is a King. A King may choose his garment as he will: there is no certain test: but a beggar cannot hide his poverty.

59. Beware therefore! Love all. lest perchance is a King concealed! Say you so? Fool! If he be a King, thou canst not hurt him.

60. Therefore strike hard & low, and to hell with them, master!

61. There is a light before thine eyes. o prophet. a light undesired. most desirable.

62. I am uplifted in thine heart: and the kisses of the stars rain hard upon thy body.

63. Thou art exhaust in the voluptuous fullness of the inspiration: the expiration is sweeter than death, more rapid and laughterful than a caress of Hell's own worm.

64. Oh! thou art overcome: we are upon thee: our delight is all over thee: hail! hail! prophet of Nu! prophet of Had! prophet of Ra-Hoor-Khu! Now rejoice! now come in our splendour & rapture! Come in our passionate peace. & write sweet words for the Kings!

65. I am the Master: thou art the Holy Chosen One.

66. Write. & find ecstasy in writing! Work. & be our bed in working! Thrill with the joy of life & death! Ah! thy death shall be lovely: whoso seeth it shall be glad. Thy death shall be the seal of the promise of our agelong love. Come! lift up thine heart & rejoice! We are one: we are none.

67. Hold! Hold! Bear up in thy rapture: fall not in swoon of the excellent kisses!

68. Harder! Hold up thyself! Lift thine head! breathe not so deep – die!

69. Ah! Ah! What do I feel? Is the word exhausted?

70. There is help & hope in other spells. Wisdom says: be strong! Then canst thou bear more joy. Be not animal: refine thy rapture! If thou drink, drink by the eight and ninety rules of art: if thou love, exceed by delicacy: and if thou do aught joyous, let there be subtlety therein!

71. But exceed! exceed!

72. Strive ever to more! and if thou art truly mine – and doubt it not, an if thou art ever joyous! – death is the crown of all.

73. Ah! Ah! Death! Death! thou shalt long for death. Death is forbidden. o man. unto thee.

74. The length of thy longing shall be the strength of its glory. He that lives long & desires death much is ever the King among the Kings.

75. Aye! listen to the numbers & the words.

76. 4 6 3 8 A B K 2 4 A L G M O R 3 Y X 24 89 R P S T O V A L. What meaneth this, o prophet? Thou knowest not: nor shalt thou know ever. There cometh one to follow thee: he shall expound it. But remember. o chosen one, to be me: to follow the love of Nu in the star-lit heaven; to look forth upon men. to tell them this glad word.

77. O be thou proud and mighty among men!

78. Lift up thyself! for there is none like unto thee among men or among Gods! Lift up thyself, o my prophet. thy stature shall surpass the stars. They shall worship thy name. foursquare, mystic, wonderful, the number of the man; and the name of thy house 418.

79. The end of the hiding of Hadit; and blessing & worship to the prophet of the lovely Star!

III

1. Abrahadabra: the reward of Ra Hoor Khut.
2. There is division hither homeward; there is a word not known. Spelling is defunct; all is not aught. Beware! Hold! Raise the spell of Ra-Hoor-Khuit!
3. Now let it be first understood that I am a god of War and of Vengeance. I shall deal hardly with them.
4. Choose ye an island!
5. Fortify it!
6. Dung it about with enginery of war!
7. I will give you a war-engine.
8. With it ye shall smite the peoples; and none shall stand before you.
9. Lurk! Withdraw! Upon them! this is the Law of the Battle of Conquest: thus shall my worship be about my secret house.
10. Get the stélé of revealing itself; set it in thy secret temple – and that temple is already aright disposed – & it shall be your Kiblah for ever. It shall not fade, but miraculous colour shall come back to it day after day. Close it in locked glass for a proof to the world.
11. This shall be your only proof. I forbid argument. Conquer! That is enough. I will make easy to you the abstrusion from the ill-ordered house in the Victorious City. Thou shalt thyself convey it with worship, o prophet, though thou likest it not. Thou shalt have danger & trouble. Ra-Hoor-Khu is with thee. Worship me with fire & blood; worship me with swords & with spears. Let the woman be girt with a sword before me: let blood flow to my name. Trample down the Heathen; be upon them, o warrior. I will give you of their flesh to eat!
12. Sacrifice cattle, little and big: after a child.
13. But not now.
14. Ye shall see that hour, o blessed Beast, and thou the Scarlet Concubine of his desire!
15. Ye shall be sad thereof.
16. Deem not too eagerly to catch the promises: fear not to undergo the curses. Ye, even ye, know not this meaning all.
17. Fear not at all: fear neither men nor Fates, nor gods, nor anything. Money fear not, nor laughter of the folk folly, nor any other power in heaven or upon the earth or under the earth. Nu is your refuge as Hadit your light; and I am the strength, force, vigour, of your arms.
18. Mercy let be off: damn them who pity! Kill and torture: spare not: be upon them!

19. That stélé they shall call the Abomination of Desolation; count well its name, & it shall be to you as 718.

20. Why? Because of the fall of Because, that he is not there again.

21. Set up my image in the East: thou shalt buy thee an image which I will show thee, especial, not unlike the one thou knowest. And it shall be suddenly easy for thee to do this.

22. The other images group around me to support me: let all be worshipped, for they shall cluster to exalt me. I am the visible object of worship: the others are secret: for the Beast & his Bride are they: and for the winners of the Ordeal x. What is this? Thou shalt know.

23. For perfume mix meal & honey & thick leavings of red wine: then oil of Abramelin and olive oil, and afterward soften & smooth down with rich fresh blood.

24. The best blood is of the moon, monthly: then the fresh blood of a child, or dropping from the host of heaven: then of enemies: then of the priest or of the worshippers: last of some beast, no matter what.

25. This burn: of this make cakes & eat unto me. This hath also another use: let it be laid before me, and kept thick with perfumes of your orison: it shall become full of beetles as it were and creeping things sacred unto me.

26. These slay, naming your enemies, & they shall fall before you.

27. Also these shall breed lust & power of lust in you at the eating thereof.

28. Also ye shall be strong in war.

29. Moreover, be they long kept, it is better: for they swell with my force. All before me.

30. My altar is of open brass work: burn thereon in silver or gold!

31. There cometh a rich man from the West who shall pour his gold upon thee.

32. From gold forge steel!

33. Be ready to fly or to smite!

34. But your holy place shall be untouched throughout the centuries: though with fire and sword it be burnt down & shattered, yet an invisible house there standeth, and shall stand until the fall of the Great Equinox: when Humachis shall arise and the double-wanded one assume my throne and place. Another prophet shall arise, and bring fresh fever from the skies; another woman shall awake the lust & worship of the Snake; another soul of God and beast shall mingle in the globéd priest; another sacrifice shall stain the tomb; another king shall reign; and blessing no longer be poured To the Hawk-headed mystical Lord!

35. The half of the word of Heru-ra-ha, called Hoor-pa-kraat and Ra-Hoor-Khut.

36. Then said the prophet unto the God:

37. I adore thee in the song –

I am the Lord of Thebes, and I

The inspired forth-speaker of Mentu:
For me unveils the veiled sky.

The self-slain Ankh-af-na-khonsu
Whose words are truth. I invoke. I greet Thy presence, O Ra-Hoor-Khuit!

Unity uttermost showed!

I adore the might of Thy breath.
Supreme and terrible God.

Who makest the gods and death
To tremble before Thee: –
I. I adore thee!

Appear on the throne of Ra!

Open the ways of the Khu!

Lighten the ways of the Ka!

The ways of the Khabs run through
To stir me or still me!
Aum! let it fill me!

38. So that thy light is in me; & its red flame is as a sword in my hand to push thy order. There is a secret door that I shall make to establish thy way in all the quarters. (these are the adorations, as thou hast written), as it is said:

The light is mine; its rays consume

Me: I have made a secret door
Into the House of Ra and Tum.

Of Khephra and of Ahathoor.

I am thy Theban, O Mentu.

The prophet Ankh-af-na-khonsu!

By Bes-na-Maut my breast I beat;

By wise Ta-Nech I weave my spell.
Show thy star-splendour, O Nuit!

Bid me within thine House to dwell,
O wingèd snake of light, Hadit!
Abide with me, Ra-Hoor-Khuit!

39. All this and a book to say how thou didst come hither and a reproduction of this ink and paper for ever – for in it is the word secret & not only in the English – and thy comment upon this the Book of the Law shall be printed beautifully in red ink and black upon beautiful paper made by hand; and to each man and woman that thou meetest, were it but to dine or to drink at them, it is the Law to give. Then they shall chance to abide in this bliss or no; it is no odds. Do this quickly!

40. But the work of the comment? That is easy; and Hadit burning in thy heart shall make swift and secure thy pen.

41. Establish at thy Kaaba a clerk-house: all must be done well and with business way.

42. The ordeals thou shalt oversee thyself, save only the blind ones. Refuse none, but thou shalt know & destroy the traitors. I am Ra-Hoor-Khuit; and I am powerful to protect my servant. Success is thy proof: argue not; convert not; talk not over-much! Them that seek to entrap thee, to overthrow thee, them attack without pity or quarter; & destroy them utterly. Swift as a trodden serpent turn and strike! Be thou yet deadlier than he! Drag down their souls to awful torment: laugh at their fear: spit upon them!

43. Let the Scarlet Woman beware! If pity and compassion and tenderness visit her heart; if she leave my work to toy with old sweetnesses; then shall my vengeance be known. I will slay me her child: I will alienate her heart: I will cast her out from men: as a shrinking and despised harlot shall she crawl through dusk wet streets, and die cold and an-hungered.

44. But let her raise herself in pride! Let her follow me in my way! Let her work the work of wickedness! Let her kill her heart! Let her be loud and adulterous! Let her be covered with jewels, and rich garments, and let her be shameless before all men!

45. Then will I lift her to pinnacles of power: then will I breed from her a child mightier than all the kings of the earth. I will fill her with joy: with my force shall she see & strike at the worship of Nu: she shall achieve Hadit.

46. I am the warrior Lord of the Forties: the Eighties cower before me, & are abased. I will bring you to victory & joy: I will be at your arms in battle & ye shall delight to slay. Success is your proof: courage is your armour; go on, go on, in my strength: & ye shall turn not back for any!

47. This book shall be translated into all tongues: but always with the original in the writing of the Beast; for in the chance shape of the letters and their position to one another; in these are mysteries that no Beast shall divine. Let him not seek to try: but one cometh after him, whence I say not, who shall discover the Key of it all. Then this line drawn is a key: then this circle squared in its failure is a key also. And Abrahadabra. It shall be his child & that strangely. Let him not seek after this: for thereby alone can he fall from it.

48. Now this mystery of the letters is done, and I want to go on to the holier place.

49. I am in a secret fourfold word, the blasphemy against all gods of men. 50. Curse them! Curse them! Curse them!

51. With my Hawk's head I peck at the eyes of Jesus as he hangs upon the cross.

52. I flap my wings in the face of Mohammed & blind him.

53. With my claws I tear out the flesh of the Indian and the Buddhist, Mongol and Din.

54. Bahlasti! Ompehda! I spit on your crapulous creeds.

55. Let Mary inviolate be torn upon wheels: for her sake let all chaste women be utterly despised among you!

56. Also for beauty's sake and love's!

57. Despise also all cowards: professional soldiers who dare not fight, but play: all fools despise!

58. But the keen and the proud, the royal and the lofty: ye are brothers!

59. As brothers fight ye!

60. There is no law beyond Do what thou wilt.

61. There is an end of the word of the God enthroned in Ra's seat, lightening the girders of the soul.

62. To Me do ye reverence! to me come ye through tribulation of ordeal, which is bliss.

63. The fool readeth this Book of the Law, and its comment: & he understandeth it not.

64. Let him come through the first ordeal, & it will be to him as silver.

65. Through the second, gold.

66. Through the third, stones of precious water.

67. Through the fourth, ultimate sparks of the intimate fire.

68. Yet to all it shall seem beautiful. Its enemies who say not so, are mere liars.

69. There is success.

70. I am the Hawk-Headed Lord of Silence & of Strength: my nemyss shrouds the night-blue sky.

71. Hail! ye twin warriors about the pillars of the world! for your time is nigh at hand.

72. I am the Lord of the Double Wand of Power: the wand of the Force of Coph Nia – but my left hand is empty, for I have crushed an Universe: & nought remains.

73. Paste the sheets from right to left and from top to bottom: then behold!

74. There is a splendour in my name hidden and glorious, as the sun of midnight is ever the son.

75. The ending of the words is the Word Abrahadabra.

The Book of the Law is Written and Concealed.

LIBER E. VEL EXERCITIORM SUB FIGURÂ IX

A.:A.: Publication in Class B.

I

1. It is absolutely necessary that all experiments should be recorded in detail during, or immediately after, their performance.

2. It is highly important to note the physical and mental condition of the experimenter or experimenters.

3. The time and place of all experiments must be noted: also the state of the weather, and generally all conditions which might conceivably have any result upon the experiment either as adjuvants to or causes of the result, or as inhibiting it, or as sources of error.

4. The A.:A.: will not take official notice of any experiments which are not thus properly recorded.

5. It is not necessary at this stage for us to declare fully the ultimate end of our researches: nor indeed would it be understood by those who have not become proficient in these elementary courses.

6. The experimenter is encouraged to use his own intelligence, and not to rely upon any other person or persons, however distinguished, even among ourselves.

7. The written record should be intelligibly prepared so that others may benefit from its study.

8. The book John St. John published in this first number of the "Equinox" is an example of this kind of record by a very advanced student. It is not as simply written as we could wish, but will shew the method.

9. The more scientific the record is, the better.

Yet the emotions should be noted, as being some of the conditions.

Let then the record be written with sincerity and care, and with practice it will be found more and more to approximate to the ideal.

II

Physical Clairvoyance

1. Take a pack of (78) Tarot playing cards. Shuffle: cut. Draw one card. Without looking at it, try and name it. Write down the card you name, and the actual card. Repeat, and tabulate results.

2. This experiment is probably easier with an old genuine pack of Tarot cards, preferably a pack used for divination by some one who really understood the matter.

3. Remember that one should expect to name the right card once in 78 times. Also be careful to exclude all possibilities of obtaining the knowledge through the ordinary senses of sight and touch, or even smell.

There was once a man whose finger-tips were so sensitive that he could feel the shape and position of the pips, and so judge the card correctly.

4. It is better to try first, the easier form of the experiment, by guessing only the suit.

5. Remember that in 78 experiments you should obtain 22 trumps and 14 of each other suit; so that, without any clairvoyance at all, you can guess right twice in 7 times (roughly) by calling trumps each time.

6. Note that some cards are harmonious.

Thus it would not be a bad error to call the five of Swords ("The Lord of Defeat") instead of the ten of Swords ("The Lord of Ruin"). But to call the Lord of Love (2 Cups) for the Lord of Strife (5 Wands) would show that you were getting nothing right.

Similarly, a card ruled by Mars would be harmonious with a 5, a card of Gemini with "The Lovers."

7. These harmonies must be thoroughly learnt, according to the numerous tables given in 777.

ISSUED BY ORDER:

D.D.S.	7°=4□	Præmonstrator
O.S.V.	6°=5□	Imperator
N.S.F.	5°=6□	Cancellarius

8. As you progress, you will find that you are able to distinguish the suit correctly three times in four, and that very few indeed inharmonious errors occur, while in 78 experiments you are able to name the card aright as many as 15 or 20 times.

9. When you have reached this stage, you may be admitted for examination; and in the event of your passing, you will be given more complex and difficult exercises.

III

Asana — Posture

1. You must learn to sit perfectly still with every muscle tense for long periods.

2. You must wear no garment that interferes with the posture in any of these experiments.

3. The first position: (The God). Sit in a chair; head up, back straight, knees together, hands on knees, eyes closed.

4. The second position: (The Dragon). Kneel; buttocks resting on the heels, toes turned back, back and head straight, hands on thighs.

5. The third position: (The Ibis). Stand; hold left ankle with right hand (and alternately practise right ankle in left hand, &c.) free forefinger on lips.

6. The fourth position: (The Thunderbolt). Sit; left heel pressing up anus, right foot poised on its toes, the heel covering the phallus; arms stretched out over the knees; head and back straight.

7. Various things will happen to you while you are practising these positions; they must be carefully analysed and described.

8. Note down the duration of the practice, the severity of the pain (if any) which accompanies it, the degree of rigidity attained, and any other pertinent matters.

9. When you have progressed up to the point that a saucer filled to the brim with water and poised upon the head does not spill one drop during a whole hour, and when you can no longer perceive the slightest tremor in any muscle; when, in short, you are perfectly steady and easy, you will be admitted for examination; and, should you pass, you will be instructed in more complex and difficult practices.

IV

Pranayama —

Regularisation of the Breathing

1. At rest in one of your positions, close the right nostril with the thumb of the right hand and breathe out slowly and completely through the left nostril, while your watch marks 20 seconds. Breathe in through the same nostril for 10 seconds. Changing hands, repeat with the other nostril. Let this be continuous for one hour.

2. When this is quite easy to you, increase the periods to 30 and 15 seconds.

3. When this is quite easy to you, but not before, breathe out for 15 seconds, in for 15 seconds, and hold the breath for 15 seconds.

4. When you can do this with perfect ease and comfort for a whole hour, practise breathing out for 40, in for 20 seconds.

5. This being attained, practise breathing out for 20, in for 10, holding the breath for 30 seconds.

When this has become perfectly easy to you, you may be admitted for examination, and should you pass, you will be instructed in more complex and difficult practices.

6. You will find that the presence of food in the stomach, even in small quantities, makes the practices very difficult.

7. Be very careful never to overstrain your powers; especially never get so short of breath that you are compelled to breathe out jerkily or rapidly.

8. Strive after depth, fulness, and regularity of breathing.

9. Various remarkable phenomena will very probably occur during these practices. They must be carefully analysed and recorded.

V

Dharana — Control of Thought

1. Constrain the mind to concentrate itself upon a single simple object imagined. The five tatwas are useful for this purpose; they are: a black oval; a blue disk; a silver crescent; a yellow square; a red triangle.

2. Proceed to combinations of simple objects; e.g., a black oval within a yellow square, and so on.

3. Proceed to simple moving objects, such as a pendulum swinging, a wheel revolving, &c. Avoid living objects.

4. Proceed to combinations of moving objects, e.g., a piston rising and falling while a pendulum is swinging. The relation between the two movements should be varied in different experiments.

Or even a system of fly-wheels, eccentrics, and governor.

5. During these practices the mind must be absolutely confined to the object determined upon: no other thought must be allowed to intrude upon the consciousness. The moving systems must be regular and harmonious.

6. Note carefully the duration of the experiments, the number and nature of the intruding thoughts, the tendency of the object itself to depart from the course laid out for it, and any other phenomena which may present themselves. Avoid overstrain. This is very important.

7. Proceed to imagine living objects: as a man, preferably some man known to, and respected by, yourself.

8. In the intervals of these experiments you may try to imagine the objects of the other senses, and to concentrate upon them.

For example, try to imagine the taste of chocolate, the smell of roses, the feeling of velvet, the sound of a waterfall, or the ticking of a watch.

9. Endeavour finally to shut out all objects of any of the senses, and prevent all thoughts arising in your mind. When you feel that you have attained some success in these practices, apply for examination, and should you pass, more complex and difficult practices will be prescribed for you.

VII

Physical Limitations

1. It is desirable that you should discover for yourself your physical limitations.

2. To this end ascertain for how many hours you can subsist without food or drink before your working capacity is seriously interfered with.

3. Ascertain how much alcohol you can take, and what forms of drunkenness assail you.

4. Ascertain how far you can walk without once stopping: likewise with dancing, swimming, running, &c.

5. Ascertain for how many hours you can do without sleep.

6. Test your endurance with various gymnastic exercises, club-swinging and so on.

7. Ascertain for how long you can keep silence.

8. Investigate any other capacities and aptitudes which may occur to you.

9. Let all these things be carefully and conscientiously recorded: for according to your powers will it be demanded of you.

VII

A Course of Reading

1. The object of most of the foregoing practices will not at first be clear to you; but at least (who will deny it?) they will have trained you in determination, accuracy, introspection, and many other qualities which are valuable to all men in their ordinary avocations, so that in no case will your time have been wasted.

2. That you may gain some insight into the nature of the Great Work which lies beyond these elementary trifles, however, we should mention that an intelligent person may gather more than a hint of its nature from the following books, which are to be taken as serious and learned contributions to the study of nature, though not necessarily to be implicitly relied upon.

"The Yi King" [S.B.E. Series, Oxford University Press].

"The Tao Teh King" [S.B.E. Series].

"Tannhäuser" by A. Crowley.

"The Upanishads."

"The Bhagavad-Gita."

"The Voice of the Silence."

"Raja Yoga" by Swami Vivekānanda.

"The Shiva Sanhita."

"The Aphorisms of Patanjali."

"The Sword of Song."

"The Book of the Dead."

"Rituel et Dogme de la Haute Magie."

"The Book of the Sacred Magic of Abramelin the Mage."

"The Goetia."

"The Hathayoga Pradipika."

Erdmann's "History of Philosophy."

"The Spiritual Guide of Molinos."

"The Star in the West" (Captain Fuller).

"The Dhammapada" [S.B.E. Series, Oxford University Press].

"The Questions of King Milinda" [S.B.E. Series].

"777. vel Prolegomena, &c."

"Varieties of Religious Experience" (James).

"Kabbala Denudata."

"Knox Om Pax."

3. Careful study of these books will enable the pupil to speak in the language of his master and facilitate communication with him.

4. The pupil should endeavour to discover the fundamental harmony of these very varied works; for this purpose he will find it best to study the most extreme divergences side by side.

5. He may at any time that he wishes apply for examination in this course of reading.

6. During the whole of this elementary study and practice, he will do wisely to seek out, and attach himself to, a master, one competent to correct him and advise him. Nor should he be discouraged by the difficulty of finding such a person.

7. Let him further remember that he must in no wise rely upon, or believe in, that master. He must rely entirely upon himself, and credit nothing whatever but that which lies within his own knowledge and experience.

8. As in the beginning, so at the end, we here insist upon the vital importance of the written record as the only possible check upon error derived from the various qualities of the experimenter.

9. Thus let the work be accomplished duly: yea, let it be accomplished duly.

[If any really important or remarkable results should occur, or if any great difficulty presents itself, the A.:A.: should be at once informed of the circumstances.]

LIBER O VEL MANVS ET SAGITTÆ SVB FIGVRÂ VI

A.:A.: Publication in Class B.

I

1. This book is very easy to misunderstand; readers are asked to use the most minute critical care in the study of it, even as we have done in its preparation.

2. In this book it is spoken of the Sephiroth and the Paths; of Spirits and Conjurations; of Gods, Spheres, Planes, and many other things which may or may not exist.

It is immaterial whether these exist or not. By doing certain things certain results will follow; students are most earnestly warned against attributing objective reality or philosophic validity to any of them.

3. The advantages to be gained from them are chiefly these:

(a) A widening of the horizon of the mind.

(b) An improvement of the control of the mind.

4. The student, if he attains any success in the following practices, will find himself confronted by things (ideas or beings) too glorious or too dreadful to be described. It is essential that he remain the master of all that he beholds, hears or conceives; otherwise he will be the slave of illusion, and the prey of madness.

Before entering upon any of these practices, the student should be in good health, and have attained a fair mastery of Asana, Pranayama and Dharana.

5. There is little danger that any student, however idle or stupid, will fail to get some result; but there is great danger that he will be led astray, obsessed and overwhelmed by his results, even though it be by those which it is necessary that he should attain. Too often, moreover, he mistaketh the first resting-place for the goal, and taketh off his armour as if he were a victor ere the fight is well begun.

It is desirable that the student should never attach to any result the importance which it at first seems to possess.

6. First, then, let us consider the Book 777 and its use; the preparation of the Place; the use of the Magic Ceremonies; and finally the methods which follow in Chapter V. "Viator in Regnis Arboris," and in Chapter VI. "Sagitta trans Lunam."

(In another book will it be treated of the Expansion and Contraction of Consciousness; progress by slaying the Cakkrâms; progress by slaying the Pairs of Opposites; the methods of Sabhapaty Swami, &c., &c.)

IMPRIMATUR:

II

1. The student must FIRST obtain a thorough knowledge of Book 777, especially of columns i., ii., iii., v., vi., vii., ix., xi., xii., xiv., xv., xvii., xviii., xix., xxxiv., xxxv., xxxviii., xxxix., xl., xli., xlii., xlv., liv., lv., lix., lx., lxi., lxiii., lxx., lxxv., lxxvii., lxxviii., lxxix., lxxx., lxxxi., lxxxiii., xcvi., xcvi., xcix., c., ci., cxvii., cxviii., cxxxvii., cxxxviii., cxxxix., clxxv., clxxvi., clxxvii., clxxxii.

When these are committed to memory, he will begin to understand the nature of these correspondences. (See Illustrations: "The Temple of Solomon the King" in this number. Cross references are given.)

2. If we take an example the use of the table will become clear.

Let us suppose that you wish to obtain knowledge of some obscure science.

In column xlv., line 12, you will find "Knowledge of Sciences."

By now looking up line 12 in the other columns, you will find that the Planet corresponding is Mercury, its number eight, its lineal figures the octagon and octagram, the God who rules that planet Thoth, or in Hebrew symbolism Tetragrammaton Adonai and Elohim Tzabaoth, its Archangel Raphael, its Choir of Angels Beni Elohim, its Intelligence Tiriël, its Spirit Taphtatharath, its colours Orange (for Mercury is the Sphere of the Sephira Hod, 8). Yellow. Purple. Grey, and Indigo rayed with Violet; its Magical Weapon the Wand or Caduceus, its Perfumes Mastic and others, its sacred plants Vervain and others, its jewel the Opal or Agate; its sacred animal the Snake, &c., &c.

3. You would then prepare your Place of Working accordingly. In an orange circle you would draw an eight-pointed star of yellow, at whose points you would place eight lamps. The Sigil of the Spirit (which is to be found in Cornelius Agrippa and other books) you would draw in the four colours with such other devices as your experience may suggest.

4. And so on. We cannot here enter at length into all the necessary preparations; and the student will find them fully set forth in the proper books, of which the "Goetia" is perhaps the best example.

These rituals need not be slavishly imitated; on the contrary the student should do nothing the object of which he does not understand; also, if he have any capacity whatever, he will find his own crude rituals more effective than the highly polished ones of other people.

The general purpose of all this preparation is as follows:

5. Since the student is a man surrounded by material objects, if it be his wish to master one particular idea, he must make every material object about him directly suggest that idea. Thus in the ritual quoted, if his glance fall upon the lights, their number suggests Mercury; he smells the perfumes, and again Mercury is brought to his mind. In other words, the whole magical apparatus and ritual is a complex system of mnemonics.

[The importance of these lies principally in the fact that particular sets of images that the student may meet in his wanderings correspond to particular lineal figures, divine names, &c. and are controlled by them. As to the possibility of producing results external to the mind of the seer (objective, in the ordinary common sense acceptation of the term) we are here silent.]

6. There are three important practices connected with all forms of ceremonial (and the two Methods which later we shall describe). These are:

- (1) Assumption of God-forms.
- (2) Vibration of Divine Names.
- (3) Rituals of "Banishing" and "Invoking."

These, at least, should be completely mastered before the dangerous Methods of Chapters V. and VI. are attempted.

III

1. The Magical Images of the Gods of Egypt should be made thoroughly familiar. This can be done by studying them in any public museum, or in such books as may be accessible to the student. They should then be carefully painted by him, both from the model and from memory.

2. The student, seated in the "God" position, or in the characteristic attitude of the God desired, should then imagine His image as coinciding with his own body, or as enveloping it. This must be practised until mastery of the image is attained, and an identity with it and with the God experienced.

It is a matter for very great regret that no simple and certain test of success in this practice exists.

3. The Vibration of God-names. As a further means of identifying the human consciousness with that pure portion of it which man calls by the name of some God, let him act thus:

4. (a) Stand with arms outstretched. (See illustration.)

(b) Breathe in deeply through the nostrils, imagining the name of the God desired entering with the breath.

(c) Let that name descend slowly from the lungs to the heart, the solar plexus, the navel, the generative organs, and so to the feet.

(d) The moment that it appears to touch the feet, quickly advance the left foot about 12 inches, throw forward the body, and let the hands (drawn back to the side of the eyes) shoot out, so that you are standing in the typical position of the God Horus (See Illustration in EQUINOX Vol. I. No. 1, "Blind Force."), and at the same time imagine the Name as rushing up and through the body, while you breathe it out through the nostrils with the air which has been till then retained in the lungs. All this must be done with all the force of which you are capable.

- (e) Then withdraw the left foot, and place the right forefinger upon the lips, so that you are in the characteristic position of the God Harpocrates. (See Illustration in Vol. I. No. 1, "The Silent Watcher.")

5. It is a sign that the student is performing this correctly when a single "Vibration" entirely exhausts his physical strength. It should cause him to grow hot all over, or to perspire violently, and it should so weaken him that he will find it difficult to remain standing.

6. It is a sign of success, though only by the student himself is it perceived, when he hears the name of the God vehemently roared forth, as if by the concourse of ten thousand thunders; and it should appear to him as if that Great Voice proceeded from the Universe, and not from himself.

In both the above practices all consciousness of anything but the God-form and name should be absolutely blotted out; and the longer it takes for normal perception to return, the better.

IV

1. The Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram must be committed to memory. They are as follows:

The Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram

- (i) Touching the forehead say Ateh (Unto Thee).
- (ii) Touching the breast say Malkuth (The Kingdom).
- (iii) Touching the right shoulder, say ve-Geburah (and the Power).
- (iv) Touching the left shoulder, say ve-Gedulah (and the Glory).
- (v) Clasp the hands upon the breast, say le-Olahm, Amen (To the Ages, Amen).
- (vi) Turning to the East make a pentagram (that of Earth) with the proper weapon (usually the Wand). Say (i.e., vibrate) IHVH.
- (vii) Turning to the South, the same, but say ADNI.
- (viii) Turning to the West, the same, but say AHIH.
- (ix) Turning to the North, the same, but say AGLA.

Pronounce: Ye-ho-wau, Adónai, Eheieh, Agla.

- (x) Extending the arms in the form of a Cross say:
- (xi) Before me Raphael;
 - (xii) Behind me Gabriel;
 - (xiii) On my right hand Michael;
 - (xiv) On my left hand Auriel;
 - (xv) For about me flames the Pentagram.

(xvi) And in the Column stands the six-rayed Star.

(xvii-xxi) Repeat (i) to (v), the "Qabalistic Cross."

The Greater Ritual of the Pentagram

The Pentagrams are traced in the air with the sword or other weapon, the name spoken aloud, and the signs used, as illustrated.

Equilibrium of Actives, Name: AHIH (Eheieh).
Equilibrium of Passives, Name: AGLA (Agla).

The Signs of the Portal (see Illustrations): Extend the hands in front of you, palms outwards, separate them as if in the act of rending asunder a veil or curtain (actives), and then bring them together as if closing it up again and let them fall to the side (passives).

(The Grade of the "Portal" is particularly attributed to the element of Spirit; it refers to the Sun; the Paths of Q, J, and V, are attributed to this degree. See "777," lines 6 and 31 bis).

THE PENTAGRAMS OF FIRE

Name: ALHIM (Elohim).

The signs of $4^{\circ}=7^{\square}$: Raise the arms above the head and join the hands so that the tips of the fingers and of the thumbs meet, formulating a triangle (See illustration).

(The Grade of $4^{\circ}=7^{\square}$ is particularly attributed to the element Fire; it refers to the planet Venus; the paths of $\overline{\rho}$, Σ , and Ξ are attributed to this degree. For other attributions see "777," lines 7 and 31).

THE PENTAGRAMS OF WATER

Name: AL (El).

The signs of $3^{\circ}=8^{\square}$: Raise the arms till the elbows are on a level with the shoulders, bring the hands across the chest, touching the thumbs and tips of fingers so as to form a triangle apex downwards. (See illustration).

(The Grade of $3^{\circ}=8^{\square}$ is particularly attributed to the element of Water; it refers to the planet Mercury; the paths of $\overline{\eta}$ and Ψ are attributed to this degree. For other attributions see "777," lines 8 and 23).

THE PENTAGRAMS OF AIR

Name: IHVH (Ye-ho-wau).

The signs of $2^{\circ}=9^{\square}$: Stretch both arms upwards and outwards, the elbows bent at right-angles, the hands bent back, the palms upwards as if supporting a weight. (See illustration).

(The Grade of $2^{\circ}=9^{\square}$ is particularly attributed to the element Air; it refers to the Moon; the path of $\overline{\eta}$ is attributed to this degree. For other attributions see "777," lines 9 and 11).

THE PENTAGRAMS OF EARTH

Name: ADNI (Adonai).

The Sign of $1^{\circ}=10^{\square}$: Advance the right foot, stretch out the right hand upwards and forwards, the left hand downwards and backwards, the palms open.

(The Grade of $1^{\circ}=10^{\square}$ is particularly attributed to the element of Earth. See "777," lines 10 and 32 bis).

The Lesser Ritual of the Hexagram

This ritual is to be performed after the "Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram."

- (i) Stand upright, feet together, left arm at side, right across body, holding the wand or other weapon upright in the median line. Then face East and say:
 - Yod. Nun. Resh. Yod.
 - Virgo. Isis. Mighty Mother.
 - Scorpio. Apophis. Destroyer.
 - Sol. Osiris. Slain and Risen.
 - Isis. Apophis. Osiris. IAO.
- (ii) I.N.R.I.
- (iii) Extend the arms in the form of a cross, and say: "The Sign of Osiris Slain." (See Illustration).
- (iv) Raise the right arm to point upwards, keeping the elbow square, and lower the left arm to point downwards, keeping the elbow square, while turning the head over the left shoulder looking down so that the eyes follow the left forearm, and say: "The Sign of the Mourning of Isis." (See Illustration).
- (v) Raise the arms at an angle of sixty degrees to each other above the head, which is thrown back, and say: "The Sign of Apophis and Typhon." (See Illustration).
- (vi) Cross the arms on the breast, and bow the head, and say: "The Sign of Osiris Risen." (See Illustration).
- (vii) Extend the arms again as in (iii) and cross them again as in (vi), saying: "L.V.X., Lux, the Light of the Cross."

- (viii) With the magical weapon trace the Hexagram of Fire in the East, saying: "Ararita" (אַרַרִיטָא).

Which word consists of the initials of a sentence which means "One is His Beginning: One is His Individuality: His Permutation is One."

This hexagram consists of two equilateral triangles, both apices pointed upwards. Begin at the top of the upper triangle and trace it in a dextro-rotary direction. The top of the lower triangle should coincide with the central point of the upper triangle.

- (ix) Trace the Hexagram of Earth in the South, saying: "ARARITA."

This Hexagram has the apex of the lower triangle pointing downwards, and it should be capable of inscription in a circle.

- (x) Trace the Hexagram of Air in the West, saying: "ARARITA."

This Hexagram is like that of Earth; but the bases of the triangles coincide, forming a diamond.

- (xi) Trace the hexagram of Water in the North, saying: "ARARITA."

This Hexagram has the lower triangle placed above the upper, so that their apices coincide.

- (xii) Repeat (i-vii)

The Banishing Ritual is identical, save that the direction of the Hexagrams must be reversed.

The Greater Ritual of the Hexagram

To invoke or banish planets or zodiacal signs.

The Hexagram of Earth alone is used. Draw the hexagram, beginning from the point which is attributed to the planet you are dealing with. (See "777" col. lxxxiii).

Thus to invoke Jupiter begin from the right-hand point of the lower triangle, dextro-rotary and complete; then trace the upper triangle from its left hand point and complete.

Trace the astrological sigil of the planet in the centre of your hexagram.

For the Zodiac use the hexagram of the planet which rules the sign you require ("777," col.

cxviii); but draw the astrological sigil of the sign, instead of that of the planet.

For Caput and Cauda Draconis use the lunar hexagram, with the sigil of ☾ or ☿.

To banish, reverse the hexagram.

In all cases use a conjuration first with Ararita, and next with the name of the God corresponding to the planet or sign you are dealing with.

The Hexagrams pertaining to the planets are as in plate [at left].

2. These rituals should be practised until the figures drawn appear in flame, in flame so near to physical flame that it would perhaps be visible to the eyes of a bystander, were one present. It is alleged that some persons have attained the power of actually kindling fire by these means. Whether this be so or not, the power is not one to be aimed at.

3. Success in "banishing" is known by a "feeling of cleanliness" in the atmosphere; success in "invoking" by a "feeling of holiness." It is unfortunate that these terms are so vague.

But at least make sure of this: that any imaginary figure or being shall instantly obey the will of the student, when he uses the appropriate figure. In obstinate cases, the form of the appropriate God may be assumed.

V

1. Let the student be at rest in one of his prescribed positions, having bathed and robed with the proper decorum. Let the place of working be free from all disturbance, and let the preliminary purifications, banishings and invocations be duly accomplished, and, lastly, let the incense be kindled.

2. Let him imagine his own figure (preferably robed in the proper magical garments and armed with the proper magical weapons) as enveloping his physical body, or standing near to and in front of him.

3. Let him then transfer the seat of his consciousness to that imagined figure: so that it may seem to him that he is seeing with its eyes, and hearing with its ears.

This will usually be the great difficulty of the operation.

4. Let him then cause that imagined figure to rise in the air to a great height above the earth.

5. Let him then stop and look about him. (It is sometimes difficult to open the eyes.)

6. Probably he will see figures approaching him, or become conscious of a landscape.

Let him speak to such figures, and insist upon being answered, using the proper pentagrams and signs, as previously taught.

7. Let him travel about at will, either with or without guidance from such figure or figures.

8. Let him further employ such special invocations as will cause to appear the particular places he may wish to visit.

4. The banishing rituals should be used at the commencement of any ceremony whatever. Next, the student should use a general invocation, such as the "Preliminary Invocation" in the "Goetia" as well as a special invocation to suit the nature of his working.

5. Success in these verbal invocations is so subtle a matter, and its grades so delicately shaded, that it must be left to the good sense of the student to decide whether or not he should be satisfied with his result.

9. Let him beware of the thousand subtle attacks and deceptions that he will experience, carefully testing the truth of all with whom he speaks.

Thus a hostile being may appear clothed with glory; the appropriate pentagram will in such a case cause him to shrivel or decay.

10. Practice will make the student infinitely wary in these matters.

11. It is usually quite easy to return to the body, but should any difficulty arise, practice (again) will make the imagination fertile. For example, one may create in thought a chariot of fire with white horses, and command the charioteer to drive earthwards.

It might be dangerous to go too far, or to stay too long; for fatigue must be avoided.

The danger spoken of is that of fainting, or of obsession, or of loss of memory or other mental faculty.

12. Finally, let the student cause his imagined body in which he supposes himself to have been travelling to coincide with the physical, tightening his muscles, drawing in his breath, and putting his forefinger to his lips. Then let him "awake" by a well-defined act of will, and soberly and accurately record his experiences.

It may be added that this apparently complicated experiment is perfectly easy to perform. It is best to learn by "travelling" with a person already experienced in the matter. Two or three experiments will suffice to render the student confident and even expert. See also "The Seer," pp. 295-333.

VI

1. The previous experiment has little value, and leads to few results of importance. But it is susceptible of a development which merges into a form of Dharana – concentration – and as such may lead to the very highest ends. The principal use of the practice in the last chapter is to familiarise the student with every kind of obstacle and every kind of delusion, so that he may be perfect master of every idea that may arise in his brain, to dismiss it, to transmute it, to cause it instantly to obey his will.

2. Let him then begin exactly as before, but with the most intense solemnity and determination.

3. Let him be very careful to cause his imaginary body to rise in a line exactly perpendicular to the earth's tangent at the point where his physical body is situated (or to put it more simply, straight upwards).

4. Instead of stopping, let him continue to rise until fatigue almost overcomes him. If he should find that he has stopped without willing to do so, and that figures appear, let him at all costs rise above them.

Yea, though his very life tremble on his lips, let him force his way upward and onward!

5. Let him continue in this so long as the breath of life is in him. Whatever threatens, whatever allures, though it were Typhon and all his hosts loosed from the pit and leagued against him, though it were from the very Throne of God Himself that a Voice issues bidding him stay and be content, let him struggle on, ever on.

6. At last there must come a moment when his whole being is swallowed up in fatigue, overwhelmed by its own inertia.* Let him sink (when no longer can he strive, though his tongue be bitten through with the effort and the blood gush from his nostrils) into the blackness of unconsciousness; and then, on coming to himself, let him write down soberly and accurately a record of all that hath occurred: yea a record of all that hath occurred.

EXPLICIT

* This in case of failure. The results of success are so many and wonderful that no effort is here made to describe them. They are classified, tentatively, in the "Herb Dangerous," Part II., infra.

A.:A.: Publication in Class B

0. Learn first – Oh thou who aspirest unto our ancient Order! – that Equilibrium is the basis of the Work. If thou thyself hast not a sure foundation, whereon wilt thou stand to direct the forces of Nature?

1. Know then, that as man is born into this world amidst the Darkness of Matter, and the strife of contending forces; so must his first endeavor be to seek the Light through their reconciliation.

2. Thou then, who hast trials and troubles, rejoice because of them, for in them is Strength, and by their means is a pathway opened unto that Light.

3. How should it be otherwise, O man, whose life is but a day in Eternity, a drop in the Ocean of time; how, were thy trials not many, couldst thou purge thy soul from the dross of earth?

Is it but now that the Higher Life is beset with dangers and difficulties; hath it not ever been so with the Sages and Hierophants of the past? They have been persecuted and reviled, they have been tormented of men; yet through this also has their Glory increased.

4. Rejoice therefore, O Initiate, for the greater thy trial the greater thy Triumph. When men shall revile thee, and speak against thee falsely, hath not the Master said, "Blessed art thou!"?

5. Yet, oh aspirant, let thy victories bring thee not Vanity, for with increase of Knowledge should come increase of Wisdom. He who knoweth little, thinketh he knoweth much; but he who knoweth much hath learned his own ignorance. Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit? There is more hope of a fool, than of him.

6. Be not hasty to condemn others; how knowest thou that in their place, thou couldst have resisted the temptation? And even were it so, why shouldst thou despise one who is weaker than thyself?

7. Thou therefore who desirest Magical Gifts, be sure that thy soul is firm and steadfast; for it is by flattering thy weaknesses that the Weak Ones will gain power over thee. Humble thyself before thy Self, yet fear neither man nor spirit. Fear is failure, and the forerunner of failure; and courage is the beginning of virtue.

8. Therefore fear not the Spirits, but be firm and courteous with them; for thou hast no right to despise or revile them; and this too may lead thee astray. Command and banish them, curse them by the Great

Names if need be; but neither mock nor revile them, for so assuredly wilt thou be led into error.

9. A man is what he maketh himself within the limits fixed by his inherited destiny; he is a part of mankind; his actions affect not only what he calleth himself, but also the whole universe.

10. Worship, and neglect not, the physical body which is thy temporary connection with the outer and material world. Therefore let thy mental Equilibrium be above disturbance by material events; strengthen and control the animal passions, discipline the emotions and the reason, nourish the Higher Aspirations.

11. Do good unto others for its own sake, not for reward, not for gratitude from them, not for sympathy. If thou art generous, thou wilt not long for thine ears to be tickled by expressions of gratitude.

12. Remember that unbalanced force is evil; that unbalanced severity is but cruelty and oppression; but that also unbalanced mercy is but weakness which would allow and abet Evil. Act passionately; think rationally; be Thyself.

13. True ritual is as much action as word; it is Will.

14. Remember that this earth is but an atom in the universe, and that thou thyself art but an atom thereon, and that even couldst thou become the God of this earth whereon thou crawlest and grovellest, that thou wouldest, even then, be but an atom, and one amongst many.

15. Nevertheless have the greatest self-respect, and to that end sin not against thyself. The sin which is unpardonable is knowingly and wilfully to reject truth, to fear knowledge lest that knowledge pander not to thy prejudices.

16. To obtain Magical Power, learn to control thought; admit only those ideas that are in harmony with the end desired, and not every stray and contradictory Idea that presents itself.

17. Fixed thought is a means to an end. Therefore pay attention to the power of silent thought and meditation. The material act is but the outward expression of thy thought, and therefore hath it been said that "the thought of foolishness is sin." Thought is the commencement of action, and if a chance thought can produce much effect, what cannot fixed thought do?

18. Therefore, as hath already been said, Establish thyself firmly in the equilibrium of forces, in the centre of the Cross of the Elements, that Cross from whose centre the Creative Word issued in the birth of the dawning Universe.

19. Be thou therefore prompt and active as the Sylphs, but avoid frivolity and caprice; be energetic and strong like the Salamanders, but avoid irritability and ferocity; be flexible and attentive to images like the Undines, but avoid idleness and changeability; be laborious and patient like the Gnomes, but avoid grossness and avarice.

20. So shalt thou gradually develop the powers of thy soul, and fit thyself to command the Spirits of the elements. For wert thou to summon the Gnomes to pander to thine avarice, thou wouldst no longer command them, but they would command thee. Wouldst thou abuse the pure beings of the woods and mountains to fill thy coffers and satisfy thy hunger of Gold? Wouldst thou debase the Spirits of Living Fire to serve thy wrath and hatred? Wouldst thou violate the purity of the Souls of the Waters to pander to thy lust of debauchery? Wouldst thou force the Spirits of the Evening Breeze to minister to thy folly and caprice? Know that with such desires thou canst but attract the Weak, not the Strong, and in that case the Weak will have power over thee.

21. In true religion there is no sect, therefore take heed that thou blaspheme not the name by which another knoweth his God; for if thou do this thing in Jupiter thou wilt blaspheme יהוה and in Osiris יֵהִשְׁוֶה. Ask and ye shall have! Seek, and ye shall find! Knock, and it shall be opened unto you!

AN ACCOUNT OF A.:A.:
SVB FIGVRÂ XXXIII

A.:A.: Publication in Class C

It is necessary, my dear brothers, to give you a clear idea of the interior Order; of that illuminated community which is scattered throughout the world, but which is governed by one truth and united in one spirit.

This community possesses a School, in which all who thirst for knowledge are instructed by the Spirit of Wisdom itself; and all the mysteries of nature are preserved in this school for the children of light. Perfect knowledge of nature and of humanity is taught in this school. It is from her that all truths penetrate into the world; she is the school of all who search for wisdom, and it is in this community alone that truth and the explanation of all mystery are to be found. It is the most hidden of communities, yet it contains members from many circles; nor is there any Centre of Thought whose activity is not due to the presence of one of ourselves. From all time there has been an exterior school based on the interior one, of which it is but the outer expression. From all time, therefore, there has been a hidden assembly, a society of the Elect, of those who sought for and had capacity for light, and this interior society was the Axle of the R.O.T.A. All that any external order possesses in symbol, ceremony, or rite is the letter expressive outwardly of that spirit of truth which dwelleth in the interior Sanctuary. Nor is the contradiction of the exterior any bar to the harmony of the interior.

Hence this Sanctuary, composed of members widely scattered indeed but united by the bonds of perfect love, has been occupied from the earliest ages in building the grand Temple (through the evolution of humanity) by which the reign of L.V.X. will be manifest. This society is in the communion of those who have most capacity for light; they are united in truth, and their Chief is the Light of the World himself, V.V.V.V.V., the One Anointed in Light, the single teacher for the human race, the Way, the Truth, and the Life.

The interior Order was formed immediately after the first perception of man's wider heritage had dawned upon the first of the adepts: it received from the Masters at first-hand the revelation of the means by which humanity could be raised to its rights and delivered from its misery. It received the primitive charge of all revelation and mystery; it received the key of true science, both divine and natural.

But as men multiplied, the frailty of man necessitated an exterior society which veiled the interior one, and concealed the spirit and the truth in the letter, because many people were not capable of comprehending great interior truth. Therefore, interior truths were wrapped in external and perceptible ceremonies, so that men, by the perception of the outer which is the symbol of the interior, might by degrees be enabled safely to approach the interior spiritual truths.

But the inner truth has always been confided to him who in his day had the most capacity for illumination, and he became the sole guardian of the original Trust, as High Priest of the Sanctuary.

When it became necessary that interior truths should be enfolded in exterior ceremony and symbol, on account of the real weakness of men who were not capable of hearing the Light of Light, then exterior worship began. It was, however, always the type or symbol of the interior, that is to say, the symbol of the true and Secret Sacrament.

The external worship would never have been separated from interior revel but for the weakness of man, which tends too easily to forget the spirit in the letter; but the Masters are vigilant to note in every nation those who are able to receive light, and such persons are employed as agents to spread the light according to man's capacity and to revivify the dead letter.

Through these instruments the interior truths of the Sanctuary were taken into every nation, and modified symbolically according to their customs, capacity for instruction, climate, and receptiveness. So that the external types of every religion, worship, ceremonies and Sacred Books in general have more or less clearly, as their object of instruction, the interior truths of the Sanctuary, by which man will be conducted to the universal knowledge of the one Absolute Truth.

The more the external worship of a people has remained united with the spirit of esoteric truth, the purer its religion; but the wider the difference between the symbolic letter and the invisible truth, the more imperfect has become the religion. Finally, it may be, the external form has entirely parted from its inner truth, so that ceremonial observances without soul or life have remained alone.

In the midst of all this, truth reposes inviolable in the inner Sanctuary.

Faithful to the spirit of truth, the members of the interior Order live in silence, but in real activity.

Yet, besides their secret holy work, they have from time to time decided upon political strategic action.

Thus, when the earth was nigh utterly corrupt by reason of the Great Sorcery, the Brethren sent Mohammed to bring freedom to mankind by the sword.

This being but partially a success, they raised up one Luther to teach freedom of thought. Yet this freedom soon turned into a heavier bondage than before.

Then the Brethren delivered unto man the knowledge of nature, and the keys thereof; yet this also was prevented by the Great Sorcery.

Now then finally in nameless ways, as one of our Brethren hath it now in mind to declare, have they raised up One to deliver unto men the keys of Spiritual Knowledge, and by His work shall He be judged.

This interior community of light is the reunion of all those capable of receiving light, and it is known as the Communion of Saints, the primitive receptacle for all strength and truth, confided to it from all time.

By it the agents of L.V.X. were formed in every age, passing from the interior to the exterior, and communicating spirit and life to the dead letter, as already said.

This illuminated community is the true school of L.V.X.; it has its Chair, its Doctors; it possesses a rule for students; it has forms and objects for study.

It has also its degrees for successive development to greater altitudes.

This school of wisdom has been for ever most secretly hidden from the world, because it is invisible and submissive solely to illuminated government.

It has never been exposed to the accidents of time and to the weakness of man, because only the most capable were chosen for it, and those who selected made no error.

Through this school were developed the germs of all the sublime sciences, which were first received by external schools, then clothed in other forms, and hence degenerated.

According to time and circumstances, the society of sages communicated unto the exterior societies their symbolic hieroglyphs, in order to attract man to the great truths of their Sanctuary.

But all exterior societies subsist only by virtue of this interior one. As soon as external societies wish to transform a temple of wisdom into a political edifice, the interior society retires and leaves only the letter without the spirit. It is thus that secret external societies of wisdom were nothing but hieroglyphic screens, the truth remaining inviolable in the Sanctuary so that she might never be profaned.

In this interior society man finds wisdom and with her All – not the wisdom of this world, which is but scientific knowledge, which revolves round the outside but never touches the centre (in which is contained all strength), but true wisdom, understanding and knowledge, reflections of the supreme illumination.

All disputes, all controversies, all the things belonging to the false cares of this world, fruitless discussions, useless germs of opinions which spread the seeds of disunion, all error, schisms, and systems are banished. Neither calumny nor scandal is known. Every man is honoured. Love alone reigns.

We must not, however, imagine that this society resembles any secret society, meeting at certain times, choosing leaders and members, united by special objects. All societies, be what they may, can but come after this interior illuminated circle. This society knows none of the formalities which belong to the outer rings, the work of man. In this kingdom of power all outward forms cease.

L.V.X. is the Power always present. The greatest man of his times, the chief himself, does not always know all the members, but the moment when it is necessary that he should accomplish any object he finds them in the world with certainty ready to his hand.

This community has no outside barriers. He who may be chosen is as the first; he presents himself among the others without presumption, and he is received by the others without jealousy.

If it be necessary that real members should meet together, they find and recognize each other with perfect certainty.

No disguise can be used, neither hypocrisy nor dissimulation could hide the characteristic qualities which distinguish the members of this society. All illusion is gone, and things appear in their true form.

No one member can choose another: unanimous choice is required. Though not all men are called, many of the called are chosen, and that as soon as they become fit for entrance.

Any man can look for the entrance, and any man who is within can teach another to seek for it: but only he who is fit can arrive within.

Unprepared men occasion disorder in a community, and disorder is not compatible with the Sanctuary. Thus it is impossible to profane the Sanctuary, since admission is not formal but real.

Worldly intelligence seeks this Sanctuary in vain: fruitless also will be the efforts of malice to penetrate these great mysteries: all is indecipherable to him who is not ripe; he can see nothing, read nothing in the interior.

He who is fit is joined to the chain, perhaps often where he though least likely, and at a point of which he knew nothing himself.

To become fit should be the sole effort of him who seeks wisdom.

But there are methods by which fitness is attained, for in this holy communion is the primitive storehouse of the most ancient and original science of the human race, with the primitive mysteries also of all science. It is the unique and really illuminated community which is absolutely in possession of the key to all mystery, which knows the centre and source of all nature. It is a society which unites superior strength to its own, and counts its members from more than one world. It is the society whose members form the republic of Genius, the Regent Mother of the whole World.

Glory unto the Lord of the Word Abrahadabra, and Glory unto Him that hath given us the Symbol of the Ankh, and of the Cross within the Circle!

1. Three are the Beasts wherewith thou must plough the Field: the Unicorn, the Horse, and the Ox. And these shalt thou yoke in a triple yoke that is governed by One Whip.

2. Now these Beasts run wildly upon the earth and are not easily obedient to the Man.

3. Nothing shall be said here of Cerberus, the great Beast of Hell that is every one of these and all of these, even as Athanasius hath foreshadowed. For this matter¹ is not of Tiphereth without, but Tiphereth within.

Hail unto Thee who art Ra in Thy rising, even unto Thee who art Ra in Thy strength, who travellest over the Heavens in Thy bark at the Uprising of the Sun.

Tahuti standeth in His splendour at the prow, and Ra-Hoor abideth at the helm.

Hail unto Thee from the Abodes of Night!

2. Also at Noon, let him greet the Sun, facing South, giving the sign of his grade. And let him say in a loud voice:

Hail unto Thee who art Ahathoor in Thy triumphing, even unto Thee who art Ahathoor in Thy beauty, who travellest over the Heavens in Thy bark at the Mid-course of the Sun.

Tahuti standeth in His splendour at the prow, and Ra-Hoor abideth at the helm.

Hail unto Thee from the Abodes of Morning!

3. Also, at Sunset, let him greet the Sun, facing West, giving the sign of his grade. And let him say in a loud voice:

Hail unto Thee who art Tum in Thy setting, even unto Thee who art Tum in Thy joy, who travellest over the Heavens in Thy bark at the Down-going of the Sun.

Tahuti standeth in His splendour at the prow, and Ra-Hoor abideth at the helm.

Hail unto Thee from the Abodes of Day!

4. Lastly, at Midnight, let him greet the Sun, facing North, giving the sign of his grade. And let him say in a loud voice:

Hail unto thee who art Khephra in Thy hiding, even unto Thee who art Khephra in Thy silence, who travellest over the Heavens in Thy bark at the Midnight Hour of the Sun.

Tahuti standeth in His splendour at the prow, and Ra-Hoor abideth at the helm.

Hail unto Thee from the Abodes of Evening.

5. And after each of these invocations thou shalt give the sign of silence, and afterwards thou shalt perform the adoration that is taught thee by thy Superior. And then do thou compose Thyself to holy meditation.

6. Also it is better if in these adorations thou assume the God-form of Whom thou adorest, as if thou didst unite with Him in the adoration of That which is beyond Him.

7. Thus shalt thou ever be mindful of the Great Work which thou hast undertaken to perform, and thus shalt thou be strengthened to pursue it unto the attainment of the Stone of the Wise, the Summum Bonum, True Wisdom and Perfect Happiness.

"I remember a certain holy day in the dusk of the Year, in the dusk of the Equinox of Osiris, when first I beheld thee visibly; when first the dreadful issue was fought out; when the Ibis-headed One charmed away the strife. I remember thy first kiss, even as a maiden should. Nor in the dark byways was there another: thy kisses abide." – LIBER LAPIDIS LAZULI. VII. 15, 16.

0. Be seated in thine Asana, wearing the robe of a Neophyte, the hood drawn.

1. It is night, heavy and hot; there are no stars. Not one breath of wind stirs the surface of the sea, that is thou. No fish play in thy depths.

2. Let a Breath rise and ruffle the waters. This also thou shalt feel playing upon thy skin. It will disturb thy meditation twice or thrice, after which thou shouldst have conquered this distraction. But unless thou first feel it, that Breath hath not arisen.

3. Next, the night is riven by the lightning-flash. This also shalt thou feel in thy body, which shall shiver and leap with the shock, and that also must both be suffered and overcome.

4. After the lightning-flash, resteth in the zenith a minute point of light. And this light shall radiate until a right cone be established upon the sea, and it is day.

With this thy body shall be rigid, automatically; and this shalt thou let endure, withdrawing thyself into thine heart in the form of an upright Egg of blackness; and therein shalt thou abide for a space.

5. When all this is perfectly and easily performed at will, let the aspirant figure to himself a struggle with the whole force of the Universe. In this he is only saved by his minuteness.

But in the end he is overthrown by Death, who covers him with a black cross.

Let his body fall supine with arms outstretched.

6. So lying, let him aspire fervently unto the Holy Guardian Angel.

7. Now let him resume his former posture.

Two-and-twenty times shall he figure to himself that he is bitten by a serpent, feeling even in his body the poison thereof. And let each bite be healed by an eagle or hawk, spreading its wings above his head, and dropping thereupon a healing dew. But let the last bite be so terrible a pang at the nape of the neck that he seemeth to die, and let the healing dew be of such virtue that he leapeth to his feet.

8. Let there be now placed within his egg a red cross, then a green cross, then a golden cross, then a silver cross; or those things which these shadow forth. Herein is silence: for he that hath rightly performed the meditation will understand the inner meaning hereof, and it shall serve as a test of himself and his fellows.

9. Let him now remain in the Pyramid or Cone of Light, as an Egg, but no more of blackness.

10. Then let his body be in the position of the Hanged Man, and let him aspire with all his force unto the Holy Guardian Angel.

11. The grace having been granted unto him, let him partake mystically of the Eucharist of the Five Elements and let him proclaim Light in Extension; yea, let him proclaim Light in Extension.

"These loosen the swathings of the corpse: these unbind the feet of Osiris, so that the flaming God may rage through the firmament with his fantastic spear." – LIBER LAPIDIS LAZULI. VII. III.

0. Be seated in thine Asana, or recumbent in Shavasana, or in the position of the dying Buddha.

1. Think of thy death: imagine the various diseases that may attack thee, or accidents overtake thee. Picture the process of death, applying always to thyself.

(A useful preliminary practice is to read textbooks of Pathology, and to visit museums and dissecting-rooms.)

2. Continue this practice until death is complete; follow the corpse through the stages of embalming, wrapping and burial.

3. Now imagine a divine breath entering thy nostrils.

4. Next, imagine a divine light enlightening the eyes.

5. Next, imagine the divine voice awakening the ears.

6. Next, imagine a divine kiss imprinted on the lips.

7. Next, imagine the divine energy informing the nerves and muscles of the body, and concentrate on the phenomenon which will already have been observed in 3, the restoring of the circulation.

8. Last, imagine the return of the reproductive power, and employ this to the impregnation of the Egg of light in which man is bathed.

9. Now represent to thyself that this egg is the Disk of the Sun, setting in the west.

10. Let it sink into blackness, borne in the bark of heaven, upon the back of the holy cow Hathor. And it may be that thou shalt hear the moaning thereof.

11. Let it become blacker than all blackness. And in this meditation thou shalt be utterly without fear, for that the blankness that will appear unto thee is a thing dreadful beyond all thy comprehension.

And it shall come to pass that if thou hast well and properly performed this meditation that on a sudden thou shalt hear the drone and booming of a Beetle.

12. Now then shall the Blackness pass, and with rose and gold shalt thou arise in the East, with the cry of an Hawk resounding in thine ear. Shrill shall it be and harsh.

13. At the end shalt thou rise and stand in the mid-heaven, a globe of glory. And therewith shall arise the mighty Sound that holy men have likened unto the roaring of a Lion.

14. Then shalt thou withdraw thyself from the Vision, gathering thyself into the divine form of Osiris upon his throne.

15. Then shalt thou repeat audibly the cry of triumph of the god rearsen, as it shall have been given unto thee by thy Superior.

16. And this being accomplished, thou mayest enter again into the Vision, that thereby shall be perfected in thee.

17. After this shalt thou return into the body, and give thanks unto the Most High God LAIDA; yea unto the Most High God LAIDA.

18. Mark well that this operation should be performed if it be possible in a place set apart and consecrated to the Works of the Magic of Light. Also that the Temple should be ceremonially open as thou hast knowledge and skill to perform, and that at the end thereof the closing should be most carefully accomplished. But in the preliminary practice it is enough if thou cleanse thyself by ablu-tion, by robing, and by the rituals of the Penta-gram and Hexagram.

0-2 should be practised at first, until some re-alisation is obtained; and the practice should al-ways be followed by a divine invocation of Apollo or of Isis or of Jupiter or of Serapis.

Next, after a swift summary of 0-2, practise 3-7.

This being mastered, add 8.

Then add 9-13.

Then being prepared and fortified, well fitted for the work, perform the whole meditation at one time. And let this be continued until perfect suc-cess be attained therein. For this is a mighty medi-tation and holy, having power even upon Death; yea, having power even upon Death.

(Note by Fra. O.M. At any time during this medita-tion, the concentration may bring about Samadhi. This is to be feared and shunned, more than any other break-ing of control, for that it is the most tremendous of the forces which threaten to obsess. There is also some danger of acute delirious melancholia at point 1.)

"Thou art a beautiful thing, whiter than a woman in the column of this vibration.

"I shoot up vertically like an arrow, and become that Above.

"But it is death, and the flame of the pyre.

"Ascend in the flame of the pyre, O my Soul! Thy God is like the cold emptiness of the utmost heaven, into which thou radiatest thy little light.

"When Thou shalt know me, O empty God, my flame shall utterly expire in Thy great N.O.X." – LIBER LAPIDIS LAZULI. I. 36-40.

0. Be seated in thine Asana, preferably the Thunderbolt.

It is essential that the spine be vertical.

1. In this practice the cavity of the brain is the Yoni; the spinal cord is the Lingam.

2. Concentrate thy thought of adoration in the brain.

3. Now begin to awaken the spine in this manner. Concentrate thy thought of thyself in the base of the spine, and move it gradually up a little at a time.

By this means thou wilt become conscious of the spine, feeling each vertebra as a separate entity. This must be achieved most fully and perfectly before the further practice is begun.

4. Next, adore the brain as before, but figure to thyself its content as infinite. Deem it to be the womb of Isis, or the body of Nuit.

5. Next, identify thyself with the base of the spine as before, but figure to thyself its energy as infinite. Deem it to be the phallus of Osiris or the being of Hadit.

6. These two concentrations 4 and 5 may be pushed to the point of Samadhi. Yet lose not control of the will; let not Samadhi be thy master herein.

7. Now then, being conscious both of the brain and the spine, and unconscious of all else, do thou imagine the hunger of the one for the other: the emptiness of the brain, the ache of the spine, even as the emptiness of space and the aimlessness of Matter.

And if thou hast experience of the Eucharist in both kinds, it shall aid thine imagination herein.

8. Let this agony grow until it be insupportable, resisting by will every temptation. Not until thine whole body is bathed in sweat, or it may be in sweat of blood, and until a cry of intolerable anguish is forced from thy closed lips, shalt thou proceed.

9. Now let a current of light, deep azure flecked with scarlet, pass up and down the spine, striking as it were upon thyself that art coiled at the base as a serpent.

Let this be exceedingly slow and subtle; and though it be accompanied with pleasure, resist; and though it be accompanied with pain, resist.

10. This shalt thou continue until thou art exhausted, never relaxing the control. Until thou canst perform this one section 9 during a whole hour, proceed not. And withdraw from the meditation by an act of will, passing into a gentle Pranayama without Kumbhakham, and meditating on Harpocrates, the silent and virginal God.

11. Then at last, being well-fitted in body and mind, fixed in peace, beneath a favourable heaven of stars, at night, in calm and warm weather, mayst thou quicken the movement of the light until it be taken up by the brain and the spine, independently of thy will.

12. If in this hour thou shouldst die, is it not written: "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord"? Yea. Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord!

RITUAL VIII

A.:A.: Publication in Class D

000. The light is come to the darkness, and the darkness is made light. Then is light married with light, and the child of their love is that other darkness, wherein they abide that have lost name and form. Therefore did I kindle him that had not understanding, and in the Book of the Law did I write the secrets of truth that are like unto a star and a snake and a sword.

00. And unto him that understandeth at last do I deliver the secrets of truth in such wise that the least of the little children of the light may run to the knees of the mother and be brought to understand.

0. And thus shall he do who will attain unto the mystery of the knowledge and conversation of his Holy Guardian Angel:

1. First, let him prepare a chamber, of which the walls and the roof shall be white, and the floor shall be covered with a carpet of black squares and white, and the border thereof shall be blue and gold.

2. And if it be in a town, the room shall have no window, and if it be in the country, then it is better if the window be in the roof. Or, if it be possible, let this invocation be performed in a temple prepared for the ritual of passing through the ~~Tau~~ ^{from} the roof he shall hang a lamp, wherein is a red glass, to burn olive oil. And this lamp shall he cleanse and make ready after the prayer of sunset, and beneath the lamp shall be an altar, foursquare, and the height shall be thrice half of the breadth or double the breadth.

4. And upon the altar shall be a censer, hemispherical, supported upon three legs, of silver, and within it an hemisphere of copper, and upon the top a grating of gilded silver, and thereupon shall he burn incense made of four parts of olibanum and two parts of stacte, and one part of lignum aloes, or of cedar, or of sandal. And this is enough.

5. And he shall also keep ready in a flask of crystal within the altar, holy anointing oil made of myrrh and cinnamon and galangal.

6. And even if he be of higher rank than a Probationer, he shall yet wear the robe of the Probationer, for the star of flame showeth forth Ra Hoor Khuit openly upon the breast, and secretly the blue triangle that descendeth is Nuit, and the red triangle that ascendeth is Hadit. And I am the golden Tau in the midst of their marriage. Also, if he choose, he may instead wear a close-fitting robe of shot silk, purple and green, and upon it a cloak without sleeves, of bright blue, covered with golden sequins, and scarlet within.

7. And he shall make himself a wand of almond wood or of hazel cut by his own hands at dawn at the Equinox, or at the Solstice, or on the day of Corpus Christi, or on one of the feast-days that are appointed in the Book of the Law.

8. And he shall engrave with his own hand upon a plate of gold the Holy Sevenfold Table, or the Holy Twelfold Table, or some particular device. And it shall be foursquare within a circle, and the circle shall be winged, and he shall attach it about his forehead by a ribbon of blue silk.

9. Moreover, he shall wear a fillet of laurel or rose or ivy or rue, and every day, after the prayer of sunrise, he shall burn it in the fire of the censer.

10. Now he shall pray thrice daily, about sunset, and at midnight, and at sunrise. And if he be able, he shall pray also four times between sunrise and sunset.

11. The prayer shall last for the space of an hour, at the least, and he shall seek ever to extend it, and to inflame himself in praying. Thus shall he invoke his Holy Guardian Angel for eleven weeks, and in any case he shall pray seven times daily during the last week of the eleven weeks.

12. And during all this time he shall have composed an invocation suitable, with such wisdom and understanding as may be given him from the Crown, and this shall he write in letters of gold upon the top of the altar.

13. For the top of the altar shall be of white wood, well polished, and in the centre thereof he shall have placed a triangle of oakwood, painted with scarlet, and upon this triangle the three legs of the censer shall stand.

14. Moreover, he shall copy his invocation upon a sheet of pure white vellum, with Indian ink, and he shall illuminate it accordingly to his fancy and imagination, that shall be informed by beauty.

15. And on the first day of the twelfth week he shall enter the chamber at sunrise, and he shall make his prayer, having first burnt the conjuration that he had made upon the vellum in the fire of the lamp.

16. Then, at his prayer, shall the chamber be filled with a light insufferable for splendour, and a perfume intolerable for sweetness. And his Holy Guardian Angel shall appear unto him, yea, his Holy Guardian Angel shall appear unto him, so that he shall be wrapt away into the Mystery of Holiness.

17. All that day shall he remain in the enjoyment of the knowledge and conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel.

18. And for three days after he shall remain from sunrise unto sunset in the temple, and he shall obey the counsel that his Angel shall have given unto him, and he shall suffer those things that are appointed.

19. And for ten days thereafter shall he withdraw himself as shall have been taught unto him from the fullness of that communion, for he must harmonize the world that is within with the world that is without.

20. And at the end of the ninety-one days he shall return into the world, and there shall he perform that work to which the Angel shall have appointed him.

21. And more than this it is not necessary to say, for his Angel shall have entreated him kindly, and showed him in what manner he may be most perfectly invoked. And unto him that hath this Master there is nothing else that he needeth, so long as he continue in the knowledge and conversation of the Angel, so that he shall come at last into the City of the Pyramids.

22. Lo! two and twenty are the paths of the Tree, but one is the Serpent of Wisdom; ten are the ineffable emanations, but one is the Flaming Sword.

Behold! There is an end to life and death, an end to the thrusting forth and the withdrawing of the breath. Yea, the House of the Father is a mighty tomb, and in it he hath buried everything whereof ye know.

The Angelic Alphabet

The illustration shown below is of the “Enochian”, “Angelic” or “Adamical” alphabet as drawn by Edward Kelley on the 6th of May 1583, at the end of the Loagaeth (in MS. Sloane 3189 – note that this is not the same as Dee’ copy of the alphabet in MS. Sloane 3188, which is slightly different). Dee’s diary entry contains this note:

But it is to be noted that when E.K. could not aptly imitate the form of the characters or letters as they were shewed, that then they appeared drawn on his paper with a light yellow colour, which he drew the black upon; and so the yellow colour disappearing, there remained only the shape of the letter in black...

Regarding the letters themselves, Dee notes in a conversation with the angel Il (28th April 1583):

Dee: And first I think that those letters of our Adamical alphabet have a due peculiar unchangeable proportion of their forms, and likewise that their order is also mystical.

Il: These letters represent the creation of man, and therefore they must be in proportion. They represent the workmanship wherewithal the soul of man was made like unto his creator.

Orthography
Letter name	Pa	Veh	Ged	Gal	Or	Un	Graph
Pronunciation of letter name (if different)					“Orh”	“Und”	“Graupha”, in the throat
English equivalent	B	C	G	D	F	A	E

Orthography
Letter name	Tal	Gon	Gon (with point)	Na	Ur	Mals	Ger	Drux
Pronunciation of letter name (if different)	“Stall” or “Xtall”			“Nach”, as it were in the throat	“Our” or “Ourh”	“Machls”	“Gierh”	“Droux”
English equivalent	M	I	Y	H	L	P	Q	N

Orthography
Letter name	Pal	Med	Don	Ceph	Van	Fam	Gisg
Pronunciation of letter name (if different)	The “p” pronounced remissly (that is, faintly).			“Keph”
English equivalent	X	O	R	Z	U	S	T

The Angelic script is written right to left, and is commonly accented – see the Loagaeth, and the English transliterations of the 48 Calls or Keys.

The letter ‘C’, as in English, can be pronounced as ‘S’ or ‘K’. Similarly, the letter ‘G’ also represents the sound ‘J’; as can the letter Gon (‘I’ or ‘Y’), though infrequently. Also, the letter Van is pronounced either ‘U’ or ‘V’. The sound ‘W’ is probably represented literally by a double-‘U’. Moreover, it would seem that the Angelic spelling ‘PH’ is pronounced ‘F’, as in English. Also, ‘CH’ may be pronounced as the Greek Chi, or as ‘TCH’.

There are further similarities to other languages. For instance, ‘AU’ is pronounced ‘AF’, which is reminiscent of Greek. There is also a strong possibility that the letter ‘Q’ is pronounced gutturally, as the Semitic “Qaf” or “Qoph”; although the English sound ‘QU’ is present in Enochian.

The letter ‘Z’ is occasionally given with the pronunciation ‘ZOD’ which is merely a 16th Century name of the letter “Zed” or “Zee”.

ABOUT THIS EBOOK (PDF) EDITION

What's in the Package?

This eBook consists of this Read Me document and two files in Adobe's Portable Document Format (pdf). The file named Complete Golden Dawn.pdf contains the entire text of the 2003 Second Revised Edition of The Complete Golden Dawn System of Magic, including the Index; the file named Master Index.pdf contains only the Index.

How to Use the eBook

These files can be used alone or with any hardcopy edition of The Complete Golden Dawn System of Magic. To open the pdfs, you will need Adobe's (Acrobat) Reader (version 5 or higher). You can get a free copy online at: <http://www.adobe.com/products/acrobat/readstep2.html>

Here are some suggestions for use.

1. To Start — Open both files: Complete Golden Dawn.pdf (titled "The Complete Golden Dawn System of Magic") and Master Index.pdf (titled "Master Index to The Complete Golden Dawn System of Magic"). If your screen is big enough, you can place the files side-by-side (you may want to change the magnification and/or resize the windows). You may also need to change one of the Adobe Reader preferences: "Documents: Open cross-document links in same window" should be OFF (unchecked). This allows you to easily go back and forth between the Master Index and the Complete Golden Dawn text.

2. Bookmarks — For each file, you should see a Bookmarks tab. (If it is not already open, click on it.) In the Bookmarks tab for the Complete Golden Dawn.pdf, you will find a list of clickable links to the individual Volumes of The Complete Golden Dawn System of Magic (as well as some other useful places in the book such as the Master Table of Contents, the Color Plates and the version of the Master Index within the Complete Golden Dawn.pdf file). Clicking on a Table of Contents link takes you directly to the Table of Contents for that Volume. You can then click on the individual items in the Table of Contents to go directly to the referenced page.

In the Bookmarks tab for the Master Index.pdf, you will find links to the alphabetical (A to Z) parts of the Index. Clicking on a link in the Index takes you directly to the referenced page in the Complete Golden Dawn.pdf. (Having the files side-by-side on your screen will make it easy to go back and forth between the Index and the text.)

3. The Index — Every Index entry links directly to the referenced page. Just click any highlighted link and off you go! (You can use the index in either file, but you will probably find it easier to use the separate Master Index.pdf file.)

Our deepest appreciation to Jim Strain for creating the Index and to Ron Wilhelm for creating the clickable links in the Index.

4. Searching — You can use Adobe Reader's Find function to search either pdf file for words and phrases. (e.g., you could search for "Hierophant"; or "Wheel of Fortune"; or "Fourth House"; etc.)

5. Zooming — You can use Adobe Reader's Zoom function to see pages at different sizes. This is especially useful if your eyes aren't the best or if you wish to examine diagrams in greater detail.

6. Printing — You can print any of the pages of the pdf. This can be extremely handy if you want to make notes without defacing your hardcopy edition; or to use the Index with an edition prior to 2003; or to have a copy of the Enochian Dictionary separate from the book; etc.

How the eBook Was Created

The files were created from the 2003 Second Revised Edition of The Complete Golden Dawn System of Magic and looks exactly the same: format, layout, pagination, everything. Because most of the hardcopy edition was not available in machine readable form, Optical Character Recognition (OCR) technology was used. This means that the pdf may have some differences/errors as compared to the hardcopy edition (i.e., the OCR process is not perfect). We have caught and corrected many of these, but some errors are inevitable. (If you find any significant errors, we'd appreciate your letting us know.) Any discrepancies, of course, should be resolved in favor of the hardcopy edition.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

It gives me great pleasure to thank the following for their generosity and courtesy as follows:

Mr. Carr P. Collins Jr., for giving me free access to his vast collection of Golden Dawn manuscripts, many dated before the turn of the century. And who on two occasions visited England to bring me back a complete set of Golden Dawn documents for the express purpose of writing this book; The late Gerald Yorke for giving Carr Collins copies of a complete set of all the Golden Dawn documents ranging from Neophyte to Adeptus Minor issued to Frater De Profundis ad Lucem (Mr. Leigh F. Gardner), circa 1894-1896; Robert A. Gilbert, (now writing a biography of A.E. Waite) for his gift of two rituals from Waite's Fellowship of the Rosy Cross; Francis King for permission to use lengthy excerpts from his books Ritual Magic in England and The Rebirth of Magic; Gerald Suster for his contribution of a critique of Ellic Howe's book on the Golden Dawn; Thomas Head, Ph.D., who wrote the learned introduction to the Enochian system; Ms. Patricia Monocris for her Ritual "Requiescat in Pace"; Mr. Larry Epperson for his ritual on the Evocation of the Spirit Chassan to visible appearance; Edwin Steinbrecher for permission to quote at large from his Inner Guide Meditation; Ithell Colquhoun for the portrait of Mathers painted by Moina Mathers, the background of which I had lightened to bring his face more clearly into the foreground; Stuart R. Kaplan for his kind permission to quote from his Encyclopedia of Tarot and to use some cards of the Golden Dawn Tarot (U.S. Game Systems); Dr. Robert Wang for the photograph of his model of the Tree of Life projected into a sphere; Hans Nintzel for the use of his essay on Alchemy; Mr. Neville Armstrong of Spearman Ltd. (England) for his permission to use the portrait of McGregor Mathers and that of Dr. Wynn Westcott; Finally to the Wizard Book Shelf for permission to quote from their edition of The Zohar translated by Nurho de Manhar (San Diego, Calif. 1978), and to Victor A. Endersby for the quote from The Hall of Mirrors.

Finally I would like to express my deepest gratitude to the staff of Falcon Press and in particular S.L. Slaughter for his artistic work and persistence, Kris Morgan for her contribution of the Rose Cross, the Ring and the Disc, and the Seven Palaces of Holiness; Corey Hogan for his never ending determination and guidance in seeing that production proceeded on schedule, and Christopher S. Hyatt both for his help in editing, his original contribution of ideas and his neverending "push" to insure that all went as well as possible.

A NOTE ON STYLE

In addition to the official and unofficial documents of the Order in this book, there are a number of papers and articles contributed by various authors. What has to be noted about all these documents is a difference of style in writing and of spelling out some of the basic terms used in the Qabalah and Magic. It was my original intention to render style and spelling uniform in this book, but upon more prolonged reflection I have decided to let the individuality of each author speak for himself. As a result the reader will note that there are discrepancies here and there where the most basic technical names are used. For example, Sephirah is often spelled without the final letter. Of course this is minor, but at the same time it is symptomatic of a trend which may prove confusing if he neglects this warning. In other words do not pay too much attention to the trivialities of style, set, and spelling but rather try to grasp what each writer is attempting to say. On the whole we have tried to remain faithful to each writer's wishes and intent even to such a degree as to include some of their lesser errors and arrogances.

PERSISTENCE AND DETERMINATION

Over the years I have been asked over and over again what are the most important qualities that a student should possess in approaching the Great Work. Other than normal intelligence and emotional stability. I find two other qualities which are essential for success. They are best summed up in the following quotation.

Nothing in the world can take the place of persistence.

Talent will not; nothing is more common than unsuccessful men with talent.

Genius will not; unrewarded genius is almost a proverb.

Education will not; the world is full of educated derelicts.

Persistence and determination alone are omnipotent.

FOREWORD

TO THE SECOND EDITION OF THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

By
Christopher S. Hyatt, Ph.D.

This is an unusual foreword. It is not an attempt to sell this book or to uplift the reader, but a statement of pertinent facts which all serious students of occult history might wish to contemplate. Some critics have suggested that I place what follows into an article instead of a foreword to an important piece of Magical history. I think they are correct, but this book has reached the limit of its physical capacity so I have chosen this format.

The last edition of The Complete Golden Dawn System of Magic left the printers in 1995, celebrating 10 years in print... We are now entering 2003 and much has happened since our ten year celebration of the first edition (1985). I will touch on some of these.

Foremost is the release of this, the second edition, of Dr. Regardie's final work... This edition differs in a number of ways:

First: this book has a complete Master Index and Master Table of Contents. We owe this achievement to a number of events.

- a. the overwhelming demand by readers for a better way to utilize the book.
- b. the neverending efforts of Jim Strain who was introduced to us by James Wasserman. Without Mr. Strain, the Master Index and Master Table of Contents might have never seen the light of day. He did this work without the assistance of a computer. The original typesetting had been lost so Jim did it the hard way—by hand.

Second: this new edition will be sold only online and by mail order directly by Falcon, to you, the reader. There are two forms of this new edition: 1) a numbered, limited edition signed by Dr. Hyatt and; 2) a deluxe numbered, limited edition, autographed by Dr. Hyatt to the specific buyer, with a special leather binding and a different numbering system (0-01 to 0-99). After these limited editions are completely sold, a regular edition will be released to the general public.

Third: there are four new articles, two written by individuals who knew Dr. Regardie well: Dr. Jack Willis (psychologist) and Dr. Joseph Lisiewski (physicist); and two by individuals who never met Dr. Regardie: Zehm Alohim and the noted occultist S. Jason Black who presents a pivotal article. These authors bring their own personal experience, specialties and insight to this Magnum Opus.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

SOME INTERESTING ISSUES

Before Dr. Regardie died he asked me to continue his work, particularly in the area of publishing. Considering the ups and downs of the economy, the bankruptcy of a number of important distributors, and the general change of complexion in the industry as a whole, we give ourselves a letter grade of B. Other than the Complete Golden Dawn, demand for Dr. Regardie's work published by Falcon Press has been moderate. There are a number of possible reasons.

Regardie didn't want anyone to centralize the Golden Dawn. Every one of his private students knew of this requirement. I, of course, promised that I would not attempt to control the Golden Dawn and for this I give myself a letter grade of A.

However, I can't say the same for some others, many of whom have tried to monopolize the activities of Golden Dawn as their own fiefdom. As usual they assert that they are doing it for mankind and, as usual, only fools believe such attempts at transforming greed into altruism. In my feeble attempt to counter this coup, I have created—or helped to create—functional (and dysfunctional) operating Temples. Some of these have been a practical success while others have been outright failures—as I intended them to be. However, one thing is clear: they exist and their very existence resists the attempts to “own” the Golden Dawn. For this I give myself a letter grade of B.

Even more disturbing than the attempt to monopolize the Golden Dawn is the misuse of Regardie as a steppingstone and authority.

These upstarts misused Dr. Regardie as a power base and then demeaned him. These were attempts at ad hominem character assassination. These “remarks” range from calling Regardie a fool or lacking in knowledge, to spreading rumors, to fabrications and derision surrounding the circumstances of his death. The maneuver of using a person and then demeaning him is not uncommon for individuals who lack real substance of their own.

Finally, Dr. Regardie is sometimes accused of betraying Crowley by exposing his faults in The Eye in the Triangle. Dr. Regardie's analysis of Crowley is essential to unravel the truth, as both Crowley and his followers have obfuscated an entire body of knowledge in decorative pastels. Regardie is often “hated” because, as one member of Crowley's clan has said, “How dare Regardie psychologize the prophet of the New Aeon! This is why Regardie suffered and why his reputation is questioned—this is why Crowley will be remembered and Regardie forgotten.” Assertions such as these often amaze me—as their authors attempt to pass off their need for hero worship as moral imperatives. It is both funny and pathetic what a fool can do with a few footnotes. Wild assertions, academic style and clichés cannot take the place of critical thinking.

The attempt to fling Dr. Regardie to the far reaches of hell—or worse, a footnote or two—has not been successful, although at times it has seemed so. Books have been published which slowly removed Regardie as a major force in the Golden Dawn, while some followers of Crowley have attempted to ignore him because Crowley and Regardie had such an awful row.

We know that the return of the Complete Golden Dawn System of Magic, in its second edition, will help bring Dr. Regardie back into the richness of the light which he so deeply deserves.

STANDARDS, ELITISM, EQUALITY AND MAGIC

If you needed a heart transplant you might search for a surgeon with the best rate of success. We can define success as the highest number of patients who survived the operation, the length of time before symptoms reappeared, and possibly the quality of the patient's life after surgery. Assuming you wanted to survive, these standards—and others—might make up your selection criteria.

On the other hand, if you didn't want to survive, you would use different standards. With this idea in mind, I will conclude that no matter what you do, you have standards—and by this I include those "standards" fostered by politicians, newscasters, grammar-school teachers and derelicts. (However, if you held their "standards" you probably would have not purchased this book.)

I have standards and I assert they are based on what is defined as success, quality of life and a general feeling of well-being. I do not base my decisions or actions on what the mentally defective might do. If I have a dollar set aside for donation I will give it to a hungry genius working on the origins of life, and forego helping the inadequate. If I had two dollars I would give both to the hungry genius.

Dr. Regardie also had standards and they were not those of the "crucified one." He was an elitist and, though he sometimes failed both in judgment and results, he held to his standards nonetheless.

He was kind to people, polite and concerned. However, he chose his company as carefully as he could.

Dr. Regardie donated or gave his money (and heart) to promising students in college and magic as well as to a few occult and non-occult organizations. The weak, stupid and lame were not on his donation list. He gave value to what he valued. He was not interested in the applause of bleeding-heart, guilt-ridden weaklings.

One of his concerns, as is mine, are the programs designed to weaken the individual through blatant overindulgence and the teaching of self-hate which has been inculcated into the minds of the healthy and capable by a decadent morality. He fought this at every opportunity.

Elitism in this context is to support and admire the best, not the worst.

This doesn't mean harming others who do not meet these standards; it simply means withholding value from them.

Dr. Regardie never attempted to reduce the best to the worst for the sake of pity. In this sense neither of us supported the politically correct notion of equality. Our attitude has led to both of us being ostracized by many occult groups—which includes most Crowley organizations. Let me make this point very clear... Dr. Regardie was a Thelemite, something of a Jeffersonian Democrat, or a Libertarian... However, he realized that Thelema and most political groups behaved in the exact opposite of the values and theories espoused by their founders. Although offered a high-ranking position in a number of organizations—including the OTO—he politely refused. Keep in mind that, though Dr. Regardie was a gentleman publicly, privately he could be quite vicious concerning the weak and lame who headed and populated most Occult groups.

Magic is the attempt to control paranormal or natural forces, by ritual, imagination and other techniques, to conform to the will of the operator. The term "will" in this context refers to the "force of desire." The control of paranormal forces can mean learning from "higher powers" to finding the right mate. Some individuals regard some forms of magic as either black or white. Apparently this means that black magic correlates with self-interest and harming others, while white magic relates to spiritual pursuits and helping others. Magic, however, is magic, regardless of what ends one pursues or how you might moralize about the means used to accomplish the end. Like science, magic must remain amoral—uninfluenced by any set of standards except knowledge and results...

In summary, Regardie espoused the theory that, like science, magic was an objective practice...the ritual either accomplished its ends or not...

Though Regardie was a generous and caring person, he never regarded his personal values from a moral perspective nor demanded that others behave like himself.

Dr. Regardie had very high standards although, like all of us, he often failed at realizing them... He was a strong advocate of elitism and was horrified by what I now call the new age plague...which has distorted and obfuscated magic and science through a neopuritanical ethic, eulogized through a greatly watered down Judeo/Christian/Islamic morality... The ethic of the new age, which in my view is now dwindling, is a combination of regressive self-indulgence and self-hate...two programs of self-destruction whose time has come and gone. We are now moving into a new era, neither better nor worse than the one we are emerging from... This is not the so-called Aeon of Horus, but another... The Aeon of Horus has come and gone in an instant and, like all minor influences, has left behind its refuse. With all of this said, we at Falcon hope that you find this new edition both more useful and enjoyable.

INTRODUCTION

HISTORY OF THE GOLDEN DAWN

THE EARLY YEARS

By Israel Regardie¹

"The Order of the Golden Dawn," narrates the history lecture of that Order, "is an Hermetic Society whose members are taught the principles of Occult Science and the Magic of Hermes. During the early part of the second half of last century, several eminent Adepts and Chiefs of the Order in France and England died, and their death caused a temporary dormant condition of Temple work.

"Prominent among the Adepts of our Order and of public renown, were Eliphas Levi the greatest of modern French magi; Ragon, the author of several books of occult lore; Kenneth M. Mackenzie, author of the famous and learned Masonic Encyclopaedia; and Frederick Hockley possessed of the power of vision in the crystal, and whose manuscripts are highly esteemed. These and other contemporary Adepts of this Order received their knowledge and power from predecessors of equal and even of greater eminence. They received indeed and have handed down to us their doctrine and system of Theosophy and Hermetic Science and the higher Alchemy from a long series of practised investigators whose origin is traced to the Fraternitas Rosae Crucis of Germany, which association was founded by one Christian Rosenkreutz about the year 1398 A.D. ...

"The Rosicrucian revival of Mysticism was but a new development of the vastly older wisdom of the Qabalistic Rabbis and of that very ancient secret knowledge, the Magic of the Egyptians, in which the Hebrew Pentateuch tells you that Moses, the founder of the Jewish system was 'learned', that is, in which he had been initiated." In a slender but highly informative booklet entitled Data of the History of the Rosicrucians published in 1916 by the late Dr. William Wynn Westcott, we find the following brief statement: "In 1887 by permission of S.D.A. [Anna Sprengel] a continental Rosicrucian Adept, the Isis-Urania Temple of Hermetic Students of the G.D. was formed to give instruction in the mediaeval Occult sciences. Fratres M.E.V. [William Robert Woodman] with S.A. [Dr. Wynn Westcott] and S.R.M.D. [S.L. MacGregor Mathers] became the chiefs, and the latter wrote the rituals in modern English from old Rosicrucian mss. (the property of S.A.) supplemented by his own literary researches."

In these two statements is narrated the beginning of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn—an organisation which has exerted a greater influence on the development of Occultism since its revival in the last quarter of the 19th century than most people can realise. There can be little or no doubt that the Golden Dawn is, or rather was until very recently, the sole depository of magical knowledge, the only Occult Order of any real worth that the West in our time has known, and a great many other occult organisations owe what little magical knowledge is theirs to leakages issuing from that Order and from its renegade members.

The membership of the Golden Dawn was recruited from every circle, and it was represented by dignified professions as well as by all the arts and sciences, to make but little mention of the trades and business occupations. It included physicians, psychologists, clergymen, artists and philosophers; and normal men and women, humble and unknown, from every walk of life have drawn inspiration from its font of wisdom, and undoubtedly many would be happy to recognise and admit the enormous debt they owe to it.

As an organisation, it preferred always to shroud itself in an impenetrable cloak of mystery. Its teaching and methods of instruction were stringently guarded by various penalties attached to the most awe-inspiring obligations in order to ensure that secrecy. So well have these obligations with but one or two exceptions been kept that the general public knows next to nothing about the Order, its teaching, or the extent and nature of its membership. Though this book will touch upon the teaching of the Golden Dawn, concerning its membership as a whole the writer will have nothing to say, except perhaps to repeat what may already be more or less well-known. For instance, it is common knowledge that W.B. Yeats, Arthur Machen and, if rumour may be trusted, the late Arnold Bennett were at one time among its members, together with a good many other writers and artists.

With regard to the names given in Dr. Westcott's statement it is necessary that we bestow to them some little attention in order to unravel, so far as may be possible, the almost inextricable confusion which has characterised every previous effort to detail the history of the Order. M.E.V. was the motto chosen by Dr. William Robert Woodman, an eminent Freemason of the last century. Sapere Aude and Non Omnis Moriar were the two mottos used by Dr. Westcott, an antiquarian, scholar, and coroner by profession. S.R.M.D. or S. Rhiogail Ma Dhream was the motto of S.L. MacGregor Mathers, the translator of The Greater Key of King Solomon, the Book of the Sacred Magic of Abramelin the Mage, and The Qabalah Unveiled, which latter consisted of certain portions of the Zohar prefixed by an introduction of high erudition. He also employed the Latin motto Deo Duce Comite Ferro. S.D.A. was the abbreviation of the motto Sapiens Dominabitur Astris chosen by a Fraulein Anna Sprengel of Nuremberg, Germany. Such were the actors on this occult stage, this the dramatis personae in the background of the commencement of the Order. More than any other figures who may later have prominently figured in its government and work, these are the four outstanding figures publicly involved in the English foundation of what came to be known as The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn.

How the actual beginning came to pass is not really known. Or rather, because of so many conflicting stories and legends the truth is impossible to discover. At any rate, so far as England is concerned, without a doubt we must seek for its origins in the Societas Rosicruciana in Anglia. This was an organisation formulated in 1865 by eminent Freemasons, some of them claiming Rosicrucian initiation from continental authorities. Amongst those who claimed such initiation was one Kenneth Mackenzie, a Masonic scholar and encyclopaedist, who had received his at the hands of a Count Apponyi in Austria. The objects of this Society, which confined its membership to Freemasons in good standing, was "to afford mutual aid and encouragement in working out the great problems of Life, and in discovering the secrets of nature; to facilitate the study of the systems of philosophy founded upon the Kaballah and the doctrines of Hermes Trismegistus."

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Dr. Westcott also remarks that to-day its Frates "are concerned in the study and administration of medicines, and in their manufacture upon old lines; they also teach and practise the curative effects of coloured light, and cultivate mental processes which are believed to induce spiritual enlightenment and extended powers of the human senses, especially in the directions of clairvoyance and clairsaudience."

The first Chief of this Society, its Supreme Magus so-called, was one Robert Wentworth Little, who is said to have rescued some old rituals from a certain Masonic storeroom, and it was from certain of those papers that the Society's rituals were elaborated. He died in 1878, and in his stead was appointed Dr. William R. Woodman. Both Dr. Westcott and MacGregor Mathers were prominent and active members of this body. In fact, the former became Supreme Magus upon Woodman's death, the office of junior Magus being conferred upon Mathers. One legend has it that one day Westcott discovered in his library a series of cipher manuscripts, and in order to decipher them he enlisted the aid of MacGregor Mathers. It is said that this library was that of the Societas Rosicruciana in Anglia, and it is likewise asserted that those cipher manuscripts were among the rituals and documents originally rescued by Robert Little from Freemason's Hall. Yet other accounts have it that Westcott found the manuscripts on a bookstall in Farringdon Street. Further apocryphal legends claim that they were found in the library of books and manuscripts inherited from the mystic and clairvoyant, Frederick Hockley who died in 1885. Whatever the real origin of these mysterious cipher manuscripts, when eventually deciphered with the aid of MacGregor Mathers, they were alleged to have contained the address of Fraulein Anna Sprengel who purported to be a Rosicrucian Adept, in Nuremberg. Here was a discovery which, naturally, not for one moment was neglected. Its direct result was a lengthy correspondence with Fraulein Sprengel, culminating in the transmission of authority to Woodman, Westcott and Mathers, to formulate in England a semi-public occult organisation which was to employ an elaborate magical ceremonial, Qabalistic teaching, and a comprehensive scheme of spiritual training. Its foundation was designed to include both men and women on a basis of perfect equality in contradistinction to the policy of the Societas Rosicruciana in Anglia which was comprised wholly of Freemasons. Thus, in 1887, the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn was established. Its first English Temple, Isis-Urania, was opened in the following year.

There is a somewhat different version as to its origin, having behind it the authority of Frater F.R. the late Dr. Felkin, who was the Chief of the Stella Matutina as well as a member of the Societas Rosicruciana. According to his account, and the following words are substantially his own, prior to 1880 members of the Rosicrucian Order on the Continent selected with great care their own candidates whom they thought suitable for personal instruction. For these pupils they were each individually responsible, the pupils thus selected being trained by them in the theoretical traditional knowledge now used in the Outer Order. After some three or more years of intensive private study they were presented to the Chiefs of the Order, and if approved and passed by examination, they then received their initiation into the Order of the Roseae Rubeae et Aureae Crucis.

The political state of Europe in those days was such that the strictest secrecy as to the activities of these people was very necessary. England, however, where many Masonic bodies and semi-private organisations were flourishing without interference, was recognised as having far greater freedom and liberty than the countries in which the continental Adepts were domiciled. Some, but by no means all, suggested therefore that in England open Temple work might be inaugurated. And Dr. Felkin here adds, though without the least word of explanation as to what machinery was set in motion towards the attainment of that end, "and so it was... It came about then that Temples arose in London, Bradford, Weston-super-Mare, and Edinburgh. The ceremonies we have were elaborated from cipher manuscripts, and all went well for a time."

As to what ensued after that inauguration of Temple work here we have little record, though an unorthodox account written by Aleister Crowley continues this historical theme in substantially the same words as were orally communicated to me by the late Imperator of one of the now-existent Temples. "After some time S.D.A. died; further requests for help were met with a prompt refusal from the colleagues of S.D.A. It was written by one of them that S.D.A.'s schemes had always been regarded with disapproval but since the absolute rule of the Adepts is never to interfere with the judgment of any other person whomsoever—how much more, then, one of themselves, and that one most highly revered!—they had refrained from active opposition. The Adept who wrote this added that the Order had already quite enough knowledge to enable it or its members to formulate a magical link with the adepts. Shortly after this, one called S.R.M.D. announced that he had formulated such a link, and that himself with two others was to govern the Order... We content ourselves, then, with observing that the death of one of his two colleagues, and the weakness of the other, secured to S.R.M.D., the sole authority..."

In elaboration of this statement, it may be said that in 1891 Dr. Woodman died after but a few days illness, leaving the management of the Order to Westcott and Mathers. Evidently these two scholars carried on quite well together for about six years, for the indications are that the Order flourished and grew expansive. Exactly why Westcott withdrew from the Order—for this is the next major occurrence—appears difficult to discover. Concerning this also several versions are extant. One account has it that accidentally he left some of the Order manuscripts in a portfolio bearing his signature in a cab, and the driver upon finding them turned them over to the authorities. Since Westcott was by profession an East London coroner, the medical authorities strongly objected that one in an official capacity should, no matter how remotely, be connected with anything that savoured occult. It was suggested to him therefore that he must withdraw from the Order or else resign his post as coroner, since the two were considered in those days incompatible. He chose to resign from the Order. Yet again it is suggested that it was simply a personal quarrel that led to the parting of the ways with Mathers, which does seem the more probable explanation. Whatever the cause, some six years after the death of Dr. Woodman, Westcott withdrew from the Order, which was thus left to the sole authority of Mathers.

The pamphlet on Rosicrucian history then proceeds in narrative that following Westcott's resignation from "this association in 1897, the English Temples soon after fell into abeyance." This reads like an instance of wish-fulfilment. Though fairly near the essential truth of the matter, it is not quite in accordance with fact. Following the resignation of Westcott, Mathers reigned within his Order as supreme autocrat. Judging from the evidence at our disposal he was not a particularly benevolent one, for many were the misunderstandings that ruffled the mystic placidity of his Temples, and several of the individuals who dared so much as to differ or argue with him were promptly expelled, and flung into the outer darkness. Presumably spiritual pride was the flaw in his armour, and he seemed to harbour quite a few delusions. One of the latter was his conveyance to the body of Adepts as a piece of objective everyday experience, that whilst in the Bois de Boulogne one day he was approached by three Adepts who confirmed him in the sole rulership of the Order. On the strength of this supposed occurrence, he issued to the Theorici of the grade of Adeptus Minor a powerfully worded manifesto, naming himself in no uncertain terms as a chosen vessel and demanding from all those who received the manifesto a signed oath of personal loyalty and allegiance. Those who refused to send a written statement of voluntary submission to him were either expelled from the Order or degraded to a lower rank.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Meanwhile, a considerable amount of discontent had been slowly brewing amongst the Order members. Dissatisfaction with the autocratic leadership of S.R.M.D. was growing very steadily and persistently. No definite or clear-cut reasons appear to be given for this, for evidently this restlessness had been gradually fructifying whilst the hypertrophy of Mathers' ego was becoming more and more pronounced. Some say that S.R.M.D. was guilty of innumerable magical tricks of a particularly irresponsible nature which eventually brought disrepute both upon himself and the Order of which he was head. Others, more romantically minded, claimed that his English translation of The Sacred Magic of Abramelin the Mage was a powerful magical act which attracted to his sphere forces of evil so terrible in nature that he was wholly unable to withstand them. Frater F.R. propounds the more rational view that it was simply spiritual pride and love of power which so gained the ascendancy that he demanded of the members of his organisation a personal fealty and obedience to his own personality instead of to the work itself. How very familiar all this sounds? In one form or another, it is the story of the same unhappy fate which dogs and finally ruins every religious and spiritual community. By changing these names, Theosophists may recognise a very homely story.²

In claiming his right to unquestioned leadership, and when refusing to appoint two others of the body of Adepti to fill the vacant posts of co-Chiefs, Mathers also promised some of the more advanced members of the Second Order additional grades in the path of Adeptship and even more esoteric teaching. These, apparently, were not forthcoming — though it must be confessed that regardless of the personal shortcomings of Mathers as a leader or as a writer, it is patent that there was a vast knowledge and a deep and wide erudition concealed with him. Naturally the Adepti gave utterance to their complete disapproval of this delay in the fulfilment of their Chief's promises, gradually coming to insist that he had neither the knowledge nor the grades to impart. Further unpleasant bickering drew forth from Mathers the retort that he was certainly not going to waste either his grades or knowledge on such hopeless duffers as they were. And in any event, he was Chief and leader; their further progress, if there was to be any, must be left entirely in his hands. In short, a virulent quarrel was in process of development, and though for quite a long time it fermented beneath the surface, it finally culminated in a group of the Adepti forming a strong combination to expel their chief S.R.M.D. just prior to the actual appearance of the schism, and whilst yet the rebellion was gaining impetus, certain events happened which call here not for elucidation, since that is impossible, but simply for registration.

About this time, a certain Mrs. Rose Horos approached Mathers who came to acknowledge her as an initiate of a high grade. Exactly why, it is again impossible to say definitely. It was stated in defence of Mathers that Mrs. Horos was able to repeat to him a certain conversation he had had years previously when he visited Madame Blavatsky at Denmark Hill, and the repetition of this scrap of conversation convinced him of her status. Anyway, it was a sad piece of deception, and an unhappy acknowledgment on the part of Mathers indicating his complete lack of judgment and insight into character. Mrs. Horos and her husband were very soon discovered to be sex-perverts of the worst description. Nor was this all, for it is alleged that they were also responsible for the theft from Mathers of a complete set of Order documents. It seems incredible that Mathers could have been so gullible, for that is the only word which adequately describes his stupidity, as to accept without further verification the occult claims of this woman, giving her access to the rituals and teaching of the Golden Dawn. Subsequently the immoral activities of these two people having attracted the attention of the police, they were arrested. In December 1901 at their trial, the Order of the Golden Dawn was given unpleasant and unjustified publicity by being associated with the chequered careers of these two persons. In the witness box the male prisoner made the remark concerning the Golden Dawn Neophyte obligation that it "was prepared by the Chiefs of the Order who are in India"—which of course was a farrago of nonsense, but unfortunately just the type of nonsense which survives for many years. He was sentenced to fifteen years penal servitude, and his wife to seven.

Around this period also, one Florence Farr, whose esoteric motto was Soror S.S.D.D., having for some years been left in charge of Isis-Urania Temple while Mathers continued his research work in Paris, decided for various personal reasons to enter her resignation from that important post. Under date of February 16th 1900, Mathers, writing from Paris, refused to accept her resignation, believing that she intended to "form a combination to make a schism therein with the idea of working secretly or avowedly under Sapere Aude." In this same letter, he was responsible for the astonishing statement that S.A. had never been at any time in touch with Fraulein Sprengel of Niiremberg but had "either himself forged or procured to be forged the professed correspondence between him and her." As was only to be expected this letter came as a overwhelming surprise to S.S.D.D., who was thoroughly stunned by this accusation of dishonesty and forgery levelled against S.A. After contemplating the whole situation in an almost frantic state of mind for several days in the country, she finally communicated with S.A. asking him to corroborate or deny the accusations. Her next act was to form a Committee of Seven within the Second Order to investigate the allegations made. This Committee asked S.R.M.D. to produce for his own sake and for the sake of the Order proof of the accuracy of his statements. Because, they argued, since it was upon the authority of this alleged correspondence that the Order was founded, the historical position of the Order as descended from mediaeval Rosicrucian sources collapsed should it be proven that the correspondence had been forged. This viewpoint was not altogether accurate, for while S.R.M.D. had stated that S.A. had never been in touch with S.D.A., he never denied that he himself had not been in constant communication with her. Then followed a lengthy correspondence which afterwards was collected and printed in the form of a long dossier. In fine, Mathers refused unconditionally to acknowledge the authority or even the existence of the Committee nor would he produce proof of any kind to substantiate his claim that S.A. had forged Second Order communications. It goes without saying of course that S.A. fervently denied the truth of these allegation of forgery, but all the same he refused to do anything about it.

No good purpose could possibly be served by enlarging upon the unhappy events which immediately followed. To a large extent the history of the Order is so confused and muddled at this juncture, and the rumours which have come down to us so chaotic and contradictory, that it has proved wholly impossible to extricate the truth from the foul debris of slander, abuse and recrimination. A clear picture of what occurred seems impossible to recover. It would appear, to state the matter simply, that Mathers expelled the rebels who then formed a schism. On the other hand, it is also held that he was himself expelled by the revolting wing from his own Order and left with about half a dozen adherents, with whose assistance, moral and financial, he continued his Temple.

As their first magical gesture of independence, the rebels changed the name of the Order to The Stella Matutina. Ruled for a year by a committee of twelve, developments forced them to realise that this was far from a satisfactory arrangement. Inasmuch, however, as it had taken several years first to brew and then to develop into an open gesture of defiance, the spirit which had conceived the rebellion was not thus at a single stroke to be banished. Having elevated the standard of revolt by expelling their former chief, for many a dismal month was the Stella

Matutina haunted by that ghost. After almost inconceivable pettiness and dispute, the rebels were at the end persuaded by circumstance to abandon every feature of their reform to return to the original scheme of appointing Three Chiefs to govern and lead them. Even this, later, was abandoned if not officially then in practice, for a virtual autocracy similar to that enjoyed by Mathers was once again instituted, though on a much smaller scale. The revolt had been in vain. Those finally selected and appointed as the Chiefs were Fratres Sub Spe, Finem Respice, and Sacramentum Regis. These three Fratres conducted the Order of the Stella Matutina in harmony for about a year. Then, for various reasons, Sacramentum Regis chose to resign. At the meetings held to appoint his successor, differences of the most trivial character continued to arise. Indeed, the spirit of fraternity and wisdom had departed, leaving its aversive antithesis, the venom of destruction, to dwell in their midst. Another split developed. Apparently one wing of the schism, thoroughly alarmed in all its bourgeois incompetence and fear by the recent disturbances to the peace of the Order, attributed that cycle of catastrophe to the occult content of the Order teaching, and because of this were now desirous of casting aside as valueless, from the spiritual point of view, the whole of the magical tradition. Their intention was to retain a sort of indeterminate Mysticism of the type which has so often brought disrepute upon the subject, coming to regard their Temple as an adjunct, a clandestine back-door to the Church in some one of its many forms — with especial attractions, I believe, to the Anglo-Catholic groups. One other and more important group within the schism, led by Fratres Finem Respice and Sub Spe carried on full Temple work, more or less adhering to the original plan of the Golden Dawn routine as laid down in the documents drawn up by MacGregor Mathers.

Thus we find in place of a consolidated fraternity at least three separate groupings of individuals engaged in the practice of the Golden Dawn ceremonial system in open Temple, perpetuating as best they might the traditions of the Magic of Light. There was, first, the diminutive group under the leadership of S.R.M.D., still retaining the original Order name. To him were still loyal the Temple or Temples that a few years prior to the final crash had been instituted in the United States of America. Both F.R. and S.S. were in charge of a Stella Matutina Temple, and it is my belief that after a while even they parted company or conducted separate groups, the one in London calling itself the Amoun Temple, and the latter in Edinburgh, Amen-Ra by name. In London also, a separate Temple was being conducted by Frater Sacramentum Regis calling itself the Reconstructed Rosicrucian Order, a group characterised by its exclusive devotion to Christian Mysticism, its rituals being elaborated into verbose and interminable parades of turgidity.

Formerly united by a single fraternal bond, we now see several Temples being conducted by different groupings of individuals who, while pretending to fraternal communion, had but little sympathy with and affection for the sister Temples of the schism. The slander that was invented and swiftly circulated, as only malice can be circulated, is unrepeatable. Few individuals of real worth were exempt from this network of scandal which enmeshed the whole organisation. This man was an adulterer, that a dipsomaniac — and even after the lapse of more than thirty years this slander is still current. So thoroughly had the central unity of the Order broken up that each of these Stella Matutina Temples appointed its own Imperator, Cancellarius and Praemonstrator, considering itself by these gestures an autonomous occult body. Thus began the downfall of organised magical instruction through the semi-esoteric channels of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. Whatever else should be insisted upon in Magic, unity is the prime essential. A united body of manifestation at all costs should have been maintained. And the old adage "United we stand, divided we fall" is no idle phrase, especially since the elimination of the "heresy of separateness" is one of the cardinal injunctions of the Great Work. The separate

Temples decided to fall independently of how or why or where the other groups fell. Each was smug, complacent and fully confident that it alone continued the magical tradition. The result is that to-day those original Temples are either dead or moribund. While they may have given rise to yet other groups, there is not one of the latter which is not in a diseased condition.

One can hardly help recalling the bitter admonition given by S.R.M.D. to the organisers of the schism. He said, in effect, and in later years Frater Sub Spe corroborated that statement, that he was the principal Chief of the Order by whom and through whom the Order had originally been organised to disseminate the magical tradition. Remember, he warned, what happened to the Theosophical Society after Blavatsky had departed, and there began the disintegration of the world-wide society she had founded and fed with her own life blood. Certainly Mathers' prophecy seems to have vindicated itself. Just as there are innumerable sects claiming to be the original Theosophical Society and professing allegiance to the principles taught by Blavatsky, so are there now several decaying Temples claiming unbroken descent from the original Isis-Urania. Each insists fervently that it alone is the genuine Order; all others are schismatic and unimportant. To-day, as stated above, not one of these surviving Temples is in an even moderately healthy condition. Nor have they ever been since the early days of their foundation. An amusing sidelight on human nature is disclosed by the fact that in one of the Obligations retained by the schismatic groups, there is still the original clause, "Do you further undertake not to be a stirrer up of strife, of schism, or of opposition to the Chiefs."

It was towards the close of 1898, just prior to the revolt, that Aleister Crowley was introduced to the Order by Frater Volo Noscere, receiving his Neophyte initiation at Mark Mason's Hall. It was clear, soon after he joined, that here was a highly gifted young man, and that in many ways, though unrestrained and undisciplined, his was a powerfully magical personality. From Captain J.F.C. Fuller's rather verbose and flamboyant account in the Equinox we gather that Crowley was advanced through the grades of the Order quickly, and assimilated the routine knowledge without the least difficulty. Those grades which were not formally separated by automatic delays, were taken at the rate of one a month, and the succeeding ones at the prescribed intervals of three, seven, and nine months. By the time he had taken his Portal grade, the revolt was in full swing, the wisdom and authority of the Chief being on every side doubted and challenged. It was around this period, too, that Crowley's morals and alleged pernicious conduct offended those who were conducting Temple work in London, and the ruling Adepti of Isis-Urania refused to advance him further. They refused to do this in spite of the deliberate warning contained in Mathers' manifesto previously mentioned: "What I discountenance and will check and punish whenever I find it in the Order is the attempt to criticise and interfere with the private life of members of the Order. ... The private life of a person is a matter between himself or herself and his or her God." Whether Mathers was impressed by the promise of Crowley's personality, or whether he decided upon his next step to show contempt for the ruling Chiefs of Isis-Urania Temple, we do not know. But, soon after, Crowley was invited to Paris where he received the grade of Adeptus Minor from Mathers in Ahathoor Temple. This act served but to inflame the differences which were now openly separating Mathers from his erstwhile followers, and increased the bitter hatred which the Order members bore and still bear for Crowley.

To Crowley's credit, it must be conceded that when open revolt did flame forth, at least he sided with S.R.M.D., acting as his plenipotentiary in the proposed meetings with the rebels in London. The Adepti, however, unconditionally refused to recognise or have ought to do with Crowley. In his fantastic garb of a Highland chieftain with kilt, dirks and tartan, and his face concealed by a heavy mask, he did assuredly make himself so great a laughing stock on that occasion as to make it difficult for anyone to take him seriously.

The conjunction of two headstrong and egotistical personalities rendered it most probable that sooner or later Crowley and Mathers should quarrel. They did, and each went his separate way. Many and varied again are the fantastic accounts of the reasons for that separation. But no matter what their cause, some three years afterwards events led Crowley to denounce Mathers as one obsessed either by Abramelin demons or by the evil personalities of the then incarcerated Horos couple, and that he himself had been nominated by the Secret Chiefs of the Invisible Order to be the outer head of the visible organisation. In the various numbers of the Equinox, the official organ of Crowley's personal reformulation of the Order system under the title of A.A.—which does not signify "Atlantean Adepts" as supposed by some stupid reviewer in the Occult Review—may be found Crowley's more or less garbled version of the Order teaching and ceremonial.

At this juncture, it is needful to contradict denials on the part of certain Order members that Crowley did not obtain full Order teaching. Some of these denials are entirely too vehement and "methinks the lady doth protest too much." First of all, I am fully convinced from a close and prolonged study of all Crowley's literary output that he did obtain his Adeptus Minor grade from Mathers after the London group refused to advance him. Unquestionably this is true. Nevertheless, even if this were not the case, he was the intime, so to say, of Fratres Volo Noscere and Yehi Aour, both advanced members of the grade of Adeptus Minor, who coached and trained him so that he benefitted by their knowledge and wide experience. Whatever knowledge these Fratres had received from the Order documents was given to Crowley. There is little, I imagine, that he did not receive of the Order teaching then extant, whatever may have been the means fair or foul by which he obtained that teaching. And while he did not publish it in its entirety, it is possible to perceive from hints scattered here, there, and everywhere, that very little had been kept from him. Any student who has a bird's-eye view of the Order system will recognise traces of every aspect of it in the different volumes of Crowley's literary fecundity.

Had Crowley published the entire body of knowledge, only slightly editing the redundancy and verbose complexity of Mathers' literary style—had he issued that teaching so that it bore some semblance to its original state to indicate what it really was and how practised within the Temple—his exposé might not have been too serious. It is possible that he might have been acknowledged as a benefactor of mankind, even if later on he did ruin his own personal reputation by broadcasting absurd legends and leading a foolishly dissipated life. But it was his special mode of publication which argued against the advisability of partially disclosing the secret knowledge of the Order. He tampered unnecessarily with the Grade rituals, so that their beauty as well as practical worth was gone.³ It became impossible to form any estimation of the efficacy or construction of those ceremonies from their mutilated shadows in the Equinox. Perhaps his aim was to eliminate important parts of the rites and practical work so that interested people, realising that more information was required, would communicate with him for further guidance, thus enabling him to consolidate his position as a leader, and formulate an active Order. This is certainly true of the instruction, for example, on Geomancy. The rituals and teaching were badly

³ It is statements like these that have led Crowley-deifiers to hate and ignore Regardie. Anyone who gives Crowley a fair read will find that much of what he wrote is pure crap. All too often his followers have elevated the garbage to gospel while ignoring the good stuff. Such is the process of Biblification. In the world of organized religion, truth must be eliminated as a threat to self-aggrandizing dogma. [Ed.]

mauled, rearranged out of all recognition to their former state, and then surrounded by Yoga instructions, short stories, articles on sex-Magic, poetry—much of it of a dubious nature—and a host of miscellaneous odds and ends.

With Crowley's instructions in the art of Yoga, printed both within and without the Equinox, there can be no quarrel. They are amongst the clearest ever produced on the subject and amongst the finest examples of the excellent prose of which Crowley was capable. We, the occult-reading public, are immeasurably the richer for their appearance. Epigrams, short stories, card-games, and libels on former friends, however, can hardly be considered fit companions for occult teaching. It is my confirmed belief that it is practically impossible, without more precise guidance or tuition, to ascertain from the Equinox and Crowley's other literary productions exactly what is the actual nature of Magic as a definite practical scheme. His form of presentation, and the other contents of the Equinox, created nothing but confusion.

Though a revelation of the inner teaching of the Golden Dawn would have been a boon to mankind, yet manifestly Crowley's manner of presentation ruined the effort. If the breaking of a sacred obligation is at all justifiable—as occasionally it is—it is so only when the matter covered by that oath is revealed in a dignified manner and with a noble spirit, as well as in a style fitting to its intrinsic nature. In such an event, the oath is neither betrayed nor profaned, for in being abrogated on behalf of mankind, the author becomes duly qualified to speak for those with whom alone is the power to bind or loose.

It is not my wish to retract what nearly three years ago I enthusiastically wrote in The Tree of Life. It was then my conviction as it is now that there was much of a highly important nature in what this extraordinary man of genius has written and published. But I am also profoundly impressed by this fact. Unless one has first studied Magic from a more comprehensible and reliable source, most of what he has written, albeit based upon his own practical experience, will be in the main unintelligible. Any student who has gained a sympathetic understanding of the Golden Dawn teaching will be capable of discriminating between the futile reprehensible portions of Crowley's work, and of deciding which part of it is a worth-while addition to an already magnificent system. And it is because Crowley concedes to his own credit in his, in many respects, admirable volume entitled Magick that he has done Magic inestimable service by reason of his development of it, that I have considered it imperative, together with a number of other reasons of equal urgency, to place the Golden Dawn system before the public. Crowley's claims are, in my estimation, wholly exaggerated. I am far from being convinced that the scheme of theory and practice presented in his literature—extraordinary though it is in many ways, considering that it is a development of the simple basic Golden Dawn material—is equal in any way to the system put into documentary form by S.L. MacGregor Mathers and his colleagues.

THE MAGICAL ALPHABET

INTRODUCTION

One of my preoccupations over the last fifty years, ever since I have been actively involved in the study as well as the dissemination of the basic principles of Magic, Qabalah and Occultism in general, is the discrepancy between what the system teaches and the character structure of the average student and even leaders of the occult groups. For awhile it created a good deal of anxiety simply because it appeared to me that there should be some degree of coincidence between student and system.

It was not until many years afterwards that I came to be aware of the function of therapy. At that time I had some dear friends who had amongst their acquaintances some psychotherapists in London where I then resided. Some of them I met socially when we discussed this particular problem that was haunting me. A few agreed with me that there was only one remedy for this discrepancy and that was to enter therapy as a patient. I did this, remaining in therapy for several years and I must say it benefited me enormously. Even today, three or four decades later I still get an occasional letter from a student here, there and anywhere making the statement that I seem to be one of the few sane writers on the subject. True or not, they perceive that there is a difference in one who has had therapy and another who has not.

Today therefore I am adamant both to correspondents and visitors alike that to obtain the greatest benefit from Magic which is as it were a post-graduate study there should be some undergraduate work in a personal therapy. The dividends are enormous.

For a long while it seemed to me that Jungian therapy provided the answer to this problem. However from time to time I would meet or hear from a correspondent who complained that that form of therapy was like Ain Soph, without end So I have concluded that Jungian analysis can be likened to herpes genitalis, that is it is forever. This has resulted finally in entertaining serious doubts about the efficacy of Jung's system as a therapy; as a philosophy I have little quibble, even if many authorities in the occult field feel that this is the only form of spiritual therapy. Of course this is nonsense. In therapy one is not concerned whether its contents are spiritual or otherwise, but whether it enables one to face and deal with one's own latent infantility which is eternally getting in the way. Whether magical or occult authorities like it or not Freudian analysis is infinitely more effective.

Out of the Freudian school there has evolved an entirely new and different approach to this problem which curiously enough, though it makes no claim in this direction, is far more spiritual in its effects and its results than anything else I know. Wilhelm Reich, originally an ardent disciple of Freud, developed a system of therapy which astonishingly enough is a bridge from orthodox psychotherapy to the occult world. He himself would never have admitted this. And in fact he would rather have died than recognize this, but facts are facts which can not be denied. My experience as a psychotherapist extending over some thirty years or more, has surprised me in the discovery that many patients who prior to therapy had no talent for Magic etc., found themselves profoundly involved in what might be called mystical or religious experiences on the couch at the end of a session. Therefore after all these many years I still insist that the student of this subject involve himself deeply in therapy but nowadays I make the proviso that it be a form of Reichian or neo-Reichian therapy. A great deal of time, money and heartache will be spared the student if, when he decides to follow my counsel, he attempts to seek out a therapist or teacher who is trained in these techniques. Admittedly there are problems in this direction but these are not insurmountable. Any student anywhere in this country desirous of following my counsel but is unable to find an adequate therapist is invited to do one of two things. First to write to me directly in care of my publishers Falcon Press in Phoenix. I promise to reply at once, giving counsel on whom they should consult. Second, write to my friend and colleague Christopher Hyatt, also care of Falcon Press for further advice. He is not only a first rate therapist himself with extensive training in both experimental and psychoanalytic therapy but is at the same time a very perceptive and intuitive therapist and teacher of many years experience. In addition Hyatt has a strong background in occult subjects, particularly with meditative and Eastern techniques. This with his Western knowledge makes him an ideal choice for those students seriously involved with the occult. At the very least if he is not personally available he too can make recommendations to other practitioners in the field.

In other places I have dogmatically stated that the Golden Dawn as a functioning occult Order has been defunct for years. It gives me pleasure to state that in the past several years a new group of young students have attempted to formulate actively functioning Temples employing the traditional techniques. There are now a few Temples scattered throughout the country to which I would be glad to refer the interested student.

VOLUME ONE

The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn issued its own account of its history. It claimed to be "an Hermetic Society whose members are taught the principles of occult science and the Magic of Hermes. During the early part of the last century, several prominent Adepts and Chiefs of the Order in France and England died, and their death caused a temporary dormant condition of Temple work." It goes on to state that these adepts "received indeed and have handed down to us their doctrine and system of Theosophy and Hermetic Science and the higher Alchemy from a long series of practical investigators whose origin is traced to the Fratres Roseae Crucis of Germany, which association was founded by one Christian Rosenkreutz about the year 1398 A.D. . .

"The Rosicrucian revival of Mysticism was but a new development of the vastly older wisdom of the Qabalistic Rabbis and of that very ancient secret knowledge, the Magic of the Egyptians, in which the Hebrew Pentateuch tells you that Moses, the founder of the Jewish system, was 'learned', that is, in which he had been initiated."

This is the Golden Dawn historical claim. Many have questioned its veracity. That really does not concern us at this moment. Perhaps by far the best and most objective account of its history, short and concise, was written by Aleister Crowley in Liber LXI vel Causae. The first few paragraphs are so well stated as to warrant quotation here:

"Some years ago a number of cipher MSS. were discovered and deciphered by certain students. They attracted much attention, as they purported to derive from the Rosicrucians. You will readily understand that the genuineness of the claim matters no whit, such literature being judged by itself, not by its reputed sources.

"Among the MSS. was one which gave the address of a certain person in Germany, who is known to us as S.D.A. Those who discovered the ciphers wrote to S.D.A., and in accordance with instructions received, an Order was founded which worked in a semi-secret manner.

"After some time S.D.A. died; further requests for help were met with a prompt refusal from the colleagues of S.D.A. It was written by one of them that S.D.A.'s scheme had always been regarded with disapproval. But since the absolute rule of the adepts is never to interfere with the judgments of any other person whomsoever -- how much more, then, one of themselves, and that one most highly revered! -- they had refrained from active opposition. The adept who wrote this added that the Order had already quite enough knowledge to enable it or its members to formulate a magical link with the adepts.

"Shortly after this, one called S.R.M.D. announced that he had formulated such a link, and that himself with two others was to govern the Order."

There is another source of historical material in a small pamphlet written by Dr. W. W. Westcott, in which it is stated that "In 1887 by the permission of S.D.A., a continental Rosicrucian Adept, the Isis-Urania Temple of Hermetic students of the Golden Dawn was formed to give instructions in the mediaeval occult sciences. Fratres M.E.V. with S.A. and S.R.M.D. became the Chiefs, and the latter wrote the rituals in modern English from old

Rosicrucian manuscripts (the property of S.A.) supplemented by his own literary researches."

These several statements then give the beginning of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. Since its inception in the last quarter of the nineteenth century it has exerted far greater influence on the growth and dissemination of practical occult information and knowledge than can be realized by most present day students. At first its membership was recruited from a broad spectrum of English intellectuals and artists and even the clergy, but later came to include quite ordinary men and women from every segment of society and life.

In accord with the spirit of the times, it cloaked itself in a glamour of mystery and secrecy. Regardless of the various rumors that circulated about it, it came to be very difficult to join this Order. Even A. E. Waite, who some regard as an occult authority, sarcastically remarked in his autobiography that his first application was black-balled. It was after a period of time that he reapplied at the urging of some of his friends and only then was he accepted.

Its teachings and methods of instruction were surrounded by oaths and various penalties attached to the most awe inspiring ritual-obligations to ensure secrecy. You will see what these are in various rituals that are given in the body of the text. It is now common knowledge that Arthur Machen, Florence Farr, W. B. Yeats, Algernon Blackwood, Aleister Crowley, Dion Fortune, and A. E. Waite -- to mention only a few -- were members of this prestigious organisation. It should be self-evident then that some of its members were not the usual flakey nit-wits some critics are disposed to believe. but prominent and intelligent people.

Perhaps some attention should be given to the secular names of some of those whose Order mottoes have been given above. Sapere Aude and Non Omnis Moriar were the mottoes chosen by Dr. William W. Westcott, a London physician and a coroner by occupation. M.E.V., or Magnum est Veritas was the motto of Dr. William R. Woodman, an eminent Freemason of the last century, who died in 1891 very shortly after the Order was founded and therefore did not play much of active role in its governance. S.R.M.D. or S. Rhiogail Ma Dhream, the motto of Samuel Liddell Mathers also known as McGregor Mathers, was the most active of the chiefs of the Order. He also used the motto Deo Duce Comite Ferro. He has been described at some length in a biographical study The Swore of Wisdom by Ithel Colquhoun, well worth reading in this connection.

Westcott was the author of a couple of minor little books and the editor of an hermetic and alchemical series of writings, well prized today. He was prominent in certain Masonic circles of his day.

Mathers was the translator of three mediaeval magical texts. The Greater Key of King Solomon, The Book of the Sacred Magic of Abramelin the Mage, and The Kaballah Unveiled (which consisted of certain portions from Knorr von Rosenroth's Latin rendition of parts of the Zohar -- more distinguished however by a relatively long introduction of considerable erudition and which well warrants re-publication by itself as an introduction to the study of the Qabalah.)

In this connection I would like to recommend The Rosy Cross Unveiled by Christopher McIntosh, which purports to give a history, mythology and the rituals of an occult order (published by Aquarian Press Ltd. 1980).

In as much as both Mathers and Westcott had dual mottoes, it should be remarked that one was for use in the Outer Order of the Golden Dawn, the other being reserved of the Inner Order of the R.R. et A.C.

S.D.A. was the abbreviation of the motto Sapiens Dominabitur Astris chosen by a Fraulein Anna Sprengel of Nuremberg. Though polemics are outside the scope of this introduction, in all fairness to the enquiring student I should mention a highly critical and destructive study of the Order entitled The Magicians Of the Golden Dawn by Ellic Howe. It is mentioned here because amidst all of its prejudicial criticism which is not difficult to demolish, there is some significant historical data of considerable value.

There is also, I should mention, my own account of the Golden Dawn history at some length -- What You Should Know About the Golden Dawn (Falcon Press, Phoenix, Arizona, 1983). In addition to tracing some of the obscurities relating to the origins of the Order, it provides a bird's eye view of its teachings that might be of value to the current reader. The Order provided initiation into the Mysteries in a highly organized and systematic manner.

INITIATION

Initiation is the preparation for immortality. Man is only potentially immortal. Immortality is acquired when the purely human part of him becomes allied to that spiritual essence which was never created, was never born, and shall never die. It is to effect this spiritual bond with the highest, that the Golden Dawn owes all its rituals and practical magical work.

Initiation means to begin, to start something new. It represents the beginning of a new life dedicated to an entirely different set of principles from those of what Wilhelm Reich once contemptuously termed "homo normalis." With the enormous development of scientific pragmatism, it is conceivable that sometime in the near or distant future, robots or computers will be invented that will, to all intents and purposes, free man from the daily drudgery of common toil. If and when that occurs, what will the average man do with his leisure time? Despite the claims of various protagonists of the free future of man, I doubt that many will turn their time and energy to the pursuit of the Great Work in any of its forms. Most of them will continue to hunt, fish, travel in recreation vehicles, drink beer and grow fat, watch television more and more, concentrate on spectator sports, and continue their lives on a thoroughly prosaic and mundane level. If there are excursions into outer space, with a view of setting up colonies outside of the earth, I am far from certain that the same fate will not await them as it did all ventures into utopian communities. There are only a mere handful who can tolerate more than a glancing casual look at other than the superficial aspects of what life presents to them.

For this handful, the Golden Dawn system presents itself as the answer to their innumerable questions. The system itself is timeless. It did not owe its origins to the formation of that particular Order called the Golden Dawn in the latter part of 19th century. The greater part of it, in one form or another, has existed for centuries -- actually forever -- not necessarily in the open where it could be attacked by secular and ecclesiastical authorities, but under cover, secretly and safely. Those who were in need of its teaching and work would inevitably be attracted to some one or other of its members, and undergo initiation. This process occurred in the past even as it does today. When the time comes for the inner awakening, as it may be called, all sorts of synchronicities, as Jung might call them, occur which lead them inevitably in the right direction, to the Western Esoteric Tradition.

THE WESTERN ESOTERIC TRADITION

There are a many legends circulating within the occult field that may clarify what is commonly called the Western esoteric tradition as being opposed to the so-called Eastern tradition.

It is held that several centuries ago a group of wise men gathered in the Near East to discuss ways and means of disseminating the ageless wisdom so that no opposition from vested interests would be encountered, and at the same time evoke recognition from those who had evolved to a state of psycho-spiritual "readiness". After much discussion, it was agreed that they should devise a set of pictures that could be circulated as playing cards. Pictures that would tell a story relative to man, and who he was, as well as where he came from. Pictures that would relate him as a person to the greater world in which he found himself. In a word, the Tarot cards came into being to serve such ends. Originally employed as playing cards or for fortune telling, they were carried all over the Near East and Europe by gypsies and other travelling bodies, and eventually permeated all civilized countries in the Western hemisphere.

The other legend is to be found in a document circulated early in the 17th century, the Fama Fraternitatis. It purports to narrate the history of one Christian Rosenkreutz, a young man who was educated in one of the monasteries in Germany. He wandered to North Africa and the Near East where he was well received by the wise men resident there. They taught him Alchemy, Astrology and Qabalah, together with other occult subjects. When he left he had acquired a liberal education in the occult arts which he took with him to Germany, to the monastery from which he originally came. Gradually he conveyed his knowledge to a monk here and there, until there were enough more or less enlightened monks to comprise an organizational body that came to be known as the Rosicrucians.

VOLUME ONE

A great deal of the above is legend. Many modern authorities insist that that is all it is --a legend. This runs counter to some of the more common pseudo-Rosicrucian orders of today that claim an impossible antecedence for their own group. Be that as it may, the legend itself gives evidence to the belief that there was a definite body of occult knowledge in existence which could be and was communicated in an orderly manner.

A third factor that should never be overlooked, but which often is, relates to the nature of the monasteries in Roman Catholic Europe. These were the primary centers of learning in an otherwise ignorant world --the Europe of those dark days. They kept alive the learning of every kind then known, and passed it on faithfully to succeeding generations. We know that many of the faithful studied and practiced both alchemy and astrology. It is also known that the Qabalah of the Hebrews was also studied, even though the motive exoterically seemed to be that it was a valuable tool with which to convert the unhappy Jews to the joys and blessings of Christendom.

The Catholic Church, and also the Church of the Byzantium, has a glorious history of great mystics, of men and women to whom the highest vocation called, the quest for God. There were teachers of mystical meditation and interior prayer in many of the monasteries so that the proper preparation for such a high calling would not be lost. They were of many persuasions, these teachers, and so were the mystics who came out of these institutions. They have left their mark on the Church, despite its apparent antagonism to mysticism as such, due to fear it might challenge the Church's demand for conformity to fixed inherited dogma.

There is another most interesting set of circumstances too often glossed over or not well understood. It relates to one of the most crucial and interesting periods of European history. At one time, it must be recalled that the Arabs had invaded Europe and had virtually conquered a part, if not all of Spain. They brought with them not merely a victorious army, but Islamic culture as well. That included not solely mathematics, though it is well to reflect on what this one item did to European knowledge, but in addition the Greek classics and literature, from Aristotle on. Their contribution included alchemy as well, astrology and the other occult arts. Above all it brought Islamic mysticism, Sufiism. It flourished not merely in North Africa but in Spain as well. From there it was carried by one means or another to all parts of Europe and to every center of learning.

Simultaneously, Christian mysticism was flourishing in Spain and Europe, and some great and wonderful people were active spreading mystical knowledge far and wide. It was a period of rejuvenation and spiritual growth for Spain and for the Church as a whole.

Furthermore, what must not be forgotten was that a favorable climate was also being evolved for the wandering and exiled Jewish people to flourish in. They contributed enormously to Spanish culture and scientific knowledge, and at the same time a specific Hebraic mysticism was taking shape and form. This included some of the pre-Zoharic literature, as well as some of the greatest names in Qabalistic history.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

It is well to remember that in Spain at that time, therefore, there was a favorable climate for the emergence and blossoming of Islamic, Christian, and Jewish mysticism which has never since been surpassed, if not equalled. Each religious mysticism cross fertilized the other in a magnificent manner.

All of these trends, and they were powerful each in its own specific way, contributed to a body of esoteric knowledge and experience that was peculiarly Western. It may have had numberless resemblances to the traditions extant in the East, but they also had their own individual differences that characterized it as a system wholly apart from its Eastern counterpart. It is this that today we call the Western esoteric tradition. It has reared its head in different times and places and in different ways. On many occasions it may seem to have been wiped out and disappeared from the face of the earth. But always it seemed to reappear revived by its absence, spreading wider and wider, influencing more and more people, leavening always the institutions most hostile to its continued existence.

From time to time, organizations were formed here and there as means of perpetuating the hidden Hermetic knowledge. The Order of the Golden Dawn was another of these Orders which sprang up, using the wisdom of prior ages, exclusively western knowledge, in order to initiate mankind into a higher level of psycho-spiritual functioning.

Parallel to all of this, there is a concurrent "legend" or statement of fact that there is a hidden Order, whether on the inner spiritual planes or here on the mundane level where most of us live, of Adepts and enlightened beings who watch over mankind and its travails. They seek to further the evolution of mankind without interfering with the apparent free choice of human beings to determine their own destiny either towards personal destruction or the attainment of communion with God. From time to time, it is said, these beings permit or direct the appearance of an external organization such as we have previously described. It is also believed that periodically, either towards the end of a century or in some historical crisis, one of them makes a public appearance in one guise or another in order not merely to ward off wholesale disaster but to guide some few or many in a new creative direction.

They also are the embodiments of the Western Esoteric Traditions, and rather than an external organization, are the custodians of its teachings.

SELF INITIATION

By

V.H. FRATER A.M.A.G.

The Neophyte Ritual and that of the Adeptus Minor Grade are the most important and effective rituals of the Order. Those in between are the so-called elemental rituals. Crowley took a rather dim view of these. Francis King assumed wrongly that I also held much the same attitude. In fact, however, I think that they have a very definite place in the entire process of initiation. That they are verbose and overlong I will admit to. Nonetheless there are ways and means of overcoming this problem. In my recently published book Ceremonial Magic (Aquarian Press, England) a ritual opening that I called Opening by Watchtower (first demonstrated in the consecration ceremony of the Vault of the Adepts) could be elaborated meaningfully in a variety of different ways which could be construed as effective as abbreviated elemental initiations.

To be concise, an elemental initiation is one in which the elementals are invoked in such a way that they affect the sphere of sensation or the energy field of the candidate. A series of impressions or symbols are impressed on this energy field in such a way that they act, for the candidate, as a kind of passport providing safe entry and freedom of movement in that elemental sphere of operation.

Assuming that this is the case, then the four elemental grade initiations of the Outer Order, in reality do little more than the abbreviated Opening by Watchtower ceremonies. A number of advantages flow from this assumption. The first is that the ritual is nowhere as turgid, lengthy and tiresome as is the grade ritual, all criticisms which led Crowley and others to the faulty conclusion that they could be dispensed with as useless. The second, and I think the most important one, is that the Watchtower rituals described in the book named above could be employed as self-initiatory rituals.

Again, assuming that this is factual, then we have reached a stage which fulfills the original promise of some of my early writing on the Golden Dawn -which was that since the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn was now defunct, the isolated student here, there and everywhere, could now be his own initiator. This does not preclude the possibility that new temples might arise and have arisen in various parts of the world independently of any other temple. Several new temples have in recent years been formulated and are functioning very successfully, with new temples emerging even now.

In stating that the isolated student could now be his own initiator, one important phrase is rendered imperative. And that is he must be persistent and as thoroughgoing and exacting as if he were an initiator in a regularly constituted Golden Dawn temple under the constant scrutiny of officialdom and higher adept authorities. The responsibility for progress is thus placed inexorably on the student or candidate himself. As I see it - and I have watched this on a very few students - each elemental initiation or Watchtower ceremony requires its repetition several times. One student whom I am thinking of at this juncture has performed the whole Opening by Watchtower ceremonies some 50 or 60 times. It is therefore my opinion that she has initiated herself as effectively and as positively as any temple initiatory hierophantic team could possibly do. All the important "command" symbols of elemental significance are altogether imbedded in her aura or energy field so that should she visit their sphere of activity, via skrying in the spirit vision, they would not regard her as an enemy alien invading their hallowed circle. Instead, she would be regarded as friendly and as a divine helper because she carries, as it were, the only correct and valid passport recognized by them as an official password.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

The only and still major problem remaining as of this moment is how to convert the Neophyte and Adeptus Minor rituals into self-initiatory operations. I am willing to write off the Adeptus Minor ritual as impossible to convert to a self-initiatory ceremony. It still requires an authentic initiator to accomplish the purpose of this ritual. I see no possibility of converting this, as things stand at this moment.

However, I still feel that the Neophyte ritual does contain the possibilities of conversion. It has been done in other ways. For example Crowley, while in Mexico, did one series of meditations, almost tantric in nature, that utilized the clairvoyant visions of G.H. Frater S.R.M.D. The latter did describe in Z-1 and Z-3 what happened to the candidate during the Neophyte initiation in full temple ceremonies. This I described in my biography of Aleister Crowley, The Eye in the Triangle, Falcon Press, 1982. (Although some students dislike Crowley the study of his life and the effect of the Golden Dawn on him is essential to our understanding of extending the work of the Order.) Years later, when he came to full term as an initiator himself, he wrote a book of instruction entitled Liber HHH (included in Gems from the Equinox, Falcon Press, 1982). In one section of that Liber he refined his early meditation and created a magnificent instruction. This also I have quoted in The Eye in the Triangle. However, I am not looking in that direction at this particular moment. What I wish to do is so to simplify the Neophyte ritual as practiced in the Order, by deleting a number of segments which are not necessarily integral to the process of initiation. And leaving a ceremonial skeleton which can be adapted by any student to the service of his own initiation. For example, the entire section in which the various officers give speeches describing what some of the symbols amount to and furthermore name the various subjects that must be studied by the candidate before he can be advanced further in the Order. This would eliminate a good deal of unnecessary baggage and shorten the ritual the student would have to learn. It is quite likely too that most of the opening of the temple in the Neophyte grade could also be left out without harm to the entire initiatory process - with the exception of that passage of the Hierophant which stated that by names and symbols are all powers awakened and re-awakened. Whether the circumambulations should be omitted I have yet to decide, on the basis of some experimentation myself. Much the same applies to the purification by water and the consecration by fire - processes which are repeated several times.

This then leaves as the most important part of the ritual the obligation at the Altar, the charge of the Hierophant to quit the night and seek the day, the reception into the Order and the Hegemon's guiding the newly initiated Neophyte between the two pillars between the altar and the station of the East.

It was only when discussing this matter with V.H. Soror Sic Itur Ad Astra in Los Angeles recently that some light was shed on this problem. The core of the solution revolved around the notion that initiation outside of a regularly constituted Temple was only possible with two students. They would have to prove to themselves - not to anyone else - that they were wholly devoted to the Great Work, devoted enough to spend at least several months jointly or individually practising the Middle Pillar technique as described in The Foundations of Practical Magic, Aquarian Press, 1979. If this practice were assiduous and intense both students would have awakened in themselves the psycho-spiritual energy that could not only hasten their own inner development but that the latter could be communicated to yet another in a manner not too dissimilar to that described in Z-3.

The fundamental requirement was that the initiator should be an initiator - not a layman out of the brute herd. Something must have happened to him to have redeemed him of the stigma of being "ordinary." Of course it would have been better if he (or she) had been the recipient of a spontaneous mystical experience of the type described in James' Varieties of Religious Experience. Since this kind of attainment cannot be made to order, as it were, the only alternative is to fall back on time honored methods of development and growth.

I am well aware of the debate which has gone on for years as to whether mystical or occult practices can induce the mystical experience -conversion or samadhi or satori, call it what you will. If not, then it is maintained that these practices prepare the student for that possibility if not inducing it actually. And if he have patience to "wait upon the Lord," as it were, then the one is as good as the other, from my point of view.

While pursuing their work with the Middle Pillar technique and any other set of exercises to which they may be drawn, they could set themselves to the task of studying the Neophyte Ritual and the Z documents that pertain to it. There is additional suggestive material on this topic in The Eye In the Triangle. Using the clairvoyant description given by Mathers of what really happened between the Two Pillars to the candidate, Crowley developed a meditation incorporating all those ideas, as I have intimated above. Apparently this meditation must have proven successful, for many years later after he had come to term he wrote a document for his own Order, the A. A., known as Liber HHH. The first section of this document elaborates this meditation and transforms the clairvoyant description of Mathers into an extraordinary piece of magical work that has fascinated me for many years for as long as I have known of the Equinoxes that he published as long ago as 1909-1914.

All of this could give them ideas and hints as to how to proceed in the task of initiating themselves or others. First one and then another could be helped to come to the Light in much the same way as if they were operating in a duly constituted Temple. In fact, to go one further, there is no reason why the officers of a regular Temple should not follow some such procedure as this themselves. It would certainly do no harm, and in fact would accomplish a great deal. Since a Golden Dawn Temple is being instituted here and there throughout not only this country, but the world as a whole, this counsel might be very useful to all concerned to enhance the whole process of initiation.

Once this were accomplished, they could either go their own separate ways or maintain the relationship for mutual aid and comfort. But from there, with the aid of the Opening by Watchtower, as it has come to be called, the elemental initiations would be taken care of, and from there they face the task of the Adeptus Minor initiation. What needs to be done in that regard is something I would rather not speculate about. But as one initiate has said, all that remains is to prepare the Temple and then hope and pray that it may become indwelled.

This entire discussion however is intended to be suggestive only. A great deal must be left to the ingenuity of the student involved in this great adventure. Their intuition must be sharpened by their adherence to the work itself, and their progress and their plans must be left to unfold by itself. Enough has been said at least to show that the way is not without light, and however bleak the path seemed without teachers and a temple of the Order, they are not left to stumble unaided in the darkness of the outer world. For as the Ritual says "My soul wanders in darkness and I seek the Light of the hidden Knowledge".

In conclusion it is strongly suggested that student closely study two or three of the discussions in this present volume. One of them is the Cautionary Note which directly follows this. Another is a document dealing with the Inflation of the Ego, a result which is to be avoided at all costs by self observation and study. And finally the important article written by Hyatt and myself concerning some major errors and confusions which students have made in the past. Other documents scattered throughout the different segments of this book will also be found supremely helpful in achieving the ends desired.

A CAUTIONARY NOTE

During the period of time when most of this work was in the manuscript phase, and various typists were working on it, their occasional comments concerning the Golden Dawn System perturbed me somewhat. It was Christopher Hyatt, one of the editors of Falcon Press, who first alerted me to the possibility that this misunderstanding might occur, suggesting therefore that I interpolate a cautionary word to prevent other readers developing the same misconception.

He was absolutely right, for some of them, as well as one or two subsequent readers, seem to have developed the conception that the whole Golden Dawn System was based on the initiatory rituals, and nothing more. It puzzled me because I had labored under the delusion that the rituals themselves indicated without equivocation that there was far more to the system than the rituals themselves, and also because the remainder of the volume itself elaborated a whole system of magical practice which could exist altogether independently of the initiatory rituals.

I was so certain of this that to a couple of them I had confided that though for the time being my interest in writing was exhausted, nonetheless some time in the future I felt compelled to write yet another book establishing a relationship between Tibetan magical practices, as for example laid out in Evans Wentz's book Milarepa the Tibetan Yogi and the Golden Dawn System. There are innumerable parallels which are worth investigating and enumerating. And these are altogether apart from the matter of initiatory rituals. I feel strongly therefore that I must not proceed too far with this book without stressing the fact that there is infinitely more to the Golden Dawn System of Magic than the initiatory and other types of rituals. Not that I want to minimize the importance of their role in the entire system but it comprises so much more that it puzzled me how anyone could avoid the realization that the performance of the rituals satisfactorily depends on so much more. If the student has thoroughly studied the Z-1 and Z-3 documents, it should have dawned upon him that efficacy of any ritual depends entirely on all the participants having acquired considerable skills in the magical work prescribed by the Order.

Apart from the rudimentary art of invocation by means of the Pentagram and Hexagram, there is a vast repertory of techniques which must be used and mastered, not merely to gain advancement to a higher grade in the Order, which is not too terribly important by and of itself, but in order to become a proficient student of Magic these must be not merely known but wholly mastered. For example, assumption of God forms and the ability to build up Telesmatic Images, more or less along the same line, these two are the very foundations of practical theurgy. Then there is the Middle Pillar technique whose importance simply cannot be overemphasized in any way. The student who has neglected to achieve considerable proficiency in this particular practice will find himself frustrated at every turn. And finally there is the vibratory formula of the Middle Pillar. I cannot conceive of a ritual of any kind being successfully consummated without being adept in the use of the vibratory formula. I have elaborated this in a rather new way, I fancy, in that section dealing with this matter, and I urge the prospective student of magic to pay particular attention not only to this, but to all the techniques I have just mentioned.

Nor is the main thesis of the Order the memorization of dry Qabalistic knowledge from the Knowledge Lectures or from any other text for that matter. This material represents the dry bones of Order knowledge, the basic alphabet of what has come to be known as the Magical Language. Every science and every Art has its own language without which there can be little communication. A great deal of undergraduate university work consists mainly of learning different kinds of languages that belong to the various sciences one is learning about. For example, physics has its own terminology without which little headway can be made in mastering its complex mysteries. The same is true of geology which must forever remain a mystery to those who will not master its language. Even in the behavioral sciences a whole new jargon or language must be assimilated. Eventually many students learn to use the jargon so satisfactorily and skillfully that they become unintelligible in their everyday conversations leading their critics to condemn the jargon in which they have steeped themselves. Nonetheless, it is a language of its own. It must be learned, mastered and used in order to become an effective means of communication. Much the same is true of the magical language. It is a highly complex one, and most of this work lays down the elemental principles of this language. The student will do well to take his time mastering it - that is if he has never been exposed to it before. But when he does become familiar with this language, he will never fall into the booby trap that The Complete Golden Dawn System of Magic comprises this item or that item only. It is a vast and comprehensive system that is worthy of considerable effort to make it an integral part of one's thinking and feeling.

Finally of course there is the method of the tattwa vision, also called skrying in the spirit vision. This is most important. However I feel entirely too much attention in the past has been paid to this method at the expense of some of those just listed. There must have been many members of the early Order who had a great talent for skrying, since it led to the possible development of clairvoyance, etc. For this reason, its use was overdone. Not only was this so, but some of the protective methods were neglected, and some of the people became gullible and credulous, and lost their natural scepticism which is one of the indispensable factors absolutely essential to the welfare of the student of magic. Without it he is lost in a wilderness of deception and fantasy. Nothing solid can be based upon this whatsoever. Of course there are also the divinatory methods of the Order. Geomancy and the Tarot. But the student must not stop there. These methods appear to be devoted to divining the future, etc., but it would be a great mistake if your interpretation were limited solely to this. Apart from the fact that the use of these methods develop intuition and the inner psychospiritual senses, there is a whole inner world to be explored and discovered by using the geomantic symbols and the Tarot cards themselves as gateways to another dimension of existence, to another aspect of ourselves of which we ordinarily have little consciousness. And since the work of the Order is based upon self discovery as suggested by the injunction in the Neophyte Ritual "Quit the night and seek the Day," and by the very name of the Order itself - The Golden Dawn, a symbolic representation of the spiritual experience which is the goal of all our work, it is the attainment of the awareness of divinity, and then bringing this divinity to operate in our daily lives in this world of Malkuth which is the outer garment of God. I still like the old Qabalistic aphorism that Kether is in Malkuth, and Malkuth is in Kether but after another manner. This is not unrelated to the Mahayana aphorism that Nirvana is Samsara and Samsara is Nirvana.

Nor must I forget to call attention to something that is all too often neglected. Meditation on the significance and meaning of the magical instruments. They are often made and consecrated by members of the Order and used as always recommended, but rarely do they come to terms with what underlies their common usage. It should be obvious to any long term student that the Lotus Wand for example is a symbol, amongst others, of the spinal column with the Lotus at the top of the head - a channel for the movement of the spinal spirit fire, the Kundalini. (In this connection do make an effort to obtain and read a book by a Hindu named Gopi Krishna entitled Kundalini). All the other instruments similarly have profound meanings. In this connection, as an aid to meditation, I can strongly recommend Aleister Crowley's magnificent early book Part Two of Book Four dealing with the theory of Magick and its tools. There are some beautiful meditative descriptions of the elemental weapons which the good student cannot afford to overlook or do without. Such insights will grow as he grows, insight and intuition piling on one another until, of course, the ultimate goal of all the work is realized -- enlightenment.

VOLUME ONE

As one becomes proficient in the work of the Order and one's insight and understanding develops, it will become apparent that all of these methods may be tied together and unified to become a magical engine by means of which the Mountain of Initiation may be scaled and the Kingdom of Heaven reached, so that man aspires to God and God aspires to man.

The Order is a magical one. But its mysticism is by no means to be separated from its magic. At first they may seem to be entirely different methods of attaining to the highest. And indeed so they appear to be. But it is the mark of real adeptship when the student comes to realize that there is no real separation between these methods, and that at the end they are one and the same.

In other words, to come back to the initial theme stated at the outset of this chapter, there is much more to the Order than the initiatory and other types of rituals. There is so much in the Neophyte and Adeptus Minor rituals that are of value to the aspirant, that even if one were to assume that the Order work is essentially that of ritualism, one would really not be far wrong. They contain so much. For example in the Neophyte Ritual, one of the first exhortations one hears is that coming from the Hierophant who states by names and images are all powers awakened and reawakened. The newly initiated Frater or Soror into the Order could spend considerable effort and time meditating on just what this means. When he does this, he will be led into the deepest mysteries of the teachings of the Order, and into some kind of understanding of what all the variety of Order techniques amount to. I can come to rest here about warning the student to dispense with any superficial evaluation of the Order method arrived at by a rapid reading of the several rituals, or of the book itself. The whole system needs to be studied carefully. Don't be misled by the apparent simplicity of the system. It is enormously complex and complicated - and at the same time so beautifully simple. It may take the student some time, perhaps years, to appreciate the simplicity of the Order system, but the expenditure of that time will be found to be worth the effort. Though meditation is not exactly harped on throughout the text, it is mentioned here and there. And my hope is that the good student will do a great deal of meditation upon what he learns and does with the Order work. There is much to be gained. So much is not stated in specific words, but it is in this "non-statement" or understatement that much of the essence of the system is contained.

Just recently (Easter, 1983) another comment was made, one which I have heard before from one of the Order "failures," that there is a dearth of the devotional element in the Order work. Ordinarily, this comment might be expected from a former Church goer steeped in the Bible - or, which amounts to the same thing, a member of the Fellowship of the Rosy Cross, the name of the Waite version of the Golden Dawn.

Ordinarily, this criticism is not worthy of note, save that in the last instance when I heard it, a younger student had just returned from one of the Ashrams in India where he had heard a great deal about bhakta yoga. I can understand this criticism because bhakta is certainly not stressed in the overt sense within the Order work. But I have to remind students that if they study the Order work very closely - as closely as they have been taught to study the yoga system, they will discover a great deal of emotional content. For instance, on the few occasions when I have witnessed a Neophyte initiation, I have felt very close to an emotional exaltation, almost enough to bring on tears or at the very least a sense of choking, adequate to halt speech. Moreover, the Hierophant of one of the existent Temples, V.H. Soror S.I.A.A., who has officiated at the initiation of some forty Neophytes, also tells me that the ceremony often brings her to the verge of tears.

Apart from that, however, I strongly urge the student who may entertain similar feelings, to read once more a former work of mine What You Should Know About the Golden Dawn, (Falcon Press, Phoenix, AZ. 1983). In that book, many quotations from the different rituals are given, quotations which are not only choice English and fine writing, but are good examples of the devotional aspect of the Order's work. These are really worth reviewing quite often so as to renew the sense that the Order is not without its bhakta aspects.

If that is not enough, then I must refer to the work of Aleister Crowley who, after all, whatever is said and done, was once a member of the Order and owes a very great deal to his Initiation therein. I especially suggest reading his instruction which reviews the whole Eastern attitude about bhakta - Liber Astarte vel Berylli to be found in one of the Equinoxes, or in my book Gems from the Equinox (Falcon Press, Phoenix, AZ 1982). So far as I am concerned, this Liber is a masterpiece, which I can strongly recommend especially to one complaining of the absence of devotional writing in the Order.

Furthermore, and this I think is paramount, there is Crowley's early masterpiece Three Holy Books originally published by Sangreal Foundation with a short introduction by me, but which I understand will be republished by Samuel Weiser Inc. of New York. This volume contains Liber LXV or The Book of the Heart Girt with a Serpent, Liber VII or Liber Lapidis Lazuli, and finally Liber 813 vel Ararita. All three are superbly written and breathe devotion in every word. I am particularly fond of LXV and VII which Falcon Press is issuing as cassettes, containing Liber LXV, or The Book of the Heart Girt with a Serpent, Liber VII or Liber Lapidis Lazuli, and Liber DCCCXIII or Ararita. Periodically I will play the tape on retiring to bed at night, and permitting myself to fall asleep listening to its beauty and devotion. It may be stretching definitions of things pretty far to state that these may be considered part of the Order's devotional literature. But on the other hand I would rather consider these to be in that category than the religious lucubrations of Mr. A.E. Waite who was also once a member of the Order. He founded his own Fellowship, and rewrote the Rituals (three of which are included in a later section of this book) to include many excerpts from the Bible and perhaps from the Roman missal. I am not to be construed as being antagonistic to the latter by any means, but I do state strongly that if I must use one or the other, I prefer to use the so-called holy books of Aleister Crowley. They convey more devotion and love to me than almost anything else. So that if there is actually a dearth of devotional material in the Rituals and work of the Order, it is more than compensated for by reference to the work of a former member, Aleister Crowley. I trust that this will be the end of any complaints about this topic.

VOLUME ONE

THE PROPER ATTITUDE TOWARD MIND-BODY

By

ISRAEL REGARDIE AND CHRISTOPHER S. HYATT

Over the past fifty years I have insisted that the serious magical student seek a course of therapy as a safeguard against some of the catastrophic results which appear to overtake too many of our promising students.

The difficulties seem to arise from the following:

THE SUPEREGO AND THE H.G.A.

A. The confusion between the Freudian superego (the unconscious infantile conscience) and the Order's concept of the Higher and Divine Genius (or the H.G.A.)

Many students as well as those not involved with Magic often substitute a form of their infantile conscience for one form of "Higher Self" or another. This can lead to nothing but disaster. Instead of being guided by a Higher Genius the person is really at the mercy of infantile "voices" and values, so-called brain chatter. Not only does this cause undue individual suffering and deception, it also causes a complete halt to any real progress in the Theurgic arts and sciences. To a large extent this confusion contributes to the often "bad" reputation students of the occult possess.

Those of you familiar with the history of the Order can find glowing examples of this folly. However there is no need to delve this deeply. Almost any group or Order has members and often leaders who have fallen head long into this pit dug for the unwary.

THE INFLATION OF THE EGO

B. There is a frightening frequency of the occurrence of the inflation of the ego -- sometimes referred to as infantile megalomania. To help the student understand this difficulty let us define the healthy ego as a computer type decision maker. The ego's function is to help the person make decisions based on hard data. The purpose of this function should be that of survival and personal fulfillment on various levels or planes. In one sense the healthy ego is more or less non-personal. It realizes cause and effect in Malkuth, and understands its limitations.

On the other hand infantile megalomania is a natural occurrence in infancy, and with proper development has been outgrown by the healthy adult ego. However, while this is the ideal it rarely occurs in practice, and requires some form of "therapy" Eastern or Western to accomplish this goal. In the practice of Magic or anything which releases unusual amounts of energy from the unconscious the infantile megalomaniacal substructure is re-activated, and all the illusions and delusions of self importance and elevation of babyhood re-emerge.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

This flattery overwhelms the ego. The person takes the impersonal and universal nature of the powers he or she experiences as if he or she created the powers or experiences by what they call - themselves.

If this experience called by Jung the "Mana Personality" persists for too long a period the person becomes ego-maniacal and thoroughly self-centered. This can be observed in patients undergoing psychotherapy as well as in the so-called normal man on the street. This excessive self-admiration or as Jung puts it "the naive concretization of primordial images" leads to an overinflated ego which in the end leads directly to disaster and contradicts in toto the purpose of the Great Work.

The student should be also cautioned that the opposite of infantile megalomania is not milk-toast humility and passiveness. The latter is the sine qua non of a deeply buried and potentially more dangerous form of infantile megalomania.

THE PROPER ATTITUDE TOWARD THE INSTINCTS

C. There is a danger of the blatant acting out of instincts which have been distorted through repression and denial on the one hand or their compulsive repression leading to a boring and unfulfilled sex life. Almost everyone raised in the current Judaic-Christian morality suffers inevitably from a totally distorted attitude towards this topic as well as to all biologic functions in general. Therefore a complete sex life which is not only pleasurable but aids in the evolution of the Soul is totally out of the question. What is required is a healthy attitude toward all bodily functions, remembering always that Kether is in Malkuth and Malkuth is in Kether, but after another manner.

Those involved with the Great Work have often found themselves falling into the camps of excess in one direction or another, i.e., too much or too little. The proper use and enjoyment of sex is a necessary part in the discovery and development of the Higher Genius. Aleister Crowley is one of very few who has recognized the reality of this problem, although he himself at times, due to his Plymouth Brethren upbringing, fell into the same booby trap. Most of us are plagued by an average somewhat inhibited sex life, or worse yet a compulsive acting out of our repressed sexual drives. These attitudes do not aid the development of self-expression, deep and total relaxation, or serve as a vehicle for opening the deeper channels which lie within.

THE PROBLEM OF RELIGION AND THE GREAT WORK

This opens the way to a discussion of a very serious point which has long been on my mind. It emerges into the open by the inclusion in this volume of some of the Rituals of A.E. Waite. Mathers and the Order he founded were only nominally Christian. One has to search meticulously through the Rituals and other teaching for serious literal interpretations of the historical Jesus. In reality they are absent. The references to Osiris as a symbol of man - made - perfect could be those of any of the mythical Mediterranean crucified Gods, of whom there were many. The Order was a Hermetic Brotherhood and Christianity played only a minimal role in its operation. Mathers was on friendly with Anna Kingsford who had founded another Hermetic Society in which Christianity did play a prominent part. But he never permitted this friendship to influence him to make his Society similar to hers.

VOLUME ONE

There is a very interesting set of concepts here that need only to be touched on. And that is the constant effort made by some occult teachers to Christianize the ancient wisdom religion. I have already mentioned Anna Kingsford as one. Another, who influenced Dr. Felkins tremendously was Rudolph Steiner who seemed determined to Christianize occultism in grotesque ways that are fundamentally opposed to the innate conceptual nature of Magic. In this he was following in the foot steps of Annie Besant and Bishop Leadbeater who had already succeeded in corrupting Blavatskian Theosophy, transforming it into a Christian occultism with Eastern overtones. Though Steiner was in conflict with them, nonetheless their doctrines must have affected him profoundly, despite his so-called clairvoyance being in opposition to the so-called clairvoyance of Leadbeater.

While this was going on Waite who had been raised as a Roman Catholic seemed determined to follow in the footsteps of the above named teachers. After the revolt of 1900 in the Order he was one of the several committee members who ran the Order. Later he pulled out from this committee to form his own Fellowship of The Rosy Cross. When this happened he totally revised not merely the rituals of the Order but the entire philosophic context of the Order. In this volume three of his Rituals are included. From them the discriminating reader will be able to determine to what extent this perversion of the Order methodology had advanced. There is almost no relationship between the teachings originally laid down and the later biblical emphasis introduced by Waite.

This of course resulted in the introduction of Church concepts of morality and purity which are evident in almost everything that Waite wrote. His whole attitude became sex-negative as well as occult-negative. He made it almost a point of honour to eradicate any reference to every item in the Magical curriculum laid down by Mathers and Westcott. Fortunately when he died in the late 1930's his Order died with him and so did his sex-negative attitudes, as well as his wretched pompous English -- characterized by a need to use Latin phrases where simple English would have been much better. Contrary to the common point of view he must have been a very ambitious person and this is made evident by the pompous titles he gave both to himself in the Rituals as well as to his attendant officers.

EGOTISM

One of the great dangers inherent within the practice of Magic and indeed of all the occult arts -- is the development of an enormous egotism characterized by messianic feelings, infantile omnipotence and the utter destruction of any capacity for effective self-criticism. It appears that as the student becomes more adept in the skills of meditation, skrying, or ceremonial work, he becomes more threatened by an inflation of the ego. It appears slowly and insidiously, without apparent warning. Only those people who are closely related to or associated with the student become aware of the subtle metamorphosis that occurs. The student rarely is conscious of this unconscious transformation. Attempting to make him aware of this egotism is doomed to failure; it is like knocking on a stone wall.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

It seems to afflict the aspirant who functions outside the borders of an occult order or legitimate magical school. In this sense, most students come within the jurisdiction of this definition. Those who practice their occult work under the aegis of a legitimate magical body or under the guidance of an experienced and wise guru or teacher seem to be more protected from this inflation -- unless the guru has himself fallen under the spell of his own messianic fantasies and inflation. If he has, then he communicates his fatal sickness to his students. Or else he is wholly blinded to the debacle about to occur to his student.

One has only to look at the history of most modern occultists and I use them preferentially because their history is more readily authenticated than those of earlier times -- to perceive how valid this phenomenon is. So many of them developed fantastic notions of their own unique importance and role in the world or even cosmic picture. Only recently I heard of one who claimed to have been the teacher of Jesus! There are an almost infinite number of variations of this theme.

It is a definite and ever present danger, and all students of occultism within or without occult orders must become conscious of this phenomenon. Otherwise they are doomed. They experience what appears to be at first an enhancement of life-feelings, a rich harvest of previously unknown information and knowledge, and the awareness that destiny has suddenly acquired a new direction, -- only to collapse later in total frustration, ignominy, and exile from all of society.

From the theoretical viewpoint, the gradual expansion of the confines of the limited ego by magical practices, leads to contact of some kind with the 'unconscious'. A new source of energy is released, an energy which is seen as carrying with it not only new feelings but new knowledge and a greater capacity for self-confidence with the ability to impress and motivate one's fellow man. This energy floods the unprepared ego with almost infinite promise. Unless the candidate is properly prepared for this phenomenon, or is guided and guarded by a competent experienced teacher, he is likely to take this seriously. Effective self-criticism seems to have vanished in thin air.

Crowley seems to have been most conscious of this in some of his earlier work. He himself had a couple of admirable teachers -- Alan Bennett, George Cecil Jones and Oscar Eckenstein. For example in one section of Liber O he wrote: 'This book is very easy to misunderstand; readers are asked to use the most minute critical care in the study of it, even as we have done in its preparation. In this book it is spoken of the Sephiroth and the Paths; of Spirits and Conjurations; of Gods, Spheres, Planes and many other things which may or may not exist. It is immaterial whether these exist or not. By doing certain things certain results will follow; students are most earnestly warned against attributing objective reality or philosophic validity to any of them. There is little danger that any student, however idle or stupid, will fail to get some result; but there is great danger that he will be led astray, obsessed and overwhelmed by his results, even though it be by those which it is necessary that he should attain. Too often, moreover, he mistaketh the final resting-place for the goal, and taketh off his armour as if he were a victor ere the fight is well begun.'

VOLUME ONE

Some few other occultists familiar with the practical side of things also utter similar warnings. Blavatsky in her Voice of the Silence also warns that 'under every flower a serpent coiled.' And in a footnote in this warning, she adds: 'The astral region, the psychic world of supersensuous perception and of deceptive sights -- the world of mediums. It is the great 'Astral Serpent' of Eliphas Levi. No blossom picked in those regions has ever yet been brought down to earth without its serpent coiled around the stem. It is the world of the Great Illusion.'

Only a good guru of almost superhuman powers of effective self-evaluation and examination provide the means of avoiding inflation and the consequent disaster. A third means is almost any form of good psychotherapy. The latter appears to be able to drain off the massive uncontrolled quantities of energy that are released and direct them into new and constructive goals. Those Reichians who have an understanding of 'occult' matters would appear to be more effective than most in dealing with the phenomenon.

Jung has also described it most extensively in an extraordinarily good essay in a book entitled Two Essays on Analytical Psychology. However, the methods of therapy described by Jung and practised by his followers leave a lot to be desired. Every occult student should not merely read this book but own it, in order to provide the opportunity to read and re-read many times the chapter dealing with inflation of the ego.

It is his contention that the analysand, the patient undergoing therapy -- analagous to the enterprising student beginning his occult work -- attempts to identify his ego with the collective psyche. He does this as a means of escaping the pain and anxiety resulting from the collapse of his conscious persona or self, which is one of the primary effects of the analysis. To free himself from the seductive embrace of the collective psyche, instead of denying it as some others have done, he accepts it so totally that he is devoured or overwhelmed by it, becomes lost in it, and thus is no longer capable of perceiving it as a separate entity. As another student once put it, instead of realizing that they have become illuminated by God, they affirm that they are God. Thus the inflation begins. It ends disastrously when or if the 'God' discovers he is not omniscient or omnipotent. But by then it is generally too late.

It would not do the student harm to re-read the statement by Hyatt and myself on the problems confronting the serious occult student in the beginning of this book. Also while at times outrageous Hyatt's book Undoing Yourself with Energized Meditation (Falcon Press, 1982), makes good sense in this context.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

THE MAGICAL ALPHABET

The Knowledge Lectures of the Golden Dawn were fragments, isolated and brief, of general occult information that were handed to the student after each initiation. He was instructed to memorize them, to make them part of his basic mental equipment.

The information consisted primarily of some rudimentary Qabalistic theory, plus of course the Hebrew Alphabet, bits of astrological data, the names of the Tarot cards and their simplest attributions, some geomantic symbols, and a few samples of general occult symbolism. None of these was in depth. So that unless the student had done a great deal of previous individual study and meditation on what he now studied, he was indeed at a loose end. The result was that he could, and often did, wind up hopelessly confused, without the slightest idea of what all this information really amounted to, and gave up the work of the Order.

S. L. Mathers' book The Kabbalah Unveiled had only just been published prior to the formation of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn (in the Outer). Much of the Qabalistic information of several Knowledge Lectures quite evidently had been extrapolated from his Introduction to this book. For the average student this Introduction is a goldmine, a most useful piece of work -- though I cannot say as much for the text itself which is the essence of needless obscurity. A large part of the Introduction is herewith duplicated to show the connections between the book and Knowledge Lectures.

Apart from this book, there were not a great many authorities students could consult in order to enlarge and round out their information of what the Knowledge Lectures were merely hinting at. There was of course the library of the British Museum where Mathers himself had spent a vast amount of time digging out archaic magical material. I doubt however that many others would have bothered with that magnificent storehouse of source material. He therefore deserves enormous commendation for his energy, insight and ability to probe into and clarify the obscure and archaic literature that he was determined to find. Some critics have been capriciously hostile assuming that any Tom, Dick or Harry would have had the perspicacity and intelligence to have discovered the information that Mathers was looking for. I have spent never ending hours over periods of months and years in the mid-thirties attempting, fruitlessly, to duplicate what Mathers, in his genius, knew what he was looking for.

Some astrological works were also available, with the beginning of an outpouring of Theosophical and related literature. These would have been of considerable value. At least some over-all picture of the system would have been provided, albeit from an Eastern point of view. But this was supposed to be the root of the Western Esoteric Tradition.

Alchemical texts were not in general circulation at that time either. A. E. Waite had not begun his task of editing and publishing Latin and Greek translations made by some of the older Golden Dawn clerical members. Since that time the alchemical field has evidenced a renaissance with the appearance of many fine texts. A recent book by Frater Albertus The Alchemists Handbook (Samuel Weiser Inc., New York) will provide a depth of material not otherwise available. It throws much light on some of the dark utterances of the Golden Dawn Knowledge Lectures which otherwise would not make much sense.

So far as the Tarot was concerned, much the same situation prevailed. There was little available in English. Mathers' own booklet was worthless. I imagine it was written and published to put people off the track rather than to help them, a ridiculous attitude typical of that period of time. It should never have been written or published. Paul F. Case's book on the Tarot, had it then existed, would have proved invaluable.

Franz Hartman, with Theosophical connections had written a book on Geomancy based on earlier writings. It would have provided additional material the enterprising student could have used, though the esoteric keys unique to the Golden Dawn's later Inner Order work were not described. He was also the author-editor of In the Pronaos of the Temple, a very informative little book which reproduced some of the forgotten Rosicrucian legends and source material from an earlier period of time. And we must not forget what has since become a classic in the Rosicrucian and Alchemical fields The Secret Symbols of the Rosicrucians.

General symbolism could have been picked up from a variety of miscellaneous sources. There was a general stirring, and occult and spiritual matters were in the air.

But for the general student of the Mysteries who was not a scholar, or had a penchant for independent research, the basic knowledge material was all disconnected data and pretty much of a closed book. All he could do was to memorize the stuff by rote, and ask questions of the Officers of the Temple he belonged to. They may or may not have been too helpful. One of the common cliches was that the elucidation of this or that set of notions was reserved for a higher grade. Very frustrating!

Be that as it may, by the time the student had completed his passage through the grades of the Outer Order he was in possession of a good deal of basic material. A great deal more than one would think at first sight. It was handed out piecemeal which was also a good idea; otherwise were it presented en masse as it was in a previous publication of mine he would have been swamped and overwhelmed by a mass of wholly indigestible material. Whether he was able to tie it all together and integrate it, by the time he got to the Inner Order, into a meaningful and workable system is a moot point. It would be far easier for the modern student to do this than one of a century ago.

However, the fact remains that what was given in the Knowledge Lectures served as the barebones of what could be called the Magical Alphabet. Without this, most occult or magical literature is a closed book. With it, even if only partly understood, you have an open sesame to some of the most profound ideas and practical systems of personal development ever devised. All of this constituted the skeleton of a profound philosophical system.

The task today is so much easier for the student who really wishes to study and master the basics. Several fine works have been written by former students of the Order and which have turned out to be enormously valuable aids in the development of a magical philosophy. First and foremost perhaps is Dion Fortune's The Mystical Qabalah, a beautiful elaboration of the fundamental concepts of the Order. Criticized by the contentious Ellic Howe, it is nonetheless one of the best modern introductions to a difficult subject. Its only flaws might be that she has given too much space to a discussion of the Unknowable in violation of Sir Edwin Arnold's warning (in The Light of Asia): "Sink not the string of thoughts into the Unfathomable. Who asks doth err. Who answers errs. Say naught." And then it is marred somewhat by the neo-Theosophical viewpoints of the Besant-Leadbeater clique relative to the Master Jesus, which has no connection at all with the Qabalah, and is even repudiated by her more modern successors such as Gareth Knight. Nonetheless it is strongly recommended.

In the same category, I would place The Ladder of Lights by William Gray. It is a superb piece of Qabalistic writing that I am sure will find its own place in posterity. A number of others might be mentioned, but these should provide a starting point for the enterprising student who wishes to get a good handle on an otherwise obscure subject.

In order to integrate, in part, some of the mass of disconnected materials given in the Knowledge Lectures, I have decided to include long quotations from MacGregor Mathers' Introduction to The Kaballah Unveiled. I will not say much about the latter book save that it is frightfully obscure, but the Introduction is first rate. The Kaballah Unveiled is an English translation from the Latin of Knorr von Rosenroth, a Renaissance scholar who translated portions of the Zohar from Hebrew into Latin. The Zohar has in recent years been translated wholly into English by Simon and Sperling (Soncino Press), from which the student may get some idea of what its contents are like. There is an even earlier translation of the first part of the Zohar by a William Williams who wrote under the pseudonym of Nurho de Manhar (Wizard Bookshelf, San Diego, 1978), evidently part of his magical motto while in the Second Order of the R.R. et A.C. It is pre-eminently readable, and was originally published in installments in the early part of this century in a magazine published by the American Section of the Theosophical Society. Parts of this will also be quoted from time to time.

While on this topic, I feel impelled to deal with some criticisms made by hostile authors. Some of these people claim that Mathers' contributions to the Knowledge Lectures and the whole corpus of Golden Dawn teaching was based entirely on his research at the British Museum. In other words there was nothing new about the Golden Dawn teaching.

In one sense this is true. In a more profound sense it is wholly false. For example, the Pentagram Ritual. Eliphas Levi does indeed refer to it as the conjuration of the Four. In an old Hebrew prayer given in a Sephardic prayer book, there is a reference to the four Archangels and the quarters in which they reside. But nowhere that I am aware of is there a description of the Pentagram itself, the elemental attributions to its several points, the divine names that accompany them, and any descriptions of the technique or method of describing this Pentagram. Much the same is true of the Hexagram ritual for the invocation or banishing of the planets and Sephiroth of the Tree of Life.

VOLUME ONE

These are elementary points. But they are very important. References will be found to all these ideas, but nowhere will there be found the descriptions required above.

We could go further. However unimportant these matters may seem to the layman or the investigator approaching these topics from the outside, these are several of the most useful magical procedures for which I can find no precedent. For example, there is the vibratory formula of the Middle Pillar, the formation of Telesmatic Images, the specific method of Tattwa vision or Skrying, etc. . .

It was apparently the intent of the founders not to provide a finished system of philosophy -- such as The Secret Doctrine of Blavatsky, etc. It was intended to be supplemented by further reading, study, meditation, and of course by skrying. In this way, the magical language, and in turn the philosophy, could be developed on an individual basis. For example, a book I wrote as far back as 1932, The Tree of Life, served that purpose for me. It presented a systematic overview of the magical philosophy with some of its practices that, despite its verbosity and addiction to adjectivitis, has nonetheless been lauded as one of the best current books of its kind.

In effect, I wish to counsel the student not already familiar with this schema, to approach the following material as might have the student of a century ago. Deal with it in small segments so that you do not get overwhelmed by an overview of a vast mass of material which appears to have no unifying principle. The latter is there alright, but the preliminary material needs first to be committed to memory and studied in small segments to avoid psychic indigestion. Dealt with in this manner, some of the books mentioned above, can be approached in a meaningful way and both will benefit considerably -- that is the knowledge material and the recommended books.

THE MAGIC OF THE HEBREW ALPHABET

In various places throughout these volumes of the teachings of the Golden Dawn, it is stated emphatically that the Hebrew letters are magical symbols. For this reason, each student should learn how to form them and write them. Good calligraphy was often absent in the old Order, for I have seen manuscripts that go back a long way, in which the Hebrew letters are atrociously formed. If there is any magic in such an alphabet, the intent is defeated by deformed and ill-formed letters. The student should make a point of learning in some way to write, print or letter these alphabets correctly. A good calligraphic pen, producing thick and thin lines is an absolute essential. A quill must have originally been used centuries ago, but the lettering pens of today are so much superior.

If you don't know how to go about it, it might be the easiest thing to enquire at a local university where Semitic languages are taught to be put in touch with a senior student who can then show you how to write the letters. Failing this, contact a local synagogue. They will not harm you, cook you, or try to convert you. They may be curious as to why you want to know such a feat, but you can make up a half a dozen explanations to account for that - including the truth, that you are studying the Qabalah. They may know less about that than you, but at least they may be able to teach you how to write the letters correctly and that is half the battle won.

In the Zohar there is a pretty legend, rather long-winded but eloquent, about each letter of the alphabet, and how B, the second letter of the alphabet, came to be used as the first letter of the first word of the Bible - Berashith meaning In the Beginning.

There are two main translations of the Zohar that you could make use of, depending on which one you may have access to. Some of the libraries may have the translation of Simon and Sperling; others may have the shorter but earlier version of Nurho de Manhar. (Wizard Book Shelf, San Diego, CA. 1978). Regardless of whose translation you use, read or study the account of each letter appearing before God imploring Him to use that particular letter for the first word of Genesis. It is interesting reading, full of symbolism of one kind or another, and may throw a great deal of light for you on the motives for Mathers' statement that Hebrew letters are magical symbols and as such must be treated with respect and honor.

THE MYSTICISM OF THE ALPHABET

"Rabbi Chananya spake. and said: Before creation began, the alphabetical letters were in reversed order; thus the two first words in the Book of Genesis, Berashith, bara, begin with B; the next two, Alhim, ath, with A. Why did it not commence with A, the first letter? The reason of this inversion is as follows: For two thousand years before the creation of the world the letters were concealed and hidden, being objects of divine pleasure and delight.

"When the Divine Being, however, willed to create the world, all the letters appeared before His presence in their reverse order. The first ascended and said: 'Lord of the Universe! let it please Thee to create the world by me, as I am the final letter of the word Emeth - (truth), which is graven on Thy signet ring. Thou Thyself art called Emeth, and therefore it will become Thee, the great King, to begin and create the world by me. Said the Holy One (blessed by He): 'Thou, oh, Tav, are indeed worthy, but I cannot create the world by thee; for thou art destined to be not only the characteristic emblem borne by faithful students of the law, from beginning to end, but also the associate of Maveth (death), of which thou art the final letter. Therefore the creation of the world cannot, must not, be through thee.'

"After Tav had disappeared, Sh ascended and said: 'I pray Thee, Lord of the Universe, as bearing Thy great name Shaddai (almighty), to create the world by me, by the holy name that becometh Thee only.' Said the Holy One: 'Thou art truly, o Shin, worthy, pure and true; but letters that go to form lying and falsehood will associate themselves with thee. viz.: Koph (Q) and Resh (R), and with thee will make up SheQeR (a lie), Falsehood, in order that it may be received and credited, come first with the appearance of truth (Sh), which thou representest, and for this reason I will not create the world by thee.' So Shin departed and Q and R, having heard these words, dared not present themselves before the divine presence.

VOLUME ONE

"TZ then went before Him, saying: 'Because I mark the Zaddikim (the righteous), and Thou Thyself hearest me in Thy name, Zaddik (righteous), and also it is written, The righteous Lord loveth righteousness, it will become Thee to create the world by me.' Then said the Holy One: 'Zaddi, Zaddi, thou art truly righteous, but thou must keep thyself concealed, and thy occult meaning must not be made known or become revealed; and therefore thou must not be used in the creation of the world. Thy original form was a rod, symbol of the male principle, surmounted by Yod, a letter of the holy Name, and also of the Holy Covenant, and emblem of the male principle. (By this, reference is made to the first man, who was androgynous, with faces turning one to the right, the other to the left, as symbolized in the figure of Zaddi in the Hebrew alphabet). But the time will come that thou shall be divided, and thy faces shall then be turned to each other.'

"Zaddi then departed, and P ascended and said: 'I am the beginning of the salvation (Peragna) and deliverance (Peduth) thou will execute in the world. It will be fitting to create it by me.' 'Thou art worthy,' replied the Holy One, 'but thou also givest rise to Evil (Peshang), and in thy form resemblest those animals who walk with drooping heads, like wicked men who go about with bowed heads and extended hands. I will not, therefore, create the world by thee.'

"To the letter Ayin, the initial of the word Avon (iniquity), though it claimed the origination of Anaya (Modesty), the Holy One said: 'I shall not create the world by thee.' And forthwith Ayin departed.

"S then went and pleaded: 'I am near (Samech) to the fallen ones, as it is written: The Lord upholdeth (soumekh) all them that fall. Thou must return, Samech, to thy place,' was the reply of the Holy One, and must not leave it; for if thou dost, what will become of the fallen, who will need and look to thee for aid and support?' Samech forthwith returned, and was followed by N, who said: 'Oh thou Holy One! that Thou mayest be venerated in praises (Nura tehillim), and also because the praise of the righteous will be a Nava (delight), let it please Thee to create the world by me.' To whom He replied: 'Nun, return thou to thy place with the fallen (Nephelim), for whose sake Samech hath gone back to her place, and lean for support upon her.'

"M then followed after, saying: 'Thou wilt by me be called Malech (king).' 'Truly so,' said He, 'but I will not, for all that, create the world by thee. Go back at once to thy place with thy companion letters, L and CH; for there must be a King, and for the world to be without one would not be seemly. At that moment CH descended from off the throne of light and splendor, exclaiming; 'I am thy glory, create the world by me.' As it stood trembling with excitement before the Holy One, two hundred thousand worlds together with the throne itself were seized with a sudden tremor and seemed ready to fall. 'Caph, Caph!' cried the Holy One, 'what hast thou done? I will not create the world by thee, for thou beginnest Chala (ruin, loss). Return at once to thy place on the throne of glory and abide there!' Then Caph retired and went back to its place.

"Y next appeared and claimed that being the initial letter in the divine name YHVH, it was the best for the work of creation. But the Holy One replied: 'Let it suffice thee to be what thou art, chief letter in my name and foremost in all my designs, thou must remain where and as thou art!

Then came T and spake before the Eternal One: 'Create the world by me, for in me alone is thy goodness (Tobh) and uprightness, for attributes of Thee.' 'I will not, Oh Teth,' replied the Holy One, 'use thee in the creation of the world, because the goodness within thee is hidden and concealed from sight as it is written, 'How great is Thy goodness which Thou hidest from them that fear Thee.' Seeing thou wilt remain invisible to the world I am about to create, and furthermore because of the goodness hidden within thee, the gates of the temple will sink into the earth as it is written, 'Her gates are sunk into the ground,' and besides all this, thou with thy comrade the letter Cheth (CH) composed sin. Therefore, these letters will never enter in the names of the twelve holy tribes. On hearing these words Ch went not before the Holy One, but returned at once to its place.

"Z then went up and urged its claim, saying: 'Thy children will through me keep the Sabbath, as it is written: Remember (Zecor) the Sabbath to keep it holy. Thou, Oh Zain,' replied the Holy one, 'art of too warlike a form, resembling as thou dost a spear. I cannot use thee in the creation of the world.'

When Z heard this decision, like N it retired and gave place to V, who said: 'I am a letter in thy Holy name.' The Eternal One answered and said, 'remain contented, Oh V that together with H you are in the great name. I shall not choose you by whom to create the world.'

"D. accompanied by G, went before the Divine Presence, To them it was said. 'Let it suffice you, that so long as you are conjoined and associated, there will always be the poor on the earth who will need succor and help. Daleth (D) - poverty and Gimel (G) - help or the benefactor. Therefore both of you keep together, the one helping the other.' (In the Hebrew alphabet G and D are successive letters).

"Then came B and said : 'Create the world by me, because I am the initial letter of Beracha (blessing) and through me all will bless thee, both in the world above as in the world below.' 'Truly, Oh B,' said the Holy One, 'I will surely create the world by thee only.'

"Hearing these words, A remained in its place and went not into the Divine Presence, who therefore exclaimed 'Aleph (A) Aleph! why comest thou not before me as all the other letters?' Then replied A: 'Lord and sovereign of the universe, it is because I have observed that (Bexcepted) they have returned as they went, without success. Why therefore, should I come before thee, since thou hast already given B the great and precious gift we all of us craved and desired. Moreover, it becometh not the monarch of the universe to withdraw and take back his presents from one subject and give them to another.' To these words the Holy One responded: 'Aleph, Aleph! Thou shalt be the first of all letters and my unity shall be symbolized only by thee. In all conceptions and ideas human or divine, in every act and deed begun, carried on and completed, in all of them shalt thou be the first, the beginning.'

"Therefore did the Holy One make the letters of the celestial alphabet, capitals, and those of the earthly, small, each corresponding to one another. Therefore also the Book of Genesis begins with two words whose initials are B, viz/ : Berashith Bara (in the beginning created) followed by two others, whose initials are A, viz., Alhim ath (God, the substance of) to show that the letters of these alphabets celestial and earthly are one and the same by which every creature and thing in the universe has been formed and produced."

CONCERNING HEBREW PRONUNCIATION

Recently, a noted occult writer wrote me a letter asking why it was that the Hebrew pronunciations given in an earlier and now obsolete book of mine on the Qabalah differed radically from almost every other contemporary Qabalistic writer. When answering him, it had been my intention to assert that the explanations had already been given. When, however, I proceeded to examine the obsolete book anew, I found that this had been carelessly omitted. (Falcon Press has just issued several tapes which give the correct pronunciation of most of the Qabalistic and other words used in this text.)

My reply took a page and a half to clarify the issue. In order to eliminate possible repetitions of this expenditure of time and effort, let me offer the following.

I can best begin by asserting that no matter where or by whom spoken, English is English. The accents used, for example, in the North of England are entirely different from those employed in Kent or Sussex in the South of England. The English of Wales sounds strangely melodious compared to that of Surrey or Northampton. All however are English.

Much the same is true in the United States. The accent of an inhabitant of Minnesota is entirely different from one who lives in Alabama or Georgia. All speak that variety of English we know as American. Which one is correct?

Let me say that there is no standard or fixed accent which is accepted universally as authoritative. I fancy much the same is true of every other language. Northern and Southern Italian vary in many ways. So also in Germany, France and elsewhere. Accents and dialects are integral parts of the linguistic process.

This is true also in Hebrew which is part of the magical language of what has come to be called the Western esoteric tradition. There are two main streams of Hebrew pronunciation called the Ashkenazic relating to North Europe, England and the United States, and the Sephardic spoken in the Mediterranean and Levantine areas. The history of these two streams is really irrelevant to this essay. Anyone interested can do a little research in a good encyclopedia.

The Mediterranean area, as we know historically, achieved a higher level of cultural development far earlier than did Northern Europe. Much of the Qabalistic literature had its origins in Spain where there was a fascinating merger of Christian, Arabic and Hebrew mysticisms in pre-Zoharic times, as well as in the Levantine area as a whole. The obvious result of this cultural superiority was that the spoken Hebrew had a Sephardic accent. When the literature came to be translated by later scholars and Christian Qabalists, the translations or better still transliterations took on the Sephardic flavor.

Much later in the 18th century, when there was a revival of Jewish mysticism called Chassidism, in Central Europe, Poland and Russia, the Ashkenazic accent or dialect was employed. Regardless of how popular Chassidism became, English translators persisted on the whole in using the Sephardic dialect, which is interesting because Baal Shem, the founder of what became the Chassidic movement, obviously used Ashkenazic Hebrew. It seems, however, that the Sephardic dialect and the whole Qabalistic literary corpus were intimately bound together, so that very few could conceive that there was any other way of transliterating Hebrew. This persisted right up to modern times. S.L. Mathers in his Kaballah Unveiled, Arthur E. Waite in all of his Qabalistic writings, and Frater Albertus in one of the early Alchemical Bulletins, amongst many other distinguished writers, all used the Sephardic dialect.

It so happened that when I began my interest in the Qabalah in my mid-teens, I wanted to be able to translate some of the important books and manuscripts that yet remained to be rendered into English. The head of the Semitic Division of the Library of Congress whom I came to know in those days - I must have made myself a young nuisance to him requesting information about Qabalistic texts in English - recommended that I get a tutor from whom I could learn Hebrew. As a result I had a year's intensive training in Hebrew from a young man attending George Washington University in Washington, D.C., where I then lived.

Many years later, when I had learned to manipulate letters and numbers (Gematria) with some dexterity, I found that on occasion the Ashkenazic transliterations were far more useful and illuminating than the Sephardic, as I demonstrated in an earlier but now obsolete book on the Qabalah. Various people to whom I spoke as a very young man showed not the least interest, so I kept my counsel to myself.

A large number of personal notes and quotations from various authorities gradually accumulated over the course of years. In 1931, while I was in a London literary environment, serving as a secretary to first one and then another novelist and author, I was encouraged to put my ideas in book form. I did so. It became my first published book a long time ago. I had hoped that the use of the Ashkenazic dialect which had solved a number of gematria problems for me, would attract some attention from other students and authorities and be used constructively in other texts. No such thing happened. Since that book was written in the early 1930's, I have seen my Ashkenazic transliterations used only three or four times at most. I was disappointed, I must confess, so that in later writings I dropped it, returning to the more conventional spelling and transliteration of the Hebrew alphabet and Qabalistic terms.

When the State of Israel declared its independence in 1947, with Hebrew as its official language, naturally the Sephardic dialect was used since Palestine was part of the Levantine area. That confirmed my decision to drop the Ashkenazic style of transliteration.

It must not be supposed however that every Jewish community in Europe or the United States has dropped the Ashkenazic dialect by any manner or means. It is still used. But if you went to the State of Israel, your Ashkenazic dialect will hardly be understood, any more than you could make heads or tails out of the Sephardic dialect if you happened to be an Ashkenazi.

VOLUME ONE

It is rather as if someone born and bred in Northumberland or Yorkshire could make much sense out of the Cockney accent used in parts of London. Some Australians have a version of the Cockney accent, with all its colloquialisms, that makes them rather hard to understand at first. But, never let it be forgotten, they are all speaking English - in much the same way that anyone speaking the Ashkenazic dialect or the Sephardic dialect is speaking or reading Hebrew.

This is the core of the Hebrew language problem of the Qabalah in the simplest possible terms. So when I have used "Bes" or "Ches" or "Tes" I am referring to the same letters as "Beth," "Cheth," or "Teth." Keser and Tipharas and Malkus are no other than Kether and Tiphareth and Malkuth - and so on and so forth. I still suggest that the student of QBL - as Frater Achad and Frater Albertus choose to term the subject matter - learn both dialects. He may find one more useful than another in certain specific areas. When he wishes to discover the numerology or Gematria of his name, for whatever reason he may have in mind, he may get much further by the use of one rather than the other, and achieve his objectives more readily.

The student must discover which of these two suits his own personal predilection and answers to the necessity imposed by the results of study and experience. The Order teaching employs the Sephardic pronunciation, and I have not ventured to interfere with that in any way at all. I simply mention the matter here to render impossible the likelihood of further confusion arising.

INTRODUCTION TO THE KABALLAH UNVEILED

By

McGREGOR MATHERS

The first questions which the non-qabalistical reader will probably ask are: What is the Qabalah? Who was its author? What are its sub-divisions? What are its general teachings? And why is a translation of it required at the present time? . . .

The Qabalah may be defined as being the esoteric Jewish doctrine. It is called in Hebrew QBLH, Qabalah, which is derived from the root QBL, Qibel, meaning "to receive". This appellation refers to the custom of handing down the esoteric tradition by oral transmission, and is nearly allied to "tradition".

There are no separate numeral characters in Hebrew and Chaldee; therefore, as is also the case in Greek, each letter has its own peculiar numerical value, and from this circumstance results the important fact that every word is a number, and every number is a word. . . I have selected the Roman letter Q to represent the Hebrew Qoph or Koph, a precedent for the use of which without a following u, may be found in Max Muller's Sacred Books of the East. The reader must remember that the Hebrew is almost entirely a consonantal alphabet, the vowels being for the most part supplied by small points and marks usually placed below the letters. Another difficulty of the Hebrew alphabet consists in the great similarity between the forms of certain letters, e.g., V, Z, and final N.

With regard to the author and origin of the Qabalah, I cannot do better than give the following extract from Dr. Christian Ginsburg's Essay on the Kaballah, first premissing that this word has been spelt in a great variety of ways - Cabala, Kabalah, Kabbala, etc. I have adopted the form Qabalah, as being more consonant with the Hebrew writing of the word.

(N.B. To these words of Mathers I must add my own praise. For ever since I first discovered this book around 1925, it has been a constant source of reference for me, and most of one of my early books, A Garden of Pomegranates was in point of fact predicated on frequent reading of this text. Its historical material, though brief, I found extremely accurate; more details may be found in Gershom Sholem's book, Major Trends in Jewish Mysticism, which is another goldmine not under any circumstances to be neglected by the good student.)

A system of religious philosophy, or, more properly, of theosophy, which has not only exercised for hundreds of years an extraordinary influence on the mental development of so shrewd a people as the Jews, but has captivated the minds of some of the greatest thinkers of Christendom in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, claims the greatest attention of both the philosopher and the theologian. When it is added that among its captives were Raymond Lully, the celebrated scholastic metaphysician and chemist (died 1315); John Reuchlin, the renowned scholar and reviver of Oriental literature in Europe (born 1455, died 1522); John Picus de Mirandola, the famous philosopher and classical scholar (1463-1494); Cornelius Henry Agrippa, the distinguished philosopher, divine, and physician (1486-1535); John Baptist von Helmont, a remarkable chemist and physician (1577-1644); as well as our own countrymen, Robert Fludd, the famous physician and philosopher (1574-1637); and Dr. Henry More (1614-1687); and that these men, after restlessly searching for a scientific system which should disclose to them "the deepest depths" of the divine nature, and show them the real tie which binds all things together, found the cravings of their minds satisfied by this theosophy, the claims of the Qabalah on the attention of students in literature and philosophy will readily be admitted. The claims of the Kabbalah, however, are not restricted to the literary man and the philosopher; the poet too will find in it ample materials for the exercise of his lofty genius. How can it be otherwise with a theosophy which, we are assured, was born of God in Paradise, was nursed and reared by the choicest of the angelic hosts in heaven, and only held converse with the holiest of man's children upon earth. Listen to the story of its birth, growth, and maturity, as told by its followers.

The Qabalah was first taught by God himself to a select company of angels, who formed a theosophic school in Paradise. After the Fall the angels most graciously communicated this heavenly doctrine to the disobedient children of earth, to furnish the protoplasts with the means of returning to their pristine nobility and felicity. From Adam it passed over to Noah, and then to Abraham, the friend of God, who emigrated with it to Egypt, where the patriarch allowed a portion of this mysterious doctrine to ooze out. It was in this way that the Egyptians obtained some knowledge of it, and the other Eastern nations could introduce it into their philosophical systems. Moses, who was learned in all the wisdom of Egypt, was first initiated into the Qabalah in the land of his birth, but became most proficient in it during his wanderings in the wilderness, when he not only devoted to it the leisure hours of the whole forty years, but received lessons in it from one of the angels. By the aid of this mysterious science the law-giver was enabled to solve the difficulties which arose during his management of the Israelites, in spite of the pilgrimages, wars, and frequent miseries of the nation. He covertly laid down the principles of this secret doctrine in the first four books of the Pentateuch, but withheld them from Deuteronomy. Moses also initiated the seventy elders into the secrets of this doctrine, and they again transmitted them from hand to hand. Of all who formed the unbroken line of tradition, David and Solomon were the most deeply initiated into the Qabalah. No one, however, dared to write it down, till Schimeon Ben Jochai, who lived at the time of the destruction of the second temple . . . After his death, his son, Rabbi Eleazar, and his secretary, Rabbi Abba, as well as his disciples, collated Rabbi Simon Ben Jochai's treatises, and out of these composed the celebrated work called ZHR, Zohar, Splendour, which is the grand storehouse of Qabalism.

The Qabalah is usually classed under four heads:

- (a) The practical Qabalah.
- (b) The literal Qabalah.
- (c) The unwritten Qabalah.
- (d) The dogmatic Qabalah.

The practical Qabalah deals with talismanic and ceremonial magic, and does not come within the scope of this work. But, the whole work of the Golden Dawn is in fact the elucidation of this topic.

The literal Qabalah is referred to in several places, and therefore a knowledge of its leading principles is necessary. It is divided into three parts: GMTRIA. Gematria; NVTRIQVN, Notarikon, and ThMVRH, Temura.

Gematria is a metathesis of the Greek word ypauuateia. It is based on the relative numerical values of words, as I have before remarked. Words of similar numerical values are considered to be explanatory of each other, and this theory is also extended to phrases. Thus the letter shin, Sh, is 300, and is equivalent to the number obtained by adding up the numerical values of the letters of the words RVCH ALHIM, Ruach Elohim, the spirit of the Elohim; and it is therefore a symbol of the spirit of the Elohim. For R-200, V-6, Ch-8, A-1, L-30, H-5, I-10, M-40; total-300. Similarly the words AChD, Achad, Unity, one, and AHBH, Ahebah, love, each-13; for A-1, Ch-8, D-4, total-13; and A-1, H-5, B-2, H-5, total-13. Again, the name of the angel MTTRVN, Metatron or Methraton, and the name of Deity, ShDI, Shaddai, each make 314; so the one is taken as symbolical of the other. The angel Metraton is said to have been the conductor of the children of Israel through the wilderness, of whom God says, "My Name is in him." With regard to Gematria of phrases (Gen. xlix. 10), IBA ShILH, Yeba Shiloh, "Shiloh shall come" which equals 358, which is the numeration of the MShICh, Messiah. Thus also the passage, Gen. xviii. 2 VHNH ShLShH, Vehennna Shalisha, "And lo, three men," equals in numerical value ALV MIKAL GBRIAL VRPAL, Elo Mikhael Gabriel VeRaphael, "These are Mikhael, Gabriel and Raphael;" for each phrase equals 701. I think these instances will suffice to make clear the nature of Gematria, especially as many others will be found in the course of the ensuing work.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Notariqon is derived from the Latin word notarius, a short-hand writer. Of Notariqon there are two forms. In the first every letter of a word is taken for the initial or abbreviation of another word, so that from the letters of a word a sentence may be formed. Thus every letter of the word BRAShITh, Berashith, the first word in Genesis, is made the initial of a word, and we obtain from it BRAShITh RAH ALHIM AhIQBLV IShRAL ThVRH, Berashith Rahi Elohim Sheyequebelo Israel Torah: "In the beginning the Elohim saw that Israel would accept the law."

The second form of Notariqon is that exact reverse of the first. By this the initials or finals, or both or the medials, of a sentence, are taken to form a word or words. Thus the Qabalah is called ChKMh NSThRH, Chokhmah Nesthorah, "the secret wisdom;" and if we take the initials of these two words Ch and N, we form by the second kind of Notariqon the word ChN, Chen, "grace." Similarly, from the initials and finals of the words MI IOLH LNV HShMIMH, Mi Iaulah Leno Ha-Shamayimah, "Who shall go up for us to heaven?" (Deut. xxx. 12). are formed MILH, Milah "circumcision," and IHVH, the Tetragrammaton, implying that God hath ordained circumcision as the way to heaven.

Temura is permutation. According to certain rules, one letter is substituted for another letter preceding or following it in the alphabet, and thus from one word another word of totally different orthography may be formed. Thus the alphabet is bent exactly in half, in the middle, and one half is put over the other; and then by changing alternately the first letter or the first two letters at the beginning of the second line, twenty two commutations are produced. These are called the "Table of the Combinations of TzIRVP," tziruph. For example's sake, I will give the method called ALBTh, Albath, thus:

11	10	9	8	7	6	5	4	3	2	1
K	I	T	Ch	Z	V	H	D	G	B	A
M	N	S	O	P	Tz	Q	R	Sh	Th	L

Each method takes its name from the two pairs composing it, the system of pairs of letters being the groundwork of the whole, as either letter in a pair is substituted for the other letter. Thus, by Albath, from RVCh, Ruach, is formed DTzO, Detzau. The names of the other twenty-one methods are:

VOLUME ONE

ABGTh	AHDTh	ADBG	AHBD	AVBH
AZBV	ACHBZ	ATBCh	AIBT	AKBI
ALBK	AMBL	ANBM	ASBN	AOBS
APBO	ATzBP	AQBTz	ARBQ	AShBR
AThBSH

To these must be added the modes ABGD and ALBM. Then comes the "Rational Table of Tziruph," another set of twenty-two combinations. There are also three "Tables of the Commutations," known respectively as the Right, the Averse, and the Irregular. To make any of these, a square, containing 484 squares, should be made, and the letters written in. For the "Right Table" write the alphabet across from right to left; in the second row of squares do the same, but begin with B and end with A; in the third begin with G and end with B; and so on. For the "Averse Table" write the alphabet from right to left backwards, beginning with Th and ending with A; in the second row begin with Sh and end with Th, etc. The "Irregular Table" would take too long to describe. Besides all these, there is the method called ThShRQ, Thashraq, which is simply writing a word backwards. There is one more very important form, called the "Qabalah of the Nine Chambers," or AIQ BKR, Aiq Bekar. It is thus formed:

300	30	3	200	20	2	100	10	1
Sh	L	G	R	K	B	Q	I	A
600	60	6	500	50	5	400	40	4
M (f)	S	V	K (f)	N	H	Th	M	D
900	90	9	800	80	8	700	70	7
Tz (f)	Tz	T	P (f)	P	Ch	N (f)	O	Z

I have put the numeration of each letter above to show the affinity between the letters in each chamber. Sometimes this is used as a cipher, by taking the portions of the figure to show the letters they contain, putting one point for the first letter, two for the second, etc. Thus the right angle, containing AIQ, will answer for the letter Q if it has three dots or points within it. Again, a square will answer for H, N, or K final, according to whether it has one, two, or three points respectively placed within it. So also with regard to the other letters. But there are many other ways of employing the Qabalah of the Nine Chambers, which I have not space to describe. I will merely mention, as an example, that by the mode of Teinura called AThBSh, Athbash, it is found that in Jeremiah xxv. 26, the word ShShk, Sheshakh, symbolizes BBL, Babel.

Besides all these rules, there are certain meanings hidden in the shape of the letters of the Hebrew alphabet; in the form of a particular letter at the end of a word being different from that which it generally bears when it is a final letter, or in a letter being written in the middle of a word in a character generally used only at the end; in any letter or letters being written in a size smaller or larger than the rest of the manuscript, or in a letter being written upside down; in the variations found in the spelling of certain words, which have a letter more in some places than they have in others; in peculiarities observed in the position of any of the points or accents, and in certain expressions supposed to be elliptic or redundant.

For example, the shape of the Hebrew letter Aleph, A, is said to symbolize a Vau, V, between a Yod, I, and a Daleth, D; and thus the letter itself represents the word IVD, Yod. Similarly the shape of the letter He, H, represents the word Daleth, D, with a Yod, I, written at the lower left-hand corner, etc.

In Isaiah ix. 6, 7, the word LMRBH, Lemarbah, for multiplying, is written with the character for M final in the middle of the word, instead of with the ordinary initial and medial M. The consequence of this is that the total numerical value of the word, instead of being $30 + 40 + 200 + 2 + 5$ equals 277, is $30 + 600 + 200 + 2 + 5$ equals 837, by Gematria ThTh ZL, Tat Zal, the profuse Giver. Thus, by writing the M final instead of the ordinary character, the word is made to bear a different qabalistical meaning.

In Deuteronomy vi. 4, etc., is the prayer known as the Shema Yisrael. It begins, "ShMo IShRAL IHVH ALHINV IHVH AChD, Shemaa Yisrael, Tetragrammaton Elohino Tetragrammaton Achad: "Hear, O Israel, Tetragrammaton our God is Tetragrammaton Unity."

In this verse the terminal letter O in ShMO, and the D in AChD are written much larger than the other letters of the text. The qabalistical symbology contained in this circumstance is explained as follows. The letter O, being of the value of 70, shows that the law may be explained in seventy different ways, and the D equals 4 equals the four cardinal points and the letters of the Holy Name. The first word, ShMO, has the numerical value of 410, the number of years of the duration of the first temple, etc., etc. There are many other points worthy of consideration in this prayer, but time will not permit me to dwell on them. . .

The term Unwritten Qabalah is applied to certain knowledge which is never entrusted to writing, but communicated orally. I may say no more on this point, not even whether I myself have or have not received it. Of course, till the time of Rabbi Schimeon Ben Jochai none of the Qabalah was ever written.

The Dogmatic Qabalah contains the doctrinal portion. There are a large number of treatises of various dates and merits which go to make up the written Qabalah, but they may be reduced to four heads:

- (a) The Sepher Yetzirah and its dependencies.
- (b) The Zohar with its developments and commentaries.
- (c) The Sepher Sephiroth and its expansions.
- (d) The Asch Metzareph and its symbolism.

The SPR ITzIRH, Sepher Yetzirah, or Book of Formation, is ascribed to the patriarch Abraham. It treats the cosmogony as symbolized by the ten numbers and the twenty-two letters of the alphabet, which it calls the thirty-two paths. On these latter Rabbi Abraham

VOLUME ONE

Ben Dior has written a mystical commentary. The term path is used throughout the Qabalah to signify a hieroglyphical idea, or rather the sphere of ideas, which may be attached to any glyph or symbol.

The ZHR, Zohar, or "Splendour," besides many other treatises of less note, contains the following most important books. . .

The ASh MTzRP, Asch Metzareph, or Purifying Fire, is hermetic and alchemical, and is known to few, and when known is understood by still fewer.

The principal doctrines of the Qabalah are designed to solve the following problems:

- (a) The Supreme Being, His nature and attributes.
- (b) The Cosmogony.
- (c) The creation of angels and man.
- (d) The destiny of man and angels.
- (e) The nature of the soul.
- (f) The nature of angels, demons, and elementals.
- (g) The import of the revealed law.
- (h) The transcendental symbolism of numerals.
- (i) The peculiar mysteries contained in the Hebrew letters.
- (j) The equilibrium of contraries...

What is negative existence? What is positive existence? The distinction between these two is another fundamental idea. To define negative existence clearly is impossible, for when it is distinctly defined it ceases to be negative existence; it is then negative existence passing into static condition. Therefore wisely have the Qabalists shut out from mortal comprehension the primal AIN, Ain, the negatively existent One, and the AIN SVP, Ain Soph, the limitless Expansion; while of even the AIN SVP AVR, Ain Soph Aur, the illimitable Light, only a dim conception can be formed. Yet, if we think deeply, we shall see that such must be the primal forms of the unknowable and nameless One, whom we, in the most manifest form speak of as God. He is the Absolute. But how do we define the Absolute? Even as we define it, it slips from our grasp, for it ceases when defined to be the Absolute. Shall we then say that the Negative, the Limitless, the Absolute are, logically speaking, absurd, since they are ideas which our reason cannot define? No; for could we define them, we should make them, so to speak, contained by our reason, and therefore not superior to it; for a subject to be capable of definition it is requisite that certain limits should be assignable to it. How then can we limit the Illimitable?

The first principle and axiom of the Qabalah is the name of the Deity, translated in our version of the Bible, "I am that I am," AHIH AShR AHIH, Eheieh Asher Eheieh. A better translation is, Existence is existence, or I am He who is.

Eliphas Levi Zahed, that great philosopher and Qabalist of the present century, says in his Histoire de la Magie (bk. i. ch. 7): "The Qabalists have a horror of everything that resembles idolatry; they, however ascribe the human form to God, but it is a purely hieroglyphical figure. They consider God as the intelligent, living, and loving Infinite One.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

He is for them neither the collection of other beings, nor the abstraction of existence, nor a philosophically definable being. He is in all, distinct from all, and greater than all. His very name is ineffable; and yet this name only expresses the human ideal of His Divinity. What God is in Himself it is not given to man to know. God is the absolute of faith; existence is the absolute of reason, existence exists by itself, and because it exists. The reason of the existence of existence is existence itself. We may ask, "Why does any particular thing exist?" that is, "Why does such or such a thing exist?" But we cannot ask, without its being absurd to do so, "Why does existence exist?" For this would be to suppose existence prior to existence." Again, the same author says (ibid. bk. iii. ch. 2): "To say, I will believe when the truth of the dogma shall be scientifically proved to me," is the same as to say, I will believe when I have nothing more to believe. and when the dogma shall be destroyed as dogma by becoming a scientific theorem. That is to say, in other words: "I will only admit the Infinite when it shall have been explained, determined, circumscribed, and defined for my benefit; in one word, when it has become finite. I will then believe in the Infinite when I am sure that the Infinite does not exist. I will believe in the vastness of the ocean when I shall have seen it put into bottles." But when a thing has been clearly proved and made comprehensible to you, you will no longer believe it you will know it.

In the Bhagavad Gita, ch. ix., it is said, "I am Immortality and also death; and I, O Arjuna! am that which is and that which is not." [Or, "which exists negatively."] And again (ch. ix.): "And, O descendant of Bharata! see wonders in numbers, unseen before. Within my body, O Gudakesa! see today the whole universe, including everything moveable and immovable, all in one." And again (ibid.) Arjuna said: "O Infinite Lord of the Gods! O Thou who pervadest the universe! Thou art the Indestructible, that which is, that which is not, and what is beyond them. Thou art the Primal God, the Ancient One; Thou art the highest support of this universe. By Thee is this universe pervaded, O Thou of the infinite forms. . . Thou art of infinite power, of unmeasured glory; Thou pervadest all, and therefore. Thou art all!"

The idea of negative existence can then exist as an idea, but it will not bear definition. since the idea of definition is utterly incompatible with its nature. But, some of my readers will perhaps say, your term negative existence is surely a misnomer; the state you describe would be better expressed by the title of negative subsistence. Not so, I answer; for negative subsistence can never be anything but negative subsistence; it cannot vary, it cannot develop; for negative subsistence cannot be at all; it never has existed, it never does exist, it never will exist. But negative existence bears hidden in itself, positive life; for in the limitless depths of the abyss of its negativity lies hidden the power of standing forth from itself, the power of projecting the scintilla of the thought unto the outer, the power or re-involving the syntagma into the inner. Thus shrouded and veiled is the absorbed intensity in the centerless whirl of the vastness of expansion. Therefore have I employed the term Ex-sto, rather than Sub-sto.

VOLUME ONE

But between two ideas so different as those of negative and positive existence a certain nexus, or connecting-link, is required, and hence we arrive at the form which is called potential existence, which while more nearly approaching positive existence, will still scarcely admit of clear definition. It is existence, in its possible form. For example, in a seed, the tree which may spring from it is hidden; it is in a condition of potential existence; is there; but it will not admit of definition. How much less, then, will those seeds which that tree in its turn may yield? But these latter are in a condition which, while it is somewhat analogous to potential existence, is in hardly so advanced a stage; that is, they are negatively existent.

But, on the other hand, positive existence is always capable of definition; it is dynamic; it has certain evident powers, and it is therefore the antithesis of negative existence, and still more so of negative subsistence. It is the tree, no longer hidden in the seed, but developed into the outer. But positive existence has a beginning and an end, and it therefore requires another form from which to depend, for without this other concealed negative ideal behind it, it is unstable and unsatisfactory.

Thus, then, have I faintly and with all reverence endeavoured to shadow forth to the minds of my readers the idea of the Illimitable One. And before that idea, and of the idea, I can only say, in the words of an ancient oracle: "In Him is an illimitable abyss of glory, and from it there goeth forth one little spark which maketh all the glory of the sun, and of the moon, and of the stars. Mortal! behold how little I know of God; seek not to know more of Him, for this is far beyond thy comprehension, however wise thou art; as for us, who are His ministers, how small a part are we of Him!"

There are three qabalistical veils of the negative existence, and in themselves they formulate the hidden ideas of the Sephiroth not yet called into being, and they are concentrated in Kether, which in this sense is the Malkuth of the hidden ideas of the Sephiroth. I will explain this. The first veil of the negative existence is the AIN, Ain equals Negativity. This word consists of three letters, which thus shadow forth the first three Sephiroth or numbers. The second veil is the AIN SVP, Ain Soph, equals Without Limit. And the third veil is AIN SVP AVR, Ain Soph Aur equals the Limitless Light. This again consists of nine letters, and symbolizes the first nine Sephiroth, but of course in their hidden idea only. But when we reach the number nine we cannot progress farther without returning to the unity, or the number one, for the number ten is but a repetition of unity freshly derived from the negative, as is evident from a glance at its ordinary representation in Arabic numerals, where the circle 0 represents the Negative, and the 1 the Unity. Thus, then, the limitless ocean of negative light does not proceed from a center, for it is centerless, but it concentrates a center, which is the number one of the manifested Sephiroth, Kether, the Crown, the First Sephira; which therefore may be said to be the Malkuth or number ten of the hidden Sephiroth. Thus, "Kether is in Malkuth, and Malkuth is in Kether." Or, as an alchemical author of great repute (Thomas Vaughan, better known as Eugenius Philalethes) says, [Euphrates, or, The Waters of the East] apparently quoting from

Proclus: "That the heaven is in the earth, but after an earthly manner; and that the earth is in the heaven, but after a heavenly manner." But inasmuch as negative existence is a subject incapable of definition, as I have before shown, it is rather considered by the Qabalists as depending back from the number of unity than as a separate consideration therefrom; wherefore they frequently apply the same terms and epithets indiscriminately to either. Such epithets are: The Concealed of the Concealed, The Ancient of the Ancient Ones, the Most Holy Ancient One, etc.

I must now explain the real meaning of the terms Sephira and Sephiroth. The first is singular, the second is plural. The best rendering of the word is numericalemanation. There are ten Sephiroth, which are the most abstract forms of the ten numbers of the decimal scale, i.e., the abstract forms of the ten numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. Therefore, as in the higher mathematics we reason of numbers in their abstract senses, so in the Qabalah we reason of the Deity by the abstract forms of the numbers; in other words, by the SPIRVTh, Sephiroth. It was from this ancient Oriental theory that Pythagoras derived his numerical symbolic ideas.

Among these Sephiroth, jointly and severally, we find the development of the persons and attributes of God. Of these some are male and some are female. Now, for some reason or other best known to themselves, the translators of the Bible have carefully crowded out of existence and smothered up every reference to the fact that the Deity is both masculine and feminine. They have translated a feminineplural by a masculinesingular in the case of the word Elohim. They have, however, left an inadvertent admission of their knowledge that it was plural in Gen. iv. 26; "And Elohim said: Let Us make man." Again (v. 27), how could Adam be made in the image of the Elohim, male and female, unless the Elohim were male and female also? The word Elohim is a plural formed from the feminine singular ALH, Eloh, by adding IM to the word. But inasmuch as IM is usually the termination of the masculine plural, and is here added to a feminine noun, it gives the word Elohim the sense of a female potency united to a masculine idea, and thereby capable of producing an offspring. Now, we hear much of the Father and Son, but we hear nothing of the Mother in the ordinary religions of the day. But in the Qabalah we find that the Ancient of Days conforms Himself simultaneously into the Father and the Mother, and thus begets the Son. Now, this Mother is Elohim. Again, we are usually told that the Holy Spirit is masculine. But the word RVCh, Ruach, Spirit, is feminine, as appears from the following passage of the Sepher Yetzirah: "AChTh RVCh ALHIM ChiIM, Achath (feminine, not Achad, masculine) Ruach Elohim Chiim: One is She the Spirit of the Elohim of Life."

Now, we find that before the Deity conformed Himself thus, i.e., as male and female that the worlds of the universe could not subsist, or, in the words of Genesis, "The earth was formless and void." These prior worlds are considered to be symbolized by the "kings who reigned in Edom before there reigned a king in Israel," and they are therefore spoken of in the Qabalah as the "Edomite kings." This will be found fully explained in various parts of this work.

VOLUME ONE

We now come to the consideration of the first Sephira, or the Number One, the Monad of Pythagoras. In this number are the other nine hidden. It is indivisible, it is also incapable of multiplication; divide 1 by itself and it still remains 1 multiply 1 by itself and it is still 1 and unchanged. Thus it is a fitting representative of the great unchangeable Father of all. Now this number of unity has a twofold nature, and thus forms, as it were, the link between the negative and the positive. In its unchangeable one-ness it is scarcely a number; but in its property of capability of addition it may be called the first number of a numerical series. Now, the zero, 0, is incapable even of addition, just as also is negative existence. How, then, if 1 can neither be multiplied nor divided, is another 1 to be obtained to add to it; in other words, how is the number 2 to be found? By reflection of itself. For though 0 be incapable of definition, 1 is definable. And the effect of a definition is to form an Eidolon, duplicate, or image, of the thing defined. Thus, then, we obtain a duad composed of 1 and its reflection. Now also we have the commencement of a vibration established, for the number 1 vibrates alternately from changelessness to definition, and back to changelessness again. Thus, then is it the father of all numbers, and a fitting type of the Father of all things.

The name of the first Sephira is KThR, Kether, the Crown.

The Divine Name attributed to it is the Name of the Father given in Exod. iii. 4: AHIH, Eheieh, I am. It signifies Existence.

Among the Epithets applied to it, as containing in itself the idea of negative existence depending back from it are:

TMIRA DTMIRIN, Temira De-Temirin, the Concealed of the Concealed.

OTHiQA DOTHiQIN, Authiqa De-Authiqun, the Ancient of the Ancient Ones.

OTHiQA QDISHA, Authiqa Qadisha, the Most Holy Ancient One.

OTHiQA, Authiqa, the Ancient One.

OTHiQ IVMIN, Authiq Iomin, the Ancient of Days.

It is also called: NQDH RAShVNH, Nequdah Rashunah, the Primordial Point.

NQDH PShVTh, Nequdah Peshutah, the Smooth Point.

RIShA HVVRH, Risha Havurah, the White Head.

RVM MOLH, Rom Meolah, the Inscrutable Height.

Besides all these there is another very important name applied to this Sephira as representing the great Father of all things. It is ARIK ANPIN, Arikh Anpin, the Vast Countenance, or Macroprosopus. Of Him it is said that He is partly concealed (in the sense of His connection with the negative existence) and partly manifest (as a positive Sephira). Hence the symbolism of the Vast Countenance is that of a profile wherein one side only of the Countenance is seen; or, as it is said in the Qabalah, "in Him all is right side." I shall refer to this title again.

The whole ten Sephiroth represent the Heavenly Man, or Primordial Being, ADM OILAH, Adam Auilh.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Under this Sephira are classed the angelic order of ChIVTh HQDSh, Chioth Ha-Qadesh, holy living-creatures, the kerubim or sphinxes of Ezekiel's vision and of the Apocalypse of John. These are represented in the Zodiac by the four signs, Taurus, Leo, Scorpio, and Aquarius -- the Bull, Lion, Eagle, and Man. Scorpio, as a good emblem, being symbolized by the eagle, as an evil emblem by the scorpion, and as a mixed nature by the snake.

This first Sephira contained the other nine, and produced them in succession, thus:

The number 2, or the Duad. The name of the second Sephira is ChKMH, Chokmah, Wisdom, a masculine active potency reflected from Kether, as I have before explained. This Sephira is the active and evident Father, to whom the Mother is united, to whom are attributed the Divine Names, IH, Yah, and IHVH, Tetragrammaton; and among the angelic hosts by AVPNIM, Auphanim, the Wheels (Ezek i.). The second Sephira is also called AB, Ab, the Father.

The third Sephira, or Triad, is a feminine passive potency, called BINH, Binah, the Understanding, who is co-equal with Chokmah. For Chokmah, the number 2 is like two straight lines which can never enclose a space, and therefore it is powerless till the number 3 forms the triangle. Thus this Sephira completes and makes evident the supernal Trinity. It is also called AMA, Ama, Mother, and AIMA, Aima, the great productive Mother, who is eternally conjoined with AB, the Father, for the maintenance of the universe in order. Therefore is she the most evident form in whom we can know the Father, and therefore is she worthy of all honour. She is the supernal Mother, co-equal with Chokmah, and the great feminine form of God, the Elohim, in whose image man and woman are created, according to the teaching of the Qabalah, equal before God. Woman is equal with man, and certainly not inferior to him, as it has been the persistent endeavour of so-called Christians to make her. Aima is the woman described in the Apocalypse (ch. xii.). This third Sephira is also sometimes called the Great Sea. To her are attributed the Divine names, ARALIM, Aralim, the Thrones. She is the supernal Mother, as distinguished from Malkuth, the inferior Mother, Bride, and Queen.

The number 4. This union of the second and third Sephiroth produced ChSD, Chesed, Mercy or Love also called GDVLH, Gedulah, Greatness or Magnificence; a masculine potency represented by the Divine Name AL, El, the Mighty One, and the angelic name, ChShMLIM, Chashmalim, Scintillating Flames (Ezek. iv. 4).

The number 5. From this emanated the feminine passive potency GBVRH, Geburah, strength or fortitude; or DIN, Deen, Justice; represented by the Divine Names ALHIM GBVR, and ALH, Elohim, and the angelic name ShRPIM, Seraphim (Isa. vi. 6). This Sephira is also called PChD, Pachad, Fear.

The number 6. And from these two issued the uniting Sephira, ThPARTh, Tiphareth, Beauty or Mildness, represented by the Divine Name ALVH VDOTh, Eloah Va-Daath, and the angelic names, ShNANIM Shinanim, (Ps. lxxviii. 18), or MLKIM, Melakim, kings. Thus by the union of justice and mercy we obtain beauty or clemency, and the second trinity of the Sephiroth is complete. This Sephira, or "Path," or Numeration -- for by these latter appellations the emanations are sometimes called -- together with the fourth, fifth, seventh, eighth, and ninth Sephiroth, is spoken of as ZOIR ANPIN, Zauir Anpin, the Lesser Countenance, or Microprosopus. The sixth Sephiroth of which Zauir Anpin is composed, are then called His six members. He is also called MLK, Melekh, the King.

The number 7. The seventh Sephira is NTzCh, Netzach, or Firmness and Victory, corresponding to the Divine Name IHVH TzBAVTh, Jehovah Tzabaoth, the Lord of Armies, and the angelic names ALHIM, Elohim, gods, and ThRShIShIM, Tharshishim, the brilliant ones (Dan. x. 6).

The number 8. Thence proceeded the feminine passive potency HVD, Hod, Splendour, answering to the Divine Name ALHIM TzBAVTh, Elohim Tzabaoth, the Gods of Armies, and among the angels to BNI ALHIM, Beni Elohim, the Sons of the Gods (Gen. vi. 4).

The number 9. These two produced ISVD, Yesod, the Foundation or Basis, represented by AL ChI, El Chai, the Mighty Living One, and ShDE, Shaddai, and among the angels by ASHIM, Aishim, the Flames (Ps. civ.4), yielding the third Trinity of the Sephiroth.

The number 10. From this ninth Sephira came the tenth and last, thus completing the decad of the numbers. It is called MLKVTh, Malkuth, the Kingdom, and also the Queen, Matrona, the inferior Mother, the Bride of Microprosopus; and ShKINH, Shekinah, represented by the Divine Name ADNI, Adonai, and among the angelic hosts by the KRVBIM Kerubim.

Now, each of these Sephiroth will be to a certain degree androgynous, for it will be feminine or receptive with regard to the Sephira which immediately precedes it in the Sephirotic scale, and masculine or transmissive with regard to the Sephira which immediately follows it. But there is no Sephira anterior to Kether, nor is there a Sephira which succeeds Malkuth. By these remarks it will be understood how Chokmah is a feminine noun, though marking a masculine Sephira. The connecting-link of the Sephiroth is the Ruach, spirit, from Mezla, the hidden influence. . ."

Let me leave Mathers' Introduction for a brief moment in order to dilate on one of the important topics he dealt with.

CONCERNING THE HIERARCHIES

A set of names and ideas which frequently seem to get mixed up and confused, relates to the hierarchies of intelligent beings of the Sephiroth, Signs, Planets and Elements. It will become evident, very early in one's study of the Qabalah and the Tree of Life as given in this book, there is a magical technique for invoking each constituent of these hierarchies. This being the case, it is imperative that one's mind be absolutely clear as to the nature of the hierarchy being dealt with, and where it belongs. For example, the first Sephirah is named Kether, the Crown. Its divine name is Eheieh, meaning I will be. This is the future tense in Hebrew grammar; its Archangel is Metatron, and its Choir of Angels is the Chayoth ha-Qadosh, and its Palace in

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Assiah is Rashith ha-Gilgaleem. Each one of these hierarchical names refers also to one of the four Qabalistic worlds. The first to ATZILUTH --the Archetypal World. The second to BRIAH -- the Creative World. The third to YETZIRAH -- the Formative World -- and ASSIAH is the World of Action or Manifestation.

These names should certainly be committed to memory. One means of ensuring this is to draw a good copy of the Tree of Life on a full sheet of typing paper, and run off a couple of dozen or more Xerox copies. Then each set of correspondences can simply be copied on one of the duplicated Trees, enabling one to see at a glance the associations, inferences, etc.

Now one of the attributions to Kether is Air, primal Air. The element Air has its own hierarchy as follows: The divine Name is given as Shaddai El Chai, its Archangel is Raphael, its Angel is Chassan, the Ruler is Ariel, and the King is Paralda. Actually this set of attributions should belong lower down on the Tree than Kether, undoubtedly in Yesod. But I will deal with that later.

For the time being, however, consider the fact that this hierarchical relation to Air is also attributed to Kether, the Crown. It would be a gross misunderstanding of Qabalistic principles to confuse the individual members of each hierarchy with the other, as is commonly done. Metatron, the Archangel of Kether, has nothing whatsoever to do with the element Air. Nor has the Archangel Raphael, who rules over the element Air, anything whatsoever to do with Kether. Much the same is true of the remaining members of the hierarchy. Each one must be considered separately and individually. There must be no confusion. (This is clarified on one of our G.D. tapes).

Take Geburah, another example. It is the 5th Sephirah on the Tree, and to it is referred the planet Mars and the element of Fire (reflected downwards from Chokmah. See the chart which depicts the reflection of the three elements downwards and crosswise on the Tree.) That means, apart from other more complicated features (if one considers them as complications), there are three entirely separate hierarchies. One for Geburah. Another for Mars, and yet a third for Fire. Each must be kept separate from the other.

The divine name for Geburah is Elohim Gibor. The Archangel is Kamael. and the Choir of Angels is Seraphim, and its Asiatic Palace is Mars, Maadim.

Now the hierarchy for Mars is of course Elohim Gibor, but the Angel is Zamael, the Intelligence is Graphiel, and its Spirit is Bartzabel. These two sets of hierarchical names bear absolutely no relationship with one another. They must be kept in separate watertight compartments in one's brain, so that any one name of any one hierarchy does not leak over and create confusion in the other hierarchy. I repeat and am most emphatic on this score, for even some of the better authorities fall into this booby-trap, which is dug for the unwary. This warning could be reiterated frequently and should be printed on every few pages in the student's own notebooks, so that it serves as an ever present reminder -- keep the hierarchies separate! One may not say that Mars is Geburah. Mars has its own hierarchy which is separate from that of Geburah. We may say that among the many attributions given to Geburah, and they are manifold, one of them and only one is Mars. So since the part is not greater than the whole, Mars with its own particular kinds of attributions occupies a lesser space than the category of Geburah in which it is included.

VOLUME ONE

The problem for the novice and the so-called advanced student is that there is another set of attributions to Geburah with another hierarchy altogether. For example in common parlance the student may say Geburah is Fire. This is not true! Fire is but another one of the attributions to Geburah in the same category as is Mars. And just as Mars has its own hierarchy so also does the element of Fire. The hierarchy of Fire again must not be confused with the hierarchy of Mars or that of Geburah.

The element of Fire diagonally reflected down the Tree from the Sephirah Chokmah, has its own hierarchy which is totally distinct and separate from the preceding two. For instance its divine name is Yhvh Tzabaoth (which more or less links it to Netzach), while the Archangel is Michael, the King is Aral. (He must not be confused with the Ruler of Air Ariel, nor with Auriel who is the Archangel of Earth). The King of Fire is Seraph (not to be confused with the Seraphim who are the Choir of Angels of Geburah), and its Ruler is Djin.

I know of countless numbers of students throughout the years who have never mastered this particular set of attributions and hopelessly confuse one with the other. The result is a hodge-podge of attributions, none of which make sense and then to excuse their confusion and lack of true understanding of semantic principles they begin to talk of "blinds" in the teaching.

There is another point here that must be referred to. For example: Raphael is the Archangel of Air. The Archangel of Tiphareth is also Raphael. The Angel of Mercury is also Raphael.

Now is this the same "person" or are they different beings?

From the practical magical point of view, when invoking any one of these beings, the divine Name used will be quite different and of course the Pentagram or the Hexagram will be different too. The intention is altogether different; this is a significant factor that will differentiate results. The Archangel of Air is invoked by the Air Pentagram. The Archangel of Tiphareth will be invoked by a Hexagram of the Sun, as will the Angel of Mercury by the Hexagram of Hod. That disposes of the practical aspect.

But there is a more metaphysical topic involved, which I think is quite interesting and intriguing. V.H. Frater S.R.M.D. attempted in one of the Enochian papers to deal distantly with this problem, but I do not think the discussion came to a satisfactory conclusion, nor do I think the problem was solved.

The way in which one may look at it is to consider a country where many people have similar names. Smith for example, is one of these found in England, Schmidt in Germany, or Collins or Williams, etc., in Wales, etc. Let us deal with Wales. In a fairly large town in Wales there is going to be a Mr. Williams who is the dairyman. Then there will be Mr.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Williams who has the dry-goods store. I knew a Mr. Williams who was a gardener when once, years ago, I lived in St. Briavels on the Welsh border. And there ought to be a Mr. Williams, the groceryman. All are Williams. Are they the same person because they have the same name? Obviously not, though having the same surname, their first or Christian names would be different and so would their vocations.

In much the same way we can distinguish the Archangels and Angels we are talking about. One of them is in the hierarchy of Air - a different kind of profession as it were. Another is in Tiphareth, and the third relates to the planet Mercury. There is no earthly connection between any of these, despite the fact they have the same name. Correspondingly, the divine Names of these three areas is also different. So to call them, or to call upon them, we must know what sphere of action they operate in and act accordingly. They are in effect different "people," different names and use different "tools" as it were.

We will also have to learn to differentiate between the element of Air attributed to Kether, that attributed to Tiphareth, and that attributed to Yesod. The first we can call, merely to provide understandable labels, Celestial Air. To invoke, one should use the divine Name of Kether first before using the hierarchical names belonging to the element of Air. In the case of Tiphareth, we could use the term Divine Air (or even Harmonious Air), using the divine name of Tiphareth first before those of the element of Air. The Air attributed to Yesod could be entitled just Elemental Air, and used with the hierarchical names as given.

The same rationale must be used with the elements of Fire attributed to Chokmah, Geburah and Netzach - Celestial Fire, Divine Fire, and Elemental Fire.

Water - we use rather the same procedure. It is attributed to Binah, Chesed, and Hod - Celestial Water, Divine Water, and Elemental Water, with the same changes in the use of divine names as given above. This procedure will eliminate a great deal of confusion and muddle.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

I now continue with the quotations from Mathers' Introduction to The Kaballah Unveiled:

"I will now add a few more remarks on the qabalistical meaning of the term MThQLA, Methegela, balance. In each of the three trinities or triads of the Sephiroth is a duad of opposite sexes, and uniting intelligence which is the result. In this, the masculine and feminine potencies are regarded as the two scales of the balance, and the uniting Sephira as the beam which joins them. Thus, then, the term balance may be said to symbolize the Triune, Trinity in Unity, and the Unity represented by the central point of the beam. But again, in the Sephiroth there is a triple Trinity, the upper, lower, and middle. Now, these three are represented thus: the Supernal, or highest, by the Crown, Kether; the middle by the King, and the inferior by the Queen; which will be the greatest trinity. And the earthly correlatives of these will be the Primum Mobile, the Sun and the Moon. Here we at once find alchemical symbolism.

Now in the world the Sephiroth are represented by:

- (1) RASHiThHGLGLIM, Rashith Ha-Galgalim, the commencement of the whirling motions, the Primum Mobile
- (2) MSLVTh, Masloth, the sphere of the Zodiac.
- (3) ShBThAI, Shabbathai, rest, Saturn.
- (4) TzDQ, Tmdeq., righteousness, Jupiter
- (5) MADIM, Madim, vehement strength, Mars.
- (6) ShMSh, Shemesh, the solar light, the Sun.
- (7) NVGH, Nogah, glittering splendour, Venus.
- (8) KVKB, Kokab, the stellar light, Mercury.
- (9) LBNH, Levanah, the lunar flame, the Moon.
- (10) ChLM ISVDVTh, Cholom Yesodoth, the breaker of the foundations, the elements.

The Sephiroth are further divided into three pillars the right-hand Pillar of Mercy, consisting of the second, fourth, and seventh emanations; the left-hand Pillar or Judgment, consisting of the third, fifth, and eighth; and the middle Pillar of Mildness, consisting of the first, sixth, ninth, and tenth emanations.

In their totality and unity the ten Sephiroth represent the archetypal man, ADM QDMVN, Adam Kadmon, the Protogonos. In looking to the Sephiroth constituting the first triad, it is evident that they represent the intellect; and hence this triad is called the intellectual world, OVLM MVShKL, Olahm Mevshekal. The second triad corresponds to the moral world, OVLM MVRGSh, Olahm Morgash. The third represents power and stability, and is therefore called the material world, OVLM HMVTBO, Olahm Ha-Mevetbau. These three aspects are called the faces, ANPIN, Anpin. Thus is the tree of life, OTz ChiIM, Otz Chaiim, formed; the first triad being placed above, the second and third below, in such a manner that the three masculine Sephiroth are on the right, three feminine on the left, whilst the four uniting Sephiroth occupy the center. This is the qabalistical Tree of Life, on which all things depend. There is considerable analogy between this and the tree Yggdrasil of the Scandinavians.

I have already remarked that there is one trinity which comprises all the Sephiroth, and that it consists of the Crown, the King, and the Queen. (In some senses this is similar to the Christian Trinity of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, which in their highest divine nature are symbolized by the first three Sephiroth, Kether, Chokmah, and Binah.) It is the Trinity which created the world, or, in qabalistic language, the universe was born from the union of the crowned King and Queen. But according to the Qabalah, before the complete form of the heavenly man (the ten Sephiroth) was produced, there were certain primordial worlds created, but these could not subsist, as the equilibrium of balance was not yet perfect, and they were convulsed by the unbalanced forces and destroyed. These primordial worlds are called the kings of ancient time, and the kings of Edom who reigned before the monarchs of Israel. In this sense, Edom is the world of unbalanced force, and Israel is the balanced Sephiroth (Gen. xxxvi. 31). This important fact, that worlds were created and destroyed prior to the present creation, is again and again reiterated in the Zohar.

Now the Sephiroth are also called the World of Emanations, or the Atziluthic World, or archetypal world, OVLM ATzILVTh, Olahm Atziloth; and this world gave birth to three other worlds, each containing a repetition of the Sephiroth, but in a descending scale of brightness.

The second world is the Briatic world, OVLM HBRIAH, Olahm Ha-Briah, the world of creation, also called KVRSA, Khorsia, the throne. It is an immediate emanation from the world of Atziluth, whose ten Sephiroth are reflected herein, and are consequently more limited, though they are still of the purest nature, and without any admixture of matter.

The third is the Yetziratic world, OVLM HITzIRH, Olahm Ha-Yetzirah, or world of Formation and of angels, which proceeds from Briah, and though less refined in substance, is still without matter. It is in this angelic world where those intelligent and incorporeal beings reside who are wrapped in a luminous garment, and who assume a form when they appear unto man.

The fourth is the Assiatic world, OVLM HOSHIAH, Olahm Ha-Assiah, the World of Action, called also the world of shells, OVLM HQLIPVTh, Olahm Ha-Qliphoth, which is this world of matter, made up of the grosser elements of the other three. In it is also the abode of the evil spirits which are called "the shells" by the Qabalah, Qliphoth, material shells. The devils are also divided into ten classes, and have suitable habitations. . .

The Demons are the grossest and most deficient of all forms. Their ten degrees answer to the decad of the Sephiroth, but in inverse ratio, as darkness and impurity increase with the descent of each degree. The two first are nothing but absence of visible form and organization. The third is the abode of darkness. Next follow seven Hells occupied by those demons which represent incarnate human vices, and torture those who have given themselves up to such vices in earth-life. Their prince is SMAL, Samuel, the angel of poison and of death. His wife is the harlot, or woman of whoredom ASHTh ZNVNIM, Isheth Zenunim; and united they are called the Beast, CHIVA, Chioa. Thus the infernal trinity is completed, which is, so to speak, the averse and caricature of the supernal Creative One. Samael is considered to be identical with Satan.

The name of the Deity, which we call Jehovah, is in Hebrew a name of four letters, IHVH; and the true pronounciation of it is known to very few. . ."

TETRAGRAMMATON

This is a Latin word meaning "the four lettered name." This name is a Hebrew name for the traditional God of the Old Testament, Jehovah. In Hebrew, the consonants of the latter name are YHVH - thus Tetragrammaton.

Qabalistically, each letter of Tetragrammaton was attributed to one of the four major primitive elements of the ancients. Y equals Fire. H equals Water. Vau equals Air, and the last H or final Heh equals Earth. So that the Tetragrammaton, or the name of Jehovah represents the four basic elements of life. The Biblical Jehovah was the God who flamed in the fire of the holy ground Moses stood on, thundered in the storms around Mount Horeb and Sinai, drowned the Egyptians and their chariots, and opened up the land with earthquakes to destroy the enemies of Israel. Thus he is depicted as an angry and violent God - which is what the four elements of life are. They can be gentle and easy going, but never lose sight of the fact that they are also violent, dangerous and overwhelming. This is Tetragrammaton.

The Letters of the Name are attributed in various ways to the Tree of Life, always carrying with them the attributions of the basic elements. Even when Y, often called the Father, is sometimes attributed to Kether, the fire of creation is referred to. When H, the Mother, is attributed to Chokmah and Binah, we are considering the fine ethereal waters of the creative levels, the substance in which and from which all the worlds were created. V is sometimes referred to Tiphareth, the Son of Yod and Heh of Tetragrammaton, and is the all-encompassing Air - not the Air that we ordinarily breathe oxygen, nitrogen, carbon dioxide, etc. . .but the vital airs; the pranas without which there is no life.

The final H or Heh is the unredeemed Daughter, the Earth, which is acted upon and formed and influenced by the other three elements of letters of Tetragrammaton. She is the unredeemed Daughter until she becomes receptive to the higher influences - consciously and deliberately - and then she becomes transformed into the Bride of Microprosopus or Vau of Tiphareth who brings harmony and beauty to the heavy enduring burdensome qualities of Earth.

All of these together with a host of similar manifold associations and symbols are subsumed under the heading of Tetragrammaton.

Even Tetragrammaton, the testy senior of the Bible, the ever-angry and punitive Jehovah, needs to be transformed and redeemed by the descent of the holy spirit represented by the letter Shin. (Shin equals 300. Ruach Elohim translates as the Spirit of the Gods equals 300.) When this Shin descends, splitting asunder the old rigid, hide-bound Tetragrammaton, he becomes transformed into the Pentagrammaton YHShVH, the saved, redeemed and illumined Adept who combines heaven and earth, the Cosmos and the Microcosm all at once. We are now returning once more to Mathers and his lengthy introduction to the Kaballah Unveiled.

VOLUME ONE

He states: "I myself know some score of different mystical pronunciations of it. The true pronunciation is a most secret arcanum, and is a secret of secrets. He who can rightly pronounce it, causeth heaven and earth to tremble, for it is the name which rusheth through the universe. Therefore when a devout Jew comes upon it in reading the Scripture, he either does not attempt to pronounce it, but instead makes a short pause, or else he substitutes for it the name Adonai, ADNI, Lord. The radical meaning of the word is "to be," and it is thus, like AHIH, Eheieh, a glyph of existence. It is capable of twelve transpositions, which all convey the meaning of "to be"; it is the only word that will bear so many transpositions without its meaning being altered. They are called the twelve banners of the mighty name, and are said by some to rule the twelve signs of the Zodiac. These are the twelve banners: IHVH, IHHV, IVHH, HVHI, HVIH, HHIV, VHHI, VIHH, VHIH, HIIHV, HIVH, HHVI. There are three other Tetragrammatic names, which are AHIH, Eheieh, existence; ADNI, Adonai, Lord; and AGLA Agla. This last is not, properly speaking, a word, but is a notariqon of the sentence, AThH GBVR LOVLM ADNI, Ateh Gebor Le-Olahm Adonai: Thou art mightyfor ever, O Lord! An arbitrary interpretation of Agla is this: A, the one first; A, the one last; G, the Trinity in Unity; L, the completion of the Great Work.

The first thing we notice is that both AHIH and IHVH convey the idea of existence; this is their first analogy. The second is, that in each the letter H comes second and fourth; and the third is that by Gematria AHIH equals IHV without the H (which, as we shall see presently, is the symbol of Malkuth, the tenth Sephira). But now, if they be written one above the others, thus, within the arms of a cross, they read downwards as well as across, AHIH, IHVH. Now, if we examine the matter qabalistically we shall find the reason of these analogies. For Eheieh, AHIH, is the Vast Countenance, the Ancient One, Macroprosopus, Kether, the first Sephira, the Crown of the Qabalistical Sephirotic greatest Trinity (which consists of the Crown, King, and Queen; or Macroprosopus, Microprosopus and the Bride), and the Father in the Christian acceptance Of the Trinity.

But IHVH, the Tetragrammaton, as we shall presently see, contains all the Sephiroth with the exception of Kether, and specially signifies the Lesser Countenance, Microprosopus, the King of the qabalistical Sephirotic greater Trinity, and the Son in His human incarnation, in the Christian interpretation of the Trinity.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Therefore, as the Son reveals the Father, so does IHVH, Jehovah, reveal AHIH, Eheieh.

And ADNI is the Queen "by whom alone Tetragrammaton can be grasped," whose exaltation into Binah is found in the Christian assumption of the Virgin.

The Tetragrammaton IHVH is referred to the Sephiroth, thus: the uppermost point of the letter Yod, I, is said to refer to Kether; the letter I itself to Chokmah, the father of Microprosopus; the letter H, or "the supernal He," to Binah and supernal Mother; the letter V to the next six Sephiroth, which are called the six members of Microprosopus (and six is the numerical value of V, the Hebrew Vau); lastly, the letter H, the "inferior He," to Malkuth, the tenth Sephira, the bride of Microprosopus.

Now, there are four secret names referred to the four worlds of Atziloth, Briah, Yetzirah, and Assiah; and again, the Tetragrammaton is said to go forth written in a certain manner in each of these four worlds. The secret name of Atziloth is OB Aub; that of Briah is SG Seg; that of Yetzirah is MH Mah; and that of Assiah is BN Ben. (BN, Ben means "son"). . .

These names operate together with the Sephiroth through the "231 gates," as combinations of the alphabet are called; but it would take too much space to go fully into the subject here.

Closely associated with the subject of the letters of the Tetragrammaton is that of the four Kerubim, to which I have already referred in describing the first Sephira. Now it must not be forgotten that these forms in Ezekiel's vision support the throne of the Deity, whereon the Heavenly Man is seated - the Adam Qadmon, the Sephirotic image; and that between the throne and the living creatures is the firmament. Here then we have the four worlds - Atziloth, the deific form; Briah, the throne; Yetzirah, the firmament; Assiah, the Kerubim. Therefore the Kerubim represent the powers of the letters of the Tetragrammaton on the material plane; and the four represent the operation of the four letters in each of the four worlds. Thus, then, the Kerubim are the living forms of the letters, symbolized in the Zodiac by Taurus, Leo, Aquarius, and Scorpio, as I have before remarked.

And the mystery of the earthly and mortal man is after the mystery of the supernal and immortal One; and thus was he created in the image of God upon earth. In the form of the body is Tetragrammaton found. The head is I, the arms and shoulders are like H, the body is V, and the legs are represented by the H final. Therefore, as the outward form of man corresponds to the Tetragrammaton, so does the animating soul correspond to the ten Sephiroth; and as these find their ultimate expression in the trinity of the Crown, the King, and the Queen, so is there a principal triple division of the soul. Thus, then, the first is Neschamah NShMH, which is the highest degree of being, corresponding to the crown (Kether), and representing the highest triad of the Sephiroth, called the intellectual world. The second is Ruach, RVCh, the seat of good and evil, corresponding to Tiphareth, the moral world. And the third is Nephesch, NPSH, the animal life and desires, corresponding to Yesod, and the material and sensuous world. All souls are pre-existent in the world of emanations, and are in their original state androgynous, but when they descend upon earth they become separated into male and female, and inhabit different bodies; if therefore in this mortal life the male half encounters the female half, a strong attachment springs up between them, and hence it is said that in marriage the separated halves are again conjoined; and the hidden forms of the soul are akin to the Kerubim.

But this foregoing triple division of the soul is only applicable to the triple form of the intellectual, moral and material. Let us not lose sight of the great qabalistical idea, that the trinity is always completed by and finds its realization in the quaternary; that is, IHV completed and realized in IHVH - the trinity of. . .

Crown	King	Queen
Father	Son	Spirit
Absolute	Formation	Realization

This is completed by the quaternary of:

Absolute One
Father - Mother
Son
Bride

Macroprosopus - Vast Countenance
Father - Mother
Microprosopus - Lesser Countenance
Malkuth Queen - Bride

Atziluth - Archetypal
Briah - Creative
Yetzirah - Formative
Assiah - Material

And to these four the soul answers in the following four forms: Chiah to Atziluth; Neschamah to Briah; Ruach to Yetzirah; and Nephesch to Assiah.

But Chiah is in the soul the archetypal form analogous to Macroprosopus. Wherefore Neschamah, Ruach, and Nephesch represent as it were by themselves the Tetragrammaton, without Chiah, which is nevertheless symbolized in the uppermost point of the I, Yod, of the soul; As Macroprosopus is said to be symbolized by the uppermost point of the I, yod, of IHVH. For Yod of the Ancient One is hidden and concealed. . .

I will now revert to the subject of Arikh Anpin and Zauir Anpin, the Macroprosopus and the Microprosopus, or the Vast and the Lesser Countenances. Macroprosopus is, it will be remembered, the first Sephira, or Crown Kether; Microprosopus is composed of six of the Sephiroth. In Macroprosopus all is light and brilliancy; but Microprosopus only shineth by the reflected splendour of Macroprosopus. The six days of creation correspond to the six forms of Microprosopus. Therefore the symbol of the interlaced triangles, forming the six-pointed star, is called the Sign of the Macrocosm, or of the creation of the greater world, and is consequently analogous to the two Countenances of the Zohar. The Book of Concealed Mystery fully discusses the symbolism of Macroprosopus and Microprosopus; therefore it is well, before reading it, to be cognizant of their similarities and differences. The one is AHIH, Eheieh; the other is the V, Vau, of the Tetragrammaton. The first two letters, I and H, Yod and He, are the Father and Mother of Microprosopus, and the H final is his Bride. But in these forms is expressed the equilibrium of Severity and Mercy; Severity being symbolized by the two Hehs, the Mother and the Bride, but especially by the latter. But while the excess of Mercy is not an evil tendency, but rather conveys a certain idea of weakness and want of force, too great an excess of Severity calls forth the executioner of judgment, the evil and oppressive force which is symbolized by Leviathan. Wherefore it is said, behind the shoulders of the Bride the serpent rears his head: of the Bride, but not of the Mother, for she is the Supernal H, and bruises his head. But his head is broken by the waters of the great sea. The sea is Binah, the Supernal H, the Mother. The serpent is the centripetal force, ever seeking to penetrate into Paradise (the Sephiroth), and to tempt the Supernal Eve (the bride), so that in her turn she may tempt the Supernal Adam (Microprosopus).

It is utterly beyond the scope of this Introduction to examine this symbolism thoroughly, especially as it forms the subject of this work; so I will simply refer my reader to the actual text for further elucidation, hoping that by the perusal of this introductory notice he will be enlightened.

To recapitulate some of Mathers writings above let me affirm that once you have studied the Knowledge Lectures and have become familiar with the Hebrew names and terms used, refer to the excerpts from Mathers' Introduction given here. With only a little effort, the Knowledge Lecture names will be seen to have been drawn from the Introduction. And furthermore the study of the Introduction will tend to clarify much of the material in the Knowledge Lectures.

Further amplification can be obtained by reference to the Qabalistic books already mentioned, so that in a very short time - relative to that consumed by the student of a century ago - he should have an intelligent understanding of the Tree of Life which is the backbone of all Qabalistic study.

VOLUME ONE

ON THE LEAST AMOUNT OF WORK ACTUALLY NECESSARY FOR THE STUDIES OF THE FIRST ORDER GRADES

By

G.H. FRATER S.R.M.D.

What is really necessary to this end is to acquire sufficient knowledge clearly to follow the explanations and instructions given in the successive Grades so that the Candidate does not become unduly bewildered in his endeavors to grasp the meaning through ignorance of the technical expressions employed for that purpose.

It is to aid in this comprehension that the so-called "Knowledge Lectures" exist as apart from those termed "Side-Lectures"; these latter, though not necessarily required to be committed to memory, contain important and interesting matter peculiar to each grade. The "Knowledge Lectures" contained just the amount of carefully sifted out knowledge necessary not only to pass the examination for such and such Grade, but also fairly well to comprehend and follow the Ceremonial Ritual of the Grade itself. Such knowledge then may seem and perhaps is slightly more amplified than a bare pass in the examination might demand. But it is to the student's own interest to learn as thoroughly as he can what is given.

Our subject of study is inexhaustible for it is the Universe itself whose Mysteries we seek to fathom by the aid of that Secret System of Correspondences and Formulas, the especial knowledge of our Order the Keys of the Wisdom of all Time. Our Grades therefore form the ladder which aids us to mount towards this end, a ladder in which not one rung is wanting neither is there a Lacune. We appeal to the soul by the secret formulas hidden in our Ceremonies; to the mind by the special studies of the Order, to the body by the Stations and movements in the Temple and to the whole being by the combinations of these.

Now it must be taken into consideration that many of our members, and those very good ones, have but limited time to devote to the work and studies of the Order owing to the exigencies and occupations of their daily life; and this, though at first sight a drawback, is in reality not so much so as it appears, for on the one side our studies are so different from the ordinary business conditions and avocations of existence that it is a fresh interest and repose of the mind to come to them and on the other hand it avoids the excessive nerve strain and consequent want of mental balance, frequently induced by too continuous an application to psychic and occult experiments and practices, whether theoretical or practical. It is surprising how much can be accomplished by a little time regularly given to the study of any subject whatever and in this way the mind does not get so fatigued and tired through close application for too long a period.

Touching as they do a variety of subjects though not so distinct from each other as at first sight they would appear to be; the effect of the Knowledge Lectures is to seem more formidable to tackle than they really are, and to resolutely start on them is more than half the battle gained already. They are far less difficult than they look. The first impression usually produced on the Neophyte may be thus expressed Oh! I've got to learn Hebrew, and become a grammatical Hebrew scholar. He is only asked to learn the Hebrew alphabet, that is to say the proper shapes and meanings of its letters together with their numerical values, and in the case of the Ten Sephiroth (or Ten Divine Emanations corresponding to the ten numbers of the decimal scale) and of some names chiefly Divine and Angelic; their exact orthography as well: the which is a very different thing to becoming a critical student of Hebrew. Of course should any Frater or Soror have the time and inclination to make a thorough study of the Hebrew language there is nothing to prevent them so doing, but this is in no sense necessary either to pass the Examinations for the Grades or follow the technicalities of the Rituals. For our object is not to make the Aspirant a critical grammatical Hebrew scholar but gradually a profound Mystic and Magician. The same reasoning applies to Alchemy, Astrology, Egyptology, etc., all of which subjects are touched upon in the various knowledge lectures. It rests with the Aspirant to choose if and how he will apply later the basal knowledge so gained. For it is the science of correspondences he is studying the whole time, whether between the Divine Powers and the Universe, between these and man, or between these again and the different planes and developments in the life of Nature.

The best way to learn the forms of the Hebrew Letters, as well as those of the Astrological characters, etc., is to take from four to seven at a time and copy them repeatedly and as exactly as you can, until you know them: in the case of the Hebrew always putting the number beside the letter, so as to associate the two together in your mind. Remember that the Hebrew letters should be always written broad and strong, the horizontals being thick, and the perpendiculars thin, as in music copying just the contrary of the ordinary Roman letter, and as square as possible.

It may be wondered why the Hebrew Alphabet seems to have been so specially selected, rather than any other. For these reasons: Not necessarily because it is Hebrew; though the circumstance of the Qabalah (which contains so large a part of the ancient Egyptian wisdom) being written in that language, confers a certain special value upon it. And the mysteries of the Qabalah form a most important part of our studies. But the Hebrew unites in itself certain notable peculiarities and qualities expressed in its Alphabet, to a much greater extent than is usually found in other and more familiar alphabets of the European group. For (a) contrary to our practise, it has not a set of numerals which singly or combined express numbers, but each letter itself has a numerical value. When thus employed as numbers or as an initial letter put for the whole word itself, two little dashes are placed above it to shew that it is used in that sense: thus the initial for the name of the Sephira Netzach, for the number 50 etc., (b) It is an entirely consonantal Alphabet. It then results from the combination of (a) and (b) that every word is a number, and conversely again that most numbers are words: which affords a method of comparison between words having the same number and is used in the Qabalah. (In the Hebrew Q does not require a

"u" to follow it, and it is pronounced like an accented or "coughed" (very slightly of course) K. (c) Every letter, besides its power has an especial name with a meaning attached to it, thus allying it with a Hieroglyphic Idea, e.g., power M, name Mem, meaning Water. (d) With us each letter has further its Sphere of Mystical Significations so that any important Hebrew word becomes as it were a phrase rather than a word. Besides other developments which unfold themselves later.

The Neophyte should remember that Hebrew is always written from right to left, while in English, French, German, etc., it is just the opposite.

A point that very generally puzzles the Neophyte is the apparent extreme arbitrariness of the Hebrew Orthography, so that to him it appears (though it is not really so) as if in some cases a letter were needlessly put in, and in others erroneously omitted. The following explanation is given to thoroughly clear up this point by giving the reason for this apparent uncertainty but none of these or the foregoing observations are intended to be learned by heart, they are merely given to make difficult points more clear.

Hebrew is a Semitic and not an European language. Now the great distinguishing characteristic of the Semitic group such as Hebrew, Chaldaic, Arabic, Ethiopic, etc., is that the Alphabet consists entirely of consonants; even those letters which appear to have a vowel power, as in the Hebrew not being absolutely what we in European languages know as vowels. Thus is rather a drawing in of the breath like the syllable Ah, than the vowel A is H or EH, or He according to position. Certainly not the vowel E. V is much more than U; Y nearer I, NG, or AA or HAA, something like the neigh of a horse or the bleat of a goat, rather than O.

In What You Should Know About the Golden Dawn, I once expressed some criticisms of the general attitudes prevailing in the Order. Of doing just enough work to pass the appropriate examination to be promoted to a higher grade. This really was the curse of the early Order. From the paper, it would appear that Mathers was as responsible for this viewpoint as anyone. On the whole, I have great respect for Mathers for as this book indicates, he was the author with Westcott of most of the Initiatory Rituals, and most of the magical instructions. But in this particular respect he was the inadvertent promoter of this attitude which, in my estimation, brought incalculable harm to the Order, permitted essentially unworthy candidates to be wrongly advanced to higher grades for which they were basically unready.

ELITISM

The U.S.E.S.S. and Falcon Press intend to inaugurate a Golden Dawn Foundation for the preservation not merely of memorabilia of the Order, but to set up a centre where the highest standards of initiation and training may be perpetuated. Throughout its history in modern times, the Order has been prone to many fluctuations in its forward progress. The Foundation's intent is to form a stable background of function and teaching so as to minimize and overcome the degenerative effect of excessive fluctuation in a world where change and disintegration seem to have become the order of the day. The U.S.E.S.S. and Falcon Press stand ready to provide any enquirer with information as to the goals and purposes of this Foundation. You may write to Mr. Christopher S. Hyatt of Falcon Press, 1739 E. Broadway #1-277, Tempe, AZ 85282 for further information. It should be stated emphatically that the Center is intended to be Elitist in the strictest sense of the term, appealing primarily to those with the highest qualifications and capabilities in all aspects and developments of modern life. The lame, the halt, the effete and inept will not find a favorable environment for their foibles there. For just as there are athletes of the sports and the arts, so are there athletes of the spirit. The first search for excellence and perfection in their chosen field of endeavour and are so recognized, while in the latter there is similarly a search for excellence of technique and perfection of all the vehicles of the Self.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

THE IMPORTANCE OF DIVINATION

DIVINATION

By

V.H. FRATER A.M.A.G.

The study of the different types of divination may seem difficult to understand in an Order which purported to teach methods of spiritual development. Many will no doubt be rather perplexed by this. Divination usually is said to refer exclusively to the low occult arts. Actually, however, so far as the Order is concerned, the principal object for these practical methods is that they stimulate, as few exercises can, the faculties of imagination, intuition and clairvoyance.

Though certain readings or interpretations to the Geomantic and Tarot symbols may be found in the appropriate parts of this text, these rule of thumb methods do not conduce to the production of an accurate delineation of the spiritual causes behind material events. These interpretations are usual to the beginner in the art, for he requires a foundation of the principal definitions employed upon which his own meditations can build. These textual delineations serve in actual practice only as a base for the working of the inner faculties, provides for them a thrust block, as it were from which they may "kick-off." In short, the effort to divine by these methods calls into operation the intuitive and imaginative faculties to a very large extent. Everyone without exception has this faculty of divining in some degree, varying only in his ability to make it manifest. In most people it is wholly dormant.

Again, while divination as an artificial process may be wholly unnecessary and a hindrance to the refined perceptions of a fully developed Adept who requires no such convention to ascertain whence a thing comes and whither it is going, yet these aids and stimuli have their proper place for the Neophyte. For those in training they are not only legitimate but useful and necessary.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

It may be interesting for the reader to attempt to acquire intuitive knowledge on any matter without the divinatory aids first, and it will be seen how extremely difficult it is to get started, to pick upon any one fact or incident which shall act as a prompt or a start of the interior mechanism. Having failed in this way, let him see how much further he really may go by the judicious and sensible use of one of the Order methods. There is no doubt that the opening of the mind to an intuitive perception is considerably aided by these methods. And this is particularly true with regard to the rather lengthy Tarot method which was given to the initiate while engaged in the fulfilment of his Adeptus Minor curriculum. Like all magical techniques, divination is open to abuse. This fact, however, that abuse is possible does not, as again and again must be reiterated, condemn the abused technique. The application of common sense to the magical art is as necessary as it is to all else.

Originally, Astrology was taught as part of the regular routine. All instruction on this subject seems now to have been thoroughly extirpated from the Order papers. In this particular instance, the omission is just as well. Recent years have seen a great deal of meticulous attention paid to this study by sincere and honest researchers, and many first rate books have been published explaining its intricacies. All that the Order demands of the Adeptus Minor is that he should understand the underlying principles of this science and be able to draw up a map showing the position of Planets and Signs preparatory to certain operations requiring the invocation of planetary and zodiacal forces.

So far as the general topic of divination is concerned, the Outer Order had very little to say. The formal teaching of Astrology was abandoned because, as stated above, the market was now replete with many fine works on the subject, and thus there was really no need to teach what was readily available.

The Tarot technique that it recommended was the Celtic method, a ten card layout popularized by A. E. Waite in his Pictorial Key to the Tarot from which later writers have drawn extensively. The method is very simple and direct; thus its advantage to the student in the Outer Order. It had however one major disadvantage. There was no way to determine whether any one particular card in the layout was well aspected or otherwise. Under these circumstances, the novice diviner would be most likely to pick out the most favorable interpretation to suit his fancy. The Golden Dawn method, as taught in the Inner Order, was a horse of another color, having a superb method of aspecting each card to be read.

The Celtic or Gypsy method, as it is called in the Leigh Gardner papers, has been made useful by resort to a simple device. As one shuffles the pack in order to infiltrate it with one's own magnetism or aura, it is a good idea to drop a card periodically. When inserting it back into the deck, make sure it is replaced upside down. Or, half the number of cards in a deck may be deliberately pulled out at random, turned upside down and then inserted back into the pack. Then shuffle very thoroughly to make sure they are randomly well distributed.

The notion involved here is that the upside down position provides the basis for the negative reading of some of the cards as they turn up in the divination. In this manner it is likely to answer more accurately to the facts in the case, yielding of course a more pragmatic reading.

VOLUME TWO

The more complete Order method of Divination will be given later in this series. The Gypsy method is described solely for the purpose of letting the student experiment with a simple method to develop some expertise before he begins to handle the more complex Order method of Tarot reading.

The other method was Geomancy, divination by earth. A complete treatise was given to the Practicus - that is in the Outer Order of the Golden Dawn. Years after the Revolt which all but annihilated the Order, McGregor Mathers and Brodie Innes reconstituted one of the Temples in the North of England (from which it spread even to the United States) and named it the A.O. an abbreviation for the Alpha and Omega. It was the direct continuation of the Golden Dawn under the new name. It continued to use the instruction papers originally written for the Golden Dawn, but some new ones were added. One of these was a paper on Geomancy. From it I have extrapolated some notes of significant material, and added it to the basic text. Together they form a splendid piece of instructional material on the subject.

FUNDAMENTALS OF TAROT, GEOMANCY AND ASTROLOGY

Fuller discussions of the Tarot system, Geomancy and Astrology to some extent will be found in later sections of this work. For the time being however and for the benefit of the new student to this subject matter it has been decided to give a relatively brief survey of these fields, so that when he comes to the more complex material later he will be to some extent prepared.

THE TAROT

By

STUART R. KAPLAN

"There exist today several fifteenth-century Visconti-Sforza tarocchi decks which comprise the earliest known tarot cards. The reproduction in 1975 of the most complete of these packs - the Pierpont Morgan-Bergamo tarocchi deck whose original cards are divided between the Pierpont Morgan Library, New York, and the Accademia Carrara and Colleoni family, Bergamo, Italy - is an important event for tarot collectors and researchers of art history.

Italy holds the honor of having produced several of the earliest known tarocchi packs that contain the mystical and allegorical trump cards. Throughout five centuries the provocative symbolism of the twenty-two Major Arcana cards has continued to intrigue art historians, artists and occultists. For over five hundred years card designers and artists have faithfully preserved the same dominant symbolism of the Major Arcana cards while often adding their personal interpretations in the form of slight modifications to the designs based upon the fashions, events and important topics of the day. There exist in leading museums, libraries and private collections many hundreds of such modified tarot designs, the work of such artists as the fifteenth-century genius Bonifacio Bembo, modern painters such as Salvador Dali and Larry Rivers, and many lesser known but talented artists such as Pamela Coleman Smith (Rider-Waite pack), Lady Frieda Harris (Crowley Thoth cards), Fergus Hall (James Bond 007 tarot cards), David Palladini (Aquarian tarot) and Domenico Balbi (Balbi pack).

The development of tarot symbolism during the last five centuries, beginning with the earliest known Italian tarocchi cards, is an intriguing story.

TERMINOLOGY

The term trionfi was used in Italy in the fifteenth century to describe the twenty-two Major Arcana cards. The term tarocchi subsequently came into usage in Italy in the early sixteenth century, first referring to the twenty-two Major Arcana cards, and thereafter to the complete seventy-eight-card deck, consisting of the twenty-two Major Arcana and fifty-six Minor Arcana or suit cards. The words tarocchi and tarocco are often used interchangeably, although tarocchi is actually the plural of tarocco. Tarot, the French derivative of tarocchi, has come into widespread usage in the English language. In pronouncing the word tarot, the final t is silent.

MacGregor Mathers, writing in 1888, describes several anagrams derived from the word taro:

Tora - law (Hebrew)

Troa - gate (Hebrew)

Rota - wheel (Latin)

Orat - it speaks, argues or entreats (Latin)

Taor or Taur - Egyptian goddess of darkness

Ator or Athor - Egyptian Hathor goddess of joy.

The term trumps is derived from the Latin triumphi. The twenty-two trump cards, also known as the Major Arcana or Greater Arcana cards, each contain a symbolic or allegorical picture. Arcana is a Latin word meaning mysterious or secret; the Italian word arcana, derived from the Latin, has the same meaning. The trumps are also known as atouts in French and atutti in Italian. Atouts denote cards of higher value than the rest, that is, atouts or atutti, superior to all others.

Some researchers believe the word tarot derives from the term tarotee, the name applied to the design on the back of early cards - a multiple series of crisscrossing solid or dotted lines in varying widths. However, it is likely that the word tarotee itself was derived from tarocchi since the use of the word tarocchi predates that of the word tarotee. In the statutes of the guild of card makers of Paris in the year 1594 the cartiers called themselves tarotiers, another form of the word tarot.

VOLUME TWO

The origins of playing cards - both the twenty-two Major Arcana and the fifty-six suited cards - remain obscure. An early pack of suited cards - perhaps the earliest extant deck - is the hand-painted German "Hunting" pack of Stuttgart, which dates from about 1420-1430 and contains no trumps. These cards depict a hunting series with dogs, stags, ducks and falcons for suit signs. The earliest Visconti-Sforza tarocchicards also date from this period. The following are some of the popular theories advanced during the past several centuries regarding the possible origin of tarocchi cards.

PREHISTORIC MAN AND ORAL CULTURES

Prior to recorded history, prehistoric man developed various systems of oral culture and tradition based upon a subtle knowledge of astronomy and calendric counters. It is generally believed that early man carefully observed the sidereal phases of the day, month and year, and the changing positions of the planets. These were astronomical events he could easily study and he recorded these events by calendric counters such as markings on a stretched piece of animal hide, engravings or scratchings on a bone, and notches on a tree branch. Important cultural events were eventually expressed in metaphorical and allegorical forms as myths, legends and fables, which were verbally transmitted from generation to generation over periods of time extending many thousands and even tens of thousands of years.

Some fragments of these early oral traditions survived into recorded time in the form of popular myths and beliefs. For example, the devil is an antlered figure associated with sorcery and evil, and the hermit is a hooded figure holding a candle and representing the winter solstice. Both these figures are found in the Major Arcana of the tarot pack. Many of the pictorial images on the Major Arcana cards have been distorted by time and the ignorance of their interpreters. Thus, most tarot pictures as popularized during the past five hundred years are unrecognizable in terms of early myths and oral culture. Literal interpretations of many early myths are the basis of numerous superstitions and ceremonies practiced today by religious groups, fraternal orders, secret societies and followers of the occult.

Some scholars including Arthur Corwin, who has been researching the subject since the 1960's, view the allegorical symbolism of tarot cards as pictorial metaphors that express the preoccupation of early man with the task of timekeeping. The calendar was an important point of reference to early man. He kept accurate records of the celestial changes that occurred on a daily, monthly and annual basis. He observed the precession of the equinox, the astronomical motions of the stars and planets, and other repetitive events. The calendar was used as a means of survival, including planning for winter food storage, preparing necessary shelter, communicating on a daily basis with other human beings and recording the length of time required for birth. . ."

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

A GYPSY METHOD OF TAROT DIVINATION

This mode of Tarot Divination is the most suitable for obtaining rapidly an answer to a definite question.

The Diviner selects a card to represent the person or matter about which he enquires. This card is called the Significator, and should he wish to ascertain something in connection with himself, he takes the one which corresponds to his personal description.

A King represents a man of 40 years and upwards.

A Knight represents any male under that age.

A Queen a woman of 40 years and upwards.

A Knave a young man or woman.

The Four Court Cards:

Wands represent very fair people with yellow or auburn hair, fair complexion, blue eyes.

Cups have light brown or dull hair with grey or blue eyes.

Swords have hazel or grey eyes, and dark brown hair and dull complexions.

Pentacles have very dark brown or black hair, dark eyes and sallow or swarthy complexions.

You can be guided on occasion by the known temperament of a person. One who is exceedingly dark may be energetic and would be better represented by a Sword card than a Pentacle. On the other hand a very fair subject who is indolent and lethargic should be referred to Cups in place of Wands. If it is a matter about which an enquiry is to be made, the Significator should be a Trump or small card which bears some relationship to the matter.

Suppose that the question is "Will a lawsuit be necessary?" In this case, take the Trump card "Justice" as the significator since it has reference to legal matters. But if the question is "Shall I be successful in my lawsuit?" one of the Court Cards representing yourself should be selected. Subsequently consecutive divinations can be performed to ascertain the course of the process itself, and its result to each of the parties concerned.

Having selected the Significator, place it on the table face upwards, then shuffle well and thoroughly the rest of the cards, cutting three times after each shuffle. Lastly, keeping the face of the cards downwards, turn up the top or front card of the pack and cross the significator with it, and say:

1. This card covers him.

This card gives the influence which is affecting the person or matter of the enquiry generally, the atmosphere in which the ether current moves. Turn up the second card and say:

VOLUME TWO

2. This crosses him.

It shows the nature of the obstacles in the matter. If this is a favorable card, the opposing forces will not be serious, or it may indicate that something good in itself will be productive of good in this particular connection. Turn up the third card and say:

3. This crowns him.

It represents first, the Querent's aims or ideals in the matter. And second, the best that can be achieved under the circumstances but that which has not yet been made actuality. Turn up the fourth card, place it below the Significator, and say:

4. This is beneath him.

It shows the foundation or basis of the matter, that which has already passed into actuality and which the Significator has made his own. Turn up the fifth card and say:

5. This is behind him.

It gives the influence that has just past or is passing away. If the Significator is a Trump card or a card that cannot be said to face either way, the diviner must decide beforehand which side of the Significator he will take as facing. Usually this fifth card is placed on the right hand side of the Significator, as it will be found that most of the court cards are looking towards the left hand. Anyhow, if you decide to always adopt the plan it will be found satisfactory - only make a rule always to do so. Turn up the sixth card, place it on the side that the Significator is facing and say:

6. This is before him.

It shows the influence that is coming into action and will operate in the near future.

The next four cards are turned up in succession and placed in a line by the side of the others which are in the form of a cross.

7. This is himself.

This signifies the person himself or else the thing enquired about, and shows its position or attitude in the matter.

8. The eighth card represent his House.

This is his environment, and the tendencies at work there which have an effect on the matter - for instance, his position in life, the influence of immediate friends and so forth.

9. The ninth card gives his hopes and fears in matter.

10. The tenth card the final result.

It is the culmination which is brought about by the influence shown by the other cards that have been turned up in the divination.

The operation is now complete. If in any divination the tenth card should be a court card it shows that the subject of the divination falls ultimately into the hands of a person represented by the court card and its end depends mainly on him. In this case, it is possible to have a fresh divination taking the court card as the Significator to discover what is the nature of his influence in the matter, and to what issue he will bring it.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Great facility may be obtained by this method in a short time, allowance being made for the gifts of the operator, that is to say his faculty of insight, latent or developed, and besides which it is free from all complications.

Upon looking up Waite's Pictorial Key to the Tarot, I find that a good deal of the above is extrapolated almost verbatim from that book. However a great deal of important information about this method is presented in Eden Gray's book A Complete Guide to the Tarot.

NOTES ON THE TAROT

By

G.H. FRATER S.R.M.D.

(N.B. This paper was lent me some years ago by Mr. Stuart Kaplan of U.S. Games Systems, Inc. This is to acknowledge my gratitude. I.R.)

In the Tree of Life in the Tarot, each path forms the connecting link between two of the Sephiroth. The King and the Queen are the correlations of the ABBA and the AIMA in that suit; the Knight or Prince answers to Microprosopus, and the Page or Princess which was anciently a female figure, is referred to the Bride, Kallah or Malkah.

Combining, then, the material attributions of the Sephiroth and the Path, it results that:

0. Fool - The Crown of Wisdom, the Primum Mobile acting through the Air on the Zodiac.

1. The Juggler - The Crown of Understanding, the beginning of material production, the Primum Mobile acting through the Philosophic Mercury on Saturn.

2. High Priestess - The Crown of Beauty, the beginning of Sovereignty and Beauty, the Primum Mobile acting through the Moon on the Sun.

3. Empress - The Wisdom of Understanding, the Union of the powers of Origination and Production; the Sphere of the Zodiac acting through Venus upon Saturn.

4. Emperor - The Wisdom of Sovereignty and Beauty, and the originator of them; the Sphere of the Zodiac acting through Aries upon the Sun, and initiating Spring.

5. Hierophant - The Wisdom and fountain of Mercy, the Sphere of the Zodiac acting through Taurus upon Jupiter.

6. The Lovers - The Understanding of Beauty and Production of Beauty and Sovereignty. Saturn acting through Gemini upon Sol.

7. Chariot - Understanding acting upon Severity. Saturn acting through Cancer upon Mars.

VOLUME TWO

8. Strength - Fortitude. Mercy tempering Severity. The Glory of Strength. Jupiter acting through Leo upon Mars.

9. Hermit - The Mercy of Beauty, the Magnificence of Sovereignty, Jupiter acting through Virgo upon Sol.

10. Wheel of Fortune - The Mercy and Magnificence of Victory. Jupiter acting through Jupiter direct upon Venus.

11. Justice - The Severity of Beauty and Sovereignty. Mars acting through Libra upon Sol.

12. The Hanged Man - The Severity of Splendour. Execution of Judgment. Mars acting through Water upon Mercury.

13. Death - The Sovereignty and result of Victory. Sol acting through Scorpio upon Venus, or Osiris under the destroying power of Typhon afflicting Isis.

14. Temperance - The Beauty of a firm Basis. The Sovereignty of Fundamental Power. Sol acting through Sagittarius upon Luna.

15. The Devil - The Sovereignty and Beauty of Material (and therefore false) splendor. Sol acting through Capricorn on Mercury.

16. The Tower - The Victory over Splendour. Venus acting through Mars upon Mercury. Avenging force.

17. The Star - The Victory of Fundamental Strength. Venus acting through Aquarius upon Luna. Hope.

18. Moon - The Victory of the Material. Venus acting through Pisces upon the Cosmic Elements, deceptive effect of the apparent power of Material Forces.

19. Sun - The Splendour of the Material World. Mercury acting through the Sun upon the Moon.

20. Judgement - The Splendour of the Spiritual World. Mercury acting through Fire upon the Cosmic Elements.

21. Universe - The Foundation of the Cosmic Elements and of the Material World. Luna acting through Saturn upon the Elements.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

TAROT TRUMPS

The following description of the Arcana Major are taken primarily from the grade rituals of the Order and so are written by McGregor Mathers. The descriptions of the keys to Lamed and Mem are taken from the Adeptus Major Ritual - to be found in that section of this book dealing with the initiatory rituals, which bears all the marks of having been written at a later date, by Waite.

The remainder are brief improvisations adapted from several sources mostly to fill in the gaps in the knowledge lectures and rituals. Very little about the Tarot was communicated in the outer Order, the really significant material being given after the Adeptus Minor grade was reached. Even so, there are many lacunae there, which should be filled in and supplemented by additional reading and meditation.

From my present point of view, there are only three or four major works which the student should consult in this area - apart from the basic book by Waite, The Pictorial Key to the Tarot, which gives his verbose description of the cards and black and white reproductions of his own deck. There is Aleister Crowley's Book of Thoth (Weiser, N. Y.) which is probably the most profound of them all and should be number one on the reading list. Paul Case's The Tarot, the Key to the Mysteries of the Ages, is the next one, giving a good description of the cards which probably approaches nearest of all to the Order point of view. Which is as it should be, because once he was a member of the American branch of the Order. Finally, there is the Encyclopedia Of the Tarot by Stuart R. Kaplan (Copyright by U.S. Games Systems, 1978). This is probably the most complete description of extant packs with history and reproductions of some cards of some packs. These four books with the Order material should be all that the average good student should need.

The Trumps have already, on a previous page, been numbered and briefly described.

21st KEY-UNIVERSE

Within the oval formed of the 72 circles, is a female form, nude save for a scarf that floats around her. She is crowned with the Lunar Crescent of Isis and holds in her hands, two wands. Her legs form a cross. She is the Bride of the Apocalypse, the Kabbalistic Queen of the Canticles, the Egyptian Isis or Great Feminine Kerubic Angel Sandalphon on the left hand of the Mercy Seat of the Ark.

The wands are the directing forces of the positive and negative currents. The Seven Pointed Heptagram or Star alludes to the Seven Palaces of Assiah; the crossed legs to the symbol of the Four Letters of the Name.

The surmounting crescent receives alike the influences of Geburah and Gedulah. She is the synthesis of the 32nd Path, uniting Malkuth to Yesod.

The oval of the 72 smaller circles refers to the Schem ha-mephorasch, or Seventy-two fold Name of the Deity. The twelve large circles form the Zodiac. At the angles are the Four Kerubim which are the vivified powers of the Name Yod He Vau He operating in the Elements, through which you have just symbolically passed in the preceding Ceremony.

The Fan, Lamp, Cup and Salt represent the four Elements themselves whose inhabitants are the Sylphs, Salamanders, Undines and Gnomes.

The magical title of this trump is The Great One of the Night of Time.

20th KEY-JUDGMENT

Before you upon the altar is the Twentieth Key of the Tarot, which symbolically represents these ideas. To the uninitiated eye it apparently represents The Last Judgment with an angel blowing a trumpet and the dead rising from their tombs - but its meaning is far more occult and recondite than this, for it is a glyph of the powers of Fire.

The Angel encircled by the rainbow, whence leap corruscations of Fire, and crowned with the Sun, represents Michael, the Great Archangel, the Ruler of Solar Fire.

The Serpents which leap in the rainbow are symbols of the Fiery Seraphim. The Trumpet represents the influence of the Spirit descending from Binah, while the Banner with the Cross refers to the Four Rivers of Paradise and the Letters of the Holy Name.

He is also Axieros, the first of the Samothracian Kabiri, as well as Zeus and Osiris.

The left hand figure below, rising from the Earth is Samael, the Ruler of Volcanic Fire. He is also Axiokersos, the Second Kabir, Pluto and Typhon.

The right hand figure below is Anael, the Ruler of Astral Light. She is also Axiokersa, the Third Kabir, Ceres, and Persephone, Isis, and Nephtys. She is, therefore, represented in duplicate form, and rising from the waters. Around both of these figures dart flashes of Lightning.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

The three principle figures form the Fire Triangle, and further represent Fire operating in the other Three Elements of Earth, Air, and Water.

The central lower figure with his backturned, and his arms in the sign of the Two equals Nine, is Arel, the Ruler of latent heat. He is rising from the Earth as if to receive the properties of the other three. He is also Kasimillos, the Candidate in the Samothracian Mysteries, and the Horus of Egypt. He rises from the rock-hewn cubical Tomb and he also alludes to the Candidate who traverses the Path of Fire. The three lower figures represent the letter Shin, to which Fire is especially referred. The seven Hebrew Yods allude to the Sephiroth operating in each of the Planets and to the Schem-hamphoresch.

The magical title is The Spirit of the Primal Fire.

19th KEY-THE SUN

Before you upon the Altar is the Nineteenth Key of Tarot which symbolically resumes these ideas. The Sun has twelve principal rays which represent the Twelve Signs of the Zodiac. They are alternately waved and salient as symbolising the alternation of the masculine and feminine natures. These again are subdivided into 36 Decanates or sets of ten degrees in the Zodiac, and these again into 72, typifying the 72 quinances or sets of five, and the 72-fold name of Schem ha-mephorasch. Thus the Sun embraces the whole creation in its rays.

The seven Hebrew Yods on each side, falling through the air, refer to the Solar influence descending. The Wall is the Circle of the Zodiac, and the stones are its various degrees and divisions.

The two children standing respectively on the Water and Earth represent the generating influence of both, brought into action by the rays of the Sun. They are the two inferior and passive Elements, as the Sun and Air above them are the superior and active Elements of Fire and Air. Furthermore, these two children resemble the sign Gemini which unites the Earthy Sign of Taurus with the Watery Sign Cancer, and this sign was, by the Greeks and Romans, referred to Apollo and the Sun.

18th KEY-THE MOON

Before you upon the Altar is the 18th Key of Tarot which symbolically resumes ideas. It represents the Moon with four Hebrew Yods like drops of dew falling, two Dogs, two Towers, a winding Path leading to the Horizon, and in the foreground, Water with a Crayfish crawling through it to the land. The Moon is in its increase on the side of Mercy, Gedulah, and from it proceed sixteen principle and sixteen secondary rays, which make 32, the number of the Paths of Yetzirah. She is the Moon at the feet of the Woman of Revelations, ruling equally over the cold and moist natures and the passive elements of Earth and Water. It is to be noted that the symbol of the Sign is formed of two lunar crescents bound together. It thus shows the lunar nature of the Sign. The Dogs are the

VOLUME TWO

Jackals of the Egyptian Anubis, guarding the Gates of the East and of the West, shown by the two Towers between which lies the Path of all the heavenly bodies ever rising in the East and setting in the West. The Crayfish is the Sign Cancer and was anciently the Scarabeus or Khephera, the emblem of the Sun below the Horizon as he ever is when the Moon is increasing above. Also, when the Sun is in the Sign Pisces the Moon will be well in her increase in Cancer as shown by the Cray-fish emblem.

The Moon has the magical title of Ruler of Flux and Reflux, Child of the Sons of the Mighty.

17th KEY-THE STAR

Before you on the Altar is the 17th Key of the Tarot which symbolically resumes these ideas.

The large Star in the center of the Heavens has seven principal and fourteen secondary rays and this represents the Heptad multiplied by the Triad. This yields 21 - the Number of the Divine Name Eheieh which, as you already know, is attached to Kether.

In the Egyptian sense, it is Sirius, the Dog-Star, the Star of Isis-Sothis. Around it are the Stars of the Seven Planets each with its seven-fold counter-changed operation.

The nude female figure with the Star of the Heptagram on her brow is the synthesis of Isis, of Nephthys, and of Hathor. She also represents the planet Venus through whose sphere the influence of Chesed descends. She is Aima, Binah, Tebunah, the Great Supernal Mother-Aima Elohim, pouring upon the Earth the Waters of Creation which unite and form a River at her feet, the River going forth from the Supernal Eden which floweth and faileth not.

Note well, that in this Key she is completely unveiled while in the 21st Key she is only partially so.

The two Urns contain the influences from Chokmah and Binah. On the right springs the Tree of Life, and on the left the Tree of Knowledge of Good and of Evil whereon the Bird of Hermes alights, and therefore does this Key represent the restored World, after the formless and the Void and the Darkness, the New Adam the countenance of the Man which falls in the sign Aquarius. And therefore doth the astronomical ripple of this sign represent, as it were, Waves of Water - the ripples of that River going forth out of Eden - but, therefore also, is it justly attributed to Air and not unto Water because it is the Firmament dividing and containing the Waters.

The magical motto of this Key is Daughter of the Firmament, Dweller between the Waters.

16th KEY-BLASTED TOWER

Before you on the Altar is the 16th Key of Tarot, which symbolically resumes these ideas. It represents a Tower struck by a Lightning Flash proceeding from a rayed circle and terminating in a triangle. It is the Tower of Babel struck by the Fire from Heaven. It is to be noted that the triangle at the end of the flash, issuing from the circle, forms exactly the astronomical symbol of Mars.

It is the Power of the Triad rushing down and destroying the Columns of Darkness. Three holes are rent in the walls, symbolising the establishment of the Triad therein and the Crown at the summit of the Tower is falling, as the Crowns of the Kings of Edom fell, who are also symbolised by the men falling headlong. On the right hand side of the Tower is Light and the representation of the Tree of Life by ten circles thus disposed.

On the left hand side is Darkness and eleven circles symbolising the Qlipboth. Lord of the Hosts of the Mighty is its magical name.

15th KEY-DEVIL

The 15th Key of the Tarot represents a goat-headed satyr-like Demon whose legs are hairy - his feet and claws standing upon a Cubical Altar. He has heavy bat-like wings. In his left hand, which points downwards, he holds a lighted torch, and in his right, which is elevated, a horn of water. The left hand points downwards to show that it is the infernal and burning, not the celestial and life-giving flame which is kindled in his torch -just as when the Sun is in Capricornus, to which cold and earthy Sign this Key corresponds, solar Light is at its weakest and the natures of cold and moisture triumph over heat and dryness. The cubical Altar presents the Universe -right and left of it, bound thereto by a cord attached to a circle which typifies the center of the Earth, are two smaller demons, one male and one female. They hold a cord in their hands. The whole figure shows the gross generative powers of nature on the material plane, and is analogous to the Pan of the Greeks and the Egyptian God of Mendes (the symbol of Khem). In certain aspects, the Key represents the brutal forces of nature, which to the unbelieving man only obscures and does not reflect the luminous Countenance of God. It also alludes to the sexual powers of natural generation. Thus therefore the Key fitly balances the symbol of Death on the other side of the Tree of Life. On the smaller demons, one points downwards and one upwards, answering to the positions of the hands of the central figures.

Beneath his feet are Pentagrams on which he tramples (whence comes their title of Wizard's foot) and his head is covered with the evil and reversed Pentagram. and his hands bear the torch and horn - the symbols of Fire and Water, so does his form unite the Earth in his hairy and bestial aspect, and the Air in his bat-like wings. Thus he represents the gross and materialized Elemental Forces of Nature; and the whole would be an evil symbol, were it not for the Pentagram of Light above his head which regulates and guides his movements. He is the eternal renewer of all the changing forms of Creation in conformity with the Law of The All-Powerful One (Blessed be He) which controlling Law is typified by the controlling Pentagram of Light surmounting the whole. This Key is an emblem of tremendous force; many and universal are its mysteries.

The magical title of this Key is Lord of the Gates of Matter, Child of the Forces of Time.

VOLUME TWO

14th KEY-TEMPERANCE

This drawing represents the more ancient form of the 14th Key of Tarot, for which the later and more usual form of Temperance was soon substituted, as better representing the natural symbolism of the Path Sagittarius. The earlier figure was considered not so much a representation of this Path alone, as the synthesis of that and the others conjoined. The later figure, therefore, is better adapted to the more restricted meaning. The more ancient forms shows a female figure crowned with the crown of five rays, symbolising the Five Principles of Nature, the concealed Spirit and the Four Elements of Earth, Air, Water and Fire. About her head is a halo of light. On her breast is the Sun of Tiphareth. The Five-rayed Crown further alludes to the Five Sephiroth Kether, Chokmah, Binah, Chesed and Geburah. Chained to her waist are a Lion and an Eagle, between which is a large cauldron whence arise steam and smoke. The Lion represents the Fire in Netzach - the Blood of the Lion, and the Eagle represents the Water in Hod, the Gluten of the Eagle whose reconciliation is made by the Air in Yesod, uniting with the volatilised Water arising from the cauldron through the influence of the Fire beneath it. The chains which link the Lion and the Eagle to her waist, are symbolic of the Paths of Scorpio and Capricornus as shown by the Scorpion and the Goat in the background. In her right hand, she bears the Torch of Solar Fire elevating and volatilising the Water in Hod by the fiery influence of Geburah, while with her left hand, she pours from a vase the Waters of Chesed to temper and calm the Fires of Netzach. This latter form is the usual figure of Temperance, symbolising in a more restricted form than the preceding, the peculiar properties of this Path. It represents an Angel with the Solar emblem of Tiphareth on her brow, and wings of the aerial and volatilising nature, pouring together the fluidic fire and the fiery water thus combining, harmonising and tempering those opposing elements.

One foot rests on dry and volcanic land, in the background of which is a volcano whence issues an eruption. The other foot is in the water by whose border springs fresh vegetation, contrasting strongly with the arid and dry nature of the distant land. On her breast is a square, the emblem of rectitude. The whole figure is a representation of that straight and narrow way of which it is said, "few there be that find it" which alone leads to the higher and glorified life. For to pursue that steady and tranquil mean between two opposing forces, is indeed difficult, and many are the temptations to turn aside either to the right or to the left - wherein, remember, are but to be found the menacing symbols of Death and the Devil.

13th KEY-DEATH

The 13th Key of Tarot represents a figure of a Skeleton, upon which some portions of flesh still remain. In a field he is reaping off with Scythe of Death the fresh vegetation which springs from the corrupting bodies buried therein - fragments of which, such as hands, heads and feet appear above the soil. One of the heads wears a kingly crown; another is apparently that of a person of little note, showing that Death is the equaliser of all conditions. The five extremities, the head, hands and feet, allude to the powers of the number five, the Letter He, the Pentagram - the concealed Spirit of Life and the Four Elements - the originator of all living form. The Sign of Scorpio especially alludes to stagnant and foetid water - that property of the moist nature which initiates putrefaction and decay. The eternal change from life into death through death into life, is symbolised by the grass which springs from and is nourished by putrifying and corrupting carcasses; the herbage, in its turn affords food to animals and man, which again when dead, nourisheth vegetable life and bring to growth and perfection the living herbage. This is further shown by the figure itself putrifying and decaying as it reaps the grass of the field. "As for man, his days are as grass, as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth." The top of the scythe forms the Tau Cross of Life, showing that what destroys also renews.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

The whole is a representation of the eternal transmutation of the life of nature, which reforms all things into fresh images and similitudes. This symbol represents the corrosive and destructive action of the infernal Fire as opposed to the Celestial - the Dragon of the Waters, the Typhon of the Egyptians, the Slayer of Osiris - which later yet rises again in Horus. The Scorpion, Serpent of Evil, delineated before the figure of Death in the more ancient form of the Key refers to the mixed and transforming, therefore deceptive, nature of this emblem. Behind him, is the symbol of the Nameless One, representing the Seed and its germ, not yet differentiated into Life, therefore incapable of definition. The Scorpion is the emblem of ruthless destruction; the Snake is the mixed and deceptive nature, serving alike for good and evil; the Eagle is the higher and Divine Nature, yet to be found herein, the Alchemical Eagle of distillation, the Renewer of Life. As it is said, "Thy youth shall be renewed like the Eagles." Great indeed, and many are the mysteries of this terrible Key.

The magical title is The Child of the Great Transformers, Lord of the Gates of Death.

12th KEY-HANGED MAN The Spirit of the Mighty Waters

The gallows from which this figure is suspended forms a Tau cross. The figure itself, from the position of the legs, forms a fylfot cross. It also represents the alchemical symbol of Sulphur in reverse.

There is a halo about the head of the seeming martyr. It should be noted that (1) the tree of sacrifice is living wood as indicated by leaves growing thereon; (2) that the face expresses deep entrancement, not suffering; (3) that the figure, as a whole, suggests life in suspension, but life and not death. It is a card of profound significance but all the significance is veiled. His arms, clasped behind him, form an upright Triangle, and this radiates Light. His mouth is resolutely closed. Waite dismisses most interpretations saying very simply that for him it expresses the relation, in one of its aspects, between the Divine and the Universe. He who can understand that the story of his higher nature is embedded in this symbolism will receive intimations concerning a great awakening that is possible, and will know that after the sacred Mystery of Death there is a glorious Mystery of Resurrection.

VOLUME TWO

It is attributed to the letter Mem, the element of Water, joining Geburah to Hod; Mars to Mercury.

You will remember that the letter Mem occupies the middle position in the series of the Three Mothers. It is said in the Zohar that its open operation is through the descent of its influence to the abyss, and thus it restrains the rising of those great waters by which the earth would otherwise again be inundated. In its close operation, it restricts the power of judgement from the downward course thereof. It is also said that it is like a vessel which in turn is sealed and unsealed, according as there is inhibition or indulgence of its influx to the emanations which are below.

With the more general import of the Hanged Man you will be already familiar; but in this Grade you are invited to regard it after a new manner, which can still be brought into harmony with the previous forms of interpretation, since it is simply an advance thereon. The enforced sacrifice and punishment, the involuntary and fatal loss, which are ascribed to it in our Tarot teaching, are here connected with the Divine death, with the sacrifice of God himself. That death connects closely with the true meaning attached to the High Ceremony of the Corpus Christi wherein the Chief Adept typifies at once the Founder of the Rosicrucian Order and the Founder of the Universe.

Year by year, the Order is withdrawn for one moment of time that it may be again formulated out of chaos; the Builder is also withdrawn into the concealment of the Tomb, as you are told in the symbolism of the 5 equals 6 grade. The Founder of our Rosicrucian Fraternity was taken hence that Light should come to His disciples, and the Maker of the great world entered into another concealment, for God dies in order that man shall live, and shall not only seek but find Him.

The symbolism with which we are here dealing also recalls the Apocalyptic figures of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world, and in correspondence with previous explanations, it indicates that the palmary misfortune of the universe, which is exoterically called the Fall of Man, exercised a species of incomprehensible compulsion upon the Divine Nature, so that the scheme of what is familiar to everyone under the name of redemption comes before us in a certain manner as an eternal necessity and as a consequence of the free will rather of man than God.

The importance which has been attached throughout the Grades of our Two Orders to Egyptian symbolism should also remind us that Mem, through the sacrifice of Christ, has analogy with the legend of the dead Osiris, one of whose appellations was the shipwrecked or drowned Mariner, even as this terrible Key, which you see now in its true form, represents a drowned giant.

The 23rd Path of the Tree is referred to the Elemental sign of Water, and in this diagram the drowned giant is depicted reposing on the rocky bed of the ocean with the rainbow at his feet, corresponding to that other rainbow seen in the apocalyptic vision around the Throne of the Slain Lamb. A symbol familiar to the brethren of the Second Order is here interpreted with reference to its most exalted sense.

The drowned giant is that which has been sunk below the phenomenal world by a sacrifice eternally preordained, which, in one of its aspects at least, is the necessary limitation suffered by the Divine Nature in the act of becoming manifest. The Divine, in a word, is drowned in the waters of natural life and that which in this respect obtains in the external world, obtains also for humanity, wherein the Divine Spark, beyond all plummets of the sense, all reach of the logical understanding is immersed in the waters of the material existence. In both cases, the symbol with which we are dealing corresponds to the legend of our Founder, sleeping in the centre of the Tomb which is encircled by the Rainbow, as in the Sanctuary of Israel there was the abiding Presence of the Shekinah.

11th KEY-JUSTICE

That to which your attention is especially drawn is the Key of Justice, referrable to the letter Lamed, whereto many attributions are given. The writers of the Zohar and the old scholiasts thereon dwell upon the form of Lamed which is the highest of all the letters; they say also that it is composite, being formulated of Vau and Kaph. These are the accidents of their subtlety, but you should know that its dominion is in the hour of the planet Shabbathai or Saturn, because from Binah, which is the great Sabbath, the rest whereof we desire, there is an influx to the Path of Lamed through the Path of Geburah, from the Sephirah Binah.

It further denotes the Mystery of Equilibrium. Now, the place of Geburah can be withstood only by those who restrain their concupiscence, because it is the Supernal Tribunal, and Geburah in this sense, signified the force of will, as Lamed is the condition of equilibrium, which represents the Portal of the Mysteries.

The ideas which have been thus expressed are found differently exhibited by another order of symbolism in the two Pillars which stand at the Western Angles of the Altar, (in the 6 equals 5 ritual) bearing respectively a lighted candle and a human skull. With the conventional attributions of light in the numerical order and the obvious lessons to be derived from the disjecta membra of humanity, we have no concern here. They speak too fully for themselves.

Of that death-watch which encompasses us in the midst of ordinary life there is however little realization. All that falls short of the mystic end falls short of the life of life, outside of which we are still in the sphere of simulacra. . .

It is possible, however, that another light may be added to his natural condition, by which the desire of the true end which is set before all beings, and of the life which is beyond all life of the apparent order. It is then that he is made ready to set out on the great search, when the higher light which has now entered within him goes also before him, and the desire of the Holy House is enkindled in his heart. In this manner he passes under the judgments and the severities of his election, behind which is the concealed love that shall take him to his term. For as the natural man is impelled by a certain elementary justice suited to his condition, so there is a justice which is above, working in the souls of the chosen ones, so that once indeed, they shall taste death, that they may pass into life forever, under the auspices of the Faithful Intelligence.

Justice is the Daughter of the Lord of Truth, The Holder of the Balances.

10th KEY-WHEEL OF FORTUNE The Lord of the Forces of Life

The form of the Order's Key of The Wheel of Fortune is much more simple than most renditions. There are shown only three figures - the winged Sphynx above, the revolving wheel in the center, while below is a sitting, pensive monkey, a cynocephalus.

The Sphynx is half beast and half human, female as indicated by breasts, while the head is covered by a nemyss encircled by a halo. Thus it represents humanity as a whole, evolving from its primordial animal state to human self-consciousness. But that is not all. The presence of large wings, indicate the divinity of the figure, so that the symbol as a whole suggests the Real Self of man hidden behind the veil of the lower Sephiroth, the lower self or personality. The higher Triad is well represented by being above the other two symbolic figures.

The wheel is the symbol of time, cyclic progression and thus of karma. The wheel of the zodiac and astrology per se are representative of the cosmic clock constantly ticking away to bring into fresh activity the latent seeds of ancient deeds whereby we rise or fall as our fortunes, in the broadest sense of the term, fluctuate with the passage of time.

The cynocephalus is below, often described as Hermanubis, the combination of Hermes the messenger of the Gods, and lower mind, and Anubis, the dog-faced (or jackal) God who presided over death and mummification, and the watcher over the tombs of the dead. Watching over the tomb is required to permit resurrection - and thus he is associated with immortality, rising through the wheel of life from transitoriness to the overshadowing sphynx above, eternity.

It is symbolized by the letter Caph, referred to Jupiter on The Tree. Caph is not a closed hand, nor an open hand, but a curved hand, as if to hold or contain something.

9th KEY-THE HERMIT

The Hermit on most packs of the Tarot is practically the same. It is a hooded and cloaked figure, an old man, bearing a staff in one hand, and a lamp or lantern in the other. Like Diogenes of old, he may be looking for Truth - the truth about man and his relationship with the universe. He is a solitary figure; there is none other with him. In the search to reach the divine, one is alone in quest of the Alone. At the same time he represents the Kerux in the initiatory rituals, the shower of the way - the Kerux who points out the way to the hidden knowledge.

The Hermit is attributed to the letter Yod on the Tree and to the sign Virgo, ruled by Mercury. Mercury is not yet knowledge, but is the means whereby knowledge is transmitted, the symbol of the nervous system, with all its circuits - from the most primitive to those that are in the process of development.

Insofar as Virgo is the sign to which the Hermit is attributed, it has a connection with human sexuality in its yet virginal or prepubescent state. It represents man on the edge or precipice of Becoming, of the adolescent emerging from latent potentiality, of the adept who has not yet arrived at the full stage of all his possibilities, but who is nevertheless enroute.

His magical title is The Magus of the Voice of Light, The Prophet of the Gods.

8th KEY-STRENGTH

There are many versions of this Key, all variations of the Woman with the Lion. Some cards show her closing the mouth of the Lion, others opening the mouth of the Lion. The Order card shows her side by side with the Lion, both in an amicable relationship.

She represents Nature in all her Vastness, the Genetrix from which the vast universes are made and from which they are constructed. The Lion in the Order is the sign of Leo, not merely the fifth sign in the natural zodiac, referred to the 5th house - sex and love, but not yet marriage - but it is the First Sign of the reconstructed or Initiated Zodiac from which all the decanates and quinarys begin. It therefore symbolizes esoterically the Beginning or Creation of things, and to that extent has many subtle meanings.

It is referred to the letter Teth on the Tree, meaning a serpent, having in Genesis a sexual connotation. The Serpent is also the spermatozoon, the stimulator of new life in the female. As such it also represents Kundalini, the spinal spirit-fire without which there can be no transmutation, no spiritual growth or development, no new birth. Kundalini is the human aspect of the great Goddess Shakti, the cosmic energy or Fohat, depending on the system you employ, whose seven sons carve seven holes in space wherein develop the seven planets - or chakras in the merely human sense.

The card itself therefore is replete with many significations and requires deep meditation to discern its concealed mysteries.

Here the magical title is Daughter of the Flaming Sword, Leader of the Lion.

7th KEY-THE CHARIOT

In the Order system, the chariot is not grounded or fixed as in most other renditions. It is soaring through space drawn by two horses, the positive and negative forces of nature, given direction by the head of a Sphynx, again symbolizing the Higher. The charioteer is the King, the Yod of Tetragrammation, the Father of all.

In all renditions, however, the symbolic meaning conveyed is the union of two opposites, which together can draw the vehicle of the Higher Man towards the Great Goals he is attempting to reach. It is reminiscent of the Oath of the Adeptus Minor in which he promises to become, with the divine aid, more than human by uniting himself with his higher and divine Genius.

VOLUME TWO

As such it is the symbol of the Great Work, represented by the letter Cheth, meaning a Fence, and whose Gematria is 418. These numbers add to 13, which are also the numbers of Ahavoh, Love, and Echod, One or Unity. Both together equal 26, the Gematria of Tetragrammation.

The magical title of this Key is Child of the Power of the Waters, Lord of the Triumph of Light.

6th KEY-THE LOVERS

Of all the historical designs, this Golden Dawn Tarot card is certainly the most different. Most others show a man and woman standing before a vast Angelic figure. In this particular key, we have a woman chained to a rock before which is a monster or threatening dragon. Above, we perceive the descent of Perseus with radiant shield, winged helmet, and a sword in his right hand about to rescue the helpless maiden.

One of the many possible interpretations is the liberating effect of the descent of the higher Genius, the freeing effect of illumination. To quote Robert Wang in his book The Golden Dawn Tarot, "Here Perseus is shown freeing Andromeda from the solid rock of materialism, and from the Dragon of Fear. The 'Love' here is one of the divine Union, a mystery not even hinted at by the usual image of a man and woman whose earthly union is being blessed by a central Angelic figure."

The Hebrew letter to which this Key is attributed is Zayin, meaning a sword - in this instance not merely the sword of division and discrimination, but the sword of conquest and liberation. Its number is 7, which also refers indirectly to Netzach Victory, and to the planet Venus whose meaning is Love and Union and Fertility.

The magical title of this Key is Children of the Voice Divine, the Oracles of the Mighty Gods.

5th KEY-THE HIEROPHANT

Again, the Golden Dawn card is radically different from those in other packs. It shows a seated figure, bearded and crowned with a triple tiara, seated on a throne whose two arms end with bulls' heads. Quite simply, the card is attributed to the letter Vav, also attributed to Taurus, the zodiacal Bull.

In the Order teaching, the Hierophant is the Expounder of the Mysteries and his throne is in the East of the Temple. He is representative of Osiris, the resurrection god of Egypt, and as such never moves from the dais. If he does move, he represents Aroueris, one of the forms of Horus the Elder, and in moving he administers the obligation to the candidate and subsequently officiates and confirms the fact of initiation.

Initiation in the Order really takes place between the two pillars when the Higher Genius is, as it were, poised to make contact with the aspiring ego of the Candidate.

He also is bearer of the Banner of the East, which indicates the rising of the Light, the central fact of initiation. Some of the older packs describe him as the Pope, the highest authority of the Catholic Church. But Pope means in reality Father and as the Initiator, the Hierophant certainly represents an authoritative father figure - the one whose power and function is to stir up and initiate the creative process in the Genetrix or Mother.

His magical title is Magus of the Eternal Gods.

4th KEY-THE EMPEROR

The symbolism of this card is forthright, in that it depicts the Emperor sitting on a throne with an actual ram (for Aries) under his feet, and carrying a wand with the head of a ram. Since Aries is ruled by Mars, this card represents enormous creative energy and of course rulership. One set of Order symbols or attributions depicts the Mars decanate of Pisces as the end of one cycle of the year, and another Mars decanate in Aries to represent the tremendous power involved in the return of Spring when Nature begins to evidence growth and the emergence of Life once more in Spring.

One of the apparent paradoxes of the Order symbolism, is that this card is attributed not merely to Mars, a very masculine symbol but to the letter Heh which is distinctly feminine. It is the first Heh of Tetragrammaton, signifying the Mother. All symbols contain their own opposites, thus creating a balance of opposing forces, without which the universe would come to an end.

The Emperor is patently the consort of the Empress, the preceding card attributed to Venus and Daleth, indicating that the two had better be considered together. One is masculine and the other is feminine. One is force and fire; the other is beauty, luxury and fecundity. It is worth remembering that a poet once wrote that man is peace and the woman is power.

This magical title is Son of the Morning. Chief among the Mighty.

3rd KEY-THE EMPRESS

The Empress here is not unlike most of the figures in other and older packs. She is attributed to the letter Daleth. meaning a Gate, and is the uppermost of the so-called Reciprocal Paths on the Tree, joining Chokmah to Binah, the celestial Father and Mother. Venus is attributed to that wall of the Vault of the Adepts which is the entry to the Vault and the Pastos, which is thus the symbol rebirth.

She is a stately figure, seated on a throne, having rich vestments and royal aspect, as - says Waite - of a daughter of heaven and earth. There is a dove to the right of her, descending as it were from above. She bears a sceptre, that of royalty, surmounted by a globe, while in the other hand is the Ankh, the symbol both of Venus and of eternal Life. In Waite's lovely language, in which he fears to use an English phrase when a Latin one will do better, she is not the Queen of Heaven, but nonetheless she is still the Refuge of all Sinners, the fruitful Mother of thousands. There are also certain aspects of this card which correctly describe her as desire and the wings thereof, as the woman clothed with the Sun, as Gloria Mundi and the veil of the Holy of Holies.

VOLUME TWO

She is above all things universal fecundity and desire, but there is no direct message which has been given to man like that which is borne of woman.

In another order of ideas, the card of the Empress signifies the door or gate by which an entrance is obtained into this life, as into the Garden of Venus, or as in the Vault of the Adepts. Then the way which leads out therefrom, to the secret known to the High Priestess; is communicated only to the elect.

Her magical title is Daughter of the Mighty Ones.

2nd KEY-THE HIGH PRIESTESS

The Golden Dawn card is almost simplistic without any of the more complex and elucidatory symbols of the other packs. She is clearly a lunar symbol, representing the Path of Gimel leading from Kether to Tiphareth, passing through the Abyss without any break in continuity.

Instead of having the crescent moon at her feet as in most of the current packs, she wears the crescent on her forehead, above her eyes, and holds a Cup (rather like the Order Water cup) in her hands over her chest. In this aspect, she seems more like the Stolistes, the cup-bearer in the Golden Dawn ceremonies. Nor is she placed between the two Pillars of Jachin and Boaz, of Severity and Mildness, as in many other of the more commonly used decks; she does not thus represent the Hegemon, the guide or leader of the Aspirant.

Her clothing or vestments are flowing and gauzy, blue in color, and the whole is bathed in an aura of light, a shimmering radiance. To quote Waite once more, she is the spiritual Bride and Mother, the daughter of the Stars and the higher Garden of Eden. The symbol of the Shekinah, the abiding presence of the Most High, the co-habiting glory. She is the Queen of the Borrowed Light, since the moon reflects the light of the Sun, but this is the light of all.

The Priestess of the Silver Star is her honorary title, and thus is the means whereby entry is gained into the invisible Third or Highest Order within the Order.

1st KEY-THE MAGICIAN

This is a young man, with the Caduceus on his chest vestments, facing the altar on which are the four elemental weapons so frequently spoken of in the Golden Dawn. They are depicted here exactly as they are in the document describing the making of the four elemental weapons which have almost a universal application. They not only represent the four suits of the Tarot, the four Worlds of the Kabbalah, the four Beasts of the Apocalypse -the four Kerubic signs -they represent the four letters of the Tetragrammaton and so are the vice-regents of the Holy Name.

Again, the Order has made a radical departure from most packs. This magician does not have one hand raised towards heaven, and the other pointing downwards. They are poised as if to grasp one of the magical weapons wherewith he accomplishes his rites.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

His hat has a wide brim resembling the figure eight in a lateral position, the symbol of infinity, the sign of the Holy Spirit. It is like an endless cord, almost like a serpent appearing to devour its own tail, reminding one of the last line of the Bornless Invocation - "I am He, the Grace of the World; the Heart girt with a Serpent is my Name."

Insofar as he is attributed to the Letter Beth and to Mercury, and since he has the symbol of the Staff of Mercury on his chest, he is the higher Mercury, Thoth the God of Wisdom and of Utterance, the God who cometh forth from the Veil.

His magical title is The Magus of Power.

0-THE FOOL

In this card the most complete departure from the conventional packs is depicted. Instead of showing a man in motley, striding along, heedless of the dog which is yapping at his heels, we have revealed a naked child standing beneath a rose-tree bearing yellow roses. They represent the golden Rose of Joy as well as the Rose of Silence. While reaching up to the Roses, he yet holds in leash a grey wolf, worldly wisdom held in check by perfect innocence and the divine nature.

Waite describes him as a prince of the other world on his travels through this one - all amidst the morning glory, in the keen air. He is the Spirit in search of experience.

Probably the finest description of the Fool is to be found in that profound work, The Book of Thoth by Aleister Crowley. Though his designs for the Fool as painted by Frieda Harris differ enormously from the Order version, nonetheless the reader would do well to study what Crowley has to say in this connection. This alone should shatter any convictions one may have about Crowley's supposed perplexities. There is more wisdom in this one description and interpretation than in many a tome on all the Tarot trumps contributed by anyone else. I go further than this, and suggest that the student study the Golden Dawn Tarot deck in conjunction with his book, and even with his own version of the Tarot cards themselves.

The magical title is the Spirit of Ether.

VOLUME TWO

NOTES ON GEOMANCY

No authorship has been ascertained for this paper. Quite patently it is neither by S.R.M.D., nor by N.O.M. It is not listed as amongst the Flying Rolls. I gather it to have been contributed by one of the rank and file of the Order members who had found some interest in Geomancy.

Students are often inclined to set aside Geomancy as a thing of little use and small account, a fantastic and empiric mode of divination, merely a species of ultra elaborate tossing up, pure chance in fact, laboriously interpreted. The reason seems to be that in all the books and manuscripts dealing with Geomancy no elementary explanation of it is ever vouchsafed. This the student is assumed to know, and is given straight away rule a for the erection of figures and elaborate lists of the names and sigils of Genii and Rulers until he naturally finds himself bored or wearied.

It is to supply this lack that this paper is written in the hope that some students may find therein what they have been lacking. First then as to the word itself. All words ending in the termination "mancy" refer to some form of prophecy, from Mantis, a prophet. By this I mean not necessarily in fortune telling, though this too may be included, but rather the setting forth of the things that are behind the Veil of matter. All inspired utterances, in a sense all great poems, are prophecy. The priest is the commissioned executant, and as such is subordinate to the prophet. Now the prophet takes some material manifestation, and at this point lifts a corner of the veil, disclosing, under the appearance of some material token, the essential Divine Truth laying behind. Thus cheiromancy is prophecy from the hand. Necromancy (which is black magic) is prophecy from the corpse (a method in favor with the Roman Augurs who used the bodies of sacrificial victims). Geomancy, from Gaia the Earth, is prophecy from the Earth itself. We have then to consider how the veil that hides while it manifests the mystery of creation is lifted to the gaze of the inspired Seer. For this is the Veil of Isis, the penetration of which was the goal and object of the Egyptian Seers.

As above, so below, was the arcanum of the Emerald Tablet of Hermes. We are taught that the eternal ideas of God are revealed as in a picture book by the starry sphere to the eyes of those who can see, and the starry sphere is reflected in the Earth, so that every spot is the reflection of some constellation or star group, and over these wander the planets in their order. Four great Archangels keep watch and ward over the four quarters. From this knowledge we may see the reasons for the characteristics of countries, towns and places persisting quite independently of the race that inhabit them. We can see why it is that ever in Rome is the imperial spirit of domination and material power, whether it was inhabited as at first by the outcasts and broken men from every race, the great "Asylum" as it was called, or afterwards a homogeneous Republic, then an Empire with world dominion, then a hierarchy with well nigh a universal spiritual dominion, but always the same spirit. Or why again, the various races that have come to China have one and all become ultra Chinese. In every case the spirit of the place sometimes is strong enough to dominate all who come in. Or in other cases to produce its own effect. Thus we may perhaps say that all the forces behind the veil shine through and can be perceived. If the prophet can catch and translate these he can give information of high value to his brethren. Obviously to do this he must entirely sink and obliterate his own personality, for his intellect can only perceive and reason about this side of the veil. While his attention is fixed on this he is necessarily blind to the indications of what lies behind.

Let us for a moment look at some other terminations. "Nomy" signifies laws - as astronomy is the law of this starry universe. That is to say (for we can really know nothing of the laws governing this great universe) the methodical synthesis of observation.

"Ology" is the "word" - the divine messenger drawn from the manifestation - thus Astrology is the message drawn from the stars, the discourse concerning them, as shown by the science of astronomy. But as to the Earth, we have Geology, which signifies the discourse concerning the earth though as yet this discourse concerns merely the age of the earth, and the kind of creatures that inhabited it thousands of centuries ago, and the changes that have passed over its surface. There is also Geometry or the measurement of earth which is a more subtle science, for it concerns itself with abstract numbers and figures.

Now at the outset of Geomancy, as set forth in books and manuscripts, we are confronted with the lists of the names of the Rulers, Genii, Angels, and Intelligences, which have no apparent reason, and with seemingly arbitrary figures called Sigils. The learning of these to some is a weariness and it seems profitless. But let the student then look on them as the names of personalities with whom he will become acquainted. You know, for example, that your friend's name is John or David; your enemy's name may be Hans or Karl. The mention of these names at once brings to your mind the idea of that personality. We could not discuss these friendly or hostile ideas without using these names. We do not know why our friend was christened John, but we accept the fact, and just so we regard the Sigils, as we do the letters of the Alphabet. We do not know why the letter 'J' has the particular power that it has, but if we wish to communicate to another in writing the idea denoted by 'John' we employ it, and the children must learn the alphabet before they can begin to read.

Now as to the mechanical method employed by the Geomantic diviner. As we have seen he must entirely subordinate his own personality, his reason, his intellect, his human will. He must become completely passive. We have all heard of the process of automatic writing where the seer as medium allows his hand to be used by some superhuman or subhuman intelligence, that messages may be written through him without his will, often without his consciousness. But herein it is extremely difficult to entirely withdraw the will so that the message is not coloured, even transmuted, or at least modified, by his own brain. The Geomantic method of making a series of dots or strokes on paper without counting, ensures so far as it is possible that the intellect has no part therein. What is it then that determines whether the number be odd or even? The answer is clear; it is rhythm. Consider then any four-lined verse, with alternate feminine and masculine endings. The rhythm of this will give a geomantic figure of two dots, one dot, two dots, one dot.

When the brain is entirely quiescent, the message from behind the veil of physical matter may be perceived in the form of rhythm, not consciously indeed, but affecting the nerves and pulses, affecting the hand. A tune we may say, dances through the body, the rhythm of it manifests in the strokes unconsciously made. Whence then comes this tune? The starry sky is the reflex of God's thought of Himself, the earth in the reflex of the firmament, the aura of man is the reflex of the earth. The rhythm of the tune then manifests the idea behind the veil. The geomantic figure sets down in geometric form the rhythm of the tune and consequently the idea.

Let us now consider what we mean by an idea. Old John Heydon, the most profound writer in Geomancy, defines the idea as an invisible created spirit. This may be more comprehensible if we imagine any manifest object - a man, a flower, a tree, or what you will. Take the sum of all the attributes you know of that object, and then make up the ideal presentment in the idea thereof. It is invisible, but it is there. So we may say a sculptor has the idea of his statue before he has made the roughest sketch. And a genius he defines as a certain divine spirit that worketh secret things in nature miraculously. So that, he says, there is no great difference between a Genius and a Divine idea.

Now as you stand in a definite spot on the earth's surface and ask a question, the answer is there, involved in your question, if you can but get at it. The question and answer are both in the divine idea, and the idea is manifested by the rhythmic movement, the tune, that your spirit catches from behind the veil.

Take then for example a stanza with alternate feminine and masculine endings. Broadly the effect is exhilarating. It goes to a dance rhythm, it is full of hope and joy, it tells of the gaining of something desired, and the geomantic figure we have formed is thus:

and we learn to call it "Acquisitio." We are further taught to make a talismanic figure by joining the dots we have set down thus:

This seems at first sight a purely empiric and practically useless thing. But let us look at it in another way. We wish to receive the information we desire, and the natural method is to hold out some receptacle. Our appropriate symbol is a cup to receive the wine of divine grace, and a cup is the natural symbol of "Acquisitio." The spiritual gift is behind the veil, the material reflex of it is the gift of what we desire on Earth. Two cups therefore appropriately symbolize the answer to our question.

VOLUME TWO

Now as in Egypt the picture writing gradually conventionalized into hieroglyphics, so the representation of the two cups may become the hieroglyphic symbol, the dots and angles of Acquisitio.

These indicate the rhythm that has come from behind the veil, bearing the answer to our query. We have now to consider that every point on the surface of Earth has its own occult forces, which are here manifested. To a certain extent this will be generally admitted. We know that there are sacred places, often in the old days marked with stone circles, and that the influence of them is so strong that in spite of themselves, succeeding races and different peoples will involuntarily build their sacred shrines in the same spots.

Many believe that ill-luck invariably follows the profaning of such sites. It is commonly said that about certain places there is a special influence for good or evil, which any sensitive person who comes there can feel. If this is true of certain places it would seem to follow that every place has its special influence and occult forces, which can be there manifested. But the forces that manifest in any place are not fixed and invariable.

Imagine then that you stand on a point of the earth's surface and your mind is troubled with some question and intuition comes to you to seek the solution behind the veil. You are feeling in your mind the Divine influence ruling that particular spot, and unconsciously it may be so. You know that it holds within it the answer could you but get at it. Perhaps you consider no ordinary method of divination, but there comes to you a feeling of hope and joy, of exhilaration, a certain sense that all will be well.

Your inner being has caught the rhythm that promises success. Here then Geomancy enables you to set down the rhythm in black and white, and to interpret in detail.

But it does more than this. To the vague sense that has permeated your inner being there is much risk of delusion. It is impossible to exclude the material personality, the outer side of the veil. Modes of exhilaration or depression may come from physical causes.

Geomancy, as we have seen, excludes, so far as it is possible, the personality - the working of the material brain and enables you to catch the rhythm, wherein is the answer to your question. So you ask whether you shall obtain something eagerly desired, and the rhythm sings to you the idea of Acquisitio and you set down the geomantic figure, and there appears to you the hieroglyphic of the Cups and you know that you hold forth the material cup, and behind the veil the spiritual cup is held forth to receive the wine of blessing. And now because there must be some name by which you shall call that divine spirit which you have perceived, you are taught to give it the name of Hismael.

Take this if you wish to be a purely fancy name. While it is the name you are to know, think of that spirit and you know so far that it is a genial generous spirit that gives you what you desire, and as such you recognize this spirit as the ruler of the idea of "Acquisitio." You learn also the sigil of Hismael. You do not know the meaning of this, or why it is employed. Perhaps you never will. It is not very important. You will never probably know the origin of the letter 'J,' but this does not prevent you knowing that 'J' is the initial of John, the name of your friend. To help in the knowledge and recognition of the Geomantic figures, the old books give various characteristics describing Hismael. For instance, as noble and generous and affable; a genial and handsome man, laughter-loving, a great lover and forgiver. Descriptions are also given of the places that he most frequents.

Fruits, plants and trees are so especially favoured by him, precious stones, animals, birds and fishes consonant to his nature, etc. But the student need not be concerned with those at present. They belong to more advanced parts of the subject. The chief points to note now are that we have seen the lines or strokes he makes are not haphazard and meaningless but reveal to him a certain rhythm and that rhythm is the expression of an idea. The idea is the answer to the question shown him by the ruler whose name and sigil also he knows and somewhat of his character.

Having grasped this much there will be less difficulty in comprehending the meaning of the Genii, Angels, Archangels, etc.

We see then how we get a certain result with one figure resulting from four lines of strokes. But there are four quarters of the world, and four elements. We must inquire four times if we would have a reliable answer. So it is necessary to make 16 lines of strokes resulting in four figures. But the principle of all is the same. We have discovered here only "Acquisitio." Further comments must be reserved for a future paper.

ASTROLOGY

The Knowledge Lectures contain tid-bits of a variety of topics. None of these do more than scratch the surface. This is admitted by Mathers in a paper devoted to describing the "least amount of information a student needs to pass the necessary examinations." After awhile the astrological material - apart from naming the planetary and zodiacal symbols and their attributions to the Tree of Life - was dropped altogether. If not in the Golden Dawn, at least a generation later in the Stella Matutina. The reason for this deletion was a simple one - the gradual appearance of some very well-written books on Astrology. At the time the Order was founded, there was a dearth of good astrological books, so the Knowledge Lectures were needed to make good what publishers and writers had failed to do. Any good catalogue from a reliable occult bookseller will reveal nowadays practically hundreds of titles of astrological books. Not all of them are good by any manner or means. Nonetheless, a certain number are outstanding.

Though I have left some of the basic astrological material intact in the Knowledge Lectures, I would like to name a few good textbooks that the reader could consult to considerable advantage. For example, there are the two books by Grant Lewi - Astrology for the Millions and Heaven Knows What (Llewellyn Publications). A more complete and comprehensive textbook, though nowhere as well written or as interesting, is the A-Z Horoscope Maker and Delineator by Llewellyn George. Perhaps the best of the lot is a series of slim volumes covering every phase of astrology by Noel Tyl (Llewellyn Publications). There is also a specializing volume on one particular topic that should not be ignored - Saturn by Liz Greene (Samuel Weiser, Inc.) This can certainly supplant the skimpy and superficial data provided by the Knowledge Lectures.

VOLUME TWO

However, there are a couple of items to be found in different places throughout the Order teaching that deserve to be integrated into the common body of astrological knowledge and practice. The data in the Tarot material, relating to starting the Zodiac from the star Regulus in Leo, said to make the signs and constellations coincide, is an important theoretical concept that must not be ignored. It makes the system similar to sidereal rather than tropical astrology and therefore deserves a new system of interpretation. Furthermore, there is an isolated paper dealing with the Convolutions of the Serpent Formulae around the North Pole, which has all sorts of hints and possibilities that only a student here and there has sensed, to the best of my knowledge.

ESOTERIC ASTROLOGY

By

FRANCIS KING

Between 1908 and 1912 Mathers issued side lectures and other manuscripts to those Temples that were loyal to him. Much of this additional material reached the Stella Matutina (via Brodie Innes) but some did not do so. . . Some of these later manuscripts are of great interest, and one in particular, that seems to have been issued to Theorici Adepti Minores, is of real importance; for it outlines an astrological system that differs in some respects from both the normal western astrology taught in the Golden Dawn and its offshoots, to members of the Portal Grade, and the sidereal ("starry") astrology used by the Hindus and a minority of modern western astrologers.

Therefore I would suggest the reader consult any of the modern textbooks on sidereal astrology with a view to gaining some insight into their particular kind of interpretation. (For example in tropical astrology my ascendant is about 0 degrees Scorpio. By Mathers calculations that would be shifted back to about the middle of Libra. And I can assure the reader that my basic characteristics are no more Libran than the man in the moon. I.R.).

In considering this 'initiated astrology' it must be borne in mind that the signs of the Zodiac in popular astrology are completely out of step with the constellations bearing the same names. The situation has arisen because of the precession of the equinox - the fact that the equinoctial point (i.e., the point of the zodiac at which the sun lies when it crosses the equator on March 21st each year) moves steadily through the zodiac in a reverse direction to the motion of the planets. In spite of this fact, tropical astrologers insist on calling this invisible, moving equinoctial point to the 0 degrees of Aries although it is, in reality, many degrees away from the constellation of that name.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

In Mathers' system the moving, or tropical, zodiac is abandoned in favour of a fixed sidereal zodiac in which the signs and constellations coincide and is measured from the star called Regulus, which is taken as being in 0 degrees Leo. This sidereal zodiac requires a correction to the tropical longitudes given in all ephemerides (lists of planetary and zodiacal positions) used by astrologers - and this correction varies each year. Mathers supplied a table of these corrections for the years 1800-1911. As it seems likely that some of the readers of this book will have astrological interests - a recent poll showed that no less than twenty percent of the adult population of England and Wales take astrology seriously I think it worth reproduction. In each case Column I indicated the year and Column II indicated the degrees and minutes to be subtracted from the planetary and house positions as calculated from an ephemeris.

This is the end of the quotation from Mr. King's use of McGregor Mathers' segment on Esoteric Astrology. The dates end at the year of 1911, but I would gather one could proceed from that date to the present following more or less the same procedure. Anyway the student versed in sidereal astrology should have no difficulty in dealing with this schema. The tropical astrologer likewise ought to be able to use the above data to his advantage and bring it up to date.

INTRODUCTORY PAPER ON THE TATTWAS

By

G.H. FRATER SUB SPE

THE TATTWAS

I. What the Tattwas are.

The conditions which make all life possible on the earth, whether human, animal or vegetable, are derived from the Sun: e.g., light, heat, electricity, magnetism etc. This is termed 'the life of the Sun' or 'Solar Prana'. The Solar Prana is communicated to the earth in waves of vibration through the ether. These waves are of widely varying lengths and rates of motion but they are all traversing the ether at the same time, forming a very complicated system.

The student should endeavour to familiarize himself with this conception. He will find a useful illustration in the sounds of a great orchestra: all the sound waves, from the long slow heavy ones of the bassoon, to the short high rapid notes of the fife or piccolo -- are all passing at the same time to the ear, yet the sensitive ear can pick out and follow the waves of sound proceeding from each instrument. Another illustration is found in the waves of colour proceeding from a landscape; the heavy long red waves and all the gamut of colour up to the shortest and most rapid blues are traversing the luminiferous ether at the same time yet the eye can pick out each one without trouble.

The same idea can be visualized by considering the waves of the sea: the long heavy rollers pass along, and on their surface we can see multitudes of small, short and rapid waves, passing simultaneously in the same direction. Now just as the notes of a musical scale are divided into seven distinct tones, each representing a certain number of aerial vibrations per second; and just as the vibrations of the luminiferous ether are divided into the seven colours of the spectrum -- so the vibrations of the Solar Prana are divided into seven groups, groups which are determined by their wave lengths and frequencies. Two of these groups are beyond the scope of this paper, but the remaining five will be briefly explained.

The Solar Pranas will be best understood by considering their effects on visible and tangible matter, and should always be called by their Sanscrit names, which having no other connotation. will be less liable to confusion.

Consider then first the process by which the Mulaprakriti or 'world stuff' is moulded into a planet. At first it is inert, at rest as it were, a formless cloud of finely distributed matter having in itself only the potential of form and substance; this is the condition known as AKASA. Then motion begins, the mass is whirled into a spherical form and becomes a nebula. This condition is called VAYU.

Now imagine the infinitesimally small particles, whirled around and continually colliding with each other, gradually growing hot and incandescent, until the nebula becomes a fiery mass. This condition is called TEJAS. Gradually it cools but remains fluid; this condition is called APAS. Further, as time goes on, the fluid mass solidifies and becomes a globe or planet. In this condition it is termed PRITHIVI.

These names should be accurately learned and associated with the conditions to which they refer. It will be seen that they correspond with fair accuracy to those states of energy -- matter which are commonly called the four elements. Thus Vayu has qualities of Air, Tejas of Fire, Apas of Water and Prithivi of Earth. But as these words are limited in common speech, it is not advisable to use them in speaking or thinking of the Tattwas. Akasa in this connection would represent the negative or passive condition of rest. Another useful illustration may be found by considering the operation of the Tattwas in reverse order: as in the familiar chemical compound known as H₂O, recognized in its fluid form as water. If this be subjected to refrigeration it becomes solid, called in the terminology of the elements, Prithivi -- or 'Earth'. This state results from the action of Prithivi on H₂O. Now suppose heat is applied: the chunk of ice melts and the substance returns to its elemental state -- Water. It is now under the Tattwa of Apas. Continue to increase the heat under the Tattwa of Tejas and the water becomes steam, or vapour and is thus under the Tattwa of Vayu. The Steam diffuses, it enters the Tattwa condition of Akasa, with the potential of condensing and returning to earth as rain.

From these illustrations the student should be able to gain a clear conception of the nature of the Tattwas, regarding them always as more or less arbitrary divisions of the Solar Prana.

VOLUME TWO

II. The Symbols of the Tattwas.

It has been found convenient to denote each Tattwa by a conventional symbol -- specialized as to figure, form and colour. These symbols are not arbitrarily selected, but are derived from the form of the wave, its frequency and its formative effect on the etheric substance. This, however, is so complex and difficult an investigation that the student is advised to defer its consideration for the present, and consider the symbols as being merely conventional forms sufficiently appropriate to make them easy to remember. Thus the Akasa is symbolized by an egg-shaped figure in dark purple or indigo. An egg as the root and origin of life is manifestly appropriate as a symbol of life -- the latency of the life force, the force within the egg before it is stimulated into overt activity; and purple is eminently a colour of rest.

Vayu is symbolized by a circle of clear blue, the air being obviously a sphere of blue colour. There is some difference of opinion as to the correct shade of blue, which varies with different persons: the best rule is to try and reproduce the deepest and most beautiful sky blue the student has ever seen. If he has been in the East or on the Mediterranean, he will see Vayu a darker, deeper shade than if he has never been out of the northern latitudes.

Tejas is symbolized by a triangle of flame red, the shape and colour being both obviously appropriate. Apas is symbolized by a crescent in silver, alluding to the Moon as ruler of the waters, and their silvery colour when not reflecting the sky or any earthly object. Prithivi is symbolized by a square form of a yellow colour, the stability of earth being denoted by the square or cube; since the perfect form of earth according to the alchemists is gold, the colour yellow is appropriate.

The student should now thoroughly acquaint himself with these forms and endeavour to imagine or visualize them in connection with the manifestation of the appropriate elemental state. Thus when the shades of night are descending and he is sinking to sleep, let him imagine a vast egg-shaped cloud of deep purple light closing round and enveloping him in warm mysterious darkness, the home of dreams. Whenever he looks on the sky, or on the distant hills, tinted to soft shades in the blue air, let him imagine the blue sphere of Vayu floating colossal in size before his eyes; through this see the landscape.

So again if he looks on any fire, whether it be the fire on the domestic hearth, a furnace, a bonfire, or a volcano in eruption, let him imagine the vast red triangle of Tejas before his eyes. Again looking on any water: the sea, a river, lake, or even the water in his own hand basin, let him train himself to see the silver crescent with the points turned upward. Over anything hard and solid let him see the yellow cube of Prithivi, imagining that if the visualized symbol were in solid form it would be like pure gold.

When this exercise has been practiced till some degree of perfection is reached, it can be beneficial to reverse the process thus: take a lump of ice and put it in a heavy saucepan. It should now need no effort to see over it a yellow cube or square. Now bring the pan near a fire; when the surface of the ice begins to melt and water pours down its sides imagine the silver crescent appearing gradually on the yellow square, occupying about one quarter of its area. Make this grow brighter and clearer as the ice becomes liquid; then when the block is nearly melted imagine the silver crescent increasing in size and gradually replacing the yellow square altogether, so that when the ice has liquified the crescent alone remains.

Now put the saucepan on the fire, and watch the water growing hot. As it does so imagine the red triangle of Tejas forming itself on the crescent, just as the crescent did on the square, until when the water boils, the red triangle will have replaced the crescent. As the steam rises and floats into the air the student should similarly see the red triangle becoming charged with the blue circle; this should increase in size and overshadow the triangle entirely as the water is changed into steam. Then as the steam cloud disperses and becomes mere latent moisture in the air, the blue circle should merge into the purple egg of Akasa. This exercise will familiarize the student with the idea of the Tattwa symbols, charged with what are known as their subtattwas.

At this stage it will be useful for him to make a series of cards with the Tattwa symbols. These should be about the size and proportion of playing cards. The length of the symbol should not be more than one half the maximum length of the card: i.e., if the card is four inches long, the symbol should be two inches, leaving an inch above and an inch below it. The symbols should be exactly and carefully cut in coloured paper or painted, the proportions true, and the edges smooth. The cards should be kept scrupulously clean. The student should now train himself when looking at the cards to recall some form of the element to which each is attributed: thus a calm sea with Apas, a rough windy sea with Apas charged with Vayu, a boiling spring with Apas charged with Tejas, etc.

Gradually he will find the symbol and the element belonging to that symbol linked so closely together in his mind that one involuntarily recalls the other: for instance the mere thinking of Tejas will make him feel warm on a cold day.

III. Of the Swara and the Breaths.

Swara is the Spirit, the Soul of the Universe. Or as it is said in the Sanscrit work on the science of breath: 'It is the manifestation of the impression on matter of that power which knows itself'. Therefore it is called the Great Breath. Now breath is dual: out breathing and inbreathing. In the East the technical symbol of out breathing is 'SA', and the point of rest between the two is 'HAM', whence the word HAMSA, which is taken to mean God and which is a symbolic representation of the two eternal processess.

Now as Swara is the Soul of the Universe, it follows that everything that has life must partake of the nature of Swara: we expect to find positive and negative action in the Solar Prana, of which the Tattwas are modifications. Moreover in physical matter prepared for the reception of life --as an egg -- we expect to find a center capable of manifesting the two forms of the life current. Thus in an egg, during incubation, we find the formation of two centers; from these eventually develop the brain-nerve system, and the heart-blood system; each of these has a double function as it develops. So also is it with man, and with every created thing that has life, and even with the world itself.

VOLUME TWO

The Solar Prana comes either direct from the Sun to Earth, or is reflected from the Moon. The former is said to be positive, the latter negative. Therefore when under the influence of Swara, the Solar Prana is positive and the technical name is Sun Breath; when it is negative it is called Moon Breath. The student is advised for the present to regard these merely as technical terms, and not to attempt to trace the analogies farther; the subject is very complex.

The Moon Breath manifested through the Solar Prana is termed IDA and the Sun Breath is called PINGALA; the neutral point of rest between the two is SUSUMNA. Now Ida manifests especially in the nerves on the left side of the body, Pingala in those on the right and Susumna in the central column. Hence it is said that when the Solar Prana is in Ida, if the breath be drawn in with a quick inspiration it is felt chiefly in the left nostril, and if in Pingala in the right.

The student is advised not to put too much store in such experiments at first for: (1) the slightest cold in the head will often prevent or alter the sensations; (2) many illnesses, it is said, bring the breath to the wrong side; (3) the breath can be altered at will so as to be perceptible on one side or the other, as is done in certain magical processes. It should also be understood that the so-called change of breath from one side to the other is more a matter of sensation arising from the functioning of the nerves, than an actual flowing of material air; of all this more will be said hereafter.

Now the course of the breaths in the Solar Prana can be calculated so that it is possible to know exactly what breath is in action at any moment of the day or night. This is judged by the Moon. As is well known, the Moon increases during a fortnight, called the Bright Fortnight. The Bright Fortnight begins from sunrise after the new Moon. Observe -- this must be exact. Thus if the Sun rises at 6 o'clock on a particular morning and the new Moon at 6:30, the Bright Fortnight will begin on the following day at sunrise. The Solar Prana is then in Ida, and the breath will be in the left nostril for the space of two hours (called in Sanscrit one 'Ghari'); then the breath will change to Pingala, and be in the right nostril for another two hours. Alternating throughout the whole twenty-four hours, it passes through twelve Gharis in the course of a day and night.

Between each Ghari occurs Susumna which lasts for about twenty minutes, the transition period, i.e., ten minutes during which the breath is passing from the side which was active to the central position, where it is in both nostrils equally, and ten minutes getting fully developed in the other nostril, with a very brief interval when it is exactly equal in both.

This continues for three days, changing on the fourth day. On the first Ghari after sunrise on the fourth day the Solar Prana is in Pingala, and the breath in the right nostril. On the second Ghari it changes to Ida, and so on for three days. On the seventh day it changes again back to Ida, for the first Ghari. Thus it is clear that the third twenty-four hours will end with Pingala and the fourth will begin with the same. The sixth will end with Ida and the seventh begin with the same. Moreover owing to the increase or decrease of daylight hours the periods of twenty-four hours will not be exact. This course is continued until the full Moon.

At the time of the first sunrise after the full Moon, i.e., the beginning of the Dark Fortnight -- the Solar Prana is in Pingala, whether the preceding term of three days has been completed or not; and the same process is gone through again until the following new Moon. Now during each Ghari the five Tattwas come successively into operation beginning with Akasa. Each therefore will be of about twenty minutes duration. Thus suppose the sun rises at 8 o'clock, Akasa will be current till 8:20, Vayu from 8:20 to 8:40, Tejas from 8:40 to 9:00 and so on. During Ida the Tattwas will be of a negative character, and during Pingala positive.

Moreover each Tattwa is divided into five Subtattwas, the course of which is commenced by a Subtattwa of its own nature. Thus Vayu commences with Vayu charged with Vayu that is the simple Tattwa which lasts for four minutes and is followed by Vayu charged with Tejas, then Vayu with Apas and so on. The last is Vayu-Akasa followed by Tejas charged with Tejas, Tejas charged with Apas etc. These of course are symbolized by the cards the student has already prepared. It will be seen that the Tattwa or breath in operation at any moment of the day or night, of any day in the year, can be instantly and easily calculated.

An adept who is in perfect health and has sufficiently trained his faculties can discover without calculation which Tattwa is in operation by various simple methods. One of these is to place five small balls or marbles, painted with the Tattwa colours, in his pocket and draw out one haphazard; this ball should be of the colour of the Tattwa in operation. Another method is to close the eyes and endeavour to see a colour; the first that comes to the mind should be that of the ruling Tattwa.

As has been said this depends on perfect health, and also training: the student must not expect to attain success until after considerable practice. When he has practiced for some time he will also find that he can perceive the physical effects of the Tattwas at the time when they are in operation. Thus when Vayu functions he may expect a certain feeling of restlessness, in Tejas warmth and energy, in Apas a cold phlegmatic sensation and in Prithivi steadiness and solid strength. These feelings will be very slight and at first, only barely perceptible, but with time and practice they will become more distinct, and may be very useful in determining when to perform certain actions. If a man is making a call and has no reason whatever for leaving at one time or another he is almost certain to go as soon as Vayu is well established.

It will follow that if he desires to do something demanding energy, he had better wait till the Tejas Tattwa, or the Sun Breath is in operation; if a material business is to be commenced it will probably be best done under the Prithivi Tattwa. So again a work of imagination or any negative or receptive undertaking will prosper most under Ida, the Moon Breath.

VOLUME TWO

By making a chart of the Breaths, Tattwas, and Subtattwas through each day for some time, and carefully trying to notice their effect in himself, the student may in short time attain to a very competent knowledge of the subject, and acquire a perception of the course of the Solar Prana which will be of great assistance to him in his future work. But let him beware of prematurely trying to test the existence of the Tattwas by experimenting to see if he can feel them; in so doing he starts with a suggestion to himself that they do not exist. This will infallibly blunt the very delicate instrument of his sensation, and cause the failure of his efforts, as well as loss and damage to his powers.

(N.B. This document is labelled August 1894, and was originally issued to F.L. Gardner, Frater De Profundis ad Lucem. It was supposed to have been circulated in the Outer Order of the Golden Dawn to the initiate of the Philosophus grade. From the Golden Dawn, it passed after the Revolt to almost every other Order founded on its ruins. Some have thought it to be opposed in principle to the Western Tradition espoused by the Order, though the basis for the so-called Skrying in the Spirit Vision was firmly established in this Eastern System.

Those who know something of early Theosophical literature will have perceived that it is either a precis of or an extrapolation from Rama Prasad's most interesting and informative book Nature's Finer Forces. Reading this book is a must. I fancy that at this point in time, it is out of print. A photographic edition has been published by Health Research of Mokelumne Hill in California, making it readily available.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Some have been inclined to the belief that this original book is highly complicated -- though it is no more so than the Qabalah, for example. However, there is an interesting and most useful simplified approach to the whole topic of the Tattwas in The Law of the Rhythmic Breath by Ella Adelia Fletcher (R.F. Fenno & Co., N.Y. 1908), dedicated to Rama Prasad. I do not know if this book is still in print, though used copies may still be available. If a sufficient demand is created, I fancy that Health Research might be persuaded to bring out a photographic edition of this too. I.R.)

General Observation

There are five Tattwas or Principles:

- 1. Akasa -- Ether.
- 2. Vayu -- the Aerial principle.
- 3. Tejas -- the Principle of Light and Heat.
- 4. Apas -- Watery Principle.
- 5. Prithivi -- the Earthy Principle.

But the first Cause of these is the Great Controller of all things, the One Light, the Formless. From Him first came into appearance Ether; thence the Air, the motion producing Ether waves which causes Light and Heat, and so on in the above order.

The Yogi comes to know the principle of these five Tattwas, their Sukshma Sharira, but how? Further on you will see how. The Astrologer who has no knowledge of the Swara is as worthless as a man without a wife. It is the soul itself; it is the Swara, the Great Controller of all, who creates, preserves, and destroys, and causes whatsoever is in this World. Experience and Tradition both say no knowledge is more precious than this knowledge of the Swara. None else lays bare the workings of the machinery of this world, or the secret workings of this world.

By the power of Swara may be destroyed an enemy. Power, wealth, and pleasure, all these can be commanded by Swara. The beginner in our Science must be pure and calm in mind and in thought, virtuous in actions, and having unmixed faith in his spiritual teacher. He must be strong in his determination, and grateful.

Swara in the Body. Ten manifestations of this Swara are in the body. But before the Neophyte is told this, he must gain a thorough knowledge of the nervous system. This is very important, and according to his knowledge of this science, the Neophyte gains success. To give a rough outline of the parts we have chiefly to deal with in our endeavour to explain the elementary treatise. There are ten principal nerves, this includes the tubes, etc. It is in the ten manifestations of Swara that the ten so-called Vayus move. We mean by this ten forces which perform ten different functions. The three most important nerves are the following, as the beginner has only to deal with these:

VOLUME TWO

- 1. Ida, the left bronchus.
- 2. Pingala, the right bronchus.
- 3. Sushumna, in the middle.

The ten Vayus are:

- 1. Prana, in the breast.
- 2. Apana, about the excretory organs.
- 3. Samana, in the navel.
- 4. Udana, middle of the throat.
- 5. Vyana, pervading the whole body.
- 6. Kurmana, the eyes, helping them open.
- 7. Kirkala, in the stomach, producing hunger.
- 8. Nag, whence comes vomiting.
- 9. Devadatta, causes yawning.
- 10. Dhananjaya, that which doth not leave the body after death.

These ten Vayus, or forces, have their play in the ten principal nerves, not one in each. They are the regulators of the body of man. If they go on working properly, a man remains perfectly healthy; if not, different kinds of diseases spring up.

A Yogi keeps them always working, and consequently diseases never come to him. The key to all these nerves lies in the working of the Prana Vayu, or vital principle drawing the air through the Ida, the Pingala, and the Sushumna. When the Air is drawn through the Ida it is felt coming out or going in through the left nostril. When through the Pingala, in the right nostril. When through the Sushumna it is felt through both nostrils simultaneously. The air is drawn or felt through either or both of the nostrils at certain appointed times. Whenever in any given time, the Breath goes in and comes out of the wrong nostril it is a sure sign some sort of disease is coming on.

The Ida is sometimes called the Chandra Nadi, or the Moon Nerve. The Pingala, the Surya Nadi or Sun nerve. These are called, the former, the Chandra Swara and the latter the Surya Swara.

The reason is that when the breath is in the Ida it gives coolness to the body, and that when in the Pingala it gives heat to the body. The Ancient Magi used to say the place of the Moon in the human body was in Ida, and the Sun in Pingala.

The Course of the Breath. The Lunar month, it is well known, is divided into two parts, the fortnight of the Waxing and the fortnight of the Waning. On the first fortnight, or the Bright Fortnight, just at Sunrise of the first day the Breath must come into the left nostril and must be so for the three succeeding days, when again the 7th day must begin with the Moon breath, and so on in the same order. Thus we have said that such and such days begin with such and such breath.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

But how long is our breath to remain in one nostril? For five Gharis, or 2 hours. Thus when the first day of the Bright fortnight begins with the Moon Breath, after five Gharis, the Sun Breath must set in, and this again must change into the Moon Breath after the same interval of time. So on for every day.

Again, the first day of the dark fortnight must begin with the Sun Breath, and proceed in the same way, changing after five Gharis and the three succeeding days. It will be seen that all the days of the month have been divided into the Ida and the Pingala. In the Sushumna, the Swara flows only when it changes, either in its natural course or in certain other conditions to be afterwards mentioned. This is the course of Nature. But a Yogi commands Nature. He turns everything into his own way. Rules for this will be given in the proper place. (Coloured illustrations of the tattwas will be found in the colour plate section of this book).

COURSE OF THE TATTWAS

For five Gharis, as we have above said, the breath flows through our nostrils. In these 5 Gharis, or two hours periods, the Tattwas have their course. In the first we have Akasa, in the second Vayu, in the third Tejas, in the fourth Apas, in the fifth Prithivi. Thus in one night and day, or 60 Gharis, we have twelve courses of these 5 Tattwas, each remaining one Ghari and returning again in two hours. There are again further five subdivisions of each Tattwa in a Ghari. Thus, Akasa is subdivided into Akas-Akasa; Akas-Vayu; Akas-Tejas; Akas-Apas; Akas-Prithivi and similarly with the other four.

How to know which of the Tattwas is at a certain time in course, not merely by a mathematical calculation but with the certainty of an eye witness, is of the greatest importance in the practical part of this science. We shall come to it further on.

The Ida. When the Breath is in Ida, that is in the left Nostril, then only is it well to perform the following actions. Stable works such as erecting a building, or the construction of a well or tank, going on a distant journey, entering a new house, collection of things, giving gifts, marriage, making jewels or clothes, taking medicines and tonics, seeing a superior or master for any purpose of trade, amassing of wealth, sowing of seed in a field, negotiations, commencement of trade, seeing of friends, works of charity and faith, going home, buying of animals, doing work for the benefit of others, placing money on security, singing, dancing, taking up abode in any village or city, drinking or making water at the time of sorrow, pain, fever, etc. All these acts should be done when the Swara is in Ida. It must however be kept in mind that the Tattwas Vayu and Tejas are to be excluded from these actions, likewise Akasa.

During the Tattwas Prithivi and Apas only, are these actions to be done. In a fever, the Yogi keeps his Chandra Swara going, and brings the Apas or Water Tattwa in course, so the fever is all over in a very short time. How mastery is gained over the Tattwas will come further on.

The Pingala. In the Surya Swara only, are the following actions to be done. Reading and teaching hard and difficult subjects of knowledge, sexual intercourse, shipping, hunting, mounting a hill or fort, riding a donkey, camel or horse, swimming over a powerful stream or river, writing, painting, buying and selling, fighting with swords or hands, seeing a king, bathing, eating, shaving, bleeding, sleeping, such like. All these secure success and health, as the case may be, if done in the Surya Swara.

VOLUME TWO

The Sushumna. When the Breath comes not out of both nostrils at the same time, it is flowing in the Sushumna. Nothing ought to be done under these conditions, for everything turns out badly. The same is the case when the Breath is now in one and now in the other nostril. When this is the case, sit down and meditate upon or over the Sacred Hansa. This joining of the Breath is the only time for Sandha, meditation.

NOTE: Zanoni secured success in gaming for Cetosa and overcame the effects of the poisoned wine of the Prince di D. as follows. In the first place, he changed his breath to the right nostril, and threw an envelope of the Akasa Tattwa over his antagonist, who consequently became all empty, the money in gaming flowing towards the Surya Swara. In the latter case he brought the Water, Apas, Tattwa into course, directed it with the full force of his trained will towards the poisoned wine, and consequently the burning heat of the poison was counteracted for a very long time, and before it could recover strength enough to act on the system, it was there no longer. S.R.M.D.

THE TATTWA

To each of the five Tattwas a special colour has been assigned. Akasa -- Black or Indigo. Vayu -- Blue. Tejas -- Red. Apas -- Silver. Prithivi -- Yellow. It is by these colours that a practical man finds on the spur of the moment which Tattwa is at the time in course. Besides, these Tattwas have different shapes and tastes. These figures are seen by taking a bright mirror and letting the breath fall upon it, as it comes out of the Nose. The divided part takes one of the following forms according to the Tattwa then in course. Prithivi -- a square. Apas, a crescent. Tejas, a triangle. Vayu, a sphere. Akasa, egg shaped. To sum up their qualities:

Prithivi -- moves always in the middle of the Paths of Air and Water. Apas -- downwards, straight through the nose. Tejas -- upwards. Vayu -- obliquely towards the right or left arm, as the case may be. Akasa -- transversely always.

Tattwa	Colour	Form	Taste	Distance of Breath under Nostril	Principle
Prithivi	Yellow	Square	Sweet	12 fingers	Bulky
Apas	Silver	Crescent	Astringent	16 fingers	Cold
Vayu	Blue	Sphere	Acid	8 fingers	Moving
Tejas	Red	Triangle	Hot tastes	4 fingers	Hot
Akasa	Indigo	Oval	Bitter	Upwards	All pervading

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Tests of the Tattwas. For practice, take five little bullets or counters coloured: red, yellow, blue, silver, and black. Place or carry them in a pocket. Now let him close his eyes and at random take one of them out of his pocket. The colour of the bullet will be that of the Tattwa in course. While still keeping the eyes closed let him see if the colour of the bullet floats before the eyes.

He must not suppose he will be correct immediately. Eventually the confusion will disappear, and well defined colours, more or less stable, will appear before him so that the colour of the bullet will be the same as that floating before his eyes. Then he will have gained the power of knowing which of the Tattwas is in course, and can at will find them.

There is a special method of the concentrating the mind and practising with the eyes for this purpose, which will come with practice.

Let him ask any of his friends to imagine a flower. He will only have to shut his eyes to find the Tattwa then in course and he can astonish his friends by naming the colour of the flower. Again if a man sitting amongst his friends finds the Vayu active let him ascertain those of his friends who are healthy mentally and physically wish to go away. Let him ask them to answer frankly and they will say 'yes'.

In what way other Tattwas affect both the body and mind of man will be stated later. Some higher secrets are deliberately reserved for those who safely and honestly pass the elementary stage. When one has reached the stage of finding at Will any of the Tattwas, do not imagine you have become perfect.

If one goes on practising his inner sight becomes keener so that he will recognize the five Tattwic subdivisions. Continue with the meditations and innumerable shades of colour will be recognized according to the different proportions of the Tattwas. His work will be tedious while he is trying to distinguish between the different shades of colour. Tedious at first because when the many shades of colour become fixed and defined by persevering practice he will see an ever changing rainbow of the most beautiful shades of colour and for a time this will be sufficient food for his mind.

To avoid the tediousness meditate upon the breath as is laid down in the chapter on meditation on the Tattwas.

Action to be taken during the different Tattwas. Actions of a sedate and stable nature as enumerated under the Chandra Swara are best done during the course of Prithivi, the earthy principle. Those of a fleeting nature which are to be done and gone through quickly should be done during Apas. Actions such as a man has to make of a violent struggle to hold his own, are best done during Tejas. If a Yogi wishes to kill a man he should do so with the Vayu Tattwa. In the Akasa, nothing should be done but meditation, as works begun during this Tattwa always end badly. Works of the above nature only prosper in the specified Tattwas; and those whose actions prosper may see this by experiment.

VOLUME TWO

MEDITATION AND MASTERY OVER THE TATTWAS

We have previously given summary rules for distinguishing the various colours of the different Tattwas. But now we are going to explain the final method of mastering the Tattwas and of practising. This is a secret which was only imparted to the most promising Adepts of Yoga. But a short practise will fully show the important results to be gained by this practise.

By degrees the student will become able to look into the future at will and have all the visible world before his eyes, and he will be able to command Nature.

During the day when the sky is clear let him once or twice for about an hour or two withdraw his mind from all external things, and sitting on a easy chair let him fix his eyes on any particular part of the blue sky and continue gazing without allowing the eyes to blink. At first he will see the waves of the water, the watery vapour in the atmosphere. Some days later as the eyes become more practised he will see different sorts of buildings, etc. in the air. When the Neophyte reaches this state of practice he is sure of success.

After this he will see different sorts of mixed colours of Tattwas in the sky, which will show themselves in their proper and respective Tattwic colours.

To test the truth of this the Neophyte should occasionally close his eyes during the practise, and compare what is floating in the sky with that which he sees inwardly. When both are the same the operation is right. Other tests have been given before and other wonders will present themselves later to the Yogi. This practise is to be done in the day time.

For the night, let the student rise about 2 AM. when everything is calm, when there is no noise and when the cold light of the stars breathe holiness and a calm rapture enters into the soul of man. Let him wash his hands, feet, the crown of his head, and the nape of his neck with cold water. Let him put his shin bones to the ground and let the back of the thighs touch his calves, and let him put his hands upon his knees, his fingers pointing toward the body. Let him now fix his eyes on the tip of his nose. To avoid tediousness he must always meditate on the inhalation and exhalation of his breath.

Besides the above this has many other advantages described elsewhere. It may be said here, by constant practise one is able to develop two distinct syllables in his thought. It is evident that when a man inhales a sound is produced like HAN. When exhaling the sound is SA. By constant practise, the breath becomes associated with these sounds so that effortlessly the mind understands HANSA in relationship to the Tattwas. Thus we see that one full breath makes HANSA which is the name of the Ruler of the Universe together with His Powers. They are exerted during natural phenomena. At this stage of perfection the Yogi should commence as follows.

Getting up at 2 or 3 in the morning and washing himself in the aforementioned manner, let him know and fix his mind upon the Tattwa then in course. If the Tattwa be Prithivi at that moment, think of it as something that is a yellow square, sweet smelling, small in size and able to eliminate all disease. Let him at the same time say LAM. It is very easy to imagine this.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Much the same is true of the other Tattwas which are described in the chart above, which the student should again consult. However, be aware that the words VAM are related to Apas, RAM to Tejas, PAM to Vayu, and HAM to Akasa.

By diligent practise these syllables become definitely associated with the Tattwas. When he repeats them the special Tattwa appears with as much force as he may will, and thus it is that a Yogi can cause whatever he likes -- lightning, rain, wind, etc.

CURE OF DISEASES

Every disease causes the breath to flow out of the wrong nostril and the wrong Tattwa to come into course. When the breath is therefore restored to the proper nostril, and the proper Tattwa has been brought into course, do not expect that that is all to be done. If the disease be obstinate and the attack a violent one, one will have to persevere a long time before success is gained.

If success does not come quickly resort to use of the appropriate medications and Swara will soon be restored.

You may notice the Chandra Swara is generally the best for the cure of any disease. Its flow is an indication of the soundness of health. In colds, coughs and other diseases this Swara should flow.

No one Tattwa or Swara causes pain if it flows properly. In this state it should not be unduly meddled with, but when any one Tattwa or Swara becomes overdominant and causes disease it should be changed at once. Experience shows that the Apas and the Prithivi Tattwas are the only ones generally good for health. Indeed the fact that during the course of the Apas Tattwa the breath is felt 16 fingers breadth below the nose and during the Prithivi 12 fingers, argues that at those times there is a more sound and powerful working of body functions than when it is felt only 8 or 4 or no finger breadths below the nose.

Akasa therefore is the worst for health and when sick one would find Akasa, Vayu, or Tejas in course.

When need be therefore proceed in the following manner. After having changed the breath from the wrong nostril to the proper one, generally the left, and pressing the opposite by a cushion so that it may not change readily again, sit on an easy chair and bind the left thigh a little above the knee joint with a handkerchief. Shortly he will perceive that the Tattwa changes to the one immediately below it and so on; and then the next, etc. If he be an acute observer of bodily conditions he will perceive that slowly his mind is becoming more easy. Then let him tighten his bandage still more. When at last he reaches Prithivi, he will find his health a great deal better. Let him persevere in this state or still better the Apas Tattwa for some time, and return to it occasionally for some days even after the disease has disappeared. Undoubtly he will be cured.

VOLUME TWO

FORECAST OF FUTURITY

Although a Yogi obtains the power of knowing everything that is, has been, or is to be, beyond the reach of the senses, yet generally he becomes indifferent to such knowledge. He forgets himself in his eternal presence before the Light, which breathes beauty into all we see in the world. We shall therefore represent him here revealing if not all his knowledge of futurity then only specific questions put to him by others. But our Neophytes may as well put the questions themselves, and then answer them according to the laws here laid down.

When a Yogi is asked a question, let him:

- (a) Determine what Tattwa is in course. If it be Prithivi then the question is about something in the vegetable kingdom or where the element earth is dominant.
- (b) If it be Apas the question relates to life, birth, death, etc.
- (c) If Tejas the question concerns metals, gain or loss, etc.
- (d) If Akasa the questioner has nothing to ask.
- (e) If Vayu it relates to a journey.

These are but elementary things. The practical Yogi who can distinguish between the mixture of the Tattwas can name the particular things.

Now let him determine through which of his nostrils the breath is flowing, which is the fortnight then in course of passing, which the days and what direction of himself, the enquirer.

If the breath comes through the left nostril, to secure complete success the work which is the subject of the question and which will be specified under IDA, he must have the following coincidences. The fortnight must be bright. The day must be even, the direction must be east or north. If these things coincide the questioner will get what he wants.

Again if the Surya and Swara coincide with a dark fortnight, the day odd, the direction south and west, a similar result will be predicted, but only partially. The action will be of the sort described under Pingala.

If any of these coincide, the success will vary. It must be remembered that the breath at the time must not be flowing through the wrong nostril.

If the wrong Swara is at the commencement of the day the wrong Swara arises, the Lunar for the Solar or vice versa, one may expect something wrong. If it happens the first day there is sure to be some sort of anxiety. If the second some loss of money. If the third there will be a journey. If the fourth some dear object will be destroyed. If the fifth, loss of Kingdom. If the sixth loss of everything. If the seventh illness and pain are sure to come. If the eighth, death.

If the Sun breath flows in the morning and at noon, and the Moon in the evening, a sad discomforture will result, the reverse being a sign of Victory.

If a man, about to travel which coincides in direction with the empty nostril at the time, he will not get what he desires.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

ALCHEMY

By

V.H. FRATER A.M.A.G.

There are within the Knowledge Lectures innumerable references to Alchemy, and there are some minor elucidations of alchemical terms with diagrams of one type or another. There were some so-called Flying Rolls on the subject - non-official papers written either by the Chiefs or by some of the more well-informed members. None of them are really illuminating and throw very little light on the subject. Finally, there is the section on Alchemy in that most remarkable document Z-2, which essentially breaks down the Neophyte Ritual into a variety of many points which can then be applied to different topics. One of them was Alchemy. But unless you obtained an alchemical orientation from some other source, (such as from Frater Albertus of the Paracelsus College in Salt Lake City, Utah) that schema was not going to be very illuminating.

Yet, historical data are firm in their statement that some of the Rosicrucian societies that sprang up in Germany some considerable time after the appearance of the three Rosicrucian manifestoes did actually teach Alchemy. But the Golden Dawn did not, to the best of my knowledge - apart from the above named references.

Yet in recent months I have heard from a Temple descended from the original Felkins group affirming that Alchemy has been and still is taught as part of their basic Rosicrucian Curriculum. Beyond that affirmative information I have no specific knowledge of what that entails. But it is encouraging to learn that this particular branch of Occult knowledge is not being neglected by the Order.

One of the older clerical members of the Order, the Rev. W. Ayton, who is usually but probably unfairly described as a doddering old dreamer, did practice or experiment with

VOLUME TWO

Alchemy. What he did with it and what he accomplished is not known to the world at large. But rumor has it that he and some other clerics of the Golden Dawn were Latin scholars who translated some of the more famous hermetic texts into English. Apparently they were not anxious to be identified with that subject - no doubt for fear of censure from their ecclesiastical superiors. So, rumor has it, they turned over their translations to Arthur E. Waite who then claimed to be the editor and translator, and published them, (under his own name). The Aquarian Press in England has announced its intention to publish The Ayton Papers which are the letters of the Rev. W.A. Ayton to Frederick Leigh Gardner who was Frater De Profundis ad Lucem (to whom many of the papers used in this Complete Golden Dawn System of Magic were issued) - letters extending from 1889 to 1904. It is too soon to evaluate the value of these letters, but by mid-summer 1984 the book should be issued so that later in this series mention can be made of it. My only fear is that Ellic Howe is the editor of that book - and I have previously expressed myself in no uncertain terms what I think about Mr. Howe's editing. That is, it is full of prejudice and bias. [See Suster's superb critique of Howe in What You Should Know About The Golden Dawn, Falcon Press, 1983.]

Be that as it may, Alchemy was recognized if not actively taught in the Golden Dawn. Several of its members did do some active literary work on older manuscripts and books, many of which were published as volumes of the Collectanea Chemica, some of which are being reprinted in this day and age.

A friend of mine, Hans Nintzel of Dallas, Texas, has written several illuminating and simple papers on Alchemy, and he has granted me permission to quote bits here and there which may finally give us some clear and basic definitions of Alchemy.

Mr. Nintzel holds. . ."Alchemy is the Western tradition as is Qabalah, despite very strong ties to Eastern tradition. The relation of the various metals to the planets is pure Qabalah. . .In concluding this study, we can state that Astrology reveals WHO you are, Qabalah reveals WHERE you are going, and Alchemy provides the MEANS of getting there. . .A one word definition of Alchemy would be Evolution. That is to say, the spiritual development from base, dense states to that higher vibratory rate where joyous communion with the Creator exists. This applies to all created matter, minerals and metals as well as man. The purpose of the alchemist then, is to hasten this evolution. To speed the spiritual growth of all of God's creatures."

Several years ago I wrote an article on alchemy in which is to be found the argument: "The alchemists of olden time were spiritually enlightened - not merely blind and stupid workers or seekers in the chemistry laboratory. This fact must never be forgotten. They sought to perfect all phases of man - his body, his mind, and his spirit. No one of these aspects of the total organism should be neglected. It was their belief that man is indefinitely perfectable. They were highly religious, and not disposed to deceive and swindle the treasury of the country in which they lived.

"Art perfects what nature began. Man, and all the gross and subtle constituents of nature unaided fails to achieve this perfection. Evolution may ultimately succeed, though the time factor seems so preposterously slow when one watches through recorded history, the cumbersome, the appallingly slow, progress of mankind. So the alchemists sought to intervene by their art - to speed up the process of growth and evolution, and so to aid God's work."

The following is an essay written on Alchemy, by Hans Nintzel; it is quoted in full with his kind permission.

ALCHEMY

By

HANS W. NINTZEL

"Lately there is a revival of interest in Alchemy. Whereas a few years ago, the very word was hardly mentioned in polite conversation, we are now seeing an occasional article or book being devoted to the subject. We even find Alchemy being taught as a subject in some Universities. Accordingly, it seems well to set down some basic ideas to explain what Alchemy is, its roots, and perhaps, what it is not. This Holy Science is of such great importance, even more so today than it was yesterday, that a great many readers may profit by some additional ideas on this seemingly recondite subject. We can start with the universal idea that alchemists are those who turn lead into gold. While there is the seed of truth in this notion, there is much more to it than that. And what can be more valuable than gold? In fact, if you asked this question, you are really in need of Alchemy.

First of all, the alchemists, modern and medieval, followed a certain credo. Their goal was to alleviate the suffering of their fellow man. Physically and spiritually. One such means was to produce medicines that could aid man's progress in both realms. That is, a medicine or 'Elixir' could be made that produced a dichotomous effect in that physical problems could be alleviated from the usage of an alchemically produced medicine. Moreover, this elixir could act as the agent to purge the body of those dross matters that inhibited the finer vibrations from being received. While Alchemy was definitely an attempt to demonstrate, from the physical viewpoint, experimentally and on the material plane, the validity of certain philosophical views of the Universe, its end goal was the exaltation of its subjects. That subject, in addition to others, was man himself.

A one word definition of Alchemy would be 'evolution.' This in turn can be thought of as being synonymous with 'transmutation,' although this latter term has a connotation of instantaneous action. By evolution we mean the (usually) gradual change of something from a base or coarse existence into something finer, more noble. In the mineral kingdom, the age-old analogy quickly comes to mind, that is: lead becomes gold. However, this concept is also extended to the animal kingdom and man. That is, man in his crude, self-centred, ignoble state can be transmuted into a fine, loving, God-centred person. A more spiritual person. Everyone, I am sure, can relate to this idea and, in fact, many of us, deep down, yearn for this evolution, this transmutation. We may not think of it in terms of Alchemy, but who has never felt that call to rid themselves of the coarse outer garments and become more spiritual, closer to the Creator? This is the goal of Alchemy, this transmutation, this evolution. However, the alchemist takes these ideas a few steps further and declares that ALL things are evolving. Not only man, but all creatures in all kingdoms. Plants and herbs are evolving, cats and dogs are evolving, rocks and metals are evolving, in fact, this entire planet is in a state of upward evolution. The earth aspires to become enlightened, like the Sun.

VOLUME TWO

This perhaps startling concept is fundamental to Alchemy. It says, among other things, that all base creatures are gradually becoming finer creatures. Man is evolving from his base, brute-like beginnings to a beautiful, saintly creature. Metals are evolving from their base beginnings, as lead, to a more noble existence as gold. Nor does anything have to be done to insure this transmutation or evolution. Slowly, but surely, ALL things will arrive at their zenith on the evolutionary scale. It is as if we were on a huge upwinding spiral. This spiral slowly winds its way 'heavenward.' If nothing was done to hasten this evolutionary action, or to impede it, one day all would arrive at the goal: full spiritual evolution. However, by alchemical processes, this evolution in all creatures can be hastened. That is, man can volitionally speed up the cycle of evolution for himself or for other creatures creatures unable to have any effect on their own spiritual growth.

By the same token, God has given man free will and with this, man can impede his own progress. At given times, as we look about us, we suspect that the evolutionary process has turned into a devolution. This is NOT the case, although individuals can elect to sink back into the material mire from which others struggle to escape. Another way of looking at this is to state that the purpose of Alchemy is to raise the rate of vibrations of both the practitioner (man) and his subjects. These subjects may be medicaments or mineral compositions. Just how one can use Alchemy to more rapidly approach Divinity will be touched on, but let us look briefly at the history of alchemy first.

Some ideas about the roots of Alchemy may provide a stronger foundation upon which other ideas and understanding can be built. Looking to the past, we find that Egyptian goldsmiths existed about 3000 B.C. and around 3500 B.C., Sumerian metalworkers practised their trade in Mesopotamia. In China and India, in remote times, (as well as today, of course), gold was looked upon as a magical medicine. Alchemical ideas arose in China as early as the fifth century B.C. Chinese Alchemy is closely allied with Taoism, a system containing philosophy and religion. They believed in the curative, and even life-extending properties of jade, pearl and cinnabar. These ideas were picked up by subsequent practitioners of the art, moving to Greece, through Europe and finally, through other parts of the western world - ideas that are as strong today as they were then. Alchemy was also as indicated above, in Greece. It is known that during the Alexandrian period, 4th to 7th century A.D., Alchemy flourished. As did other cultures, the Greeks added to the body of Alchemy, various ideas and practices peculiar to themselves.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Just precisely where Alchemy originated is not really known. The most likely theory holds that the ancient Egyptians, who were known to be skilled in chemical knowledge, including metallurgy, glass-tinting and dyeing, were perhaps the founders of the art as we know it today. Egypt was known as KHEM, the "dark land." Thus, Al-Khem was the Islamic term for the father of the dark earth and this phrase was westernised into Al-Chemy. Further, there is a body of literature referring to Hermes Trismegistos as being the father of Alchemy. Hermes, whilst essentially a Greek god, is the analog of Thoth, the Egyptian Ibis-headed god. Doberman, in his book, The Goldmakers, suggests that Alchemy commenced with the inhabitants of Atlantis. That when this continent submerged during cataclysms of the earth, there were those who escaped and tenanted the deltas of the Euphrates and Indus, on the north shore of the Arabian sea, and further inland at the head of the Persian gulf. The people, tall and black-haired, eventually mixed with the tribes of the Near East. The Hebrews referred to them as Sumerians. They knew how to work with tin, gold, silver, copper, lead, antimony, and iron. Copper and tin produced the bronze so common to the Sumerians and the Indus civilisations. Artifacts were discovered here such as leaden goblets, iron daggers and a vase made of pure antimony. The Sumerians then set out to that land now known as Egypt, bringing with them their arts. It is from the Sumerians then, that the inhabitants of Egypt learned their crafts, the arcane arts of Alchemy.

Whatever its origin, certain basic ideas are found to be common to all the cultures in which Alchemy flourished. One such idea is the principle of the four elements as being the basic foundation of all Alchemy. In China, we find five elements, but the notion is the same. The philosophy of the four elements is classically attributed to Aristotle who postulated the existence of four fundamental 'qualities' imbued in all bodies. These were the hot and moist, along with their opposites, the cold and dry. To these 'qualities' were assigned the symbolism of the four material elements, fire, air, water, and earth. They were seen as having their origin via conjunctions of these four properties. It might be noted that the symbol for fire is opposite to the symbol of water and water is the inversion or opposite of fire. The symbol for air is the fire symbol with a line through it. If we combine the polar opposites, with their dual aspects, we obtain a familiar symbol of the Shield of Solomon. the Hexagram. It is the symbol of the unity of the opposites.

These qualities, as symbolised by the four elements are also associated with certain physical aspects. That is, the element of Fire reflects heat or thermal emissions. Air is associated with gases. Water with all liquids, and Earth with all solids. Bodies, then, were thought of as being constituted of the four elements in varying proportions. This gave rise to the idea that one body could be transformed into another simply by altering the proportion of one or more of these elements. Associated with this idea was the concept of a "Prima Materia," a primordial matter or basic building stuff. This was the fundamental essence from which all other substances were made. Also, all substances or matter could be reduced to this lowest common denominator, this prima materia. It was now a mere extrapolation to consider reducing a base metal, such as lead, to its prima materia, then adding to it the proper amounts of elemental matter to change it to a different substance, i.e., gold. The idea of a prima materia is a basic concept extant in Indian literature under the name of 'Mulaprakriti.' In Chinese alchemy, we find this idea expressed as 'T'ai Chi.' These very basic Alchemical theories were further refined and expanded in the course of time, and they gave rise to certain ideas that are with us today. That is, the principle that all things are composed of three essential constituents or bases. These three, known in Indian literature as the 'three Gunas,' are called by alchemists, 'Sulphur,' 'Salt,' and 'Mercury.' The ancient alchemists were prone to veil their writings in obscure symbolism, mythology and various blinds. In this case, the principle of Sulphur is not common sulphur or brimstone. Salt did not indicate common table salt (sodium chloride), nor did Mercury reflect the matter found in thermometers, quicksilver. There was an analog between these, but definitely not a one-to-one relationship. This blind hindered many a budding alchemist. It is interesting to note that one of these, Mercury, was referred back to the four elements and known as the 'Quintessence/ a fifth principle, as found in Chinese Alchemy where there are five elements: water, fire, wood, metal and earth. Now, the quintessence is also the prima materia, the T'ai Chi. It is from this UNITY, this ONE, that the law of Polarity is derived. The 'ONE' is God, the Divinity, the All.

The duality of the law of Polarity is exemplified in Chinese alchemy as the 'Yin' and the 'Yang.' The female and the male, negativity and positivity, passivity or receptivity and dynamism or action. Yin and Yang were also associated with the moon and sun, respectively, while the five elements were associated with certain planets: Water with Mercury, Fire with Mars, Wood with Jupiter, Metals with Venus, and Earth with Saturn. Yin and Yang, the pair of opposites, are embodied in many religious and alchemical philosophies. They are the Isis and Osiris of Egyptian mythology, the Mercury and Sulphur of Alchemy, the concepts of hot and cold, good and evil, love and hate, etc, etc. In today's 'alchemical circle' there is a maxim that combines all of these ideas. This maxim is stated as: "The One became two by the law of Polarity which is revealed within the three essentials that will be found within the four elements, wherein is to be found the Quintessence which is not of the four but one of the three."

The principle of Sulphur is the principle of combustion. It is the colour of subjects, in plants it gives the odour. The Arabic alchemist, Geber, said sulphur is the "fatness." Alchemists attributed to sulphur the principle of the soul, the consciousness. In a 'tincture' it is what tincts. It is the vitality in animals and has the role of coagulation, to concentrate the life-force. It is red, hot, masculine, active and is symbolised by the Sun. It is associated with Gold. The vital life-force or 'prana' is the Mercury. The Yin or feminine aspect, Mercury, endows gold with its lustre, even as Sulphur endows it with its colour. Mercury is the basis for gold's malleability and fusibility. Mercury is the Spirit, the 'Water of the Wise,' the Prima Materia, Luna, the seed or sperm of all things. Where Sulphur exhibits itself as an oily substance, Mercury is a volatile liquid in its corporeal forms. In the plant world, alcohol is the vehicle for the life-force, for Mercury. Sulphur, in the plant world, is the essential oils contained therein. Finally, Salt is the body of all matter. It is the basic principle of fixity and solidification. It confers resistance to the fire. In the plant world, the salt is the ash of the burned or calcined plant, usually a grey-to-white 'salty' substance. It is the medium in which Sulphur and Mercury can combine.

This 'chemical marriage' is brought about by the catalytic action of the Salt to bring Sulphur and Mercury to their earthly state. This union of the opposites, this marriage of the Sun and Moon, is the state sought after by alchemists. Such a state can be arrived at in all the kingdoms. Now, since all things already consist of these three principles, it is logical to say that one thing can be changed to another by varying the proportion of these principles. That is, as Basil Valentine wrote: "Iron is found to have the least portion of Mercury but more of Sulphur and Salt. . .Copper is generated of much Sulphur but its Mercury and Salt are in equality. . .Saturn (Lead) is generated of little Sulphur, little Salt and much gross, unripe Mercury while Gold hath digested and refined the Mercury to a perfect ripeness." What Valentine is saying is that the metals are different due to the different proportions of the three essentials. In more modern parlance, consider the fact that if one brought together one proton and one electron and one neutron, an atom of 'heavy hydrogen' would be produced. Now, if we changed the proportions of these three 'essentials' by adding, for example, one additional proton and one additional electron, we would have an atom other than hydrogen. These subject matters are both gases but have very different characteristics. So, by changing the ratio of the essentials, we have wound up with different matters. A transformation has taken place. It is conceded that making hydrogen into helium is no small task. However, in 1941 the physicists, Sherr, Bainbridge, and Anderson, succeeded in transmuting a radioactive isotope of mercury (quicksilver) into pure gold. To be sure, the cost of doing this was prohibitive, and a linear accelerator had to be employed. But the point is, it was done. A transmutation had taken place. We can put a cap on these ideas with a statement by an ancient alchemist, Eirenaeus Philalethes, who encapsulated a very fundamental idea of Alchemy with these words in his book, The Metamorphosis Of Metals, "All metallic seed is the seed of gold, for gold is the intention of nature in regard to all metals. . .all metals are potentially gold."

At this point we have made a case that all things, consist of three essentials, Sulphur, Salt and Mercury. This Trinity is also found in religion, mythology and symbolism. We have the physical properties of solids, liquids and gases, Father, Son and Holy Ghost, the three Graces, the three Furies, the three Fates, Fire, Water and Earth, Osiris, Horus and Isis, Brahma, Shiva, Vishnu, the Law of the Triangle, protons, neutrons and electrons, and so forth. Some of these analogies are a little less than direct, but the general idea underlying them holds true. But how can this be used in our daily lives? What good can come from this? What are the practicalities? To fully answer these questions would require a book, but we can give at least one set of ideas on how Alchemy can enrich our lives. Moreover, we can get some inkling as to how it will affect not only our physical well-being, but exert a parallel salutary effect on our 'spiritual lives.'

VOLUME TWO

First, we must state that Alchemy as a discipline, has as its foundations, certain other disciplines. These are Astrology, Magic and Qabalah. One cannot be a good Alchemist without being a good Qabalist. One cannot be a good Qabalist without being adept at Magic and one cannot be adept at Magic not having a background in Astrology. We will give some ideas of how the fundamentals of Magic, Qabalah and Astrology play a vital role in Alchemical work. But before that, let us briefly consider one of the ancient writers on Alchemy, Gerhard Dorn. Dorn was a disciple of the great Paracelsus and wrote some very cogent observations on Alchemy. It has to be recognised that Dorn did not have the psychological insights we have today, nor even the extensive vocabulary to fully express his ideas. However, his fundamental beliefs can be easily understood as evidenced by his writings translated by Louise-Marie von Franz in her book: Alchemist Active Imagination, she indicates that Dorn wrote: "Through study (of alchemical literature) one acquires knowledge, through knowledge, love; which creates in oneself experience, virtue and power, through which the miraculous work is done and the work in nature is of this quality." Von Franz explains that what Dorn means is that by simple alchemical literature, one attains "love." This "love" is a kind of unconscious fascination, where one now begins to understand, becomes passionate, about finding the "truth."

The import of this is very dramatic even though Dorn's material did not come across as explosive. The gist of it is that the very process of DOING something, actual laboratory work, meditation on Alchemy or even the innocuous activity of reading alchemical literature, causes something to happen in the practitioner. Let's suppose one is working with physical Alchemy such that he is "cooking" something up in the laboratory, or even in his kitchen. He is making some sort of transmutation take place in his retort or pans. Actually, Dorn is saying that TWO transmutations are taking place. One that is visible, in the retort, and one not visible, in the practitioner. Moreover, that as the work continues, this transmutation accelerates such that there is a feedback loop generated. That is, the more one does the work, of any kind, the greater will be the success. This may sound like a simple case of practice makes perfect. This is not what Dorn means. What he is saying is best shown by an example.

Consider two people. One, a chap who has been doing some kind of alchemical activity, reading or simple experiments of some sort. The other man has not done anything in Alchemy whatsoever. The first man then decides to try a different experiment. He wants to take a substance A and add it to a substance B to make substance C. He pours A into B and behold. He has C. Not all that impressive except, the second man comes along and, using the same substances, the same equipment, he fails to come up with C. Why? Because, the inner transmutation has not been going on in him as it has in the first person. A subtle change has occurred in the first person that allows his experiment to be a success. This change is VERY subtle, possibly not even discernible to the individual. But it takes place nonetheless, and to the degree that the practitioner has conditioned or prepared himself. If he has been making elixirs to purge his physical being of dross in order to be more receptive to higher vibrations, the changes will be proportionately more pronounced.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Further, von Franz also cites the Arab alchemist, Ibn Sina, who wrote that through ECSTASY, man could acquire some of the capacity of God. That is, through such practices as meditation, alchemy, ritual, etc, one can achieve a state of mind Ibn Sina calls "ecstasy." In this state one can, even for a brief moment, have powers analagous to those of God. Sufis also obtained this state through physical practices such as dancing or whirling, (i.e., the 'whirling dervishes'). Today, we know that this exalted state, wherein things 'happen' can be achieved through techniques such as Magic as exemplified by Qabalah. Dom Pernety's book, The Great Art, contains a reference to indicate that the ancient Rosicrucians blended Alchemy and Qabalah into a cohesive system. Further, their mysticism was based on truths that they were able to demonstrate in the laboratory. We can see some strong evidence then, that there IS a connection between Magic, Qabalah and Astrology

It was stated that in Alchemy one can make various medicaments; that these elixirs have a salutary effect both physically and spiritually. The base matters used for such medicines can be plants or herbs or various metals. But where does one start? What herb, for example, can one use for some specific ailment? Or what metal? Our answers come from a knowledge of Qabalah-Magic, specifically knowledge of that mighty glyph known as the Tree of Life, and from the laws of Astrology. For example, Astrology tells us that those people born under the same 'sign' will exhibit the same characteristics. That is, an individual born in early April is under the sign of Aries. Others born under this sign will tend to have similar traits, such as being dynamic, head-strong, jumping from one interest to another without finishing the first, etc. Aries is a zodiacal 'picture' that has in it the planet Mars. This picture composed of stars, sends rays or influences to the earth. The sun acts as a step-down transformer and absorbs some of these rays, dispersing the rest to earth. It is these stellar influences that 'imprint' a person at the moment of birth, and what other positions were maintained by the other planets, these are the influences which make him who he (or she) is. By careful study of these planetary configurations, one can determine why they are who they are.

What is perhaps new to the reader is the idea that not only are there Arian and Libran people, there are also Arian and Libran plants and minerals. The other kingdoms also come under the dominion of the astral influences. And this is where the key to making medicines alchemically comes in. For instance, we know that the planet Mercury 'rules' the nervous system. We can determine that Mercury also rules the herbs valerian and marjoram. Further, the planet Mercury rules over the condition known as insomnia. So then, if we had a nervous condition or had insomnia, what herb would possibly make a good medicine for these problems? Valerian or marjoram, because they are 'correspondences' in that they have the same ruler. We can take this a step further, the planet Mercury rules over Wednesday. It is a simple matter to reach the conclusion that the best day to pick valerian would be on a . . . Wednesday. By the same token, the best time to make a medicine, or to take that medicine would also be a Wednesday. An additional refinement is that the day is divided into several parts. Each part, both the day and the night, have periods of time when the influence of one planet is stronger than any other. That is to say, twice during Thursday, the influence of Mars is stronger than at any other time. Thus, one might find out what this time period is and not only make and take the medicine on the 'correct' day, but do it during the 'correct' times.

In the mineral kingdom, the same sort of logic prevails. If we had a problem with the head or with hemorrhaging, we could use an herb such as garlic, anise or cayenne. A tincture could be made of one of these herbs or, if the practitioner had the knowledge, he could exalt the herb to its highest level and confect what is known in alchemy as a 'plant stone.' This is the highest level of efficacy any herb potent in medicine could have. It requires man to bring the plant to this advanced state of evolution. On the other hand, a medicine could also be found in the mineral kingdom, in iron. Mars rules iron just as it rules the head and garlic, etc. But how can one make medicine from iron? This is where practical laboratory Alchemy comes in. It would require an astute reader of alchemical literature to arrive at the proper procedure, or more aptly, one could learn from a teacher of Alchemy. The process is, to separate the iron (ore) into its three essentials. Just as was done for the plant. To make the herbal medicine, one had to make a tincture of the herb which would extract the sulphur principle. The sulphur would 'tinct' or colour the extraction media or 'menstruum' as it is called. This colouring is caused by the Sulphur which the menstruum has leached out of the herb. The sulphur could more readily be obtained by a steam distillation as well. The mercury of the plant is in the alcohol. One could putrify the plant and generate alcohol or one could distill alcohol from wine (if this is legal in the reader's area) or purchase grain alcohol; the mercury being uniform in all types of alcohol obtained from vegetable matter. Finally, the body of the herb will be burned or calcined to obtain the Salt. By the same principle, and by following the same procedure, one could separate any body, including mineral, into its three essentials.

Therefore, one could take iron ore, or some other form of iron, and make a tincture using a suitable menstruum. The tincture would be driven off (i.e., evaporated) and the sulphur would be left behind. The oil of iron, then, would in itself be a potent medicine. It would be more potent than that derived from a plant. The reason being that the minerals have 'been around' much longer than any plant and thus have absorbed greater astral influences and thus are more potent. They have a higher level of vibration. In any event, the soul of the iron, once it has been separated, must also be purified. All these processes involve heat. The mastery of the heat is a technique learned from a teacher, or by (often painful) trial and error. Once purified, it can be taken as is or it can be combined with the mercury of the mineral kingdom which is called 'alkahest.' The mercury of the mineral kingdom is not so easily come by; but with it one can make the fabled 'Philosopher's Stone.' This stone can cure all illnesses and cause instant upward evolutions or transmutations. Does this sound as if it could change a base matter into a noble one? Yes, it can.

To return to just the sulphur or oil of iron, consider what you have, once you know how to make it. Not only is it a medicine for the head, but it is a medicine for all other ailments governed by Mars. To find out just what Mars, and all other planets, govern, one could check with such reference works as The Alchemist's Handbook, or Bill's Rulership Book, etc. Consider just one aspect: anaemia. People with poor blood or "tired blood" take products such as Geritol. This fine product is derived from iron, sure enough. However, it is made from something like iron oxide, a non-organic matter. Or, we can absorb some non-organic material, as the built-in, inner alchemist we all have, can effect such transmutations. In this case it is a 'biological transmutation.' The tolerance here is about 3% of what the body has taken in of non-organic material. Would it not be marvelous if we could find a substance that is non-toxic, can be absorbed 100% by the body, AND has no side effects like some products do. Did you think of oil of iron? Correct. This substance CAN be totally utilised by the body and NOT have side effects that are unwanted. More germane, it overcomes the anaemic condition. The uses of minerals in AlchemyJust in the field of medication, are endless. Basil Valentine wrote an entire book on one mineral alone, its various uses in medicine. This book is called the Triumphal Chariot of Antimony. It is a 'recipe' book, explaining the various preparations of that metal known as antimony. Antimony is poisonous? Yes, but when it is prepared by alchemical processes, 'spagyrically,' it is not only rendered non-toxic, but it could be a panacea.

To give the reader a flavour of this incredible book by Valentine and to perhaps "turn them on" to Alchemy, the following is quote of a process by Valentine using antimony. This was extracted from Triumphal Chariot of Antimony published by Dorman Newman in 1678 in England, and was translated by Dr. Theo Kirkringius:

"The dose of it before coagulation is eight grains taken in wine. It makes a man very young again, delivers him from all melancholy and whatsoever in the body of man grows and increaseth, as the hairs and nails fall off and the whole man is renewed as a Phoenix (if such a feigned bird, which is only here for example's sake named by me, can anywhere be found on this earth) is renewed by fire. And this medicine can no more be burned by the Fire, than the feathers of that unknown salamander; for it consumes all symptoms in the body, like consuming fire, to which it is deservedly likened; it drives away every evil and expels all that which Aurum-Potabile is capable to expel".

Does not that description sound like something you would like to see happen? It could, you know. Valentine reveals in his book various techniques on how to be "successful" in alchemical work. He spoke from the viewpoint of one who KNEW, not one who guessed or who thought it might be this way. And Valentine wasn't the only good writer of alchemical treatises. The writings of Paracelsus, Geber, Glauber, Vaughn, Sendivogius, and Flamel are amongst those of the older writers that are particularly noteworthy. But there are even modern day writers such as Frater Albertus, Phillip Hurley and Archibald Cockren. In Cockren's book, Alchemy Re-discovered and Restored he describes various alchemists and their writings. He was particularly impressed with Johannes Isaaci Hollander, who, he said, wrote so clearly and plainly, his writings have been totally discounted. Ah, none are so blind as they who will not see. Cockren also presents a diary of his own alchemical experimentation. Hurley in his book, Herbal Alchemy, integrates magical practices with laboratory work, for example, making talismans for a particular laboratory experiment. In discussing the literature, we would be amiss in not mentioning the work of Dr. Carl Jung. While Dr. Jung did not appear to have much regard for physical Alchemy and wrote nothing thereon, he had enormous insight and grasp of the psychological aspects of Alchemy. In this respect, he has done mankind a tremendous service in his fine books on this subject. Dr. Jung and various of his associates have delved into the old texts, translated some of them, and given us insight into the thinking of the old alchemist. This data combined with personal research provides a sure grasp of Alchemy. While it is clear that Alchemy will not become as popular as home computers, it is quite possible that as more people, especially those trained in the sciences 'discover' Alchemy and contribute to the vast body of knowledge that is accumulating, we may one day have a 'breakthrough.' Thinking people seeking answers to cosmic questions, greater insight into themselves and cures for incurable ailments, must sooner or later come across alchemical knowledge. As they read the literature and experiment in the lab in an effort to unlock the mysteries, the LVX they shed will not only illumine the path but, hopefully, attract countless others to this Holy Science."

THE VISION OF THE UNIVERSAL MERCURY

"We stood upon a dark and rocky cliff that overhung the restless seas. In the sky above us was a certain glorious sun, encircled by that brilliant rainbow, which they of the Path of the Chamelion know.

"I beheld, until the heavens opened, and a form like unto the Mercury of the Greeks (1) descended, flashing like the lightning; and he hovered between the sky and the sea. In his hand was the staff (2) wherewith the eyes of mortals are closed in sleep, and wherewith he also, at will, re-awakeneth the sleeper; and terribly did the globe at its summit dart forth rays. And he bare a scroll whereon was written:

Then Hermes cried aloud, and said:

"I am Hermes Mercurius, the Son of God, the messenger uniting Superiors and Inferiors. I exist not without them, and their union is in me. I bathe in the Ocean. I fill the expanse of Air. I penetrate the depths beneath."

And the Frater who was with me, said unto me:

"Thus is the Balance of Nature maintained, for this Mercury is the beginning of all movement. This He, (10) this She, this IT, is in all things, but hath wings which thou canst not constrain. For when thou sayest 'He is here' he is not here, for by that time he is already away, for he is Eternal Motion and Vibration."

Nevertheless in Mercury must thou seek all things. Therefore not without reason did our Ancient Fratres say that the Great Work was to "Fix the Volatile." There is but one place where he can be fixed, and that is the Centre, a centre exact. "Centrum in trigono centri." (11) The Centre is the triangle of the Centre.

If thine own soul be baseless how wilt thou find a standing point whence to fix the soul of the Universe?

By

G. H. FRATER, S.R.M.D.

1. Hermes is Greek, Mercury is Roman.
2. Compare with verse .47 ODYSSEY: "Him promptly obeyed the active destroyer of Argus. Forth sped he, and under his feet he bound his ambrosial sandals. Then, taking his staff wherewith he the eyes of mortals closeth at will, and the sleeper at will reawakens."
3. Translation: The Light is in God, the LVX hath been made into Man. Whether Sun, or Moon, or Wandering Stars, all are in Lux, the Lux in the Light, the Light in the Centre, the Centre in the Circle, the Circle from the Nothingness (Negative or Ain). What thou mayest be (i.e., what thou hast in thyself, the capability of being) that shalt thou be (or become).
4. Flatus. Ignis. Aqua. Terra. Air. Fire. Water. Earth.
5. Ether. Sal. Terrae. Ether, the Salt of the Earth.
6. Ether. Subtilis. Totius. Orbis. The subtle Ether of the whole universe.
7. Ether. Ruens. In. Terra. The Ether rushing into the Earth.
8. Let it be (or become). It is. Be it so. It shall be (or endure). In Universal faithfulness and truth from eternity. Now an hour, Now a day, Now a year, Now an age, all things are One, and All in All. ETERNITY.

THE CORE OF THE TRADITION

THE PILLARS

By

G.H. FRATER N.O.M.

As confusion is found to exist with regard to the Right and Left Pillars of the Sephiroth on the Tree of Life in relation to the right and left sides of a man, and as to the phases of the Moon you must note: That in every diagram and picture, the right hand side of the observer is next the Pillar of Mercy - Chokmah, Chesed, and Netzach; while the Pillar of Severity is on the observer's left hand. Yet when you apply the Tree of Life to yourself, your right side, arm and leg represent the side of Strength and Severity - Binah, Geburah and Hod, and your left side refers to the Pillar of Mercy. So that when you look at a diagram, you are looking, as it were, at a man facing you, that your right side faces his left. His Merciful side forms the right hand Pillar in front of you, so that it is as if you looked at yourself in a mirror. Just as the man looks at you, so does the Moon look at you and so you say that the Moon in her increase is on the side of Mercy, the right hand pillar of the Sephiroth; and in her decrease, the crescent is on the left hand Pillar of Severity. A Diagram, then, is a picture of a Man or the Moon facing you. The Temple Pillars are similar:

That is, the white Mercy or Yachin Pillar is on your right hand as you approach the Altar from the West and from the Hieres. (See Chronicles I I iii, 17.) "And call the Name on the right hand (of him who enters) Yachin, and the Name of that on the left, Boaz."

Boaz is Strength, Severity, Binah, Black Pillar.

Yachin is White Pillar of Mercy.

So in making the Qabalistic Cross on your breast it is correct to touch the Forehead and say Ateh - Thou art; the Heart - Malkuth; Right Shoulder, ve-Geburah; left shoulder ve-Gedulah, and with the fingers clasped on the breast say, Le olahm, amen!

THE PILLARS - II

In the explanation of the Symbols of the Grade of Neophyte, your attention has been directed to the general mystical meaning of the Two Pillars called in the Ritual the "Pillars of Hermes" of "Seth" and of "Solomon." In the 9th chapter of the Ritual of the Dead they are referred to as the "Pillars of Shu," the "Pillars of the Gods of the Dawning Light," and also as "the North and Southern Columns of the Gate of the Hall of Truth." In the 125th chapter, they are represented by the sacred gateway, the door to which the aspirant is brought when he has completed the negative confession. The archaic pictures on the one Pillar are painted in black upon a white ground, and those on the other in white upon a black ground, in order to express the interchange and reconciliation of opposing forces and the eternal balance of light and darkness which gives force to visible nature. The black cubical bases represent darkness and matter wherein the Spirit, the Ruach Elohim, began to formulate the Ineffable NAME, that Name which the ancient Rabbis have said "rushes through the universe," that Name before which the Darkness rolls back to the birth of time. The flaming red triangular capitals which crown the summit of the Pillars represent the Triune manifestation of the Spirit of Life, the Three Mothers of the Sepher Yetzirah, the Three Alchemical Principles of Nature, the Sulphur, the Mercury and the Salt. Each Pillar is surmounted by its own light-bearer veiled from the material world. At the base of both Pillars rise the Lotus flowers, symbols of regeneration and metempsychosis. The archaic illustrations are taken from vignettes of the 17th and 125th chapter of the Ritual of the Dead, the Egyptian Book of the "Per-em-Hru" or the "Book of coming Forth into the Day," the oldest book in the world as yet discovered. The Recension of the Priests of ON is to be found in the walls of the Pyramids of the Kings of the 5th and 6th Dynasties at Sakarah, the recension of the 11th and 12th Dynasties on the sarcophagi of that period, and the Theban recension of the 18th Dynasty and onward is found on papyri, both plain and illuminated. No satisfactory translation of these books is available, none having been yet attempted by a scholar having the qualifications of mystic as well as Egyptologist. The Ritual of the Dead, generally speaking, is a collection of hymns and prayers in the form of a series of ceremonial Rituals to enable the man to unite himself with Osiris the Redeemer. After this union he is no longer called the man, but Osiris, with whom he is now symbolically identified. "That they also may be One of us," said the Christ of the New Testament. "I am Osiris" said the purified and justified man, his soul luminous and washed from sin in the immortal and uncreated light, united to Osiris, and thereby justified, and the son of God; purified by suffering, strengthened by opposition, regenerate through self-sacrifice. Such is the subject of the great Egyptian Ritual. The 17th Chapter of the Theban recension consists of a very ancient text with several commentaries, also extremely old, and some prayers, none of which come into the scheme of the original text. It has, together with the 12th chapter been very carefully translated for the purpose of this lecture by the V.H. Frater M.W.T., and the V.H. Soror S.S.D.D. has made many valuable suggestions with regard to the interpretation. The Title and Preface of the 17th Chapter reads:

VOLUME THREE

"Concerning the exaltation of the Glorified Ones, of Coming and Going forth in the Divine Domain, of the Genies of the Beautiful land of Amentet. Of Coming forth in the light of Day in any form desired, of Hearing the Forces of Nature by being enshrined as a living Bai." And the rubric is: "The united with Osiris shall recite it when he has entered the Harbour. May glorious things be done thereby upon earth. May all the words of the Adept be fulfilled." Owing to the complex use of symbols, the ritual translation of the Chapter can only be understood by perpetual reference to the ancient Egyptian commentaries, and therefore the following paraphrase has been put together to convey to modern minds as nearly as possible the ideas conceived by the old Egyptians in this glorious triumphal song of the Soul of Man made one with Osiris, the Redeemer. "I am TUM made One with all things. "I have become NU, I am RA in his rising ruling by right of his Power. I am the Great God self-begotten, even NU, who pronounced His Names, and thus the Circle of the Gods was created. "I am Yesterday and know Tomorrow. I can never more be overcome. I know the secret of Osiris, whose being is perpetually revered of RA. I have finished the work which was planned at the Beginning, I am the Spirit made manifest, and armed with two vast eagle's plumes. Isis and Nephthys are their names, made One with Osiris.

"I claim my inheritance. My sins have been uprooted and my passions overcome. I am Pure White. I dwell in Time. I live through Eternity, when Initiates make offering to the Everlasting Gods. I have passed along the Pathway. I know the Northern and the Southern Pillars, the two Columns at the Gateway of the Hall of Truth. "Stretch unto me your hands, O ye Dwellers in the centre. For I am transformed to a God in your midst. Made One with Osiris, I have filled the eye socket in the day of the morning when Good and Evil fought together. "I have lifted up the cloud veil in the Sky of the Storm. Till I saw RA born again from out of the Great Waters. His strength is my strength, and my strength is His strength. Homage to you, Lords of Truth, chiefs who Osiris rules. Granting release from sin, followers of Ma where rest is Glorious. Whose Throne Anubis built in the day when Osiris said: "Lo! A man wins his way to Amentet. I come before you, to drive away my faults. As ye did to the Seven Glorious Ones who follow their Lord Osiris. I am that Spirit of Earth and Sun. "Between the Two Pillars of Flame. I am RA when he fought beneath the Ashad Tree, destroying the enemies of the Ancient of Days. I am the Dweller in the Egg. I am he who turns in the Disc. I shine forth from the Horizon, as the gold from the mine. I float through the Pillars of SHU in the ether. Without a peer among the Gods. The Breath of my mouth is as a flame. I light upon the Earth with my glory. Eye cannot gaze on my darting beams, as they reach through the Heavens and lick up the Nile with tongues of flame. I am strong upon Earth with the strength of RA. I have come into Harbour as Osiris made perfect. Let priestly offering be made to me as one in the train of the ancient of Days. I brood as the Divine spirit. I move in the firmness of my Strength. I undulate as the Waves that vibrate through Eternity. Osiris has been claimed with acclamation, and ordained to rule among the Gods. Enthroned in the Domain of Horus where the Spirit and the Body are united in the presence of the Ancient of Days. Blotted out are the sins of his body in passion. He has passed the Eternal Gate, and has received the New Year Feast with Incense, at the marriage of Earth with Heaven. "TUM has built his Bridal Chamber. RURURET has founded his shrine. the Procession's completed. HORUS has purified, SET has consecrated, SHU made one with OSIRIS, has entered his heritage.

"As TUM he has entered the Kingdom to complete union with the Invisible. Thy Bride, of Osiris, is Isis, who mourned Thee when she found Thee slain. In Isis, thou art born again. From Nephthys is thy nourishment. They cleansed thee in thy Heavenly Birth. Youth waits upon thee, ardour is ready at thy hand. And their arms shall uphold thee for millions of years. Initiates surround Thee and Thine enemies are cast down. The Powers of Darkness are destroyed. The Companions of Thy Joys are with Thee. Thy Victories in the Battle await their reward in the Pillar. The Forces of Nature obey Thee. Thy Power is exceeding great. The Gods curse him that curseth Thee. Thine aspirations are fulfilled. Thou art the Mistress of Splendour. They are destroyed who barred Thy way." The 125th Chapter is concerned with the entry of an Initiate into the Hall of the Two Columns of Justice, and commenced with a most beautiful and symbolic description of Death, as a journey from the barren wilderness of Earth, to the Glorious Land which lies beyond. The literal translation of the opening lines is as follows:

" I have come from afar to look upon thy beauties. My hands salute Thy Name of Justice. I have come from afar, where the Acacia Tree grew not. Where the tree thick with leaves is not born. Where there come not beams from herb or grass. I have entered the Place of Mystery. I have communed with Set. Sleep came upon me, I was wrapped therein, bowing down before the hidden things. I was ushered into the House of Osiris. I saw the marvels that were there. The Princes of the Gates in their Glory."

The illustrations in this section represent the Hall of Truth as seen through the open leaves of its door. The Hall is presided over by a God who holds his right hand over the cage of a hawk, and his left over the food of eternity. On each side of the God is a cornice crowned by a row of alternate feathers and Uraei symbolising justice and fiery power. The door leaf at the head of a stall is called "Possessor of strength, binding the male and female animals."

The 42 Judges of the Dead are represented as seated in a long row, and each of them has to be named, and the Sin over which he presided has been denied. This chapter describes the introduction of the initiate into the Hall of Truth by ANUBIS, who, having questioned the aspirant, receives from him an account of his Initiation, and is satisfied by his right to enter. He states that he has been taken into the antechamber of the Temple and there stripped and blindfolded, he had to grope for the entrance of the Hall, and having found it, he was reclothed and annointed in the presence of the Initiated. he is then asked for the Passwords and demands that his Soul should be weighed in the Great Balance of the Hall of Truth, whereupon ANUBIS again interrogates him concerning the symbolism of the door of the Hall, and his answers being found correct, ANUBIS says: "Pass on, thou knowest it." Among other things the Initiate states that he has been purified four times, the same number of times that the Neophyte is purified and consecrated in the ceremony of the Neophyte. He then makes the long Negative Confession, stating to each Judge in turn that he is innocent of that form of Sin over which he judges. Then he invokes the Judges to do him justice, and afterwards describes how he has washed in the washing place of the South, and rested in the North, in the place called "Son of the Deliverers" and he becomes the Dweller under the Olive Tree of Peace, and how he was given a tall flame of fire and a sceptre of cloud which he preserved in the salting tank in which mummies were swathed. And he found there another sceptre called "Giver of Breath" and with that he extinguished the flame and shattered the sceptre of cloud, and made a lake of it. The initiate is then brought to the actual Pillars, and has to name them and their parts under the symbol of the Scales of a Balance. He also has to name the Guardian of the Gateway, who prevents his passage, and when all these are propitiated, the plea of the Hall itself cries out against his steps, saying "Because I am silent, because I am pure," and it must know that his aspirations are pure enough and high enough for him to be allowed to tread upon it. He is then allowed to announce to Thoth that he is clean from all evil, and has overcome the influence of the planets, and THOTH says to him:

"Who is He whose Pylons are of Flame, whose walls of Living Uraei, and the flames of whose House are streams of Water?" And the Initiate replies "Osiris!" And it is immediately proclaimed: "Thy meat shall be from the Infinite, and thy drink from the infinite. Thou art able to go forth to the sepulchral feast on earth, for thou hast overcome." Thus, these two chapters, which are represented by their illustrations (Note the illustrations referred to will follow in the next two papers on the Pillars.) upon the Pillars, represent the advance and purification of the Soul and its union with Osiris, the Redeemer, in the Golden Dawn of the Infinite Light, in which the Soul is transfigured, knows all, and can do all, for it is made One with the Eternal God.

THE PILLARS III

By

G.H. FRATER S.R.M.D.

The Pillars and the Meaning of the Hieroglyphics Inscribed on them, taken from the vignettes of the 17th, and 25th, Chapters of the "PER-M-HRU" or Egyptian Ritual Of The Dead.

In the explanation of the Symbols of the Grade of Neophyte, your attention has been directed to the general mystical meaning of the juxtaposition of the two Pillars: and therefore I will only ask you to notice that the Hieroglyphics of the one are painted in black upon a white ground, and those of the other in the same colours but reversed; the better to express the interchange and reconciliation of opposing forces, and the Eternal Balance of Light and Darkness which gives form to the Visible Universe. The black square bases represent Darkness and Matter wherein the Spirit, the Ruach Elohim formulated the Eternal Pronunciation of the Ineffable Name, that Name which the Rabbis of old have said:

"Rusheth through the Universe; that Name before which rolled back the Darkness, at the Birth of the Morning of Time." The flame-red triangular capitals which crown the summit of the Pillars, represent the triune manifestation of the Spirit of Life, the "Three Mothers" of the "Sepher Yetzirah," the three Alchemical Principles of Nature, the Sulphur, the Mercury and the Salt. And each pillar is surmounted by its own Light-bearer though veiled from the Material World.

The Hieroglyphical figures upon the Pillars are taken from the vignettes of the 17th, and 125th, chapters of the "Ritual of the Dead," the Egyptian "Per-M-Hru." This celebrated and most ancient work is a collection of Mystical Hymns and Addresses in the form of a species of Ceremonial Ritual for the use of the soul after death, to enable it to unite itself to the Body of Osiris the Redeemer: and thenceforth in the Ritual is it no longer called the Soul, but it is called "the Osiris" of whom it is a member;

"I am the Vine, ye are the Branches" said the Christ of the New Testament: "I am a member of the Body of Osiris" said the purified and justified soul. The Soul, the Soul luminous and washed from Sin in the Immortal and Uncreated Light, united to Osiris, and justified Son of God, such is the subject of the great Egyptian Ritual; purified by suffering, strengthened by opposition, regenerate through Self-sacrifice. Nor is the "Ritual of the Dead" a work of comparatively recent time; for the great Egyptologists Birch and Bunsen assert that its origin is anterior to Menes and belongs probably to the pre-Menite Dynasty of Abydos, between 3100 and 4500 B.C. and it implies that at that period the system of Osirian worship and mythology was already in actual existence. Of all the chapters in the "Per-M-Hru," the 17th, is one of the oldest as shewn by its Gloss and Scholia, and it is the symbols of this Chapter and the 125th, which form the designs on the Pillars before you; at the base of each of which rises the Lotus, symbolic of the New Life, regeneration and metempsychosis. In the Papyri which have these symbols is if the Abydos Dynasty be prior to Menes, who was said to be the first Human King. The pre-Menite Dynasties are said to be those of the Gods, the Demi-Gods, and the Menes, the hieroglyphical text of this chapter, a group of hieroglyphics recurs at intervals, the literal translation of which is, "the explanation." After these groups comes a short commentary or gloss on the preceding and more ancient text. According to the pre-cited authorities this gloss was mixed up with the text as early as 2,250 B.C. at a period long anterior to the era of Joseph and to that of the Trojan War; and the circumstances of its possessing a written commentary even at this date shows the much greater antiquity of the actual text. The especial title of the 17th chapter is "The Book of the Egyptian Faith," and its subject is a sort of Hymn of the Osirified soul, which may be partially and succinctly reproduced as follows:

THE WORDS OF THE DEPARTED SPIRIT OSIRIS, SON OF GOD

"I am Toom, the Setting Sun, I am the only being in the firmament of Heaven.

I am Ra, the Rising Sun, I have passed from the gate of Death unto Life.

The Sun's power beginneth again after he hath set; he riseth again (so doth the justified Spirit of Man.)

I am the Great God begotten of himself; I can never be turned back by the Elementary Powers; I am the Morning, I know the Gate. (I ever rise again unto existence. I know the pathway through death unto life.)

(The date of Menes has been calculated as B.C. 5500. Others think earlier.)

The Father of the Spirit; the Eternal Soul of the Sun. He hath examined and He hath proved me. He hath found that I fought on Earth the battle of the good Gods, as He, my Father, Lord of the Invisible World ordered me to do.

I know the Great God who existeth in the Invisible.

I am the Great Phoenix which is in Annu, the former of my Life and my Being am I."

The symbols on the Columns beginning at the top of the one with the Black figures on a white ground are mystical representations of the various paragraphs of the 17th chapter. They show the symbol of Toom the setting sun; the past and the future. The Adoration of Toom of the West. The Abode of the West shown by the Jackal of Anubis in Shrine with Isis and Nephthys adoring The Adoration of Osiris, the Phoenix or Bennu.

The reformation of the Departed Spirit, shewn by the Soul descending to the Body on the bier, in the form of a human headed bird, when of dual manifestation, shown by the birds on either side of the prostrate mummy. So the purified Soul passes ever onward and upward, and still rises the mystical hymn. Purified, the Soul reaches the pools of the two Truths, shewn by the two quadrangular figures, it passeth through Amenti the Gate of the North, and through the Gate of Taser; and it saith to the Mystic Guardians: "Give me your strength, for I am made even as ye." Then comes the Mystical Eye of Osiris representing the Orb of the Sun; and the Cow symbolical of the Great Water, the blue firmament of Heaven. Next is the Adoration of the Lords of Truth behind the Northern Heaven: "Hail unto ye, ye Lords of Truth, ye Chiefs behind Osiris! ye followers of Her whose peace is sure." When the soul arrives at the Mystic Pool of Persea trees, wherein is Horus symbolised by the Great Cat who slays the Evil Serpent Apophis. Last of the Symbols of the 17th chapter is the Adoration of the Life of the Creator in His bark, and the uniting of the purified Soul with its Maker. The 125th chapter is called "The Hall of the Two Truths" and its full title is "The Book of Going to the Hall of the Two Truths, and of Separating a person from his Sins, when he has been made to see the Faces of the Gods." It opens with a solemn Adoration of the Lord of Truth, and the Ceremony of passing by the Forty-two Assessors of the Dead represented by seated figures. Then comes the weighing of the soul, and the Mystical Meaning of various parts of the Hall, the naming of which is insisted on by the various Guardians, and is similar to the Mystic Circumambulation of the Neophyte in the path of Darkness in the Grade when he has to name the Guardians of the Gates of East and West.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

The figures on the pillar represent the Soul introduced either by its own guide, or by the jackal-headed Anubis, the Guide in general of the Dead, into the Hall of Truth.

The Soul then watches the weighing of its actions in Earth-life, against a figure of Truth, in the Mystical Scales of Maat and Anubis.

Thoth, ibis-headed, records the judgement; and the Devourer stands ready to seize, if the soul has led an evil life.

Passing through this ordeal, the soul is then introduced into the presence of Osiris by Horus. Osiris sits in his Shrine upon a throne, with the Crook and Scourge, symbols of Mercy and Severity in his hands; behind him are Isis and Nephthys, the Goddesses of Nature and Perfection; and before him are the four Genii of the Dead upon the Lotus Flower, the emblem of the Metempsychosis. Thus the whole of the Symbols upon the pillars represent the advance and purification of the Soul, and its uniting with Osiris the Redeemer; in that Golden Dawn of an Infinite Light wherein the soul is transfigured; knows all and can do all; for it hath become joined unto Eternal Gods.

THE PILLARS IV

By

G.H. FRATER SUB SPE

THE WHITE PILLAR

The designs on this Pillar are taken from the Vignettes to the 17th Chapter of the Book of the Dead. This was inadvertently called by Lepsius the XVIth chapter. It is not, however, a chapter at all, but ornaments or illustrations (called Vignettes) intended to accompany the Hymn to the Rising Sun. The vignettes are slightly different in different papyri; those in the Papyrus of Ani are the best on the whole; those on the pillars are selected from several examples. The designs may be explained as follows: The first figure does not occur in the Papyrus of Ani, and varies in others. It is variously explained. Probably it is meant for an ideograph of the Hymn. The soul, figured by a bird, beholding the Truth (a feather). The two figures following are said by some Egyptologists to be the deceased and his wife playing drafts under a canopy. It is more probable however that his initiator or guide teaching him the ways of the kingdom of souls, by means of a game. He is moving a piece, he wears the Lotus headdress, and she has the crown of Nephthys. Following this are the souls of the deceased and his guide as two human-headed hawks on a pylon-shaped building. Note that the deceased, being united to Osiris, is called in the Ritual "Osiris" or "The Osirian." (Compare the Christian promise "That ye may be one with ME.")

VOLUME THREE

"Saith Osiris, after he hath come to this haven of rest, it is good for a man to recite these words, while he is yet upon earth. The deceased is next shown in adoration before two lions seated back to back and supporting the horizon with the sun's disc. The Lion on the right is called Sef ("Yesterday") and that on the left is Tau ("Tomorrow") "Who then is this? It is Tem, the Dweller in his disc, or (as others say) it is Ra, in his rising, in the Eastern horizon of heaven. He saith, "I am yesterday, I know tomorrow." Yesterday is Osiris, (the Deceased) and tomorrow is Ra on the day when he shall destroy the enemies of Neb-er-tcher, and when he shall establish as Prince and Ruler his son Horus."

The next figure, which is not in all of the papyri, represents a funeral chest, on which is the figure of Anubis the jackal, with Isis and Nephthys adoring, and the head of the deceased emerging from the chest. This may be an image of the resurrection. The chest is the abode of the West of the setting sun, and the hymn here commemorates the victory of Ra over death. There follows the deceased in adoration before the God Osiris Himself, bearing the Crook and Scourge, probably hailing him as the god of the Resurrection and so apparently following the previous symbol.

The next figure is also a resurrection symbol, the Phoenix or Bennu bird who is said to immolate himself once in a hundred year, and from his ashes emerges the new Phoenix (compare the blossoming of the aloe.) The Bennu bird is represented before a table of offerings. Next comes the mummy of the deceased, with the soul in the form of a human-headed bird hovering over and watched by Isis and Nephthys. The bird here represents the Ba or Bai, or spirit, the mind or mentality of the deceased, concentrated or projected. The Ka or astral form is usually represented by a figure of the deceased, being the shade or ghost.

Following this is the dual form of the Axe, which was the primeval symbol of the one God, Ner, of whom all the Gods of Egypt were forms; dual probably to symbolize the Union of Osiris with the all Father or of the deceased with Osiris, and crowned with the royal and sacred Uraeus. Isis and Nephthys are in the form of a Hawk as all are on that Astral plane. "Who then is this? I am the Bennu bird which is in Annu, and I am the keeper of the Volume of the Book of things which are and of things which shalt be. Who then is this body? It is Osiris, or (as some say) his dead body; his soiled garments. The things that are, and the things that shall be are his dead body. They are eternity and everlastingness. Eternity is the day, Everlastingness is the night. This is the cutting off of the corruptible in the body of Osiris. The deceased is next shown as again in adoration before the God of a million years. In his right hand is the sacred Ankh. Behind him is the symbol of years. He stretches his left hand over the pool containing the eye of Horus. The soul of the deceased now comes to the pools of the two Truths, or perhaps rather the pools of the dual manifestation of Truth shewn by the quadrangular figures, over which the God, Uacherura, or the Great Green Water presides, His two hands being extended over the two pools, that under his right hand, being the pool of Natron, and that under the left, the Pool of Nitre.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

The above is Budge's translation, but it is difficult to interpret.

Natron and nitre are the same substance, both words being derived from the Greek. The word natron was substituted in the 15th century for the older form nitrum. There are seven great Natron Lakes in Egypt. A solution of natron was used in embalming and the reference is probably to the million years (or ages) long duration of the body, prepared in the Great Green Lake or Natron Lake.

"The Begetter of millions of years is the name of one; Great Green Lake is the name of the other. Now as concerning the Great God who dwelleth therein, it is Ra Himself."

The next figure is a Pylon with doors called Restau, i.e., the "Gate of the Passages of the Tomb."

"What then is this? It is Restau, that is to say it is the Underworld, on the South of Na-Arut-f (this world is probably the same as An-rut-f, the place where nothing grows.) Now the gate of Tchesert is the gate of the Pillars of Shu, the Northern-Gate of the Tuat (under world) or (as the others say) it is the two leaves of the arbor through which the God Tem passeth when he goeth to the Eastern horizon of heaven." Next comes the Utchat or eye of Thoth, facing to the left above a Pylon. "What then is this? It is the right eye of Ra, which raged against Sel, when he sent it forth. Thoth raised up the hair, (i.e., a cloud) and brought the Eye, alive and whole, and sound, and without defect, to its Lord." The next figure is that of the Cow Meh-urt, the eye of Ra, with disc and horns, collar, and Menat, and whip.

"What then is this? I behold Ra who was born yesterday from the buttocks of the Goddess Meh-urt. His strength is my strength, and my strength is his strength. It is the watery abyss of heaven. It is the image of the eye of Ra in the morning at his daily birth. Meh-urt is the eye of Ra. Therefore Osiris (i.e., the deceased) triumphant, is a great one among the Gods, who are in the train of Horus. These words are spoken for him who loveth his Lord."

The next figure is somewhat obscure in all the vignettes. The variations may be due to the insertion of local symbols, or merely to the fancy of the artist. There is clearly a funeral chest, bearing the image of Anubis, which is called the district of Abtu; (Abydos) the burial place of the East. The head emerging therefrom is sometimes, as on our pillars, that of the deceased, sometimes (as in the Papyrus of Ani) it is the head of Ra, with two arms, and hands, each holding the Ankh, an emblem of life. In either case the symbology is the same. It is the burial and resurrection, whether of the deceased, or of Osiris whose nature he now partakes of, or of Ra himself, as symbolised by the Sun at sunset and at sunrise dying and rising again.

This figure and its attendants summarise the teaching. Accordingly right and left of the chest are the four Canopic Gods, whose office towards the mummy is to guard the jars containing the intestines of the deceased. Beyond these to right and left are two watchers or guides bearing the Phoenix headed wand. The text of the Ritual here alludes to seven Khus, whom Anubis appointed to be the protectors of the dead body of Osiris, and seven Gods whose functions is not clearly indicated. We have seven God forms seated, lion forms with the deceased in adoration. Into the complete symbology of this it is impossible here to enter. The meaning of the duplicated series of seven, belongs to the higher grades where it will be fully expounded as also will the kneeling figure of the deceased in adoration before the lion-form with the sacred Ankh or sign of Life.

In the next figure we have the cat, emblem of the sun or of Ra himself cutting off the head of the serpent Apep, Apepi or Apophis typical of darkness under the Persea tree (or the holy tree) said by some to be the Acacia, a glyph of the Rising Sun. Finally we have the deceased in the sacred boat guided by Thoth, escorted by Ra who has the symbol of the sun, and Horus who bears the crowns of Upper and Lower Egypt and both carry the Phoenix-headed wand in the right hand, and the sacred Ankh, Crux Ansata, or image of life in the left. Over his head is the Scarab, symbol of the Creator. In front of the boat is the rising Sun. Thus the general design of the White Pillar is a pictorial synthesis of the gradual freeing of the soul from the body, left to be mummied and its union with Osiris, Lord and Judge of the Dead and of the resurrection, the sun in his rising. The hymn to the Rising Sun resumes these ideas.

THE BLACK PILLAR

This needs comparatively little explanation beyond what is contained in the official lecture. The design on the pillar is adapted from the Vignette to the 125th chapter of the Book of the Dead. It represents the deceased passing by the forty-two assessors, to the Hall of Judgment, where the soul is weighed, previous to being conducted into the presence of Osiris. In the original vignette to the Papyrus of Ani, which is reproduced in the coloured frontispiece to Budge's Book of the Dead, the Assessors are represented above the text. In the Black Pillar they occupy the upper rings of the design being followed by the introduction of the deceased to the Hall of Judgment. Note that both in Budge's frontispiece and in the design on the Pillars there are only twelve assessors figured. The reasons of the selection in the case of the Black Pillars will appear in the higher grades; it cannot be given to the Outer. The names of those figured are Sa and Hu, sitting together, then Hathor, then Horus, then Isis and Nephthys (or more probably the twin Maati wearing the head-dresses of Isis and Nephthys because inclining towards their symbology) then Nut, Seb, Tefnut, Shu, Temu, and Ra-Harmachis. Any student who is familiar with Egyptology, considering the attributes of these Gods, and comparing them with the stations at which the Neophyte is halted in the course of the Neophyte Ritual, and the words there spoken, may draw some conclusion as to their functions, and the reason for their selection, all of which will be fully expounded in the higher grades.

There follows the deceased being brought into the Judgment Hall by his guide (or as Egyptologists say his wife) and here his personality is divided into three parts, His heart which is represented as a vase-shaped vessel, called in Egyptian Ab, the Ka or shade being called the reflex of the human form of the deceased, stands by waiting the decision the Bai or Bar, the mind or mentality, is represented by a Sphinx like form above. The Papyrus of Ani adds a human-headed bird on a pylon and there are other symbolisms also which will occur to the student of Egyptology. On the Black Pillar a duplicated form of the Maati is taken to represent the higher aspirations of the soul of the deceased. Notice that the guide or introducer of the deceased carries a sistrum. The symbolism of this will be shewn later. The soul or heart is weighed against a feather symbolic of truth, as being swayed by the least breath, recording faithfully all that transpires. (In some of the Papyri it is an image of the Goddess of Truth herself with feather head-dress). Anubis with mask of the dog or Jackal brings the soul to the Judgment and watches the tongue of the balance. Thoth, Ibis headed records the result. The devourer waits to snatch the soul of the evildoer if condemned or found wanting in the balance. Horus then conducts the soul, being now the deceased undivided (or re-united) to the presence of Osiris. himself seated on a throne under a canopy bearing the rod and scourge of Mercy and Severity and the Phoenix-headed wand, and crowned with the crowns of Upper and Lower Egypt, and mummied (because he is the god of the Dead). Before him on a Lotus are the four children of Horus the Canopic gods. Behind him are Isis and Nephthys, the Goddesses of Nature. The Black Pillar symbolizes the pathway of darkness, the Negative Confession, as the White Pillar represents the Hymn to the Rising Sun, the Pathway of Light, and the Positive Confession. Between the two is the straight and narrow path that must be trodden by the initiate. Hence in every grade and at every advance between the Pillars is the pathway and when the higher grades are reached, more complete knowledge of the symbolic designs on them is unfolded. And this shall suffice for the present.

THE GARDEN OF EDEN BEFORE THE FALL

(Note: the two coloured pictures of the Garden Before and After the Fall are located in the Colour Plate section of this text.)

This diagram is described in the Practicus Ritual. It shows in a glyph the teaching proper to the Practicus on entering the Sephirah HOD which he has reached by the Paths of SHIN and RESH from MALKUTH and YESOD respectively.

At the summit are the THREE SUPERNAL SEPHIROTH summed up into ONE AIMA ELOHIM, the Mother Supernal - The Woman of the Apocalypse clothed with the SUN, the MOON under her feet, and on her head the Crown of Twelve Stars.

It is written 'So the Name JEHOVAH is joined to the Name ELOHIM, for JEHOVAH planted a Garden Eastward in Eden.' From the Three Supernals follow the other Sephiroth of THE TREE OF LIFE. Below the TREE, proceeding from MALKUTH is THE TREE OF KNOWLEDGE of GOOD AND of EVIL which is between the Tree of Life and the World of Assiah or Shells, represented by the Coiled up DRAGON with Seven Heads and Ten Horns - being the Seven Infernal Palaces and the Ten Averse Sephiroth. (These are described in the text of the Rituals but are not read to the Candidate at his Grade. When studying this diagram, these descriptions should be looked up, but they are not required for the exam.)

The River NAHER flows forth from the Supernal Eden and in DAATH it is divided into Four Heads.

Pison: Fire-flowing to GEBURAH where there is Gold.

Gihon: Water-the Waters of Mercy, flowing into CHESED.

Hiddikel: Air-flowing into TIPHARETH.

Phrath (Euphrates): Earth-flowing into MALKUTH.

It is written "In DAATH the Depths are broken up and the Clouds drop down dew."

The word Naher has the meaning 'perennial stream' 'never failing waters' as opposed to other words meaning Torrent or Brook.

The River going out of Eden is the River of the Apocalypse, the Waters of Life, clear as crystal proceeding from the Throne, on either side of the Tree of Life, bearing all manner of Fruit.

Thus the Rivers form a Cross and on it The GREAT ADAM, the SON who is to rule the Nations, was extended from TIPHARETH and his arms stretch out to GEBURAH and GEDULAH, and in MALKUTH is EVE, supporting with her hands the TWO PILLARS.

THE GARDEN OF EDEN AFTER THE FALL

This diagram is described in the Philosophus Ritual. It shows in a glyph the teaching proper to a Philosophus on entering the Sephirah NETZACH which he has reached by the Three Paths of QOPH, TZADDI, and PEH from the SEPHIROTH - MALKUTH, YESOD and HOD respectively.

The Great Goddess EVE, being tempted by the fruits of the TREE OF KNOWLEDGE whose branches tend upwards to the seven lower Sephiroth, but also downward to the Kingdom of Shells, reached down to them and the two pillars were left unsupported.

Then the Sephirotic Tree was shattered. She fell and with her fell the Great ADAM. And the Great Red Dragon arose with his seven heads and ten horns, and EDEN was desolated and the folds of the Dragon enclosed MALKUTH and linked it to the Kingdom of the Shells.

And the heads of the Dragon rose into the seven lower Sephiroth, even up to DAATH at the feet of Aima Elohim.

Thus were the four Rivers of EDEN desecrated and the Dragon Mouth gave forth the Infernal Waters in DAATH and this is LEVIATHAN, The Piercing and Crooked Serpent.

But TETRAGRAMMATON ELOHIM placed the Four Letters YHVH of the NAME and the Flaming Sword of the Ten Sephiroth between the devastated Garden and the Supernal Eden, that this should not be involved in the Fall of ADAM.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

And it became necessary that a Second Adam should arise to restore the System, and thus, as ADAM had been spread on the Cross of the Four Rivers, so the Second ADAM should be crucified on the Infernal Rivers of the four armed Cross of DAATH, yet to do this He must descend into the lowest, even MALKUTH the Earth, and be born of her. (Psalm 74. 'Thou breakest the Heads of Leviathan in pieces.')

And on the Dragon Heads were the names of the eight Kings of EDOM and on his horns the names of the Eleven Dukes of EDOM, for DAATH having developed in the Dragon a new Head, the Seven Headed Dragon with Ten Horns became Eight Headed and Eleven Horned. (Genesis, 36, v31 to 43. Chronicles 1, v43 to 54.)

The Edomites were the descendants of Esau who sold his birthright. Their Kings came to symbolise unlawful and chaotic forces.

Don't dismiss these Altar Diagrams too readily. They are really very profound. They should be studied and meditated upon to correlate them with all the contents of one's psyche. Perhaps a few words quoted from What You Should Know About The Golden Dawn, (Falcon Press, 1983), would be suggestive in this connection.

"In two Altar diagrams - one called the Garden of Eden shown in the Practicus Grade, and the other called The Fall, shown in the Philosophus Grade, all these ideas are expanded and synthesised. They should be carefully studied and receive long meditation, for in them are many clues to the spiritual and psychological problems which beset the traveller on the Path, and they resume the entire philosophy of Magic. Many hints, moreover, which may be found useful as assisting meditation are contained in The 'Curse' from a Philosophical Point of View in the second volume of Blavatsky's Secret Doctrine in connection with the Prometheus myth and the awakening of Manas, mind.

The first depicts a personified representation of the three fundamental principles in Man. Each of these is apparently separate, functioning independently on its own plane without cooperation with, because unaware of, either the higher or the lower. Principally, it represents man in the now departed morning of the race, in the primary rounds of evolutionary effort when not yet had self-consciousness been awakened or won by self-induced and self-devised efforts, and when peace and harmony prevailed both within and without by right of heritage rather than through personal labour. The diagram appears in the Water grade of Practicus, since Water is a fitting representation of this placid peace. At the summit of the diagram stands the Apocalyptic woman clothed with the Sun of glory, crowned with the twelve stars, and the moon lying at her feet. Her symbolism pertains to the supernal essence of mind, representing thus the type and symbol of the glittering Augoeides, the Neschamah. "It is," remarks Jung, describing an analogous conception in Secret Of The Golden Flower, "a line or principle of life that strives after superhuman, shining heights." At the base of the tree stands Eve, the Nephesch, who, in opposition to this divine Genius, stands for the "dark, earth-born, feminine principle with its emotionality and instinctiveness reaching far back into the depths of time, and into the roots of physiological continuity." Between the two stands Adam, supported by the fundamental strength of Eve, the Ruach or Ego not yet awakened to a realisation of its innate power and possibility. From the larger point of view he represents the race as a whole and is "the personified symbol of the collective Logos, the 'Host,' and of the Lords of Wisdom or the Heavenly Man, who incarnated in humanity." Otherwise he represents the individual candidate on the Path just prior to the awakening of the "sleeping dogs" within his being.

Beneath these three figures sleeps a coiled many headed dragon, silent, unawakened, still. None it would seem is aware of that latent power, titanic and promethean, coiled beneath, the active magical power centred in man, the libido, neutral, neither good nor evil in itself.

Very similar in some respects to the foregoing is the diagram revealed in the Philosophus grade. As the peace of Eden as shown during the Water grade, so in the Grade of Philosophus the power of Fire is shown to have called forth catastrophe. Formerly coiled beneath the tree, the hydra-headed Dragon in this Diagram has usurped its proper place, and its several horned heads wind their way up into the very structure of the Tree of Life, even unto Daath. Lured downwards by the Tree of Knowledge (and we may remember in what sense the Bible speaks of the verb "to know") towards the "darkly splendid world wherein continually lieth a faithless depth," Eve, the lower self, ceases to give support to Adam; she has yielded to the awful fascination of the awakening psyche. Far easier is it to fall than to climb to the distant heights. Yet the Fall is catastrophic only from one viewpoint. The awareness of the rise of the Dragon endows man also with consciousness of power, and power is life and progress. The Dragon is the symbol of the enemy to be overcome, as well as, when eventually conquered, the great prize to be won at the end.

The Qabalistic Sephirah of Daath is the conjunction of Chokmah and Binah on the Tree of Life, the child of Wisdom and Understanding thus Knowledge. It refers to the symbolic sphere formed within or above the Ruach by means of experience, and this assimilated becomes transmuted into intuition or faculty of mind. But fundamentally it is the ascent of the Dragon, or, if you wish, the obsession of the personality by a welling up of the unconscious archetypes, which first renders Daath a possibility; it is the Fall which is responsible for the acquisition of self-knowledge. Thus "it stands proven," claims Blavatsky "that Satan, or the Red Fiery Dragon, the 'Lord of Phosphorus,' and Lucifer, or 'Light-bearer,' is in us, it is our mind, our tempter and Redeemer, our intelligent liberator and saviour from pure animalism." In the evolutionary scheme the Fall occurs through a higher type of intelligence coming into close contact with nascent humanity, thus stimulating the psyche of the race - or so the magical tradition has it. The recapitulation of this epoch within the individual sphere of consciousness proceeds through the technique of initiation whereby the Red Dragon is stirred into activity through contact with the fructifying powers of the elements. The use of the divine prerogative brought about by the magic of experience, the awakening of Daath, brings disaster at first, because the awakened psyche is imperfectly understood and so abused for personal ends. But that very disaster and that abuse confers the consciousness of self. Consequently, the realisation of sorrow as it impinges on the personality and an understanding of its causes must inevitably constitute the first impetus to perform the Great Work, even as it comprises the motive first to seek the services of the analytical psychologist. This impetus and this self-consciousness are the prime implications of Daath. Its signification is a higher type of consciousness, the beginning of a spiritual rebirth. It acts as a self-evolved link between the higher Self on the one hand at peace in its Supernal Eden, and the human soul on the other, bound by its fall to the world of illusion and sense and matter. But until that self-consciousness and acquired knowledge are turned to noble and altruistic ends, sorrow and suffering are the inevitable results. Continually will the Red Dragon, the inverted power of the eros, ravish the little kingdom of self until such time as we lift ourselves up to the diviner parts of our human nature, thus conquering the foe by driving it back to its proper realm, using but neither ignoring nor repressing experience and its fruits to transcend our own personal limitations.

Let me quote a few especially appropriate lines from Jung in connection with this Fall, when the fundamental basis of the Ruach has been attracted to the kingdom of shells, and when Malkuth has been completely cut off from the other Sephiroth,

"Consciousness thus torn from its roots and no longer able to appeal to the authority of the primordial images, possesses a Promethean freedom, it is true, but it also partakes of the nature of a godless hybris. It soars above the earth, even above mankind, but the danger of capsizing is there, not for every individual to be sure, but collectively for the weak members of such a society, who again Promethean-like, are bound by the unconscious to the Caucasus." It will not do, then, for the Adept to be cut off from his roots, but he must unite and integrate his entire Tree, and train and develop the titanic forces of the unconscious so that they become as a powerful but docile beast whereon he may ride. (The diagram discussed in the next paragraph will be found in the colour plate section.)

The Adeptus Minor grade continues the theme of these two diagrams. Escorted into the Vault, the Aspirant is shown the lid of the Tomb of Osiris, the Pastos wherein is buried our Father Christian Rosenkreutz, and on that lid is a painting which brings fulfilment to the narrative of the preceding diagrams. It is divided into two sections. The lower half of the painting depicts a figure of Adam, similar to his presentation in the Practicus grade, though here the heads of the Dragon are falling back from the Tree, showing the Justified One, the illuminated adept, by his immolation and self-sacrifice rescuing the fallen kingdom of his natural self from the clutches of an outraged eros. But above this, as though to show the true nature behind the deceptive appearance of things, is illustrated a noble figure of majesty and divinity, described in the Ritual in these words. "And being turned I saw seven golden light-bearers, and in the midst of the Light-bearers, one like unto the Ben Adam, clothed with a garment down to the feet, and girt with a golden girdle. His head and his hair were white as snow, and his eyes as flaming fire; his feet like unto brass as if they burned in a furnace. And his voice like the sound of many waters. And he had in his right hand seven stars, and out of his mouth went the Sword of Flame, and his countenance was as the Sun in his strength."

VOLUME THREE

It is to effect this redemption of the personality, to regenerate and transmute the enormous power of the Red Dragon, and attempt to bring the individual to some realisation of his potential godhead, that is the object of the Adeptus Minor ceremony. It is for this reason that I hold that the Golden Dawn or magical technique is of supreme and inestimable importance to mankind at large. In it the work of academic psychology may find a logical conclusion, so that it may develop further its own particular contribution to modern life and culture. For the system indicated the psychological solution of the anima problem. "Arise! Shine! For thy light is come!"

ON THE GENERAL GUIDANCE AND PURIFICATION OF THE SOUL

Learn first, O Practicus of our Ancient Order, that true Equilibrium is the basis of the Soul. If thou thyself hast not a sure foundation, whereon wilt thou stand to direct the forces of Nature?

Know then that as Man is born into this world amidst the darkness of Nature and the strife of contending forces, so must his first endeavour be to seek the Light through their reconciliation. Thus, thou who hast trial and trouble of this life, rejoice because of them, for in them is strength, and by their means is a pathway opened unto that Light Divine.

How should it be otherwise, O man, whose life is but a day in Eternity, a drop in the Ocean of Time? How, if thy trials were not many, couldst thou purge thy soul from the dross of Earth?

Is it but now that the higher life is beset with dangers and difficulties; hath it not been ever thus with the Sages and Hierophants of the past? They have been persecuted and reviled, they have been tormented of men, yet through this has their glory increased. Rejoice, therefore, O Initiate, for the greater thy trial, the brighter thy triumph. When men shall revile thee and speak against thee falsely, hath not the Master said "Blessed art thou." Yet, O Practicus, let thy victories bring thee not vanity, for with increase of knowledge should come increase of wisdom. He who knows little, thinketh he knows much; but he who knoweth much hath learned his own ignorance. Seest thou a Man wise in his own conceit? There is more hope of a fool than of him.

Be not hasty to condemn another's sin. How knowest thou that in his place thou couldst have resisted the temptation? And even were it so, why shouldst thou despise one who is weaker than thyself? Be thou well sure of this, that in slander and self-righteousness is sin. Pardon therefore the sinner, but encourage not the sin. The Master condemned not the adulterous woman, but neither did he encourage her to commit the sin.

Thou therefore who desirest magical gifts, be sure that thy soul is firm and steadfast, for it is by flattering thy weakness that the Evil One will gain power over thee. Humble thyself before thy God, yet fear neither man nor spirit. Fear is failure and the forerunner of failure; and courage is the beginning of virtue. Therefore fear not the spirits, but be firm and courteous with them, for this too may lead thee into sin. Command and banish the Evil ones. Curse them by the Great Names of God, if need be; but neither mock nor revile them, for so assuredly thou wilt be led into error.

A man is what he maketh himself within the limits fixed by his inherited destiny; he is a part of mankind. His actions affect not himself only, but also those with whom he is brought into contact, either for good or for evil.

Neither worship nor neglect the physical body, which is thy temporary connection with the outer and material world. Therefore let thy mental equilibrium be above disturbances by material events. Restrain the animal passions and nourish the higher aspirations; the emotions are purified by suffering.

Do good unto others for God's sake, not for reward, not for gratitude from them, not for sympathy. If thou art generous, thou wilt not long for thine ears to be tickled by expressions of gratitude. Remember that unbalanced force is evil, that unbalanced severity is but cruelty and oppression, but that also unbalanced Mercy is but weakness which would allow and abet evil.

True prayer is as much action as Word; it is Will. The gods will not do for man what his higher powers can do for himself, if he cultivate Will and Wisdom. Remember that this Earth is but an atom in the Universe, and thou thyself but an atom thereon. And that even couldst thou become the God of this Earth whereon thou crawlest and grovellest, thou wouldst even then be but an atom and one among many. Nevertheless, have the greatest self-respect, and to that end sin not against thyself. The sin which is unpardonable is knowingly and wilfully to reject spiritual truth, but every sin and act leaveth its effect.

To obtain magical Power, learn to control thought. Admit only true ideas which are in harmony with the end desired, and not every stray and contradictory idea that presents itself. Fixed thought is a means to an end; therefore pay attention to the power of silent thought and meditation. The material act is but the outward expression of the thought, and therefore it hath been said that "the thought of foolishness is sin." Thought therefore is the commencement of action, and if a chance thought can produce much effect, what cannot fixed thought do? Therefore, as has been already said, establish thyself firmly in the Equilibrium of Forces, in the center of the cross of the elements, that Cross from whose centre the creative word issued in the birth of the dawning universe.

As it was said unto thee in the Grade of Theoricus: "Be thou therefore prompt and active as the Sylphs, but avoid frivolity and caprice. Be energetic and strong like the Salamanders, but avoid irritability and ferocity. Be flexible and attentive to images like the Undines, but avoid idleness and changeableness. Be laborious and patient like the gnomes, but avoid grossness and avarice." So shalt thou gradually develop the powers of thy Soul and fit thyself to command the spirits of the elements.

For wert thou to summon the Gnomes to pander to thy avarice, thou wouldst no longer command them, but they would command thee. Wouldst thou abuse the pure creatures of God's creation to fill thy coffers and to satisfy thy lust for Gold? Wouldst thou defile the Spirits of driving Fire to serve thy wrath and hatred? Wouldst thou violate the purity of the Souls of the Water to pander to thy lust and debauchery? Wouldst thou force the Spirits of the evening breeze to minister to thy folly and caprice?

Know that with such desires thou canst but attract the evil and not the good, and in that case the evil will have power over thee. In true religion there is no sect. Therefore take heed that thou blaspheme not the name by which another knoweth his God for if thou doest this thing in Jupiter, thou wilt blaspheme YHVH; and in Osiris YEHESHUAH.

"Ask of God and ye shall have,
Seek and ye shall find.
Knock, and it shall be opened unto you."

SHEM HA-MEPHORESCH THE 72 FOLD NAME

This refers to the Seventy Two Names of the Expounded Name YHVH.

Four is the number of the letters of the Tetragrammaton. Four is also the number of the letters of the name ADNI which is its representative and key. The latter name is bound with the former and united thereto, thus IAHDVNHY forming a name of 8 letters. 8×3 , the number of the Supernal Triad, yields the 24 thrones of the Elders of the Apocalypse, each of whom wears on his head a golden crown of three rays, each ray of which is a name, each name an Absolute Idea and Ruling Power of the great name YHVH Tetragrammaton.

The number 24 of the thrones multiplied by the 3 rays of the crown which equals 72, the name of God of 72 letters, which is thus mystically shown in the name YHVH, as under: (Or as the book of Revelation says: "When the living creatures (the four Kerubim the Letters of the Name) give glory to Him, etc. the four and twenty elders fall down before Him and cast their crowns before the Throne, etc." (that is the Crowns, which each bear 3 of the 72 Names, and these 72 names are written on the leaves of the Tree of Life which were for the healing of the nations.)

These are also the 72 names of the ladder of Jacob on which the Angels of God ascended and descended. It will presently be shown how the 72 Angelic names are formed from the 72 Names of the Deity, and also how their signification is to be found. The 72 Names of the Deity are thus obtained. The 19th, 20th, and 21st verses of the XIV Chapter of the Book of Exodus each consist of 72 letters.

(The English translation is:) 19th verse: "And the Angel of the Elohim, that went before the camp of Israel, removed and went behind them; and the pillar of cloud removed from before them and stood behind them."

20th verse: "And it came between the camp of the Egyptians and the camp of Israel; and it was a cloud and darkness (to the first) but it gave light by night (to these); and the one came not near unto the other all the night."

21st verse: "And Moses stretched out his hand over the sea, and the Lord drove back the sea with a strong east wind all that night and made the sea dry land, and the waters divided."

These three verses are now to be written at length one above the other, the first from right to left, and the second from left to right, and the third from right to left; and as they contain 72 letters, there will be 72 columns of three letters each. Then each column will give a word of three letters, and there will be 72 names of three letters each, which are the Shem ha Mephoresch or 72 Names of the Deity, expounding the Powers of the name YHVH.

From these names 72 Names of Angels are formed by the addition of, in some cases, the suffice YH which signifies Mercy and Beneficence, or in others of the suffice AL which signifies Severity and Judgment. Or as it is said: "And the Name is in Him, etc."

These 72 Angels rule over the 72 Quinances or sets of 5° of the Zodiac, and therefore each decanate or set of 10° of a Sign has 2 Quinances, and each sign has 3 decanates, which are again allotted to the Planets in regular order. This is the formation as given above (each Angel's name containing 5 letters and each name of Deity 3.).

These then are the Schem ha-Mephoresch or 72 Angels bearing the Name of God, classed into nine sets of 8, each answering to the nine choirs of Angels, and also divided into 4 great divisions of 18 each, each division under the Presidency of one of the four letters of the Name YHVH.

They are further classed as belonging to the decanates of the Zodiac as follows: 2 Quinances to each decanate. The first division of 3 Signs is under the Presidency of Y, the letter of Fire. The second Division of 3 signs, headed by the Watery sign Cancer, is under the Presidency of H the Letter of Water. The third division of 3 Signs headed by the Airy Sign Libra is under the Presidency of VAU, the letter of Air. And the 4th division of 3 signs headed by the Earthy Sign Capricorn is under the Presidency of HEH final, the letter of Earth.

But it should be remembered that the most powerful rule of Y of Tetragrammaton is over the Fiery Triplexity; that of H over the Watery Triplexity; that of Vau over the Airy

VOLUME THREE

Triplicity; and that of H final over the Earthy Triplicity.

In the 22nd chapter of the Apocalypse of St. John it is said that "The Tree of Life which bare Twelve manner of fruits and yielded her fruit every month, and the leaves of the Tree were for the healing of the Nations. And there shall be no more curse; but the Throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it."

This is exemplified in the drawing taken from the 3-8 Altar Diagram. The "Twelve Manner of fruits yielded every month" answer to the signs of the Zodiac and the Twelve Tribes of the Sons of Jacob. Also to the twelve apostles. The healing leaves are those of Schem ha-Mephoresch or the divided Name of Zauir Anpin, the Microprosopus, the Christ, the Lamb of Elohim, whose Throne is in the Tree, from which Throne issues the River of the Waters of Life.

The Seventy two leaves of the Tree of Life are Zauir Anpin or Microprosopus.

Now the Twelve Sons of Jacob go down into Egypt, that is the Kingdom, Malkuth, which has been destroyed in the Fall, and cut from the Sephirotic Tree by the intersecting folds of the great Dragon who then becomes its Ruler as shown in the great Altar Diagram of the 4-7 grade. "Behold, I am against thee, Pharoah, King of Egypt, the great dragon that lieth in the midst of the Rivers." And the first of the sons of Jacob who goeth down is Joseph whose two Tribes, Ephraim and Manasseh, balance each other in Chesed and Geburah. That is to say, that there first comes down into the desolated Earth the combined power of Mercy and Severity. And Ephraim, the Kerubic sign of the Ox, is the natural ruler of Earth in Malkuth, under the power of H final of the Holy Name, the Bride, Eve, and the Queen. And the Schem ha-Mephoresch, the 72, are found in the number of the family of Jacob's sons is 70; and Jacob and Joseph equals 72. But the then ruling Pharoah, corresponds more to Hadar amongst the Edomite Kings, as representing one of not so evil a tendency. Yet as the Apocalyptic symbol of the Lamb and the Airy Sign which leads off the Schem ha-Mephoresch is Chesed; one opposed to the evil symbol of the Dragon, so is every shepherd an abomination to the Egyptians, who yet are friendly with the Ox symbol, the Kerubic Ruler of Earth, and therefore is it symbolically said by the Children of Israel that their business has been about cattle and not about sheep.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

But the name YHVH, the Son, the Microprosopus is not therein established till the Ten Sephiroth have sent forth their Judgment upon the land of Egypt, i.e., the Ten Plagues. And therefore it is only when YHVH interposes between Egypt and Israel that the verses occur in Exodus which show forth the Schem ha-Mephoresch. There are also other ways of making sets of 72 names out of these verses, Exodus xiv, v. 19, 20 and 21, e.g., by writing them all from right to left, and so on, and also by permutation of the letters by any rule of Temurah. The meanings of these are then to be found as herein after shown for the regular Schem ha-Mephoresch.

It is worthy of note that all the letters of the Alphabet except Gimel are employed in the Schem ha-Mephoresch. This letter Gimel whose numerical value is 3, is therefore the key of their construction, they being grouped together in words of three letters each. Furthermore, there are 360° in the Zodiac, and this divided by 5 gives 72° which is the interval between the points of a regular pentagram inscribed within a great circle. Also the number 72 equals 6 x 12 which equals 72 cubes or Hexagrams, so that each Hexagram will represent by its Angles the 6 Quinancies of a Sign, the Sign itself being written in the centre, e.g., in any order that may be required.

The meaning of these 72 names of God, of the Angels of the Schem ha-Mephoresch are then collected in the following manner from those 72 verses taken from different Psalms, in each of which the name YHVH appears, save in the case of the 70th, YBM:

Here follow in detail the Psalms mentioned, showing the method of extracting the angelic Names. (The important point here is the significance of the meaning of each Name, a meaning which occurs in no other place in these documents.)

THE 72 NAMES AND THEIR MEANINGS

1. VAHAVIAH is God the Exalter.
2. YELAYEL is Strength.
3. SAITEL is Refuge, Fortress and Confidence.
4. OLMIAH is Concealed, Strong.
5. MAHASHIAH is Seeking safety from Trouble.
6. LELAHHEL is Praiseworthy, declaring His works.
7. AKAIAH is long suffering.
8. KEHETHEL is Adorable.
9. HAZAYEL is Merciful.
10. ALDIAH is Profitable.
11. LAVIAH is to be exalted.
12. HIHAAYAH is Refuge.
13. YEZAHEL is Rejoicing over all things.
14. MEBAHHEL is Guardian, Preserver.
15. HARAYEL is Aid.
16. HOQMIAH is Raise up, Praying day and night.

VOLUME THREE

17. LAVIAH is Wonderful.
18. KELIAL is Worthy to be invoked.
19. LIVOYAH is Hastening to hear.
20. PHEHILYAH is Redeemer, Liberator.
21. NELOKHIEL is Thou alone.
22. YEYAYIEL is Thy right hand.

The 78th Psalm: "Give ear, o my people" etc. has also 72 verses which again refer to the Schem ha-Mephoresch. As before shewn, the Quinancies of the Zodiac ruled by these 72 names of Angels are classed in pairs in the 36 decanates or phases of 10° in each Sign. These signs and decanates have again their ruling angels and intelligences.

THE MAGICAL IMAGES OF THE DECANS

To each decanate certain magical images and characteristics are allotted, as follows:

ARIES

1st Decan. Mars. Therein ascendeth a man tall, dark, powerful and restless, clothed in a white tunic and scarlet mantle, having keen and flame-colored eyes. And in his hand a sharp sword. It is a decan of boldness, fierceness, resolution and shamelessness.

2nd Decan of Aries is of the Sun, and therein ascendeth a woman clothed in green robes, with one leg uncovered from the knee to the ankle. This is a decan of pride, nobility, wealth and rule.

3rd Decan of Aries is of Venus, and therein ascendeth a restless man, clothed in scarlet robes having golden bracelets on his hands and arms. It is a decan of subtlety, beauty, etc.

TAURUS

In the first decan of Taurus which is of Mercury, ascendeth a woman with long beautiful hair, clothed in flame-colored robes. It is a decan of ploughing, sowing, building, and earthy wisdom.

VOLUME THREE

In the 2nd Decan of Taurus, which is of Luna, ascendeth a man like the preceding figure, having feet cloven like an ox-hoof. It is a decan of power, nobility, rule over the people.

In the 3rd Decan of Taurus, which is of Saturn, ascendeth a man of swarthy complexion having large white teeth projecting from his mouth, a body like that of an elephant with long legs. And there arise with him a horse and a stag and a calf. It is a decan of misery, slavery, necessity, madness and baseness.

GEMINI

In the 1st Decan of Gemini which is of Jupiter, there ascendeth a beautiful woman, and with her two horses. It is a decan of writing, calculations, giving and receiving money, and of wisdom in unprofitable things.

In the 2nd Decan of Gemini which is of Mars, ariseth an eagle-headed man, wearing a steel helmet surmounted by a crown, and having a bow and arrows in his hand. It is a decan of burden, pressure, labor, subtlety, dishonesty.

In the 3rd Decan of Gemini which is of Sol, ariseth a man clothed in a coat of mail with two arrows and quiver. It is a decan of disdain, mirth and jollity and of many unprofitable words.

CANCER

In the 1st Decan of Cancer which is of Venus, ascendeth a man having a distorted face, and hands, and his body is like that of a horse having white feet with garland of leaves around his body. A decan of dominion, science, love, mirth, subtlety and magistracy.

In the 2nd Decan of Cancer which is of Mercury, ascendeth a woman beautiful of countenance, wearing on her head a green myrtle wreath, holding in her hands a lyre, and she singeth of love and of gladness. A decan of pleasure, mirth, abundance and plenty.

In the 3rd Decan of Cancer which is of Luna, there ascendeth a swift-footed person holding a viper in his hand, and having dogs running before him. It is a decan of running, hunting, pursuing, acquiring goods by war and of contention among men.

LEO

In the first decan of Leo which is of Saturn, there ascendeth a man in sordid raiment, and with him ascendeth a noble man on horseback accompanied by bears and dogs.

A decan of boldness, liberality, victory, cruelty, lust and violence.

In the 2nd Decan of Leo which is of Jupiter, there ascendeth a man covered with a white myrtle wreath and holding a bow in his hand. It is a decan of love, pleasure, society and avoiding of quarrels and carefulness in parting with goods.

In the 3rd Decan of Leo which is of Mars there ascendeth a dark and swarthy man, hairy, holding in one hand a drawn sword and in the other a shield. It is a decan of quarrelling, ignorance, pretended knowledge, wrangling, victory over the low and base, and of drawing swords.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

VIRGO

In the first decan of Virgo which is of Sol, there ariseth a Virgin clothed in linen, holding an apple or a pomegranate in her hand. A decan of sowing, ploughing, planting herbs, colonization and of storing money and food.

In the 2nd decan of Virgo which is of Venus, there ariseth a man, tall, fair and large, and with him a woman holding in her hand a black oil jar. It is a decan of gain, covetousness, taking of goods and rising by care and treasuring up.

In the 3rd decan of Virgo which is of Mercury, ascendeth an old man leaning on a staff and wrapped in a mantle. It is a decan of old age, slothfulness, loss and depopulation.

LIBRA

In the first decan of Libra which is of Luna, ariseth a dark man having in his right hand a spear and a laurel branch, and in his left a book. It is a decan of justice, aid, truth, and helping the poor.

In the 2nd Decan of Libra which is of Saturn, there ariseth a man dark and of unpleasant face. It is a "face" of ill-deeds yet of singing and mirth and gluttony, sodomy and following of evil pleasures.

In the 3rd decan of Libra which is of Jupiter, there ariseth a man riding upon an ass with a wolf going before him. A decan of quietness, ease, plenty, good life and dance.

SCORPIO

In the 1st decan of Scorpio which is of Mars, there ascendeth a man holding in his right hand a lance, and in his left a human head. A decan of strife, sadness, treachery, deceit, destruction and ill-will.

In the 2nd Decan of Scorpio which is of Sol, there ascendeth a man riding upon a camel holding a scorpion in his hand. A decan of affronts, detection, strife, stirring up of quarrels, science and detection.

In the 3rd decan of Scorpio which is of Venus, there ascendeth a horse and a wolf. A decan of war, drunkenness, fornication, wealth, pride and of rage and violence against women.

SAGITTARIUS

In the 1st decan of Sagittarius which is of Mercury there ascendeth a man with three bodies, one red, one white, and one black. It is a decan of boldness, freedom, welfare, liberality, and of fields and gardens.

In the 2nd decan of Sagittarius which is of Luna, there ascendeth a man leading cows, having before him an ape and a bear. It is a decan of fear, lamentation, grief, anxiety, and disturbance.

VOLUME THREE

In the 3rd decan of Sagittarius which is of Saturn, there ascendeth a man holding another by the hair and slaying him. It is a decan of ill-will, levity, envy, obstinacy and swiftness in all evil things, and of deceitful acts.

CAPRICORN

In the 1st decan of Capricorn, which is of Jupiter, there ascendeth a man holding in his right hand an arrow or javelin, and in his left a lapwing. It is a decan of wandering travail, labor and joy, alternate gain and loss, weakness and necessity.

In the 2nd decan of Capricorn which is of Mars, there ascendeth a man with an ape running before him. It is a decan of ever seeking what cannot be known and of what cannot be attained to.

In the 3rd decan of Capricorn which is of Sol, there ascendeth a man holding a book which he opens and shuts. It is a decan of covetousness, suspicion, careful ordering of matters, but with discontent.

AQUARIUS

In the first decan of Aquarius which is of Venus, there ascendeth a man with bowed head and a bag in his hand. It is a decan of poverty, anxiety, grieving after gain, and never resting from labor, loss and violence.

In the 2nd decan of Aquarius which is of Mercury, there ariseth a man arrayed like a king looking with pride and conceit on all around him. It is a decan of beauty, dominance, conceit, good manners and self-esteem, yet notwithstanding modest.

In the 3rd decan of Aquarius which is of Luna ascendeth a man with a small head clothed like a woman, having an old man with him. It is a decan of abundance and compliments, detection and affronts.

PISCES

In the 1st decan of Pisces which is of Saturn there ariseth a man with two bodies but joining their heads together. It is a decan of many thoughts, of anxiety, of journeying from place to place, of misery, of seeking riches and food.

In the 2nd decan of Pisces which is of Jupiter, there ascendeth a grave man pointing to the sky. It is a decan of self-praise, of high mind, and of seeking after great and high aims.

In the 3rd decan of Pisces which is of Mars, there ascendeth a man of grace and thoughtful countenance, carrying a bird in his hand and before him a woman and an ass. It is a decan of pleasure, fornication, of quietness, and of peacemaking.

The images of the decans are differently given by other writers, but the signification is similar. Also every degree has its allotted emblem and significance. (The Order did not list these, but some modern writers have accomplished this. It is suggested that the interested student consult Sabian Symbols by Marc Edmunc Jones. He deals extensively with this subject.)

The following note shows still further the connection between the YHVH and the Shem ha-Mephoresch.

Let the Tetragrammaton, as in this diagram, be written a triangle apex upwards, so that its component letters form a triangle in themselves by increasing each descending line beyond the space occupied by the line above it. Above will then be a single line, below it like two Hehs, the three Vaus, then four final Hehs. Thus we constitute a triangle of ten letters answering to the Ten Sephiroth, the uppermost Yod answering to Kether, the two Hehs to Chokmah and Binah, the three Vaus to Chesed, Geburah and Tiphareth, and the four final Hehs to Netzach, Hod, Yesod and Malkuth.

Now if we invert the Triangle and write it in descending ratio, four Yods, three Hehs, two Vaus, and one final Heh, we shall find that the total number will be 72, that of Schem ha-Mephoresch.

But the best of the forms is that when it is written by Yod, Heh, etc. Thus:

Yod is 10 and equals Atziluth
Yod Heh is 15 and equals Briah
Yod Heh Vau is 21 and equals Yetzirah.

VOLUME THREE

Whence we discover why the Yetziratic distribution of the numbers there answering to the hexad of Height, Depth, East, West, North and South -are sealed with the Permutation of Yod Heh Vau and not of Tetragrammaton.

Furthermore 21 is the number of EHEIEH. YHVH is 26 which is Assiah. The sum of all these numbers thus are:

10+15+21+26 is 72, the number of Schem ha-Mephoresch.

HODOS CHAMELIONIS CONCERNING THE TREE OF LIFE

(The plate showing this is in the colour plate section.) This is the Book of the Path of the Chameleon - the knowledge of the colours of the forces which lie beyond the physical universe. Study thou well that saying of Hermes 'that which is below is like that which is above' for if that which is below is conformed according to the Law of the Concealed One Great is his Name - be thou well assured that the closer thou adherest unto the Law of the Universe in thy working, by so much the more is thy Magical working just and true.

Recall what was said unto thee in the Ritual of the Paths of the Portal of the Vault of the Adepti. 'Therefore, by the straight and narrow path of Samekh, let the Philosophus advance like the arrow from the Bow of Qesheth.' Now Qesheth the Bow is the Rainbow of Promise stretched above the earth, whose name is formed from the letters of the Paths leading from Malkuth. If then it be by the Path of Samekh that the Philosophus should advance to the knowledge of the Adept, turning aside neither unto the right hand nor unto the left, whereon are the evil and threatening symbols of Death and the Devil, he must have a perfect and absolute knowledge of the Bow, ere he can follow the Path of the Arrow. But the Bow is of brilliant and perfect colour, whose analysis and synthesis yield others of the same scale, and hence is this book entitled "The Book of the Path of the Chameleon" - that Path, namely which ascendeth alone through the force of Qesheth, the Bow.

And if thy knowledge and application of the outer knowledge, which thou hast already learned, be faulty and incorrect how wilt thou be able to keep thyself from turning aside unto thy hurt? Therefore, learn not knowledge by rote only as an unreasoning child, but meditate, search out and compare, and to the end, see that thou think but little of thyself for only he that humbleth himself shall be exalted. Magical knowledge is not given unto thee to tickle thy vanity and conceit, but that by its means, thou mayest purify and equilibrate thy spiritual nature and honour the Vast and Concealed One.

This is the explanation of the first diagram of the Paths - the Sephiroth being in the feminine scale and the Paths in the masculine or King's scale. It is the Key of the Forces which lie in Qesheth the Bow. Treasure it in thy heart and mark it well, seeing that therein is the key or nature. Meditate on it and reveal it not unto the profane, for many and great are its mysteries.

There are four scales of colour which correspond to the Four Worlds. They are:

King Scale	Atziluth	Wands	Yod	Fire
Queen Scale	Briah	Cups	Heh	Water
Knight Scale	Yetzirah	Swords	Vau	Air
Knave Scale	Assiah	Pentacles	Heh	Earth

The colours differ according to the World or aspect of the Great Name they represent:

Thus Samekh in:

King Scale	Deep Blue
Queen Scale	Yellow
Knight Scale	Green
Knave Scale	Grey Blue

Tiphareth in:

King Scale	Rose
Queen Scale	Gold
Knight Scale	Pink
Knave Scale	Tawny Yellow

The TREE OF LIFE for the use of an Adeptus Minor is compounded of the first two scales. The SEPHIROTH are in the feminine, passive, or Queen Scale. The PATHS are in the masculine, active, or King Scale. It thus represents the forces of ATZILUTH in the PATHS uniting the SEPHIROTH as reflected in the Briatic World, one of the possible arrangements of the powers inherent in YOD HE of the GREAT NAME.

First are the Feminine colours of the Sephiroth, the Queen's Scale. In Kether is the Divine White Brilliance, the scintillation and corruscation of the Divine Glory that Light which lighteth the universe - that Light which surpasseth the glory of the Sun and beside which the light of mortals is but darkness, and concerning which it is not fitting that we should speak more fully. And the Sphere of its Operation is called Rashith ha-Gilgalim, the beginning of whirling (or whirls, or whorls), the Primum Mobile or First Mover, which bestoweth the gift of life in all things and filleth the whole Universe. And Eheieh is the Name of the Divine Essence in Kether. Its Archangel is the Prince of Countenances Metatron or Metraton, He who bringeth others before the face of God. The Name of its Order of Angels is called Chaioth ha-Qadesh, the Holy Living Creatures, which are also called the Order of Seraphim.

In Chokmah is a cloud-like grey which containeth various colours and is mixed with them, like a transparent pearl-hued mist, yet radiating withal, as if behind it there were a brilliant glory. And the Sphere of its influence is in Masloth, the Starry Heavens, wherein it disposeth the forms of things. Yah is the Divine Ideal Wisdom, and its Archangel is Ratziel, the Prince or Princes of the knowledge of hidden and concealed things, and the name of its Order of Angels is Auphanim, the Wheels or the Whirling Forces which are also called the Order of Kerubim.

In Binah is a thick darkness which yet veileth the Divine Glory in which all colours are hidden, wherein is mystery and depth and silence, and yet, it is the habitation of the Supernal Light. Thus is the Supernal Triad completed. And the Sphere of its Operation is Shabbathai, or rest, and it giveth forms and similitudes unto chaotic matter and it ruleth the sphere of action of the planet Saturn. Jehovah Elohim is the perfection of Creation and the Life of the World to Come. Its Archangel is Tzaphkiel, the Prince of the Spiritual Strife against Evil, and the Name of the Order of Angels is Aralim, the Strong and Mighty Ones who are also called the Order of Thrones. The Angel Yophiel is also referred unto Binah.

In Chokmah is the Radix of blue and thence is there a blue colour pure and primitive, and glistening with a spiritual Light which is reflected unto Chesed. And the Sphere of its Operation is called Tzedek or Justice and it fashioneth the images of material things, bestowing peace and mercy; and it ruleth the sphere of the action of the planet Jupiter. Al is the title of a God strong and mighty, ruling in Glory, Magnificence and Grace. The Archangel of Chesed is Tzadkiel, the prince of Mercy and Beneficence, and the Name of the Order of Angels is Chashmalim Brilliant Ones, who are also called the Order of Dominions or Dominations. The Sephirah Chesed is also called Gedulah or Magnificence and Glory.

In Binah is the Radix of Red, and therein is there a red colour, pure and scintillating and flashing with flame which is reflected unto Geburah. The Sphere of its Operation is called Madim or violent rushing Force and it bringeth fortitude, and war and strength and slaughter, as it were, the flaming Sword of an avenging God. It ruleth the Sphere of Action of the Planet Mars. Elohim Gibor is the Elohim, Mighty and Terrible, judging and avenging evil, ruling in wrath and terror and storm, and at whose steps are lightning and flame. Its Archangel is Kamael the Prince of Strength and Courage, and the Name of the Order of Angels is Seraphim the Flaming Ones who are also called the Order of Powers. The Sephirah Chesed is also called Gedulah or Magnificence and Glory, and the Sephirah Geburah is also called Pachad Terror and Fear.

In Kether is the Radix of a Golden Glory and thence is there a pure, primitive and sparkling, gleaming golden yellow which is reflected unto Tiphareth. Thus is the first reflected Triad completed. The Sphere of its operation is that of Shemesh, the Solar Light, and bestoweth Life, Light and Brilliancy in metallic matter, and it ruleth the sphere of action of the Sun. Yhvh Eloah va-Daath is a God of Knowledge and Wisdom, ruling over the Light of the Universe; and its Archangel is Raphael, the Prince of Brightness, Beauty and Life. The Name of the Order of Angels is Melechim or Malakim, that is Kings or Angelic Kings, who are also called the Order of Virtues, Angels and Rulers. The Angels Peniel and Pelial are also referred unto this Sephirah. It especially rules the Mineral world.

The beams of Chesed and of Tiphareth meet in Netzach and thence in Netzach arises a green, pure, brilliant, liquid, and gleaming like an emerald. The Sphere of its operations is that of Nogah or External Splendour, producing zeal, love, harmony, and it ruleth the Sphere of Action of the Planet Venus and the nature of the Vegetable World. Jehovah Tzabaoth is a God of Hosts and of Armies, of Triumph and of Victory, ruling the Universe in Justice and Eternity. Its Archangel Haniel is the Prince of Love and Harmony, and the Name of the Order of Angels is Elohim or gods who are also called the Order of Principalities. The Angel Cerviel is also referred unto this Sephirah.

The beams of Geburah and Tiphareth meet in Hod and thence arises in Hod a brilliant pure and flashing orange tawny. The Sphere of its Operation is that of Kokab, the stellar light, bestowing elegance, swiftness, scientific knowledge and art, and constancy of speech, and it ruleth the sphere of the action of the planet Mercury. Elohim Tzabaoth is also a God of Hosts and of Armies, of Mercy and of Agreement, of Praise and Honour, ruling the Universe in Wisdom and Harmony. Its Archangel is Michael, the Prince of Splendour and of Wisdom, and the Name of Order of Angels is Beni Elohim, or Sons of the Gods, who are also called the Order of Archangels.

The beams of Chesed and Geburah meet in Yesod and thence ariseth in Yesod a brilliant deep violet-purple or puce, and thus is the third Triad completed. The sphere of its operation is that of Levanah, the Lunar beam, bestowing change, increase and decrease upon created things and it ruleth the Sphere of Action of the Moon and the nature of mankind. Shaddai is a God who sheddeth benefits, Omnipotent and Satisfying, and Al Chai is the God of Life, the Living One. Its Archangel is Gabriel the Prince of Change and Alteration. The name of the Order of Angels is Kerubim or Kerubic ones who are also called the Order of Angels.

From the rays of this Triad there appear three colours in Malkuth together with a fourth which is their synthesis. Thus from the orange tawny of Hod and the green nature of Netzach, there goeth forth a certain greenish 'citrine' colour, yet pure and translucent withal. From the orange tawny of Hod mingled with the puce of Yesod there goeth forth a certain red russet brown, 'russet' yet gleaming with a hidden fire. From the green of Netzach and the puce of Yesod there goeth forth a certain other darkening green 'Olive' yet rich and glowing withal. The synthesis of all these is a blackness which bordereth upon the Qlippoth.

Thus are the colours of the Sephiroth completed in their feminine or Rainbow scale.

Moreover, though the Tree of Life operates through all the Ten Sephiroth, yet it is referred in a special manner to Tiphareth. Also, though the branches of the Tree of

VOLUME THREE

Knowledge of Good and Evil stretch into the seven lower Sephiroth and downwards into the Kingdom of Shells, yet it is referred especially unto Malkuth. Similarly with Netzach and Hod, the right and left columns of the Sephiroth are referred respectively thereto.

In Malkuth, Adonai ha-Aretz is God, the Lord and King, ruling over the Kingdom and Empire which is the Visible Universe.

Cholem Yesodoth the Breaker of Foundations, is the Name of the Sphere of the Elements from which all things are formed, and its Archangels are three: Metatron, the Prince of Countenance reflected from Kether, and Sandalphon, the Prince of Prayer (feminine), and Nephesch ha-Messiah, the Soul of the Reconciler for the Earth. The Order of Angels is Ashim or Flames of Fire, as it is written 'Who maketh his Angels as Ashim Spirits and his Ministers as a flaming Fire,' and these are also called the Order of blessed Souls, or of the Souls of the Just made Perfect.

The Three Archangels attributed to Malkuth with reference to Christian symbolism in regard to Our Father, Our Lady, and Our Lord. The following tables consists of a classification of the scales of colour in each of the Four Worlds. The first ten refer to the Sephiroth, and the remaining twenty-two refer to the Paths.

THE MICROCOSM - MAN

Thou shalt know that the whole Sphere of Sensation which surroundeth the whole physical body of a man is called "The Magical Mirror of the Universe." For therein are represented all the occult forces of the Universe projected as on a sphere, convex to the outer, but concave to man. This sphere surroundeth the physical body of a man as the Celestial Heavens do the body of a Star or a Planet, having their forces mirrored in its atmosphere. Therefore its allotment or organization is the copy of that Greater World or Macrocosm. In this "Magical Mirror of the Universe," therefore, are the Ten Sephiroth projected in the form of the Tree of Life as in a solid sphere. (See the diagram in the colour section on the Tree of Life in a solid sphere.) A man's physical body is within the Ten Sephiroth projected in a sphere. The divisions and parts of the body are formed from the Sephiroth of the Tree of Life, thus:

KETHER

Kether is above the Crown of the Head, and represents a crown which indeed is powerful, but requires one worthy to wear it. In the crown of the head is placed the faculty of Neschamah, which is the power of Aspiration unto that which is beyond. This power Neschamah is especially attributed unto the Supernal Triad in Assiah, of which there are three manifestations which are included in the general concept, Neschamah. From Chokmah and Binah are formed the sides of the brain and head. Therein exist the intellectual faculties of Wisdom and Understanding, shining into and illuminating their inferior, the Ruach. They are the mansions of the practical administration of the intellect, whose physical shewing forth is by reflection in Ruach. In the Magical Mirror of the Universe, or the Sphere of Sensation, Man is placed between four pillars of the Tree of Life as projected in a sphere. These keep their place and MOVE NOT, but the Man himself places in his Sphere of Sensation that point of the Zodiac which ascended at the moment of his birth and conception (for the same degree of the Zodiac ascendeth at both, otherwise the birth could not take place). That is to say that at those times the same degree of the Zodiac is ascending in the East of the Heavens of the Star whereon he is incarnated. Thus doth he remain during that incarnation facing that particular point in his sphere of sensation. That is to say, this sphere DOTH NOT REVOLVE about the physical body.

VOLUME THREE

CHESED AND GEBURAH

From Chesed and Geburah are formed the arms. Therein exist the faculties of operative action, wherefore at their extremities are the symbols of the Four Elements and the Spirit, thus:

Thumb - Spirit
3rd Finger - Fire
Index Finger - Water
Little Finger - Air
Second Finger - Earth

The arms are the manifestors of the executive power of the Ruach, and therein are the faculties of touch strongly expressed.

From TIPHARETH is formed the trunk of the body, free from the members, and therein as in a receptacle of influences are situated the vital organs. The blood is Spirit mingled with and governing the watery principle. The lungs are the receptacles of Air which tempereth the blood as the wind doth the waves of the sea, the mephitic impurities of the blood in its traversal of the body requiring the dispersing force of the Air, even as the sea, under a calm, doth putrify and become mephitic. The heart is the great centre of the action of Fire, lending its terrible energy as an impulse unto the others. Thence cometh from the fiery nature the red colour of the blood. The part above the heart is the chief abode of the Ruach, as there receiving and concentrating the other expression of its Sephiroth. This part is the central citadel of the body and is the particular abode of the lower and more physical will. The higher will is in the Kether of the body. For the higher will to manifest, it must be reflected into the lower will be NESCHAMAH. This lower will is potent around the heart and is seated like the King of the body upon its throne. The concentration of the other faculties of the Ruach in and under the presidency of the Will, at the same time reflecting the administrative governance of CHOKMAH and BINAH, is what is called the human consciousness. That is, a reflection of the two creative Sephiroth under the presidency of the Four Elements, or the reflection of Aima and Abba as the parents of the human Jehovah. But the human Neschamah exists only when the higher Will is reflected by the agency of aspiration from Kether into the lower body, and when the flaming letter SHIN is placed like a crown on the head of Microprosopus. Thus only doth the human will become the receptacle of the higher Will and the action of Neschamah is the link therewith. The lower will is the human Jehovah, an angry and jealous God, the Shaker of the Elements, the manifestor in the life of the body. But illuminated by the higher Will, he becometh YEHESHUAH, no longer angry and jealous, but the self-sacrificer and the Atoning and Reconciling One.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

This as regards the action of the more physical man. Unto this Ruach also are presented the reflections of the Macrocosmic Universe in the Sphere of Sensation. They surround the Ruach which, in the natural man, feeleth them but vaguely and comprehendeth them not. The faculties of the Earth are shown forth in the organs which digest and putrify, casting forth the impurities, even as the Earth is placed above the Qlippoth. Thou wilt say, then, that the Ruach cannot be the reasoning mind, seeing that it reflecteth its reason from Chokmah and Binah, but it is the executive faculty which reasoneth, which worketh and combineth the faculties reflected into it. The reasoning mind, therefore, is that which useth and combineth the Principia of Chokmah and Binah so that the parts of Chokmah and Binah which touch the Ruach are the initiators of the reasoning power. The reason itself is a process and but a simulacrum of the action of the higher Wisdom and Understanding. For the Air is not the Light, only the translator of the Light. Yet without the Air, the operations of the Light could not so well be carried out. The word Ruach, Spirit, also meaneth Air. It is like a thing that goeth out thou knowest not whither, and cometh in thou knowest not whence. 'The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof. but canst not tell whence it cometh nor whither it goeth. so is every one that is born of the Spirit.' This Air, the Ruach, permeateth the whole physical body but its concentrated influence is about the the heart. Yet, were it not for the boundary force of Chokmah and Binah above, of the sphere of sensation surrounding it, and of Malkuth below, the Ruach could not concentrate under the presidency of the Name, and the life of the body would cease. Thus far concerning the Ruach as a whole, that is, the action of the Will in Tiphareth.

NETZACH AND HOD

From Netzach and Hod are formed the thighs and legs, and they terminate in the symbols of five, as do the arms; but they are not so moveable, owing to the effect of Malkuth. In them are placed the faculties of support and firmness and balance; and they show the more physical qualities of the Ruach. In them is the sustaining force of the Ruach. They are the affirmation of the Pillars of the Sephiroth, as answering to the Passive, the arms more answering to the two pillars which are Active. They are the columns of the Human Temple.

From YESOD are formed the generative and excretory organs, and therein is the seat of the lower desires, as bearing more on the double nature of, on the one hand, the rejection of the Qlipoth, and on the other hand the simulacrum of the vital forces in Tiphareth. It is the special seat of the automatic consciousness. That is, not the Will, but the simulacrum of the Will in Tiphareth. Yesod is the lowest of the Sephiroth of the Ruach, and representeth "Fundamental Action." It therefore governeth generation. In Yesod is therefore the automatic consciousness or simulacrum of the Will. This automatic consciousness is to the Nephesh what the Daath action is to the Ruach. Thus, therefore, there being a simulacrum or reflection of the heart and vital organs in the parts governed by Yesod, if the consciousness of the Tiphareth be given unto this wholly, it shall pave the way for disease and death. For this will be a withdrawing of the vital forces of the Name, which are in the citadel of Tiphareth, to locate them in Yesod, which is a more easily attacked position. For the automatic consciousness is the translator of the Ruach unto the Nephesh.

MALKUTH

From Malkuth is formed the whole physical body under the command and presidency of Nephesh. The Nephesh is the subtle body of refined astral Light upon which, as on an invisible pattern, the physical body is extended. The physical body is permeated throughout by rays of the Ruach, of which it is the material completion. The Nephesh shineth through the Material body and formeth the Magical Mirror or Sphere of Sensation. This Magical Mirror or Sphere of Sensation is an imitation or copy of the Sphere of the Universe. The space between the physical body and the boundary of the sphere of Sensation is occupied by the ether of the astral world; that is to say, the container or recipient of the Astral Rays of the Macrocosm. The Nephesh is divided into its seven Palaces, combining the Sephirotic influences in their most material forms. That is, the world of passions dominated by the Ruach, or by the world which is beyond. That is, its Sephiroth are passionate, expressing a passionate dominion. Thus, its three Supernal Sephiroth, Kether, Chokmah and Binah, are united in a sense of feeling and comprehending impressions. Its Chesed is expressed by laxity of action. Its Geburah by violence of action. Its Tiphareth is expressed by more or less sensual contemplation of beauty, and love of vital sensation. Its Hod and Netzach, by physical well-being and health. Its Yesod, by physical desires and gratifications. Its Malkuth, by absolute increase and domination of matter in the material body. The Nephesh is the real, the actual body, of which the material body is only the result through the action of Ruach, which by the aid of the Nephesh, formeth the material body by the rays of Ruach, which do not ordinarily proceed beyond the limits of the physical body. That is to say, in the ordinary man the rays of Ruach rarely penetrate into the sphere of Sensation. Shining through infinite worlds, and darting its rays through the confines of space, in this Sphere of Sensation is a faculty placed even as a light is placed in an aperture of the upper part of the Ruach wherein act the rays from Chokmah and Binah which govern the reason, Daath.

This faculty can be thrown downwards into the Ruach, and thence can radiate into the Nephesh. It consists of seven manifestations answering to the Hexagram, and is like the

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Soul of Microprosopus or the Elohim of the Human YHVH. Therefore in the head, which is its natural and chief seat, are formed the seven apertures of the head. This is the Spiritual consciousness as distinct from the Human consciousness. It is manifested in 7 as just said or in 8 if Daath be included. The Father is the Sun (Chokmah). The Mother is the Moon (Binah). The Wind beareth it in his bosom (Ruach). Its Nurse is the Earth (Nephesh). The power is manifested when it can vibrated through the Earth.

The following is the true attribution of the seven apertures of the head:

The right ear is Saturn.
The left ear is Jupiter.
The right eye is the Sun.
The left eye is the Moon.
The mouth is Mercury.
The right nostril is Mars.
The left nostril is Venus.

These latter represent here the soniferous sense. The right and left eye the luminous sense, as the Sun and Moon are the luminaries of the Macrocosm. The right and left nostrils through which the breath passes, giving strength to the physical body, are under Mars and Venus. The mouth is under Mercury, the messenger and the Speaker.

This spiritual consciousness is a focus of the action of Neschamah. The lower will power should control the descent of this spiritual consciousness into the Ruach, and thence into the Nephesh, for the consciousness must descend into the Nephesh before the images of the Sphere of Sensation can be perceived. For it is only the rays of this consciousness permeating the Ruach that can take cognisance thereof. This faculty of the spiritual consciousness is the seat of Thought. Thought is a Light proceeding from the radiation of this spiritual consciousness, traversing the Ruach as Light traverseth Air, and encountering thereafter the symbols reflected in the sphere of Sensation, or magical mirror of the Universe. These symbols are by its radiation (i.e., that of the Thought) reflected again into the Spiritual Consciousness where they are subjected unto the action of the Reasoning Mind and of the Lower Will. That is, in the ordinary natural man when awake, the thought acteth through the Ruach, subject when there to the action of the Lower Will, and submitted to the reasoning power derived as aforesaid from Chokmah and Binah. But in the ordinary man when sleeping, and in the madman, the idiot, and the drunkard, the process is not quite the same.

In the sleeping man, the concentration of the Ruach in his heart during the waking time hath produced a weakening of the action of the Ruach in its subsidiary Sephiroth in the Physical Body. To preserve the salutary conjunction of the Ruach with the Nephesh in the physical body whose limits are fixed by the Sephiroth of the Ruach it is necessary to weaken the concentration in Tiphareth to repair the strain which is produced by the concentration of the Ruach therein during the waking state. This reflux of the Ruach into its subsidiary Sephiroth produceth naturally a weakening of the Lower Will; and the Ruach, therefore, doth not reflect so clearly the Reasoning Faculty. Wherefore, the thought of the spiritual consciousness reflecteth the image in a confused series, which are only partially realised by the lower will. This is as regards the ordinary natural man in sleep. In the madman, as considered apart from obsession, thought-obsession is frequently the accompaniment of mania, and still more frequently its cause the thought and lower will are very strongly exercised to the detriment of the reasoning faculty. That is, that there is an alliance between the two former which overpowereth the action of Chokmah and Binah in the latter. Monomania is shewn in the consideration of only one certain symbol which is too attractive to the Will. A chain of thought is therefore simply a graduated vibration arising from the contact of a ray of thought with a symbol.

VOLUME THREE

If controlled by the reasoning power and licensed by the Will, such vibrations will be balanced and of equal length. But if uncontrolled by the lower Will and the Reason, they will be unbalanced and inharmonious. That is, of uneven length. In the case of the drunkard, the equilibrium of the Sphere of Sensation and consequently of the Nephesh, is disturbed. In consequence the thought rays are shaken at each vibration, so that the sphere of sensation of the Nephesh is caused to rock and waver at the extremities of the Physical Body where the Ruach action is bounded. The thought therefore is dazzled by the symbols of the Sphere of Sensation, in the same way as the eyes can be dazzled in front of a mirror if the latter be shaken or waved. The sensation therefore then conveyed by the thoughts is that of the Sphere of Sensation oscillating and almost revolving about the physical body, bringing giddiness, sickness, vertigo and the loss of idea of place and position. Nearly the same may be said of Seasickness, and the action of certain drugs. Restoration of the equilibrium of the Sphere of Sensation after this naturally produceth a slackening of the concentration of the Ruach in Tiphareth, whence sleep is an absolute necessity to the drunkard. This is so imperative that he cannot fight against the need. If he does so, or if this condition be constantly repeated, the thought rays are launched through the Sphere of Sensation so irregularly and so violently that they pass its boundary without either the lower Will or the Reasoning Power or even the Thought itself consenting thereto; and the latter is therefore without the protection of the will.

Thence arise the conditions of delirium tremors, and an opening is made in the Sphere of Sensation which is unguarded, and through which hostile influences may enter. But this latter cometh under the head of obsession. All thought action in the spiritual consciousness originateth in radiation, and radiation is as inseparable from the spiritual consciousness as it is from Light. This Spiritual Consciousness is the focus of the action of Neschamah. The spiritual consciousness is, in its turn, the Throne or Vehicle of the Life of the Spirit which is Chiah; and these combined form the Chariot of that Higher Will which is in Kether. Also it is the peculiar faculty of Neschamah to aspire unto that which is beyond. The Higher Will manifests itself through Yechidah. The Chiah is the real Life Principle, as distinct from the more illusionary life of the Physical Body.

The Shining Flame of the Divine Fire, the Kether of the Body, is the Real Self of the Incarnation. Yet but few of the sons of men know it or feel its presence. Still less do they believe in or comprehend those Higher Potencies, Angelic, Archangelic or Divine, of which the manifestation directly touching Yechidah is the Higher Genius. This Yechidah in the ordinary man can but rarely act through the spiritual consciousness, seeing that for it to do so the King of the Physical Body, that is the Lower Will, must rise from his Throne to acknowledge his superior. That is the reason why, in some cases, in sleep only doth the Higher Will manifest itself by dream unto the ordinary man. In other cases it may be manifested; at times through the sincere practice of religious rites, or in cases where the opportunity for self-sacrifice occurreth. In all these cases the Lower Will hath for a moment recognised a higher form of itself, and the YHVH of the man hath reflected from the Eternal Lord of the Higher Life. This Yechidah is the only part of the man which can truly say, EHEIEH, I am. This is then but the Kether of the Assiah of the Microcosm, that is, it is the highest part of man as Man. It is that which toucheth, or is the manifestation of a higher and greater range of Being. This Yechidah is at the same time the Higher Human Self and the Lower Genius, the God of the Man, the Atziluth of his Assiah, even as Chiah and Neschamah form his Briah, and Ruach his Yetzirah. This is the Higher Will and the Divine Consciousness, as Daath is the Spiritual Consciousness, Tiphareth the Human Consciousness, and Yesod the Automatic Consciousness.

It is the Divine Consciousness because it is the only part of man which can touch the All potent forces. Behind Yechidah are Angelic and Archangelic Forces of which Yechidah is the manifestor. It is therefore the Lower Genius or Viceroy of the Higher Genius which is beyond, an Angel Mighty and Terrible. This Great Angel is the Higher Genius, beyond which are the Archangelic and Divine. Recall the Tiphareth clause of an Adeptus Minor: "I further solemnly promise and swear that with the divine permission I will from this day forward apply myself unto the Great Work which is so to purify and exalt my spiritual nature, that with the Divine Aid I may at length attain to be more than Human, and thus gradually raise and unite myself to my Higher and Divine Genius, and that in this event, I will not abuse the great power entrusted unto me." Note that this clause answereth unto Tiphareth, seeing that it is the Lower Will that must apply itself unto this work, because it is the King of the Physical Man.

All the Shining Ones (whom we call Angels) are microcosms of the Macrocosm Yetzirah, even as Man is the microcosm of the Macrocosm of Assiah. All Archangelic forms are microcosms of the Macrocosm of Briah, and the Gods of the Sephiroth are consequently the Microcosms of the Macrocosm of Atziluth. Therefore apply this perfecting of the Spiritual Nature as the preparation of the Pathway for Shining Light, the Light Divine. The evil persona of a man is in the Sphere of the Qlippoth, and the devils are the Microcosms of the Macrocosm of the Qlippoth. This evil persona hath its parts and divisions, and of it the part which toucheth the Malkuth of the Nephesch is its Kether. Tremble therefore at the evil forces which be in thy own evil persona. And as above the Kether of a Man are his Angelic and other forms, so below the Malkuth of the Evil Persona are awful forms, dangerous even to express or think of.

VOLUME THREE

TASK UNDERTAKEN BY THE ADEPTUS MINOR

This, then, is the task to be undertaken by the Adeptus Minor. To expel from the Sephiroth of the Nephesh the usurpation by the evil Sephiroth; to balance the action of the Sephiroth of the Ruach in those of the Nephesh. To prevent the Lower Will and Human Consciousness from falling into and usurping the place of the Automatic Consciousness. To render the King of the Body, the Lower Will, obedient to and anxious to execute the commands of the Higher Will, that he be neither a usurper of the faculties of the Higher, nor a sensual despot, but an Initiated Ruler, and an annointed King, the Viceroy and representative of the Higher Will, because inspired thereby, in his Kingdom which is man. Then shall it happen that the Higher Will, i.e., the Lower Genius, shall descend into the Royal Habitation, so that the Higher Will and the Lower Will shall be as one, and the Higher Genius shall descend into the Kether of the Man, bringing with him the tremendous illumination of his Angelic Nature. And the Man shall become what is said of Enoch. "And Chanokh made himself to walk with God, and he was not, for God took him." (Genesis, V.v. 24.) Then also this shalt thou know, that the Nephesh of the Man shall become as the Genius of the Evil Persona, so that the evil persona itself shall be as the power of the Divine in the Qlippoth, as it is said: "Whither shall I go from thy Spirit, or whither from thy Presence shall I flee? If I ascend up to Heaven, thou art there. If I make my bed in Hell, behold thou art there." (Ps. cxxxix.)

Therefore even the Evil Persona is not so evil when it fulfilleth its work. For it is the beginner of a dim reflection of the Light unto the Qlippoth, and this is what is hidden in the saying that "Typhon is the brother of Osiris." Hear thou, then, a mystery of the knowledge of evil. The Ritual of the Adeptus Minor saith that even the "Evil helpeth forward the Good." When the evil Sephiroth are expelled from the Nephesh into the evil Persona, they are, in a sense, equilibrated therein. The evil persona can be rendered as a great and strong, yet trained, animal whereupon the man rideth, and it then becometh a strength unto his physical base of action. This Mystery shalt thou keep from the knowledge of the First Order, and still more from that of the Outer World, that is as a formula, seeing that is a dangerous secret. Now then shalt thou begin to understand the saying "He descended into Hell," and also to comprehend in part this strength, and thus begin to understand the necessity of evil unto the material creation. Wherefore, also, revile not overmuch the evil forces, for they have also a place and a duty, and in this consisteth their right to be. But check their usurpation, and cast them down unto their plane. Unto this end, curse them by the mighty names if need be, but thou shalt not revile them for their condition, for thus also shalt thou be led into error. There is also a great mystery that the Adeptus Minor must know. How the spiritual consciousness can act around and beyond the sphere of Sensation.

"Thought" is a mighty force when projected with all the strength of the lower Will under the guidance of the reasoning faculty and illuminated by the Higher Will. Therefore, it is that, in thy occult working, thou art advised to invoke the divine and Angelic Names, so that thy Lower Will may willingly receive the influx of the Higher Will, which is also the Lower Genius behind which are the all-potent forces.

This, therefore, is the magical manner of operation of the Initiate when "skrying" in the spirit vision. Through his own arcane wisdom, he knows the disposition and correspondences of the Forces of the Macrocosmos. Selecting not many, but one symbol, and that balanced and with its correlatives, then sendeth he a thought-ray from his Spiritual Consciousness, illuminated by his Higher Will, directly unto the part of his Sphere of Sensation which is consonant with the symbol employed. There, as in a mirror, doth he perceive its properties as reflected from the Macrocosmos, shining forth into the Infinite Abyss of the Heavens.

Thence can he follow the ray of reflection therefrom, and while concentrating his united consciousness at that point of his sphere of sensation, can receive the direct reflection of the ray from the Macrocosmos. Thus receiving the direct ray as then reflected into his Thought, he can unite himself with the ray of his Thought so as to make one continuous ray from the corresponding point of the Macrocosmos unto the centre of his consciousness. If, instead of concentrating at the actual point of the sphere of Sensation he shall retain the thought-ray only touching the sphere of sensation at that point, he shall, it is true, perceive the reflection of the Macrocosmic Ray answering to that symbol in the sphere of his Consciousness. But he shall receive this reflection tintured much by his own nature, and therefore to an extent untrue, because his united consciousnesses have not been able to focus along the thought-ray at the circumference of the Sphere of sensation. And this is the reason why there are so many and multifarious errors in untrained spirit visions. For the untrained seer, even supposing him free from the delusions of obsession, doth not know or understand how to unite his consciousnesses and the harmonies between his own sphere of sensation, and the universe, the Macrocosmos. Therefore is it so necessary that the Adeptus Minor should correctly understand the principia and axiomata of our secret knowledge, which are contained in our Rituals and Lectures.

OF TRAVELING IN THE SPIRIT VISION

The symbol, place, direction, or Plane being known whereon it is desired to act, a thought-ray as before is sent unto the corresponding part of the Sphere of Sensation of the Nephesh. The Thought-Ray is sent like an arrow from the bow, right through the circumference of the Sphere of Sensation direct unto the place desired. Arrived there, a sphere of astral Light is formed by the agency of the Lower Will, illuminated by the Higher Will, and acting through the spiritual consciousness by reflection along the Thought-Ray. This sphere of Astral Light is partly drawn from the surrounding atmosphere. The sphere being formed, a simulacrum of the person of the Skryer is reflected into it along the thought-ray, and this united consciousness is then projected therein.

This Sphere is then a duplicate, by reflection, of the Sphere of Sensation. As it is said, "Believe thyself to be in a place and thou art there." In this Astral Projection, however, a certain part of the consciousness must remain in the body to protect the Thought-Ray beyond the Sphere of Sensation (as well as the Sphere itself at that point of departure of the Thought-Ray) from attack by any hostile force, so that the consciousness in this projection is not quite so strong as the consciousness when concentrated in the natural body in ordinary life. The return taketh place with a reversal of this process, and save to persons whose Nephesh and physical body are exceptionally strong and healthy, the whole operation of skrying and traveling in the Spirit Vision is of course fatiguing. Also there is another mode of astral projection which can be used by the more practised and advanced Adept. This consisteth in forming first a sphere from his own Sphere of Sensation, casting his reflection therein, and then projecting this whole sphere to the desired place, as in the previous method. But this is not easy to be done by any but the practised operator. Thus far, regarding Skrying and Travelling in the Spirit Vision.

CONCERNING THE MICROCOSMS OF THE MACROCOSM

As thou well knowest there be many and numberless other inhabitants of the Macrocosmos besides Man, Angels, and Devils. The animals are microcosms in a sense, yet not so complete as man. In them are many and great mysteries. They also have their magical mirror or sphere of sensation. But its polarisation is usually of horizontal rather than perpendicular type, and this is owing to the Sephiroth not being shewn therein. This Sphere, then, is not bounded by the Sephirothic columns, but they are especially governed by the Stellar System without the Sephiroth. They are therefore ruled by the Paths, rather than by the Sephiroth, and are consequently classed each under an Element or a Planet, and a Sign. Thus each followeth a formula which may be translated into letters, and these again form a vibratory name. As it is written: "And Adam gave names unto all the cattle and to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field." (Gen. II, v. 20.) Yet they are ruled by the name YHVH, though classed rather by one or more of its letters.

Thus, Fish, etc., are under the influence of Water. Birds are under the influence of Air. Quadrupeds are under the influence of Fire. Creeping things and insects are under the influence of Earth.

There are some which partake of two elements, but in them one element is usually chief, and besides the Elements, each is under a Planet and a Sign.

The vegetable kingdom is again under a somewhat different Law. These are under a Planet and a Sign, a planet first differentiated by a Sign. The Mineral Kingdom is under the Signs only. Vegetables have a Sphere of Sensation, but corresponding only to the Planets and Zodiacal Signs. The Minerals have also a Sphere which correspondeth unto the Signs only, but the metals are under the Planets only, and therein is the difference between them and the Minerals, wherefore also are they stronger. Shining Stones are especially under the Light; and they are, as it were, centres for the action thereof in the darkness of matter, as it is said: "My light is concealed in all that shineth." This passage is it is believed from the Zend-Avesta. They are therefore under the rule of the three active elements with an earthy base. Shining through all things as a whole, are the rays of the Macrocosmos. Besides these classes of life there be multitudinous existences representing Forces of the Macrocosm, each with its own microcosm. Such are Elemental Spirits, Planetary Spirits, Olympic Spirits, Fays, Arch-Fays, Genii, and many other potencies which cannot be classed under these forms.

Thus the Macrocosmic Universe is one vast and infinite sphere containing so many and diverse infinite microcosmic forms, of which the perfect knowledge is only known unto the advanced Adept. Also it shall here suffice to say that thou shalt make a distinction between the Four-handed race (the quadrumana, apes and monkeys) which be midway between Man and Beast and other animals. For they be neither the one or the other, but are the fallen and debased result of a most ancient magical effect to formulate a material and immediate link between the human and animal microcosms. This is elsewhere treated of, and it shall here be sufficient to say that they are not an ascent, from the beast unto the Man, but mistaken magical fall from a man unto a beast. Anciently they were a terrible power upon this planet, as then having more of the man than of the animal, whereas now they have more of the animal than of Man.

The ancient traditions of their primal conditions are preserved unto this day in the legends of ogres and, in certain records, cannibalism and its rites. Regarding the beasts, they are, for the most part, easily obsessed, and they have not the spiritual responsibility of the man. Their nature is not evil, but, following a natural law, seeing that man is head of the Assiatic creation, so the animal is higher than the vegetables or mineral. Also bear thou well in mind that the race of the transformers are given unto cruelty. Such are above all the race of creeping things. As Man hath his Ruach which is upright in the Tree of Life, so hath the beast his Ruach which is horizontal; as it is said: "The Ruach of a man which goeth upwards (i.e., directeth itself upwards), and the Ruach of the beast which goeth downwards (or crosswise) in the Earth." The Neschamah in the Beast is not. The beast consisteth of a Ruach and a Nephesch with a rudimentary Daath or Spiritual Consciousness. This Daath ever seeketh that which is beyond it and thence are beasts not responsible, but are submitted unto obsession and herein is a great mystery.

Man, therefore, is placed at the head of the beasts. Woe, woe, unto him if he teacheth their elementary Daath cruelty and injustice instead of mercy and justice. For the Man is a God unto the beast, and the aspiration of the Beast is toward the Man, and great is the office of the Beast, for he prepareth the foundation for the man. Man is responsible for creation, and since he was originally placed in creation to be its Lord, as he is, so will the creation follow him. And thus it is possible for the Genius of a Nation to change the climate of a country, and the nature of the beasts therein. Men fell from primalestate, and then they who were formless became imaged in form, deformed. And this is a mystery of the Demonic Plane which entereth not into this section. The Elemental Spirits and other of their kind are an organisation not quite so complete as man. In spiritual consciousness more keen, and yet in some ways his spiritual superior though organically his inferior. They are the formers of the primal Man, that is the Elementary Man, and they have other and greater offices, for in them are many worlds and ranks and spheres. They are as the younger man (i.e., child) and towards them also is Man responsible, and he hath wrought them much injustice.

OF OBSESSION, TRANCE, DEATH

Obsession always entereth through a cutting off of the Higher from the Lower Will, and it is ordinarily first induced by a Thought-Ray of the Spiritual consciousness (whence one danger of evil thoughts) ill-governed, penetrating the Sphere of Sensation and admitting another potency, either human embodied, or human disembodied, elemental or demonic. The first action of such a force is to flatter the lower will, until he shall have established firmly an entrance into the Sphere of Sensation, and thus shall cause a strain on the Nephesh which shall render the Ruach less concentrated. As soon as the Ruach is sufficiently dispersed to repair the strain on the physical body, the lower will is weakened, and is soon seized upon and bound by the invader. Whence arise the sensations of chill and drowsiness which are the usual forerunners of obsession.

Now to yield the force necessary to overpower the lower will from any chance of communication with the higher the obsessing idea proceeds by seizing upon the Daath, and this consequently is the great point of attack, especially the part in the physical body which is at the back of the head about the junction with the Spine. Now unless the lower Will shall voluntarily endeavour to restore the connection, it is impossible for the Higher Will to intervene, seeing that the Lower Will is King of the Physical Body. Remember that no obsessing force can overpower the lower will, if that shall bravely and in spite of all opposition aspire unto the Higher Will. Trance may arise from the action of obsession, or from the action of the Higher Will, therefore its aspects are varied. Death superveneth in the natural man, when the mental action of the Ruach and the Nephesh is definitely and thoroughly interrupted in the physical body.

In the Adept death can only supervene when the Higher Will consenteth thereto, and herein is implied the whole Mystery of the Elixir of Life.

ON THE WORK TO BE UNDERTAKEN BETWEEN PORTAL AND ADEPTUS MINOR

The work comes under six headings as follows:

- 1. A Thesis on the Rituals.
- 2. A meditation on the crosses which have been used as admission badges in the Grades. This is a preparation for the meditation which precedes the Adeptus Minor Grade and should be applied for when you have been a Portal Member for seven months.
- 3. A complete diagram of The Tree of Life.
- 4. The practice of control of the Aura.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

5. The placing of The Tree of Life in the Aura.

6. Tattwas -- Astrology -- Divination.

One. THE THESIS. Read the rituals. Build them up in imagination. Compare the Opening and Closing in the various Grades. Note the general underlying scheme for each Elemental Grade -- and note where the differences occur. Follow the careers of the various Officers. Note at what Grade an Officer disappears.

Make a precis of each Ritual so that the general scheme becomes apparent. This is of the greatest assistance when you are called on to take Office because you will not then need to follow everything in the Ritual but need only turn to the page where your Office is mentioned and when you have no more to say, you can turn to the Closing and put the Ritual aside till required for that. Ability to do this and to move correctly in the Temple adds greatly to the harmony and repose of the whole Ceremony.

Note the positions of the various officers -- what geometrical shapes they make among themselves from time to time as they take up their places in the Temple. It may be a triangle, a cross, a pentagram, etc.

Read the speeches carefully, and read them sometimes aloud so that you get familiar with the sound of your own voice in saying the words. Note that some speeches are designed to create atmosphere by their archaic form and should be read rhythmically and sonorously, while others are informative and should be read in such a way as to make their points clear.

Examples of archaic passages are challenges of Gods: 'Thou canst not pass the Gate of the Western Heaven unless thou canst tell me my Name.' And the speeches of the Kabiri in the Grades of Practicus and Philosophus. Information is given in speeches about Tarot Keys and diagrams.

Note the technique for traversing the various Paths -- the words, and the badges with which the Path is entered, the length of the circumambulation and the special symbolism described therein.

Let all these things soak into your mind, make notes as ideas occur to you and presently your personal reaction to the Grades will crystallise out and you will be able to write your thesis.

Two. Make a list and drawings of the crosses which have been given you as Admission Badges throughout the Grades, from the Swastika of the Zelator to the Five-squared cross which you put on as you stood at the Altar at the second point of the Portal Grade. Read what is said of them in the Rituals and knowledge lectures, and make notes about them.

Three. THE TREE OF LIFE. This should be done large in order that the writing and symbols should be clear. It is essential to show the Deity Names, Names of Archangels and Angels in Hebrew in the Sephiroth, and to number the Paths and give their attributions. Apart from this, the Tree should be your personal synthesis of the Order symbolism as it applies to the Tree of Life. Colours may be used.

VOLUME THREE

Four. CONTROL OF THE AURA. If you are not already familiar with the parts of your own body such as nervous system, respiratory system, digestive system, get some simple text-book such as is used in ambulance work, or attend a course of first-aid lectures so that, before starting to work on your subtle body, you may know something about your physical body.

Your physical body is interpenetrated by a subtle body or aura which also surrounds the physical body like an egg of light. You should now begin to practise controlling this aura or Sphere of Sensation. This means that you must first try to get your emotional reactions under conscious control. Instead of automatically liking this, disliking that, you must try to understand the mechanism which underlies these feelings. To assist you in this, the study of psychology is recommended. There are many books on the subject, of which the following are easy to understand and clearly stated.

Psychoanalysis for Normal People by Geraldine Coster.

You are in Charge by Janette Rainwater.

The Function of the Orgasm by Wilhelm Reich.

Two Essays on Analytical Psychology by C.G. Jung.

Exploring the Unconscious by Georg Groddeck.

The Image and Appearance of the Human Body by Paul Schilder.

Varieties of Religious Experience by William James.

Having built up some idea of the mechanism of your mental processes, you should now try to make yourself negative or positive at will towards people or ideas. If you are likely to meet someone who always makes you argumentative and irritable, decide that your aura is closed to their power of irritating you and that your mind will not be disturbed by what they say. It is good sometimes to listen to views with which you disagree to learn not to make any verbal response, and to keep your feelings in abeyance. (N.B. But remember this is a technique only. There are in fact times to speak and times to remain silent. It is imperative to avoid transforming techniques into compulsions I.R.). In this way you come to learn how much of your disagreement is due to prejudice or personal factors, and how much to your regard for abstract truth.

Again, sometimes practise opening your aura to people or ideas in an endeavour to see things from another's point of view.

The practice of deep breathing is also of help in establishing poise and in controlling nervousness. It is good to expand the chest to its fullest extent and then to expand the diaphragm below the ribs as well and then to let the breath out slowly and steadily on a vowel sound such as ah or 'O'. (N.B. Consult in this connection Undoing Yourself with Energized Meditation by Christopher Hyatt, Falcon Press, 1982. I.R.)

If you are nervous, you will find that your breathing is shallow and that your muscles are tense. You tend to clench your hands and tighten up the abdominal muscles. To cure this, take a deep breath to full capacity, hold it while tensing and relaxing alternately the abdominal muscles. Do this (i.e., the tensing and relaxing of the muscles) three times and then relax completely into a chair. Allow all your muscles to go limp and let your breath out to the last gasp. Do the whole process three times, if necessary. It is designed to stimulate the solar plexus which is the heart of the nervous system which governs emotion.

Another good exercise is to say the Deity Names aloud. Take a deep breath and say them softly, smoothly and slowly, imagining the while that your voice travels out to the confines of the Universe. This can be done in conjunction with the Pentagram Ritual.

Five. THE TREE OF LIFE IN THE AURA. In the aura which interpenetrates and surrounds our physical bodies, we are to build up a replica of the Tree of Life. The Pillar of Severity is on our right side, the Pillar of Mercy on our left, and the Pillar of Benificence in the middle.

It is best to build up the middle Pillar first. To do this stand up and raise yourself in imagination to your KETHER -- a brilliant light above your head. Imagine this light descending to DAATH, at the nape of your neck, and thence to TIPHARETH in your heart where it glows like sunlight and whence it radiates into the other Sephiroth. From TIPHARETH the light goes to YESOD in the region of the hips, and thence to MALKUTH in which your feet are planted. Having made a clear image of the Middle Pillar, you can then establish the other Sephiroth by vibrating the Deity Names. This can be done as an alternative to the Pentagram Ritual as a preparation for meditation.

VOLUME THREE

1. Imagine yourself standing in the Temple, facing West. The Black Pillar of Severity will be on your right -- the White Pillar of Mercy on your left. You will make the Middle Pillar as you stand between them.

2. Imagine now that the Black Pillar is reflected in your right side -- the White Pillar in your left.

3. Take a deep breath and raise your consciousness to your KETHER above your head and vibrate the Name EHEIEH -- which means I AM. Imagine the Light flowing down through DAATH (at the nape of your neck) to TIPHARETH.

4. In the same manner, establish YESOD in the name SHADDAI EL CHAI, and MALKUTH in the Name ADONAI HA-ARETZ.

5. Make the Qabalistic Cross to indicate that you have called down the Light of your KETHER and balanced it in your aura. Then let your imagination dwell on the aura and see it oval and clear, pulsating with the glow from TIPHARETH.

If you are called to see anyone who is ill, who is depressed, or who has a depressing effect on you, you should do this exercise beforehand. In the case of the person who has a depressing effect on you, you may also imagine that your aura is hardened at the edge so that they are unable to penetrate it, and so deplete you of vitality (which is generally what such sensations mean).

In all these practices it is well to remember that 'Strength is in Silence.' (N.B. The original documents of the Order, dating as far back as 1895 and maybe earlier, do not provide us with a single clue as to the origins of what has come to be known as the middle pillar technique. It seems to be, as far as I can discover, a specific development of the Stella Matutina, in which case Dr. R. Felkin was its originator. This might explain why there is no trace whatsoever of its usage in the technical writings of Aleister Crowley, who has certainly made good use of most of the Order techniques, and who would surely have used this had it been available.

However, even in the Stella Matutina it was described merely in larval form -- that is to say, it remained largely undeveloped. It was briefly stated in the paper describing the work to be done between the Portal Grade and the Adeptus Minor grade. There are enormous possibilities inherent in the method. I was lucky enough to have stumbled on to a practical approach which I think exploited more fully some of the potentialities suggested in the original Felkin paper.

In a book entitled Foundations of Practical Magic, I recently included an older essay entitled The Art of True Healing. This was once produced as a small book by Helios Publishing Service In England.

It describes the method which over the years I have found preeminently useful. Whoever developed the basic technique, whether Felkin or some other, produced a fundamental method of aiding personal and spiritual growth. If you talk about them, save to your Chief, or if you try to analyse their effects, you will not benefit by them. Try them with simple faith and in silence for a year before rationalising them. I.R.)

It is better at first to keep your aura to yourself, rather than to try to flow out towards others. Unless you are particularly vital and well-balanced, you will only waste energy. So-called modes of healing and of 'doing good to others' should be eschewed for a time. Such methods have a technique of their own and require trained and balanced minds and bodies to carry them out. Get yourself right first before you attempt to interfere with others in any way but the ordinary ways of kindly decent society.

When you have practised the exercise of the Middle Pillar for some time and can visualise it easily, you can establish the other Sephiroth.

Six. TATWAS-ASTROLOGY-DIVINATION. The Tatwas are designed to assist you in your researches into the Soul of Nature. They are at first done with a senior member, and later can be done alone or with a companion of your own Grade. They should never be allowed to become uncontrolled day-dreams. The method taught should be strictly adhered to -- a definite time, preferably in the morning being set aside -- and they should not be attempted when you are feeling tired or when your mind is too occupied with other things to let you 'get away.' They should not be done too frequently -- once in three weeks or a month is enough, once a week if time and circumstances permit. Notes of the pictures and symbols seen should be kept together in a book.

ASTROLOGY. This should be done as time permits. The subject is vast and highly technical, and can be studied fully through the various schools and correspondence classes if you are interested in it. From the Order Lecture, you should be able to set up a true birth horoscope for any place and any time. You can practise setting up horoscopes for the cases given in a book The Circle Book of Charts and see whether you can tell what was remarkable about the horoscope. You should attempt the reading of a horoscope for someone you know and then get the data for someone about whom you know nothing, and see whether you can give a reading which satisfies their friends.

The Order requires only that you should be able to set up an accurate horoscope and that you should know how to work out the aspects and how to make a simple assesement of the good and bad factors in a horary figure. If Astrology interests you further, it is a very fascinating field of research.

DIVINATION. You may try to develop your intuition by the use of horary and natal astrology, geomancy, and the reading of the Tarot Cards by the method given in the small book by Mr. A.E. Waite.

You are advised to attempt only questions in which you are not emotionally involved because methods of divination can be a fruitful source of self-deception to those who are psychic but not self-knowing. If you are given to having intuitions you must learn to say not only 'I was right about that' but also 'I was quite wrong about that,' and if you advertise only successes (as is usual) at the bar of your own conscience, learn to assess them honestly.

The interval of time between PORTAL and grade of Adeptus Minor should be given to the study of the whole make-up of yourself. All these methods are designed to assist you to get as far as you can along the road to self-knowledge.

VOLUME THREE

You are to realise the different layers of your being -- some of which you have been led through symbolically in the Outer Grades -- 'Which in one sense quitteth not MALKUTH' the Kingdom of yourself.

This line of thought, coupled with the study of the Rituals, may lead you to realise what it was you gathered together in the first point of the Portal Ritual, and what it is you are trying to perfect to lay on the Altar of the Spirit.

We are told in the Portal that the nine months' wait which must intervene before the Portal is again opened for the Aspirant has a correspondence to the nine months of gestation before birth. As the unborn child, stage by stage, grows through the ancestral history of the race so the Candidate in the Portal by a single circumambulation for each, recalls his past Grades and, at the end of the first point regards their symbols upon the Altar as parts of his body, and contemplates them as coming together in one place -- the unity of his person.

In the second point, he sacrifices his name -- symbol of his idea of himself in order that the idea of a new self and a new consciousness may be attained.

This has a correspondence in the birth of a child. It emerges from the membranes and placenta which hitherto have been its body and source of life and finds itself not 'dead' after the dread change, but translated to a larger consciousness.

Thus the Portal foreshadows the kind of change and development necessary for understanding the symbolism of the Adeptus Minor grade.

We do not know what consciousness the unborn child has -- how far it has gone in its development -- through what agency it unfolds the potencies of its tiny seed and draws to itself the necessary materials for growth. The miracle happens -- and gives us courage to believe that a similar miracle is even now enacting whereby a body will be ready for us when this, which seems so real to us, shall share the same fate as the placenta and membranes which 'die' at our birth.

But tradition, as embodied in our Order and shown somewhat less directly in the revealed religions, teaches that this development can be assisted by conscious effort indeed, that there comes a time when this effort must be made through the body and mind we are now endowed with. And realising that we are indeed in a Path of Darkness groping for Light, we must feel our way to an understanding of the meaning of light -- the reason for death.

To those who feel the call to make this effort, comes the Order with a series of pictures, symbolic of the growth of the soul to new life. The meditations given with each Grade are designed to lead the mind towards ideas which will assist in self-knowledge -- universal, impersonal ideas which each must find in his own way -- 'the secrets which cannot be told save to those who know them already.'

The Aspirant is led to look backwards. First he must acknowledge his debt to evolution through which has been perfected the instrument wherein his mind works and gathers material. Then, through meditation, he is led to see himself as not only self-conscious -- as one who receives impressions -- one who criticises and watches -- one whose will is interfered with -- one who is misunderstood -- one to whom others are 'persons' or masks (from Latin persona, a mask) -- but, standing outside himself, he now becomes one who endeavours to sense how his mask appears to others -- sees himself as part of the consciousness of others, as one who impresses, one who is criticised and watched, one who interferes with the will of others, one who misunderstands.

He may recall periods in his life when his convictions were sure, his judgments harsh and unjust, his actions shameful, and view himself in that picture dispassionately as an entity operative in the give and take of Life, something growing and as outside the category of blame as is the bitterness of unripe fruit.

As the knowledge of his place and relative importance in the Universe matures, he will attain strength to be honest with himself -- ashamed of nothing he finds in his mind -- one watching the antics of his personality with tolerant amusement -- yet always learning.

He will reflect on words, and the power of words. He will catch himself weaving them twisting their meaning -- deceiving himself and others with them. He will catch himself under obsession to them -- he will see how they fix and make possible the recall of events and emotions, and with this knowledge he will become aware of how his words affect other people.

As he begins to realise the tremendous miracle of words, the magic both good and evil of human communion by words, he will begin to grasp why the Order reiterates the importance of silence. The true Magician must understand his tools and, in periods of silence, he must contemplate words as one of them.

As he thus traverses the long road to dispassionate self-knowledge, and no longer has to waste energy in doing battle for and indulging wounded feelings in defence of a totally false idea of himself, he is led to meditate on the varied symbols of the cross, and from this to contemplate the Crucified One, revealed to the West as Jesus of Nazareth. (However be cautious not to associate the ideas of Jesus with the political-religions which have evolved from his teachings. I.R.).

This life and the sayings of Jesus given in the Meditations should be studied and pictured in the mind.

The mind must be taught to die to useless churnings over past things and vain apprehensions about future things. This is difficult, for human phantasies die hard, but once the effort is made, however transient the result, it becomes easier with time to replace wasteful thoughts with those that cluster round a powerful symbol of eternal truth.

As the time for the Adeptus Minor Ceremony approaches, the Aspirant should withdraw as far as may be from externals that these symbols may work in his mind.

He will find them waiting on the threshold of his mind ready to tell their story as he walks about or is occupied in mechanical tasks. Once a place has been made for them no 'time' is required to develop them. They grow in the waste places.

VOLUME THREE

Definite times too should be set aside for Meditation wherein ideas may be formulated as far as possible.

Before going to sleep, the Aspirant should do the Pentagram Ritual and impress on his mind that he must recall on waking any teaching that has been given him in dream or vision. This may be assisted on waking, if he calls before his mind the Sun rising, thinly veiled in clouds.

This should be done at least the week preceding the Grade.

The Ceremony will be a true initiation for the Aspirant only in so far as he has prepared himself to receive it.

Like a word, it is a symbol, the communication of whose essence depends on the understanding and experience of the recipient.

(N.B. There is no trace of the contents of this most important paper in the earlier Order documents. It is obviously therefore written by someone in the Stella Matutina. I sometimes get weary of the constant criticism leveled against the Stella Matutina; I think they are wholly unjust as this paper demonstrates. It reveals a profound working knowledge of psychological principles which the reader would do well to make an intrinsic part of his mental equipment. In addition the writer was well aware of the problems of identification, projection, consideration and ego-mania as how they interfere with the process of enlightenment. I.R.)

THE TREE OF LIFE IN THE AURA

By

V.H. FRATER A.M.A.G.

This notion is first laid down in the Portal paper in a very broad simple outline. The text related to it does not appear to promise very much at first. Moreover it is surrounded by a mass of material on other Order topics, none of which seem to stress the relative importance of the method. In a word, it does not seem to promise a great deal. However some little attention and study of its principles soon convinces one that there is more to it than at first meets the eye. All sorts of hints are scattered throughout the Order documents that add significant clues as to how this rudimentary outline can be elaborated into a magnificent workable schema. First of all, there is the Hierophant's speech in the Neophyte Ritual "all powers can be awakened and re-awakened by names and images" which is one of the fundamentals of all the Order work, and of course especially applicable to this method. Then there is the theory of the Tree of Life projected into a solid sphere producing not three Pillars but four surrounding an axis of a Middle Pillar. In Z-3, the ceremonial circumambulation in the Temple is applied to the Aura in terms of the circulation of energy within the sphere of sensation, which first gave me the idea of the three types of circulation which came to be an integral idea of my development of this method. Then of course, there is the description of the rhythmic breathing process in the same Portal paper which is the preliminary basis for the whole method. All of these ideas, plus some others scattered throughout other Order documents helped to provide meaningful data which elaborate the simple schema there described into the one that I and many others have found so profoundly useful.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

In the form so elaborated, it is really quite easy to employ - in fact far easier to do than to describe. As with all other Order techniques little attempt will be made to describe its results and effects. The main thing is to work it and use it often, daily if possible in order to become fully aware of what the method can do.

The first step lies in the adoption of the philosophy of the Order as a whole, the conscious realization of the vast spiritual reservoir in which we live and move and have our being. Repeated intellectual effort to make this part and parcel of one's mental outlook upon life automatically breaks down or dissolves something of the rigid character armoring that restricts both our physical and psychological activities. With this gradual softening of the armor a new and superior spiritual attitude may develop so that one's entire viewpoint undergoes a radical change for the better.

The second step relates to the practice of regulated breathing. It is really a simple process. We contemplate the fact that all living processes are rhythmical, so that at various times during the day we let the breath flow in while mentally counting very slowly - one, two, three, four. Then we exhale counting the same beat. It is fundamental and important that the initial rhythm, whether it be a four or a ten beat rhythm or any other convenient one, should be maintained for some minutes. It is the very rhythm which accounts for the easy absorption of vitality from without and the acceleration of the divine power within.

Cultivate techniques of relaxation to aid this process. These can be learned readily from a host of good books (The Lazy Man's Guide to Relaxation By Israel Regardie, Falcon Press, 1983) on this subject which are readily available at any good bookstore. The conjunction of relaxation techniques with the practice of the rhythmic breath will go far in the process of mobilizing one's energies. One of the indices of the success of this process is that in a few minutes the whole body is vibrating in unison with the rhythm of the breath. Every cell appears to vibrate sympathetically, and the whole system comes to feel as if it were an inexhaustible storage battery of power. The sensation most commonly felt is that the diaphragm is rippling and buzzing.

Once this has been experienced, then one can refer to the chart depicted in the Portal paper, paying particular attention to the Sephiroth on the Middle Pillar - Kether, Daath, Tiphareth, Yesod and Malkuth. We can call these Sephiroth or psychospiritual centers or even use the Hindu equivalent, the chakras. For convenience sake, we may name them after the elements so commonly used in the Order system. Kether we may name Spirit, Daath Air, the succeeding ones being named Fire, Water and Earth.

It is axiomatic to the Order system that there are two principal means whereby we may become aware of these centers to awaken them from their dormant state into actively functioning chakras - thought, colour and sound. We must concentrate upon these Sephiroth in the aura one by one and at the same time vibrate the divine names appropriate thereto. Each center is to be imagined as having a specific colour and shape. The combination of these three agencies gradually stirs the Sephirotic centers into vigorous activity. Slowly they become stimulated into functioning each according to its own nature, pouring forth a stream of spiritual energy into the body-mind system. With sufficient practice, this process can be performed anywhere at any time without anyone suspecting that this exercise is being performed. Merely turning the attention to a specific center will be enough to throw it into some kind of activity producing at the very least a sense of tingling there which ultimately spreads all over.

First of all, the position of the centers as shown in the Portal diagram must be memorized. The student who has studied the Knowledge Lectures on the Qabalah should have no problem with this by now. The meditation, for such we may call it, may be performed while sitting up or lying down flat on the back in a perfectly relaxed state. The hands may be permitted to lie folded in the lap with fingers interlaced or to rest comfortably by one's side. Calmness of mind should be induced, and some minutes devoted to the rhythmic breathing to bring about the sense of rippling playing around the solar plexus.

Then turn the attention to Kether, somewhat above the crown of the head. Try to imagine it as a ball or sphere of brilliant white light - do this easily without straining or forcing. If the mind wanders at first, as it usually does unless you have learned by now to concentrate well, wait a moment or two and gently lead it back to the task at hand. At the same time, vibrate or hum the divine name EHEIEH, pronouncing it as Eh-huh-yay. After a few days of persistent practice, to vibrate the name in the center will be found quite easy. Kether and its divine name is the seat of the overshadowing divinity, the Yechidah, the higher and divine Genius we can all draw upon.

The effect of this concentration and vibration is to awaken the center into dynamic activity; it begins to vibrate and rotate above the crown of the head when light and energy begin to pour down on the lower Sephiroth. Even the finger tips and the toes react to this awakening by the sensations of a faint prickling which later develops into a mighty throbbing of power. The name should be vibrated audibly for some considerable time until skill has been acquired. A humming sound will do while one has the mental image of the name desired. When enough skill has been acquired through practice, the name may be hummed silently in any particular center desired. Again, if the mind tends to wander, the frequent repetition of the vibration or hum will do much to facilitate the task of concentration.

Keep the mind here for some five minutes or so, by which time it should be seen to glow and scintillate. Then imagine that from this center emanates a shaft of white light moving downwards into the Daath center in the neck. Here it expands to form another sphere of white light, about the size of a small saucer. If the larynx is felt to be the center of this Sephirah, Daath, then the distance from it to the cervical vertebrae at the back of the neck will be approximately the radius. Naturally, this distance will vary with every person. A technique similar to the above for Kether should be pursued with this sphere, which we name the Air center. It should be strongly and vividly imagined as a scintillating sphere of white light, shining and glowing from within. The divine name pertaining to this sphere is YHVH ELOHIM - pronounced as Yuh-hoh-voh Eh-loh-heem.

Let the vibratory or humming sound be made a number of times until it is clearly felt as a definite sensory experience. There is absolutely no mistaking the sensation of its awakening. About the same time should be spent formulating Daath or this Air center as was devoted to the Kether center. When you feel ready to move from it, imagine that the shaft of white light descends from the throat to the center of the chest, to the Tiphareth center. Then feel that it expands behind the sternum or breast bone to form once more another center, the so-called Fire center. Its traditional divine Name is YHVH ELOAH ve-DAATH, pronounced as Yuh-hoh-voh Eh-loh ve-Dah-ahth. Some students have complained that the above divine name is excessively long and difficult to pronounce. After a long period of experimentation, I have substituted the gnostic name IAO, commonly used in the Adeptus Minor Key word, for the Hebrew words. Both are attributed Qabalistically to Tiphareth on the Tree, and so are equally valid. It is my experience that this Name is just as effective as is the Hebrew divine Name, and in my own use of this meditation, it has become a permanent part of the technique.

IAO should be pronounced as Eee (as in key) Ah-Oh, and again should be hummed or intoned with vigor. In fact, it is far simpler to vibrate this name than almost any other, and the vibration it produces is clear and strong.

When you have felt you've dwelt long enough on this center, continue sending the shaft of light downwards until it reaches the pelvic area, the region of the generative organs. Form here, in exactly the same way as before, a sphere of radiant light-energy of approximately the same size, that of a saucer. Here also a name is to be pronounced so as to produce the vibratory awakening of the center which is to be felt in every molecule and cell in that area. SHADDAI EL CHAI is the divine name of Yesod, where this center is located, and is to be pronounced as Shah-die Ale Chye (remember that the ch is guttural.) Let the mind get accustomed to concentrate upon this center for several minutes, visualizing it as of an active white brilliance. And whenever the mind happens to wander from its task, bring it back by repeatedly vibrating the name given above.

The final step in completing the Middle Pillar is to have the shaft of white light descend from the pelvis to the feet. There it expands from a point just below each ankle to form the fifth sphere in Malkuth. This for convenience sake is called the Earth center, thus completing the regimen of the elements. Formulate here a brilliant white center of approximately the same size as the others. As you know by now the divine name of Malkuth is ADONAI ha-ARETZ, pronounced as Ah-doh-nye hah-Ah-retz. Fixed and steady meditation on this area should induce the awakening of this center and the vibration of the name should stimulate the sense of energy pouring through enormously.

VOLUME THREE

Again, stay with this as long as you feel you are accomplishing the activation of the center. When finished, return in your imagination to Kether, and visualize the Middle Pillar as a shaft of silvery light studded with five gorgeous diamonds of excellent brilliance. Maintain this image just long enough to know that the centers have been awakened.

For some students with a good imaginative faculty, the colour of these centers can be changed to accord with the Order attribution of the colours of the elements. That is the Kether center remains brilliantly white; the Daath center is changed to lavender; the heart center to red for Fire and Tiphareth; the pelvic or Water center is given a blue colour, while the Earth or Malkuth center is given a russet colour, the rich deep color of Earth itself, the very foundation on which we all rest. Other students who may not possess this eidetic faculty in any abundance and who find that repeated effort does not yield major dividends (I have known many highly educated and intelligent students who are eidetic negative and do not find this at all easy) in which case I suggest they continue using the colour of white all through their practice.

The Order technique as described in the Portal document then suggests building up the rest of the Sephiroth on the Tree of Life in the sphere of sensation. My own experience is that this is superfluous. For the purpose that we have in mind this approach is redundant. The Sephiroth can be placed easily in the aura by a process that I have called the circulation technique, which can now be described.

The first step in this approach is to throw the mind upwards to the coronal center, Kether, imagining it to be in a state of vigorous activity once more. In such a state it throws an enormous amount of energy into the Sephirotic system, transforming it in such a way as to make it readily available for any activity in the human system. Imagine then that the energy begins to stream down the left side of the body, or Tree, in a broad band extending out some distance from the body. As the current of energy descends down the trunk and thighs to the feet, try to synchronise the movement of the energy with the breathing process. As the breathing proceeds, let the band of energy pass from the left foot to the right foot, and then ascend up the right side of the body to the coronal center once more, returning to the center whence it came. Keep on repeating this process, accompanied by the breathing until you can feel the connection between the movement of the energy through the right and left Pillars of the Tree and the inhalation and exhalation of air. You will of course realize that this is an interior psychic circulation, though it has its own physical correlatives.

This process is followed by another type of circulation which is readily understandable once the notion of the Tree having four Pillars (when projected into a solid sphere, which the aura is) is grasped. Return in contemplation to Kether, and then direct the band of energy down the front of the body towards the feet, always synchronized with the breathing process. As you inhale, move the energy from the front of the feet to the heels, and then up the posterior surface of the body towards Kether again. Be sure to continue the circulatory process until it is perceptible, as a definite movement of energy. Do not worry too much if the imagination does not seem keen enough to visualize this movement. Sometimes merely willing and feeling that it is moving is adequate to get the energy to follow the notion of the Pillars.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

These two types of circulation establish the four Pillars very clearly and definitely, and if persisted in for sometime, the sensation is unmistakable, practically physical. General experience and perception indicates that this sphere of light and energy extends outwards to a distance approximating the length of the outstretched arm. And it is within this light sphere that the physical man exists rather like a kernel within a nut.

The final method of circulation may be likened to the action of a fountain - I call it the fountain circulation. In much the same way as water is forced or sucked up through a tube until it jets up above falling in a spray on all sides, so does the energy behave when directed by the will and imagination in this type of circulation.

Throw the attention downwards to Malkuth, the Earth center, feeling it to be the culmination of all the others, the receptacle of all the others, the terminal and storehouse of the incoming vital force. You should then imagine that this power ascends or is attracted upwards to Kether above the crown of the head. The energy, following the will, ascends upwards and then sprays over from Kether, falling downwards on all sides towards Malkuth where it is again concentrated and accumulated ready for another move upwards. It will be found that breathing in will enable the energy to move upwards to Kether most readily, whereas the exhalation seems naturally to accompany the spraying overhead and falling downwards of the energy towards Malkuth.

This completes the formation of the axis of the Tree, the five Pillars described so vividly in various of the Order papers. Keep this notion constantly in mind when working these circulations. Once the five-columned Tree has been well formulated so that it can be felt, then let the mind dwell on the idea of the sphere of light, the LVX, spiritual and healing in quality, surrounding and inter-penetrating the entire body. You should feel an unmistakable sense of calmness and vitality and poise, as though the mind were placid and still. The body, in a lovely state of relaxation, should feel in every part that it is thoroughly charged and permeated by the vibrant power of life.

It is at this stage of the exercise that the student should review some of the prayers or invocations current in the Order procedures. For example, there is the Prayer of the Hierophant in the Neophyte degree as he descends from the throne of the East towards the candidate kneeling at the altar. "I come in the Power of the Light. I come in the Light of Wisdom. I come in the Mercy of the Light. The Light hath healing in its Wings."

There is also the other prayer used by the Hierophant in the same ritual which again may be used here in order to call down the divine light. "O Lord of the Universe, the Vast and the Mighty One, Ruler over the Light and the Darkness, we adore thee and we invoke thee. Look Thou with favor upon me, who now standeth before Thee and grant thine aid unto the highest aspirations of my soul so that I may prove worthy of thy help to perform the Great Work." The speech of the Chief Adept in the Vault during the 5-6 Ritual is also worthy of being memorized so that it may be recited during this exercise:

I am the resurrection and the Life. Whosoever believeth in me though he were dead yet shall he live, and whosoever liveth and believeth in me, the same shall never die. I am the

VOLUME THREE

First and I am the Last. I am he that liveth but was dead, and behold! I am alive for evermore and hold the keys of death and of hell. For I know that my Redeemer liveth and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth.

I am the Way, the Truth and the Life. No man cometh to the Father but by me. I am the Purified. I have passed through the gates of darkness unto Light. I have fought upon earth for good. I have finished my work. I have entered the Invisible.

I am the Sun in his rising, passed through the hour of cloud and of night. I am Amoun, the concealed One, the Opener of the Day. I am Osiris Onnophris, the Justified One, the Lord of Life, triumphant over death. There is no part of me which is not of the Gods. I am the preparer of the Pathway, the rescuer unto the Light. Let the White Light of the Divine Spirit descend.

The next ritual fragment is rather different from the foregoing, although both have a similar personal effect when slowly repeated, meditated upon, and felt intensely. It consists of two parts - the first one being a sort of petition of the higher and divine Genius, while the second bespeaks of the realization of identity with it.

Thee I invoke the Bornless One. Thee that didst create the Earth and the Heavens. Thee that didst create the Night and the Day. Thee that didst create the Darkness and the Light. Thou art Man made Perfect, whom no man hath seen at any time. Thou art God and very God. Thou hast distinguished between the Just and the Unjust. Thou didst make the female and the male. Thou didst produce the seed and the fruit. Thou didst form men to love one another and to hate one another. Thou didst produce the moist and the dry, and That which nourisheth all created things.

The second part should follow only after a long pause, in which one attempts to realize just what it is that the prayer has asserted, and that it is raising the mind to an apprehension of the hidden secret Godhead within, which is the creator of all things.

This is the Lord of the Gods. This is the Lord of the Universe. This is He Whom the winds fear. This is He who having made voice by his commandment is Lord of all things, king, ruler and helper. Hear me and make all spirits subject unto me, so that every spirit of the firmament and of the ether, upon the earth and under the earth, upon dry land and in the water, of whirling air and of rushing fire, and every spell and scourge of God the Vast One may be made obedient unto me.

I am He the Bornless Spirit, having sight in the feet, strong and the immortal fire. I am He, the Truth. I am He who hate that evil may be wrought in the world. I am He that lighteneth and thundereth. I am He from whom is the shower of the Life of Earth. I am He whose mouth ever flameth. I am He, the begetter and manifester unto the Light. I am He, the Grace of the World. The Heart girt with a Serpent is my Name.

These prayer fragments are suggestive only and are to be used or rejected, as each student feels fit. There is no final authority within the Order for their usage.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

This exercise has an extended usage, far beyond the development of insight and enlightenment as though it provided a magical engine whereby one's enlightened will may find suitable expression. Let me preface any further remarks by stating that from the practical point of view, the rudiments of the astrological schema are of untold value in that they offer a concise classification of the broad division of things. I am not here concerned with astrology as such, merely that it is convenient to use its schema. Its roots are in the seven principal ideas or planets to which most ideas and things may be referred. To each of these root ideas there is attributed a positive and negative colour, and a Divine Name for the purpose of vibration. I propose naming the planets with their principal attributions as follows:

Saturn. Older people and old plans. Debts and their repayment. Agriculture and real estate, death, wills, stability, inertia. Positive colour is indigo; negative, black. YHVH Elohim - best pronounced Yuh-hoh-voh Eh-loh-heem.

Jupiter. Is abundance, plenty, growth, expansion, generosity. Spirituality, visions, dreams, long journeys, subjective or otherwise. Bankers, creditors, debtors, gambling. Positive colour is purple; negative blue. EL, pronounced exactly as written or as Ale.

Mars. Energy, haste, anger, construction or destruction (according to application). Danger, risks, surgery. Vitality and magnetism, will power. Positive and negative colours bright red. Elohim Gibor, best pronounced Eh-loh-heem Gibor.

Sun. Superiors, employers, executives, officials. Power and success. Life, money, growth of all kinds. Illumination, imagination, mental power. Health. Positive colour orange; negative colour yellow or gold. YHVH Eloah ve-Daath. This is such a long clumsy name, that though traditional I have decided to replace it with a much simpler and also traditional name. IAO pronounced ee (as in key) ah-oh.

Venus. Social affairs, affections and emotions, women, younger people. All pleasures and the arts, music, beauty, extravagance, luxury, self-indulgence. Both of the colours emerald green. YHVH Tzabaoth, pronounced Yuh-hoh-voh Tah-bah-oth.

Mercury. Business matters, writing, contracts, judgment and short journeys. Buying, selling, bargaining. Neighbours, giving and obtaining information. Literary abilities, publishing, and intellectual friends. Books, papers, etc. Positive colour yellow; negative colour orange. Elohim Tzabaoth, pronounced Eh-loh-heem Tzah-bah-oth.

Moon. General public, women. Sense-reactions. Short journeys and removals. Changes and fluctuations. The personality. Positive colour blue; negative colour puce. Shaddai el Chai, pronounced shah-dye ale Chye (guttural ch.)

These very briefly are the attributions of the planets under which almost everything and every subject may be classified. This classification is extremely useful because it simplifies enormously one's task of physical and spiritual development. It can simplify, at least in general theory, much of the practical work of the Order, in fact even enabling one to simplify and classify the work to be done. A little actual usage of the method will indicate further uses to which it may be put.

VOLUME THREE

THE KNOWLEDGE LECTURES

FIRST LECTURE

The FOUR ELEMENTS of the Ancients are conditions of:

Heat and Dryness	Fire
Heat and Moisture	Air
Cold and Dryness	Earth
Cold and Moisture	Water

There are twelve Signs in the Zodiac:

1. Aries, the Ram	♈
2. Taurus, the Bull	♉
3. Gemini, the Twins	♊
4. Cancer, the Crab	♋
5. Leo, the Lion	♌
6. Virgo, the Virgin	♍
7. Libra, the Scales	♎

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

8. Scorpio, the Scorpion	♏
9. Sagittarius, the Archer	♐
10. Capricornus, the Goat	♑
11. Aquarius, the Water-Bearer	♒
12. Pisces, the Fishes	♓

These Twelve Signs are distributed among what are called the Four Triplicities, or sets of three Signs. Each one is attributed to one of the Four Elements, and they represent the operation of the elements in the Zodiac.

To Fire belong:
Aries, Leo, Sagittarius	♈	♌	♐
To Earth belong:
Taurus, Virgo, Capricornus	♉	♍	♑
To Air belong:
Gemini, Libra, Aquarius	♊	♎	♒
To Water belong:
Cancer, Scorpio, Pisces	♋	♏	♓

To the Ancients, six planets besides the Sun were known. They also assigned certain planetary values to the North and South Nodes of the Moon; that is, the points where the Moon's orbit touches that of the Ecliptic.

These were named:

Caput Draconis - Head of the Dragon	♊
Cauda Draconis - Tail of the Dragon	♎

Since the discovery of two more distant Planets Neptune and Uranus, these two terms have been partially replaced by them.

The effect of Caput Draconis is similar to	♅
The effect of Cauda Draconis is similar to	♆

VOLUME THREE

The names of the Old Planets are:

Saturn	♄	Sol	☉
Jupiter	♃	Venus	♀
Mars	♂	Mercury	☿
Moon			☾

SECOND LECTURE

In alchemy the teaching is that there are three principles namely:

Sulphur	♁
Mercury	☿
Salt	☹

The metals attributed to the planets are:

Lead	♄	Gold	☉
Tin	♃	Copper	♀
Iron	♂	Quicksilver	☿
Silver			☾

The following terms are used in alchemical texts, and mean:

SOL PHILOSOPHORUM - The pure living alchemical spirit of gold - the refined essence of heat and fire.

LUNA PHILOSOPHORUM - The pure living alchemical spirit of silver - the refined essence of heat and moisture.

THE GREEN LION - The stem and root of the radical essence of metals.

THE BLACK DRAGON - Death, putrefaction, decay.

THE KING - Red - The Qabalistic Microprosopus. Tiphareth - analogous to Gold and the Sun.

THE QUEEN - White - The Qabalistic bride of Microprosopus. Malkah - analogous to Silver and the Moon.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

THE HEBREW ALPHABET

Letter	Power	Value	Name	Meaning
א	A	1	Aleph	Ox
ב	B,V	2	Beth	House
ג	G, Gh	3	Gimel	Camel
ד	D, Dh	4	Daleth	Door
ה	H	5	Heh	Window
ו	V, O,U	6	Vau	Pin or hook
ז	Z	7	Zayin	Sword or armour
ח	Ch	8	Cheth	Fence or enclosure
ט	T	9	Teth	Snake
י	I, Y, J	10	Yod	Hand
כ	K, Kh	20	Caph	Fist
ל	L	30	Lamed	Ox goad
מ	M	40	Mem	Water
נ	N	50	Nun	Fish
ס	S	60	Samekh	Prop
ע	Aa, Ngh	70	Ayin	Eye
פ	P, F	80	Peh	Mouth
צ	Tz	90	Tzaddi	Fish hook
ק	Q	100	Qoph	Ear. Back of head
ר	R	200	Resh	Head
ש	S, Sh	300	Shin	Tooth
ת	T, Th	400	Tau	Cross

Each Hebrew letter represents a number and a meaning. Five letters have a different shape and also a different number when written at the end of a word. They are called Finals. Of these Finals Mem is distinguished by being the only oblong letter. The other four Caph, Nun, Peh, Tzaddi have long tails which should come below the line as shown (See table below). Sometimes the letters are depicted as very large, in which case their numerical value is multiplied, such as a very large Aleph represents 1000, a very large Beth 2000, and so on. When practising how to draw Hebrew letters the student would do well to make them on lined sheets. Also remember that these letters are written from right to left. The Order also teaches that these are Holy symbols and therefore should be carefully drawn and square.

VOLUME THREE

TABLE OF FINAL LETTERS

Letter	Power	Value	Name
ך	K, Kh	500	Caph
ם	M	600	Mem
ן	N	700	Nun
ף	P, F	800	Peh
ץ	Tz	900	Tzaddi

The Dagesh is a dot or point placed in some of the Hebrew letters. It changes the sound value of the letter. In modern Hebrew script it represents a vowel; however it is not used in this book. S.R.M.D. asserts it is a late invention to standardise pronunciation.

The Hebrew Qabalists referred the highest and most abstract ideas to the emanations of Deity. There are ten emanations. Each one is a Sefirah, the plural being Sephiroth. When arranged in a certain manner, they form what is called the Etz Chayim or The Tree of Life.

THE ETZ CHAYIM OR THE TREE OF LIFE

1	Kether	K-Th-R	Crown	כתר
2	Chokmah	Ch-K-M-H	Wisdom	חכמה
3	Binah	B-I-N-H	Understanding	בינה
4	Chesed	Ch-S-D	Mercy	חסד
5	Geburah	G-B-U-R-H	Severity	גבורה
6	Tiphareth	T-Ph-A-R-Th	Beauty	תפארת
7	Netzach	N-Tz-Ch	Victory	נצח
8	Hod	H-O-D	Glory	הוד
9	Yesod	Y-S-O-D	Foundation	יסוד
10	Malkuth	M-L-K-U-Th	Kingdom	מלכות

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

THE LESSER RITUAL OF THE PENTAGRAM

In some quarters the pentagram or five pointed star is considered an "evil" or demoniacal symbol. On the contrary with the point upwards it represents the spiritualization of the more elemental aspects of man. Some modern groups have decided to invert the pentagram, not for "evil" purposes but to indicate that it is a symbol of change. Other groups who in fact are "evil" have borrowed the pentagram as their insignium. This has nothing to do with the Order usage of it.

THE USES OF THE PENTAGRAM RITUAL

When tracing the pentagram do make it large. As you trace the banishing pentagram move your arm down to the middle of the left thigh. Then swing upwards at an angle to about the top of the head. From there move the arm down to the middle of the right thigh; then upwards to the left shoulder, straight over to the right shoulder and return to the starting point of the left thigh. The invoking pentagram should be traced in exactly the opposite way, beginning at the apex and moving down to the left thigh, etc.

I have often been horrified when students who have visited me on occasion trace a miniscule pentagram, about 5 inches high in front of their heads.

INVOKING

BANISHING

The Order suggests that the Pentagram Ritual may be used as a form of prayer, the Invoking pentagram in the morning, and the Banishing pentagram in the evening. The names which will be given shortly should be pronounced inwardly in the breath vibrating or humming it as much as possible. (For a complete description see the Regardie Tapes, Falcon Press, 1982. If you do not require the complete set of six tapes with instruction book, you can order the single tape on this subject. Just specify the Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram). Try to feel that the entire body throbs and tingles as the wave of vibration is directed to the ends of the quadrant.

VOLUME THREE

It is said that the Banishing Pentagram may be used as a protection against negative psychologic states in both yourself and others. Make a mental image of your concern or anxiety then formulate it before you. Project it away from you with the saluting sign of a Neophyte (which is depicted on a later page) and when it is about three feet away prevent its return with the sign of silence. Now imagine the form in the Eastern quadrant before you and perform the Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram to destroy it. In your mind's eye see it dissolve on the outside of your circle of flame.

Furthermore it may be used as an exercise in concentration. Seated in meditation or lying down, imagine yourself standing up in robes and holding a dagger. Project your consciousness into this mental image of yourself. When there move to the East. Make yourself feel there by touching the wall, opening your eyes, stamping on the floor etc.

Begin the ritual while in this form and move around the room mentally vibrating the words and trying to feel them being emitted from the mental image. Finish the ritual in the East. Try to feel what has resulted from the ritual, then walk back and stand behind the head of your resting physical body and let yourself be reabsorbed.

HOW TO PERFORM THE RITUAL

THE INVOKING PENTAGRAM

Take a steel dagger or knife in the right hand, face East:

Touch your forehead and say Atoh (thou art).

Touch your chest and say Malkuth (the Kingdom).

Touch the right shoulder and say ve-Geburah (and the Power).

Touch the left shoulder and say ve-Gedulah (and the Glory).

Clasp your hands in the center of the chest and say le Olahm (forever).

Hold the dagger, point upwards, in clasped hands and say Amen (so be it).

The word Amen in addition means the end. It has been associated with Amoun the concealed one. It is also a notariqon of three Hebrew words, Adonai Melekh Neh-eh-mon, which means The Lord Faithful King.

Facing East make a very large invoking pentagram as shown above. When completed thrust the point of the dagger to the center of the pentagram and vibrate the Deity name YHVH (Yod, Heh, Vau, Heh), imagining that your voice carries the vibration to the East of the Universe.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Hold the dagger out in front of you and move to the South. Trace the pentagram there and vibrate the Deity name Adonai.

Go to the West, make a large pentagram again and vibrate Eheieh.

Move to the North with arm holding dagger outstretched. Make the large pentagram and vibrate Agla.

Return to the East always completing your Circle by bringing the dagger to the imagined center of the first Pentagram. Now stand with arms outstretched in the form of a Cross and say:

Before Me Behind me
On my right
On my left

Raphael Gabriel
Michael Auriel

Rah-phah-ale
Gah-bree-ale
Mee-chah-ale
Or-ree-ale

Now say, Before me flames the Pentagram.

Behind me shines the Six-Rayed Star.

Again make the Qabalistic Cross as in the beginning.

For Banishing the same Ritual is used with the reversal of the lines of the Pentagram.

OTHER ALCHEMICAL ATTRIBUTIONS TO THE TREE OF LIFE

Kether	Mercury	Metallic Root
Chokmah	Salt	Lead
Binah	Sulphur	Tin
Chesed	Silver	Silver
Geburah	Gold	Gold
Tiphareth	Iron	Iron
Netzach	Copper	Hermaphroditical
		Brass
Hod	Tin	Brass
Yesod	Lead	Mercury
Malkuth	Mercury	Medicina
	Philosophorum	Metallorum

The four Orders of the Elementals are:

Spirits of the Earth	Gnomes
Spirits of the Air	Sylphs
Spirits of the Water	Undines
Spirits of the Fire	Salamanders

These are the essential spiritual beings called upon to praise God in Benedicite Omnia Opera. The Kerubim are the living powers of YHVH on the material plane, and the presidents of the four elements. They operate through the Fixed or Kerubic-signs of the Zodiac and are thus symbolized and attributed.

Kerub of Air	Man	Aquarius
Kerub of Fire	Lion	Leo
Kerub of Earth	Bull	Taurus
Kerub of Water	Eagle	Scorpio

Tetragrammaton means the Four-lettered name (YHVH) and refers to the unpronounceable Name of God symbolized by Jehovah.

The Laver of Water of Purification refers to the Waters of Binah, the Female Power reflected in the Waters of creation.

The Altar of Burnt Offering for the sacrifice of animals symbolises the Qlipoth or Evil Demons of the plane contiguous to and below the Material Universe. It points out that our passions should be sacrificed. (This simply means that one's passions should be under the control of Will, as indicated in the Paper entitled On the Purification of the Soul).

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

The Altar of Incense in the Tabernacle was overlaid with gold. Ours is Black to symbolise our work which is to separate the Philosophic Gold from the Black Dragon of Matter.

The Qlippoth are the Beings (sometimes referred to as "Evil") below Malkuth, and the Shells of the Dead.

THE QLIPPOTH ON THE TREE OF LIFE

Kether	Thaumiel	The two contending Forces
Chokmah	Ghogiel	The Hinderers
Binah	Satariel	The Concealers
Chesed	Agshekeloh	The Breakers in Pieces
Geburah	Golohab	The Burners
Tiphareth	Tagiriron	The Disputers
Netzach	Gharab Tzerek	The Ravens of Death
Hod	Samael	The Liar or Poison of God
Yesod	Gamaliel	The Obscene Ones
Malkuth	Lilith	Queen of Night and Demons

THE ALTAR DIAGRAM OF THE TREE

The altar diagram shows the Ten Sephiroth with the connecting Paths numbered and lettered, and the Serpent winding over each Path. Around each Sephirah are written the Names of the Deity, Archangel and Angelic Host. The twenty-two Paths are bound together by the Serpent of Wisdom. It unites the Paths but does not touch any of the Sephiroth, which are linked by the Flaming Sword. The Flaming Sword is formed by the natural order of the Tree of Life. It resembles a flash of Lightning.

The Two Pillars on either side of the Altar represent:

Active: The White Pillar on the South Side.

Male.

Adam.

Pillar of Light and Fire.

Right Kerub.

Metatron.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Passive: The Black Pillar on the North Side.

Female.
Eve.
Pillar of Cloud.
Left Kerub.
Sandalphon.

THE FOUR WORLDS OF THE QABALAH

The Qabalists conceived of four planes of existence between God and man. They are:

ATZILUTH, Archetypal - Pure Deity.	אצילות
BRIAH, Creative - Archangelic.	בריאה
YETZIRAH, Formative - Angelic.	יצירה
ASSIAH, Action - Material World.	עשיה

Assiah, the world of Matter, Man, Shells, and Demons is divided into ten houses or Heavens. They are:

Primum Mobile, Rashith ha Gilgalim.	ראשית הגלגלים
Sphere of the Zodiac, Mazloth.	מזלות
Sphere of Saturn, Shabbathai.	שבתאי
Sphere of Jupiter, Tzedek.	צדק
Sphere of Mars, Madim.	מדים
Sphere of the Sun, Shemesh.	שמש
Sphere of Venus, Nogah.	נוגה
Sphere of Mercury, Kokab.	כוכב
Sphere of the Moon, Levanah.	לבנה
Sphere of Elements, Olam Yesodoth.	עולם יסודות

SOME TAROT CORRESPONDENCES

The traditional Tarot consists of a pack of 78 cards made up of Four Suits (symbolic of the four worlds discussed above) of 14 cards each, together with 22 Trumps or Major Arcana, which tell the story of the Soul.

VOLUME THREE

Each suit consists of ten numbered cards (referred to the ten Sephiroth) as in modern playing cards, but there are four instead of three honours: King, Queen, Knight, and Knave.

The Four Suits are:

Wands are comparable to Diamonds.

Cups are comparable to Hearts.

Swords are comparable to Spades.

Pentacles are comparable to Clubs.

THIRD LECTURE

The Soul is divided by the Qabalists into three principal parts:

NESCHAMAH - The highest part, answering to the Three Supernals, and to the higher aspirations of the Soul.

RUACH - The middle part, answering to six Sephiroth from Chesed to Yesod, inclusive, and to the mind and reasoning powers.

NEPHESCH - The lowest, answering to Malkuth, and to the animal instincts.

Neschamah itself is further divided into three parts:

YECHIDAH - is referred to Kether.

CHIAH - is referred to Chokmah.

NESCHAMAH - is referred to Binah.

THE THREE CLASSES OF HEBREW LETTERS

The Sepher Yetzirah divides the Hebrew Alphabet into three classes of letters, a 3, a 7, a 12.

Three Mothers

א ב ש

Seven Doubles

ב ג ד כ פ ר ת

Twelve Singles

ה ו ז ח ט י ל נ ס ע צ ק

The Holy Place of the Temple embraces the symbolism of the 22 letters. The table of Shew-Bread, the single letters. The Altar of Incense are the three Mother letters.

Astral Spirits are those belonging to the Astral Plane. Such are false and illusionary forms, shells of the dead, and ghosts and phantoms, that are occasionally seen in seances.

Elemental Spirits are those belonging to the nature of the Elements; some are good and some are evil.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

An Angel is a pure and high Spirit of unmixed good in office and function.

In the Tarot, the ten small cards of each suit refer to the Sephiroth. The four suits refer to the letters of YHVH. Wands to Yod, Cups to Heh, Swords to Vau, and Pentacles to Heh (final).

These four suits also refer to the four worlds of the Qabalah. Wands to Atziluth, Cups to Briah, Swords to Yetzirah, and Pentacles to Assiah.

The Honours of the Tarot pack are, as it were, the Vice-gerants of the Great Name (YHVH), in the Qabalistic World to which each suit is referred. They also symbolize Father, Mother, Son, Daughter; Birth, Life, Death, Resurrection.

THE FYLFOT CROSS

The 17 squares out of a square of smaller squares, refer to the Sun in the twelve Signs of the Zodiac and the Four Elements. They are arranged so that the fixed signs, mutable and cardinal signs are placed in juxtaposition.

THE CADUCEUS

VOLUME THREE

This form of the Caduceus of Hermes is that of the Three Mother letters, Shin, Aleph, and Mem. It represents Air, as the mediator between Fire above and Water below.

This symbol has another meaning on the Tree of Life. The upper part and wings touch Chokmah and Binah. The knob touches Kether. These are the Three Supernals.

The seven lower Sephiroth are embraced by the twin Serpents whose heads rest upon Chesed and Geburah.

THE MOON ON THE TREE OF LIFE

In the Moon's increase the Pillar of Mercy is embraced. In its decrease the Pillar of Severity is embraced. At the full Moon it reflects the Sun of Tiphareth.

FOURTH LECTURE

Below are the Geomantic figures and their Zodiacal Attributions.

☿		PUER	♊		PUELLA
♈		AMISSIO	♋		RUBEUS
♉		ALBUS	♌		ACQLISITIO
♊		POPULUS	♍		CARCER
♋		VIA	♎		TRISTITIA
♌		FORTUNA MAJOR	♏		LAETITIA
♍		FORTUNA MINOR	♐		CAPUT DRACONIS
♎		CONJUNCTIO	♑		CAUDA DRACONIS

LINEAL FIGURES OF THE PLANETS

Below are the numbers and lineal figures of the planets:

Saturn	3	Triangle
Jupiter	4	Square
Mars	5	Pentagram
Sun	6	Hexagram
Venus	7	Heptagram
Mercury	8	Octagram
Moon	9	Enneagram

VOLUME THREE

This topic is considerably elaborated in a very important document entitled Polygons and Polygrams. There are a number of drawings to illustrate each point made.

THE MAGICAL SQUARES OF THE PLANETS

These squares, which are depicted in another area of this book are technically called Kameas. They are formed of the squares of the number of the planet, arranged so as to yield the same number each way. The number of the sum of each column of figures and the number of the total of all the number of the squares are also especially attached to the planet. For example the number of the planet Saturn is 3, square 9, the sum of all columns vertical, horizontal and diagonal is 15. The total sum of all numbers is 45. These numbers are then formed into Divine and Spirit names as demonstrated in that section of this book dealing with Sigils.

THE SOLID GREEK CUBICAL CROSS

It is the admission badge for the Path of Tau, and is composed of 22 squares which answer to the 22 letters of the Hebrew Alphabet.

THE SOLID TRIANGLE OR TETRAHEDRON

This figure is also known as the Pyramid of Fire. It is the Admission Badge for the Path of Shin, representing the simple Fire of Nature and the latent or hidden Fire.

The three upper triangles (note figure is in 2 dimensional space) refer to Fire - Solar, Volcanic and Astral. The lowest or basal triangle represents the latent heat.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

THE GREEK CROSS

This Admission Badge for the Path of Resh has thirteen squares. It is referred to the Sun in the Twelve Signs of the Zodiac, arranged in triplicities.

THE CUP OF STOLISTES

It is the Admission Badge to the grade of Practicus. It is referred to the Tree of Life as shown in the diagram. It embraces nine of the Sephiroth exclusive of Kether.

Yesod and Malkuth are referred to the lower triangle the former to the apex and latter to the base. Like the Caduceus, it further represents Water, Fire and Air, but in a different combination. The Crescent refers to the Waters above the Firmament, the sphere to the Firmament, and the basal triangle to the consuming Fire, which is opposed to the Fire symbolized by the upper part of the Caduceus.

VOLUME THREE

THE SYMBOL OF MERCURY

On the Tree of Life it embraces all the Sephiroth but Kether. The horns spring from Daath (knowledge) which is not, properly speaking, a Sephirah, but rather a conjunction of Chokmah and Binah.

FIFTH LECTURE OR AZOTH

Azoth is a word formed from the initial and final letters of the Greek, Latin and Hebrew Alphabets thus; A and Z, Alpha and Tau, Alpha and Omega. It is used with various meanings by different writers, but generally signifies essence. It is commonly used amongst the writers on Alchemy.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

The following names occur in Qabalistic writings:

Ain	Nothing - Not
Ain Soph	Without End
Ain Soph Aur	Infinite Light

These three are the Veils of negative existence behind as it were Kether.

Arik Anpin - MACROPROSOPUS or the vast countenance is one of the titles of Kether, yet another of its titles is the Ancient of Days, Aatik Yomin. Kether or the vast countenance emanates first as Abba the supernal Father, and Aima, the supernal Mother. Abba is referred to Yod of YHVH, and Aima is referred to Heh of YHVH. Elohim is a name given to these two Hypostases united.

As Elohim they are considered the parents of the Son, Zauir Anpin, also called MICROPROSOPUS, or the lesser countenance.

Abba is referred to Yod and Chokmah. Aima is referred to Heh and Binah. Zauir Anpin is referred to the 6 Sephiroth Chesed, Geburah, Tiphareth, Netzach, Hod, Yesod and of these especially to Tiphareth.

Malkah the queen and Kalah the bride are titles of Malkuth when considered as the spouse of Zauir Anpin, the Microprosopus.

VOLUME THREE

The letters of the name YHVH contain these meanings:

Yod is referred to Abba.
Heh to Aima.
Vau to Zauir Anpin.
Heh (f) to Malkah.

These letters are also referred to the four worlds and the four suits of the Tarot thus:

Yod	Atziluth	Wands
Heh	Briah	Cups
Vau	Yetzirah	Swords
Heh (f)	Assiah	Pentacles

There are ten Sephiroth in each of the four worlds. Each Sephirah has its own ten Sephiroth making 400 Sephiroth in all - the number of the letter Tau, the Cross, the Universe, the completion of all things.

The Tarot is referred to the Tree of Life in the following manner.

The four Aces are placed on the throne of Kether. The remaining small cards of each suit are placed on the respective Sephiroth, two on Chokmah, three on Binah, etc. The twenty two Trumps are then arranged on the paths between them according to the letters to which they are attributed. The King and Queen of the suit are placed besides Chokmah and Binah, the Knight and Knave by Tiphareth and Malkuth. The Tarot Trumps thus receive the equilibrium of the Sephiroth they connect.

ADMISSION BADGES USED IN THE GRADE OF PHILOSOPHUS

First is the Calvary Cross of twelve squares.

It admits to the path of Qoph, the 29th path, and refers to the Zodiac and to the eternal River of Eden, divided into four heads as follows:

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

NAHER - The River

1. Hiddikel
2. Pison
3. Gihon
4. Phrath - Euphrates

The Pyramid of the four elements admits to the path of Tzaddi, the 28th path.

On the sides of the pyramid are the Hebrew names of the elements. On the apex is the word ETH, meaning essence and on the base is the word OLAM, meaning world.

The next Badge is the Calvary Cross of ten squares admitting to the path of Peh, Mars, the 27th Path.

VOLUME THREE

The ten squares are referred to the Ten Sephiroth in balanced disposition. It is also the opened out form of the double cube of the Altar of incense.

Another Badge is the Hegemon's Cross admitting to the Grade of Philosophus.

This Cross embraces Tiphareth, Netzach, Hod, and Yesod resting upon Malkuth. This Cross also refers to the 6 Sephiroth of Microprosopus and is the opened out form of the cube.

Finally we have the symbol of Venus on the Tree of Life

It embraces all ten Sephiroth on the Tree. It is a fitting emblem of the Isis of Nature. Since it contains all the Sephiroth its circle should be made larger than that of Mercury shown in a previous diagram.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

ANOTHER ARRANGEMENT OF THE TREE

There are various formats of the Sephiroth. The most frequent has already been given, but there is another in common usage and will be seen to have been employed in some of the large Altar diagrams of both the Practicus and Philosophus Grade. It is often referred to as The Seven Palaces of Assiah attributed to the ten Sephiroth.

THE REFLECTION OF THE ELEMENTS DOWN THE TREE

This drawing represents the triad of elements operating through the Sephiroth and reflected downwards into the Tree. Air is reflected straight down the Middle Pillar, from Kether through Tiphareth to Yesod and the upper quadrant of Malkuth. Water is reflected cross-wise from Binah through Chesed to Hod. Fire is reflected cross-wise from Chokmah through Geburah to Netzach. Malkuth therefore becomes the receptacle of the other three elements.

VOLUME THREE

MEDITATION NUMBER ONE

Let the Neophyte consider a point as defined in mathematics as having position but no magnitude and let him note the ideas to which this gives rise. Concentrating his faculties on this, as a focus, let him endeavour to realise the Immanence of the Divine throughout Nature, in all her aspects.

Begin by finding a position, balanced, but sufficiently comfortable. Breathe rhythmically until the body is still and the mind quiet. Keep this state for a few minutes at first and for longer as you get more used to preventing the mind from wandering. Think now of the subject for meditation in a general way then choose out one thought or image and follow that to its conclusion.

The simplest rhythm for the beginner is the Fourfold Breath.

- 1. Empty the lungs and remain thus while counting 4.
- 2. Inhale, counting 4 so that you feel filled with breath to the throat.
- 3. Hold this breath while counting 4.
- 4. Exhale, counting 4 till the lungs are empty.

This should be practised, counting slowly or quickly till you obtain a rhythm that suits you one that is comforting and stilling.

Having attained this, count the breath thus for two or three minutes, till you feel quiet, and then proceed with the meditation.

MEDITATION NUMBER TWO

Let the Zelator meditate on a straight line. Let him take a ruler or a pencil and by moving it a distance equal to its length, outline a square.

Having done this, let him, after quieting his mind with the rhythmic breathing taught in the first meditation, mentally formulate a cube, and endeavor to discover the significance of this figure and its correspondences.

Let him meditate upon minerals and crystals, choosing especially a crystal of SALT, and entering into it, actually feel himself of crystalline formation.

Looking out on the Universe from this standpoint, let him identify himself with the EARTH SPIRITS in love and sympathy, recalling as far as he can their prayer as said in the closing of the Zelator Grade.

Let him meditate upon the EARTH TRIPLICITY, visualising the symbols of a BULL, a VIRGIN, a GOAT which stand for KERUBIC EARTH - MUTABLE EARTH - CARDINAL EARTH.

For the above terms consult a simple astrology manual. Make notes of the ideas and pictures which arise in your mind.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

MEDITATION NUMBER THREE

Let the Theoricus practise the Moon Breath, while saying mentally the word AUM: (The Moon Breath is through the left nostril only.)

Let him meditate upon the waxing and waning crescents, while visualising a silver crescent upon an indigo background.

Let him now call before his mind the Signs of the Airy Triplicity and enclosed in these, let him meditate upon the numbers nine and five and therewith the forms of the Pentagram and Pentangle.

Let him now rise in imagination above the mineral world into the world of trees and flowers and identify himself in love and sympathy with the Powers of the Elements behind these.

Let him realise the mental world where mind rules over matter, and let him meditate upon the ideas of appearance and reality.

MEDITATION NUMBER FOUR

Let the Practicus meditate upon the Symbols of the Rhomboid and the Vesica.

Let him seek out their meanings and correspondences.

Let him contemplate the symbol Mercury and the Number 8.

Let him now learn to control his emotions, on no account giving way to anger, hatred and jealousy, but to turn the force he hitherto expended in these directions towards the attainment of perfection, that the malarial marsh of his nature may become a clear and limpid lake, reflecting the Divine Nature truly and without distortion.

Let him identify himself with the Powers of Water, considering the Water Triplicity in all its aspects, with its attributions and correspondences.

MEDITATION NUMBER FIVE

Let the PHILOSOPHUS meditate upon the symbol of the Fire Triangle in all its aspects.

Let him contemplate the symbol of the Planet VENUS until he realises the Universal Love which would express itself in perfect service to all mankind and which embraces Nature both visible and invisible.

Let him identify himself with the powers of FIRE, consecrating himself wholly until the Burnt Sacrifice is consummated and the Christ is conceived by the Spirit.

Let him meditate upon the Triplicity of Fire - its attributes and correspondences.

VOLUME THREE

MEDITATION NUMBER SIX

Let the Aspirant meditate upon the Cross in its various forms and aspects as shown in the Admission Badges throughout the Grades.

Let him consider the necessity and prevalence of sacrifice throughout nature and religion.

Let him realise the saying of the Master, 'Whosoever shall save his life shall lose it, and whosoever shall lose his life shall save it.'

'Except an ear of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone, but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit.'

Let him endeavour to realise his own place and relative importance in the Universe, striving to stand outside himself and allowing only such claims as he would allow to another.

Let him carefully abstain from talking of himself, his feelings or experiences that he may gain continence of speech, and learn to control the wasteful activities of his mind.

Let him contemplate the Sun as thinly veiled in clouds.

DEVELOPMENTAL EXERCISES

THE SIGIL OF THE HOLY NAME

By

V.H. FRATER A.M.A.G.

The Order prescribed certain meditations to be done in the intervals between the Grades. There are varying reactions to these - some approving, others disapproving. In order to fill a gap between the studies of the Qabalah and the more advanced magical work of the Inner Order, gradually over the years I developed a set of exercises that I found to be very useful. They are not, strictly speaking, the traditional Golden Dawn exercises or meditations, but they are based essentially on the techniques in vogue in the Order. These exercises will make use of the basic methods of many systems such as rhythmic breathing, the vibration of names, visualisation of images, sigils from the Rose, and many others. I recommend them because they form a kind of bridge between the theoretical work of the Order and the far more technical processes that are given later.

Many of these exercises should begin with rhythmic breathing in order to establish some degree of quiescence of body and mind. The Order recommended a four fold breath, that is to inhale to the count of four, hold the breath for the same length of time and exhale to the count of four, and then hold for four. It only requires a little practice a couple of times a day in order to achieve some degree of expertise. Some of the signs of success are: a sense of quiet and stillness both physically and mentally, feeling as though one has become energised, and above all that there is a rippling sensation over and around the diaphragm. With a little regular practice, these results will occur fairly quickly. Then you can proceed with the next step. Feel free to modify the breathing rhythm. If necessary for your own comfort, change the holding period to two instead of four. Or, leave out the holding period altogether and just breath in to the count of four and exhale to the same count. Everything depends on how you feel about what you are doing.

A diagram accompanies this text. It depicts a sigil placed over a human figure. A sigil is simply a traditional technical term meaning a signature. It can be derived either from the Rose, as depicted later in this volume, or from a Kamea or magical square, also given later. The signature given in this diagram is based on the Hebrew word Eheieh and is derived from the Rose. As described later, one simply draws a line from the first Hebrew letter to the next, etc., until the Sigil is completed.

SIGIL OF EHEIEH

The diagram depicts the form of a human being, with this Sigil superimposed. Study it carefully first, so that when you try to visualise this you will have a clear conception of what you are trying to do. Sit down comfortably in a straight backed chair, or lie down on a bed or couch, and begin the process with a few minutes rhythmic breathing. Then visualize this Sigil of the Holy Name in black, not on the surface of your body, but inside, within your own being - not external to you. Visualise it as beginning in the heart region, ascending to the head, descending straight down to the feet, and then rises up to the heart once more. Don't be disturbed if your mind wanders occasionally or often. Just patiently bring it back to the topic you are contemplating and proceed, without self-criticism. It will require a good deal of practice to achieve a high degree of concentration. One aid you will find useful is to vibrate the name given above several times, audibly rather than silently. It is simply a device to facilitate your concentration.

VOLUME THREE

Do this morning and evening for some weeks if need be until you become aware of something going on within which you have not noticed before. I do not wish to describe any of the results possible in order to avoid the possibility of suggestion intruding into your discipline, but whatever the result is it will encourage you and provide the stimulus to continue to bring the Divine White Light into operation within your own being. A later exercise described in the Portal Meditation elaborates this in what is called the Middle Pillar technique. But for the time being this Sigil exercise is a splendid preparation for later work. Just be patient and faithful - the rest will follow by itself.

As expertise develops, change the color of the Sigil from black to white. Keep the shape intact, in other words do not change anything except the color. Follow the program already delineated above.

SENSITIVITY TRAINING

Procure a set of cards, either ordinary playing cards or one of the many available Tarot decks. Remember there is a Golden Dawn pack which may be obtained from any occult bookstore or from the U.S. Games Systems, Inc. in New York City. Do keep in mind some of the teaching given in the preliminary Tarot document earlier in this book.

Shuffle the pack carefully so as to get the feel of the cards first, as well as to get some of your own atmosphere or magnetism into the cards. Spend a few minutes doing this and looking at the cards to become somewhat familiar with the way they look. Shuffle them once more, then place the deck face downwards. Touch the top card without turning it over. While touching it try to feel (or guess) what Suit it is. Remember - the Suit, not the nature of the card. With ordinary playing cards feel whether it is Clubs, Spades, Diamonds or Hearts. With the Tarot deck, Wands, Cups, Swords, Pentacles or any of the Trumps. Give your imagination free rein. Remember, it is of no consequence if you find you are wrong when you turn the card up. Consider the whole experiment as practice or as a game. It might be a good idea to keep a pencil and a sheet of paper handy so that you may enter your findings.

After touching the top card, and having tried to sense what suit it is, turn the card over. Record first what your guess was, and after turning the card over, record what the card actually was. At first, and perhaps for some considerable time, you may find yourself not hitting anything right at all. Do not permit yourself to get discouraged. Just continue the practice. After a while you may find yourself guessing right once in a dozen times, which is not at all bad. With repeated practice, you may find yourself guessing the right suit time and time again. All of this must be recorded. This will ultimately determine what your degree of accuracy is, and therefore how your sensitivity is developing. Remember, stick to guessing the suit only at first. Later on, more rigorous tests of the growing sensitivity can be developed. But go slowly. One step at a time.

SENSITIVITY TRAINING II

Shuffle the cards thoroughly as before, so that all the cards are well distributed and bear little relationship to their former positions. Again, place the sheet of paper and a pencil by your side so that you may record without effort the results of your practice.

Then lay the right hand on the top of the first card of the pack as before, face downwards. Keep it there for a while. Be quiet and still, breathing easily. Now try to guess whether the card is a "pip," that is one of the numbered cards from Ace or 1 to 10. At this juncture do not be concerned about the Suit as you did before, nor the color, nor any other detail. Just the number of the card itself.

You have ten choices. Do not play games with yourself by thinking of just that, or by running through these numbers consecutively in your mind. Be quiet, and while your hand is resting on the card, wait for a particular number to pop into your mind. As before, there will be many errors, naturally. But with continued practice, you will surprise yourself by the increasing number of accurate guesses you will make. At times you will feel you are getting progressively worse instead of better. Pay little attention to this, discouraging though it may appear to be. Quickly enough, you will find that your score will slowly improve and rise considerably.

Enter these results on the paper at your side. This is imperative.

When you feel you are doing well at this game, add one more category to what you are doing. Try to sense or guess not only the number, but the Suit.

If you are using the Tarot deck, remember Wands and Swords are compatible, and so are Cups and Pentacles. If you happen to hit on 6 of Cups when you guessed it might be 6 of Pentacles, you are not doing too badly. Likewise with the other Suits. 7 of Swords is not a bad find for a guess of 7 of Wands. And so on, etc.

Be patient with yourself, and do not expect miracles for the time being. Your skill and sensitivity will slowly improve as you proceed. There are side benefits to be gained from this practice. Apart from all other things which I will gloss over here, you will find your intuition becoming more finely attuned to the intimations of your own inner and higher being. It paves the way to becoming aware of the influence and guidance of your own higher and divine Genius, which is one of the major goals of the Great Work.

VOLUME THREE

HOLY GROUND

Recall the biblical story of Moses hearing the voice of God in the desert telling him to take off his sandals for the ground he was treading on was Holy Ground.

As part of the initiatory process, it is as necessary to sanctify your Malkuth and elevate it to the higher consciousness of Kether as it is to bring down Godhead into the holy kingdom. Initiation is thus a dual process. To sensitize the lower vehicles and to invoke the higher. Properly speaking, this dual process should proceed simultaneously, but in order to render the certainty of this process, this exercise was devised to ensure compliance with tradition.

Sit down comfortably in your straight backed chair, beginning to work on the rhythmic breathing process. Remove shoes or slippers, so that the feet are placed firmly on the floor. Then try to imagine that flames are shooting up from the floor beneath you, flaming not merely around your feet but through them. Before beginning the exercise, get some idea of what flames look like from a picture or photograph, or even look at a gas burner. If you have a barbecue in your back yard or have made a bonfire recently, use these as models for your mental pictures.

While working thus, try to feel that your feet are getting hotter and hotter because of the flames underneath. It should not take too long to experience the sensation of heat there, which should make the visualization process much easier. If there is some difficulty when first imagining this, do not hesitate to resort to any artifice to help achieve the appropriate sensation. For example, obtain some Sloan's liniment or Absorbine Jr. or a patent arthritic medication named HEET. Daub a small quantity of any one of these substances on the feet, either directly under the ankle, or making a straight line with the dauber from heel to big toe in the middle of the sole of the foot. Since the skin on the sole is much thicker than elsewhere, you may have to have several applications of the dauber before you begin to feel any sensation from the dermo-irritant effect of the substance. It should produce some definite physical sensation in the foot. This will enable your imagination to function more easily and vigorously to produce fire and flame sensations in the feet.

Following the terms of the magical tradition, remember that the feet are attributed to Malkuth on the Tree of Life, to which various divine and angelic names belong. Use these as often as you wish both to aid your concentration as well as to invoke the forces of Earth and Fire. Adonai ha-Aretz is the Divine Name governing Earth, while YHVH Tzabaoth is that attributed to Fire. If you are not sure of the other names, refresh your memory by referring to the appropriate tables or Knowledge Lectures. Then use these names vigorously and always audibly. You are committed by the very nature of this system to invoke the highest divine Names you know when working on any magical topic.

Do this exercise for a minimum of fifteen minutes twice a day for as long a period of time as you can, and of course make a record of your results. In the event you are allergic to any of the medications mentioned, wash the area thoroughly with soap and water, or whatever anti-allergic product you are accustomed to use. Before commencing their use, test the product out by daubing a small quantity on your forearm. If there is no allergic response, continue. But if there is evidence of allergy, wash it off and refrain from its further use.

THE QABALISTIC CROSS

This magical gesture is referred to again and again throughout the whole Golden Dawn system. The correct way of doing this is as follows:

1. Stand upright, facing East. Imagine you are growing very tall. So tall that your head is above the clouds, while beneath your feet the Earth seems like a small globe on which you are standing. Spend a few minutes trying to achieve this piece of visualisation. The success of the whole manœuvre depends on this.

2. Intone or vibrate Atoh, while touching the forehead with the forefinger of the right hand. Imagine that above you is the White Light of Kether, from which a ray descends as you proceed with the exercise.

3. Bring the hand down from the head to the middle of the chest and intone or vibrate Malkuth. Feel that the ray of Light descends all the way to the feet, not simply to the chest which you are touching. This establishes the shaft of the cross in Light.

4. Move the hand over to the left shoulder, and vibrate ve-Gedulah. While doing this, imagine that the entire shoulder is ablaze with light ready to move over to the right side to form the cross bar of Light.

5. Move the hand over to the right shoulder, and vibrate ve-Geburah. This will complete the cross bar, so that the entire cross is now formulated.

6. Clasp the hands over the chest, and vibrate le-Olahm Amen. As you do this, try to become acutely aware of this gigantic cross of light formulated through your entire body, now gigantic and extending high into upper space.

Practice this again and again. Do not hurry this procedure. Do it slowly, slowly enough to obtain some clear visualizations of the descending shaft of light with the cross bar at shoulder level. Vibrate the names strongly, if need be several times, not only to improve your concentration but to help formulate the cross more clearly and vividly.

It should be mentioned that once the exercise is over, the whole process should be reversed. That is, one should imagine oneself gradually reassuming one's normal size and absorb the cross of light into oneself. Close with the sign of Silence. With time you will become more conscious of the overshadowing presence of your higher and divine Genius, upon whose aid and guidance you can count. But you must first open yourself to Its presence by making the appropriate gestures and the right kind of aspiration.

This may be done as often as you wish. There are no set times for this practice. The more often the better.

VOLUME THREE

THE HOLY SPIRIT

Kether is Yechidah in man, the higher and divine Genius, the holy Spirit. This has been established thoroughly in all that has gone before. It is the basis of the Qabalah and of the whole Order system. This exercise is to further assist you to gain a deeper apprehension of its constant overshadowing presence. All the work you have been doing before - the theoretical intellectual work relating to the Qabalah etc., is really to sharpen your intuitive faculties, to open yourself to a higher consciousness.

The symbol for the Holy Spirit is the Hebrew letter Shin. Since every Hebrew letter is a number as well, you should already have learned that its numerical value is 300. The Hebrew words for the Spirit of the Gods are Ruach Elohim (Roo-ahch Eh-loh-heem). These words also have a numerical value of 300; thus the letter Shin can well serve as their symbol.

Again, sit upright in your straight backed chair, and immediately establish the rhythmic breath. By now you should be fairly adept in accomplishing this without much fanfare.

Above the head visualize a large letter Shin in flaming red. Visualize it as vividly as possible until you feel it vibrating just above your scalp. The divine Name attributed to Kether is Eheieh. Vibrate this often, as recommended with the previous exercises since it serves both as an aid to your concentration and to link you up with the higher forces of your own being.

As with previous exercises, should any difficulty arise, a single daub of the recommended medical substances should create enough skin irritation on the scalp to enable you to focus all your attention there with relative ease. Again, I recommend recording whatever results, or lack of them, that you obtain, in your private record book.

THE CLEANSING BREATH

This is an accompaniment of the rhythmic breath and should be used to terminate any and all the exercises and practices in this section.

It is really very simple. Take a full breath, in which all the parts of the chest are employed to full capacity. When the chest is fully inflated, hold the breath for a few seconds. Then pucker up the lips as though you were about to whistle, though do not blow out the cheeks. Then exhale the air out vigorously through the opening in the mouth. Let this opening be a narrow one, and puff out only a little air at a time.

Pause for a while, still retaining the balance of the air. Repeat the process, that is continue to puff the air out through the opening of the mouth with some force or vigor. Pause once more, and repeat until all the air is gone. This will force the chest to rebound almost automatically when the exhalation is completed in this way. If there is a little dizziness due to hyperventilation, stop and sit down for a moment or two before resuming. Repeat this type of breath over a period of time until it can be performed with ease and comfort.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

PRITHIVI

You have already been introduced in a rather superficial way to the Hindu tattwa system. Now we will employ these tattwas in a practical way, as an introduction to the possibility of self-initiation, in steps as it were.

The diagram in the colour plate section of this book shows a square. Imagine it to be yellow. It is the symbol of Earth in Hindu psychology - Prithivi. It represents anything in its solid, physical and tangible state, with a host of other meanings that you will come to discover in the course of your working with these exercises. Look at this large yellow square for a moment or two, then close your eyes to imagine it enclosing you. Feel as if you are sitting in it, or standing in or against a yellow wall. Do not try any tricks with this yellow square, such as obtaining complementary colors or imagining that you are passing through imaginary doors, etc. Just see it as it is - a large yellow square in which you are sitting. Hold your attention to this and only this.

Then following the terms of our esoteric tradition, a series of hierarchical names have to be vibrated in order to place you in total harmony with the forces you are dealing with. As the Adeptus Minor ritual indicates, colors are not symbols of forces; they are elemental forces. Yellow is not a symbol of anything. It is a specific subtle type of energy in and for itself. These energies can be activated by the use of the appropriate divine and angelic names, enabling the energies to revitalize and transform your various psychosomatic vehicles into the sensitive receivers they need to be if you are to achieve success in the Great Work.

The divine Name is Adonai ha-Aretz, the Archangelic Name being Auriel. Vibrate these names vigorously and frequently both to facilitate concentration and until your body and all therein is vibrating and tingling exquisitely. When you experience that, you will know that you are on the right track. Persist in this for some considerable time, doing it a couple of times a day. Record your results.

VAYU

This is a large blue circle, again to be found in the coloured plate section of this book. Imagine that it encloses you. This blue circle is called Vayu, attributed to the element of Air. Again, remember that it is being employed to carry on the slow but inevitable process of preparing you for initiation. It is being accomplished in small increments, to enable you to adjust to the process without undue strain or stress.

Follow a procedure similar to the preceding one. Imagine you are seated or standing against a wall on which is inscribed a large light blue circle, sitting or standing. Do not attempt anything beyond what is here described.

In accordance with the western magical tradition, you are going to vibrate the highest divine Names that you know, in order to align yourself with spiritual reality and to protect yourself against mishap. The divine Name is Shaddai El Chai. At the moment we are not concerned with the literal meaning of these names. We know they have a significant vibratory effect, and their use helps tremendously in bringing the mind back to focus. Do this exercise as often as you see fit until your mind concentrates easily on the image, and until you feel the awakening of tingling and vibration sensations within your whole being.

Follow a similar procedure with the remaining tattwas. Apas the silver crescent for Water, Tejas the red triangle for Fire, and Akasa the black egg for Spirit. The Knowledge Lectures will provide the appropriate Names for use with each one.

LOVE

This magical way of life is characterized by its total lack of sentimentality. It is direct, straightforward and unequivocal in its dealings with the different components of your psychospiritual make up and your subsequent relationships with the people in your environment.

But this does not mean to imply that the emotional and spiritual components of man are regarded with disdain or of little account. On the contrary: Love is the law, love under will. Without love, all one's working are sterile and will avail one nothing. But love must accord with law, with the scheme of things, and of course fit in with the general philosophical and theoretical grounds of the magical tradition.

It is an interesting and most useful observation that there is only one planetary symbol which embraces all of the Sephiroth on the Tree of Life. It does this without any strain or force, as you will see from the accompanying diagram. This planet is Venus, the planet of love. We are not now concerned with any specific astrological attributions or meanings other than that Venus is more or less equivocal with love. The Hebrew word is either Ahavoh or Chesed, one of the Sephiroth. Chesed means loving kindness. Associate these words with the symbol of Venus which is a circle astride a cross.

Consult the diagram, noting how all the ten Sephiroth fit into its geometrical form. Then assume your meditative posture in the upright straight backed chair, commencing with the rhythmic breath. Then visualize the symbol Venus synthesizing the whole Tree, which by now you have learned is the glyph of your own self, the whole self. Back into the figure as it were, feeling that the planetary symbol is conterminous with your being.

There are no artifices that you can employ here to conjure up a sensation or emotion of love. But you can, while meditating, reflect on what love is, whom you have loved, and how you felt. Concentrate on all these feelings and emotions, while imagining you are the symbol Venus. Accompany this concentration with the simplest type of rhythmic breathing, counting 4 in and 4 out.

For a short time, watch the breath enter the nostrils, thinking The breath flows in, and then as it leaves the nostrils The breath flows out. This is simple. Maintain this exercise day in and day out until you begin to acquire the feeling and some of the subtleties connected with it.

Then, with this becoming habitual, change the language in your mind to Love flows in to me, and then when exhaling Love flows out from me. Meditate that love flows into you from Kether, the most High, and from you with your blessing to every single being in the whole universe. You may wish to employ one of the lovely passages from the traditional rituals of the Golden Dawn while breathing out love to the whole world. Such as: Holy art thou, Lord of the Universe, for Thy glory flows out to the ends of the Universe, rejoicing.

GENERAL ORDERS

Members of the Second Order in Caledonia are requested not to arrange privately for Second Order teaching with private members in Anglia or elsewhere. All instructions will be arranged for on application to headquarters in Caledonia as well as manuscripts supplied in this Order, and examinations arranged.

Members are requested to strengthen rather than weaken their central authority. and to work in harmony.

Approved by the Chief Adept of the Order, G.H. Frater D.D.C.F. 7-4. (September 1897, Revised in 1898.)

Every member of the Inner Order has been admitted by the permission of the Chief Adept, and every member only retains his membership by the continued approval of the Chief Adept in Britannia.

There is no admission fee, nor annual subscription. But inasmuch as the Chiefs have made themselves liable for certain expenditures by establishing and maintaining a Home for the Order in London, they anticipate that each member will assist, in accordance with his means, in supporting the Order, and supplying the funds necessary for the general maintenance of the Home, the expenses of assemblies, and the extension of the Library.

The Chief Adept -- the G.H. Frater D.D.C.F. -- is now the source of all official instruction. The Chief Adept in Charge, G.H. Frater N.O.M., is his executive Officer. He also now holds the office of Registrar of the Second Order, and to him all communications and appeals are to be addressed. The V.H. Soror Shemeber acts as Assistant Registrar to supervise the circulation of Rituals, etc.

Continuance of membership of the Second Order implies a contract to return to the Registrar on demand, or upon resignation?demission or expulsion, all documents?rituals, rolls, implements, and insignia possessed as an Adeptus Minor.

Membership also implies an assent to the right of the Chief Adept to publish to all other members, the fact and cause of any suspension, resignation?demission?or expulsion from the Second Order.

Every member is expected to attend the Annual Ceremony on the Corpus Christi Day or to send to the Registrar before the date of assembly a reasonable excuse for absence. The fact of the existence of a Home for the Second Order as well as the address thereof?is to be preserved as a secret from every member of the Outer Order of the Golden Dawn, as much as from those outside the pale of the Order.

The Adepts assembled at the Home form a Council which may take cognisance of all matters affecting the welfare of the Order of the Golden Dawn, and of the Second Order. They may report any Resolution, arrived at by a majority of two thirds of those present, at any council to the Registrar, who shall place the Resolution before the Chief Adept, but such Council must be a representative one.

Membership of the Second Order implies a desire and an effort to make progress in the special studies therein taught. As in the Outer Order, the Roll will be revised once a year, and if the G.H. Chiefs consider that any member has failed to make such efforts at progress as might be reasonably expected, they may call upon any member for an explanation. If this latter is not deemed satisfactory, it may be followed by suspension, or an edict of degradation to the rank of a Lord of the Portal?or of cessation of membership.

Offences against the terms of the Adeptus Minor Obligation are deemed of the utmost gravity, while infraction of executive regulations unless repeated and indefensible, will be deemed of less grave importance. The Chiefs hope that private differences between members will be amicably arranged in private, as they have no wish to interfere in such matters.

Members should at all times be very careful not to shew any disrespect to the personal religious feelings of other members.

Notices will be from time to time posted in the Library?in reference to minor regulations, price of the books?and to the holding of classes for instruction.

Whenever one Adept writes to another Adeptus Minor on Second Order matters, he must stamp the envelope in a peculiar manner; viz, in the usual corner, but with the stamp turned around, so that the face looks upwards -- like C.R.C. in the Pastos.

You are particularly requested to think and speak at all times with tolerance and respect of all other Schools of true Occultism, and of the Eastern Philosophy as contrasted with Hermeticism and the Rosicrucian fraternity.

VOLUME FOUR

The works of the Lake Harris school are better avoided. The H.B. of L. is condemned, as of course are Luciferian or Palladistic teachings. The so-called Rose Croix of Sor Peladan is considered as an ignorant perversion of the Name, containing no true knowledge and not even worthy of the title of an occult order. The Black Mass is naturally by its own confession of the evil magic school. The Martinists, as long as they adhere to the teachings of their Founder, should not be out of harmony with the R.R. et A.C.

Regulations for the conduct of the progress of a member through the Zelator sub-grade of the grade of Adeptus Minor.

FIRST STAGE - NEOPHYTE ADEPTUS MINOR

1. Admission ceremony. After which receive Ritual A which consists of general instructions.

The Adeptus Minor Ritual is to be thoroughly studied and the clauses of the Obligation as referred to the Sephiroth are to be impressed upon the memory.

2. Ritual of the Pentagram. Commit the system to memory.

3. Ritual of the Hexagram. Commit the system to memory.

4. Receive ritual U, the Microcosm, to be attentively studied though not learned by heart.

5. Receive Ritual Z-1 and Z-3.

6. Receive Ritual D and make Lotus wand to be consecrated after approval of Chief in Charge.

7. Receive Ritual E and F, and make Rose Cross, and consecrate it after approval as before.

8. Receive Ritual G, and make and consecrate the five Implements as before.

9. Receive Ritual K, the Consecration Ceremony. And M-the Hermes Vision and Lineal figures, and W-Hodos Chamelionis.

10. Receive and study Flying Rolls 1 to 10 inclusive at any period during the first stage.

The Adept must pass Examinations marked A and B at the end of this First Stage, and thus become a Zelator Adeptus Minor.

(Note. By permission of the Chief Adept, 6, 7, and 8 may be taken immediately after 3. Then 4 and 5.)

SECOND STAGE - ZELATOR ADEPTUS MINOR

11. Receive and study Flying Rolls 11, 12, 14, 20, 21, 26, 28, 29, 30, and may now pass C, G, and E examinations.

THIRD STAGE - TAROT SYSTEM

12. Receive and study Rituals N, O, P, Q, R. Must now pass G, C, D, and E examinations.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF 'MAGIC

FOURTH STAGE - ENOCHIAN SYSTEM

13. Receive and study Rituals H, S, T, X, Y. Must now pass F examination.

FIFTH STAGE

14. Receive and study Rituals Z-2, and practise Consecration and Invocation. Must pass H Examination. Practical success in Ceremonials of Z-2 is required.

These Rituals and Flying Rolls may be sent by mail covered and fastened up against inspection. Members must return them in a similar manner. If they do not register them, they will be held liable to replace them if lost in transit.

When a document is marked 'To be kept. . .days' this must not be exceeded.

On the completion of this course of study and the passing of the eight examinations referred to, the Chief Adepts may, at their discretion, admit the Zelator Adeptus Minor to the subgrade of Theoricus Adeptus Minor. But there exists no actual right to such higher grade. This course may be completed within two years.

The examinations leading from the sub-grades of Neophyte and Zelator Adeptus Minor to the sub-grade of Theoricus Adeptus Minor.

The examinations are partly viva voce, partly written in the presence of the Examiner, and partly written at home. In the latter case, manuscripts may be referred to, but no personal assistance may be obtained under the pain of entire rejection.

No Adept will be admitted to sub-grade of Theoricus Adeptus Minor unless he shows a competent knowledge of every one of these subjects. Adepts who have passed any examinations are required to refrain from supplying information as to the questions and procedure they have experienced to any other Adept until he has passed the same examination. The order of passing the examinations has already been defined.

The Examiner in Chief reserves the right to make further regulations as required, as to procedure after failures to pass these examinations, or may subsequently insist on the Examinations being taken in any different order than already laid down.

Z. A. M. TO Th. A. M. EIGHT EXAMINATIONS A. PRELIMINARY

Part 1 Written. Part 2 Viva voce and Practical in presence of Examiner. No part at home. The Obligation, Proof of familiarity with all clauses.

Minutum Mundum diagrams. Names, Letters, Colors, Tarots, with Tarot attributions of Sephiroth and Paths.

Rose and Cross Sigils. Draw Sigil for any given name.

Supreme Ritual of the Pentagram. Allotment of Elements, names and forces; mode of drawing any or all.

In Part 1, the Ceremonials must show 'effect' as well as verbal accuracy.

VOLUME FOUR

Z.A.M. TO Th. A.M. B. ELEMENTAL

Part 1 Written, and Part 1 viva voce in presence of Examiner. No part at home.
The Magical Implements. Sword, Cup, Wand, Dagger and Pantacle and Lotus Wand.
The construction, constitution, symbolism of these and rules for their use. The dangers of imperfect construction and ignorant use. Ceremonies of Consecration, Formulae of Invocation.

Z.A.M. TO Th. A.M. C. PSYCHIC

Spirit Vision and Astral Projection.
Part I. In presence of Examiner, viva voce and Practical. Describe results with symbol supplied. Judging Tattwa cards and visions from Tattwa cards.
Part 2. In the absence of the Examiner, assisted if desired by manuscripts and lectures, but without personal assistance. Written essays on experience with symbols of Tattwas, made by the Candidate but chosen by the Examiner.

z . A. M. TO Th. A. M. D. DIVINATION

Astrology, Geomancy, Tarot. The practice of Divination by these three systems.
Part 2. Divination by all three schemes upon a given subject. Report in writing to be done at home -- without personal assistance.
Part 3. A supplementary viva voce examination if required.

z . A. M. TO Th. A. M. E. MAGIC

Talismans and Flashing Tablets -- their formation and consecration. Ascending to the planes. Formation of Angelic and Telesmatic Figures from Letters of Name supplied.
Vibrating mode of pronouncing Divine Names. The actual vibration of ADONAI HA-ARETZ until radiance of Aura is established.
Part 1. Perform Ceremony of Invocation or Banishing of the forces of any given Sign, Planet or Element.
From a given symbol, travel to the Plane and ascend vibrating the proper Names, etc. Vibration of ADONAI HA-ARETZ until radiance suffices.
Part 2. At home. Make and consecrate a Talisman for a given purpose. Make and charge three flashing tablets, viz: for an Element, a Planet and a Sign.
Draw and colour Angelic figures or Elemental figures appropriate to these as may be required.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Z. A. M. TO Th. A. M. F, ELEMENTAL ENOCHIAN TABLETS

Especially the 10 Servient square of each Lesser Angle as to Angel, Sphinx and God. Chess play, relation of pieces to Tarots, etc., as taught in Y.1. and Y.2. Rituals.

Part 1. Written in presence of Examiner. Ability to fill up all attributions of any given Lesser Angle. Viva voce if required.

Part 2. Written report of Astral visit to certain squares, with the buildings and colourings of the division of each square, and drawings coloured of appropriate Angel, Sphinx and Pyramid God, as required.

Z. A. M. TO Th. A. M. G. SYMBOLICAL

Symbols and Formulae from the Neophyte Ritual. Explain all allusions of any paragraph and the symbolism of any Robe, Lamen, Wand or Action. Also the Neophyte Secret Words and the Coptic Alphabet.

Viva Voce and written in the presence of the Examiner at his discretion.

Consecration and Evocation.

A ceremony on the Formulae of Ritual Z-2 must be performed before the Examiner, and must meet with his approval as to method, execution and effect.

The Chief Adept in charge desires that each Adept will procure a small manuscript book, and enter for himself the titles and subdivisions of all the Examinations, with this phrase written out for each examination:

'I, the undersigned, do this day certify that I have duly examined and am satisfied with attainments which have been shown.'

This book must then be shown at each examination, and also on admission to the Grade of Theoricus Adeptus Minor.

TECHNIQUES OF INVOCATION

Here follow some of the basic techniques of invocation. They are relatively simple -- but absolutely important. Let there be no equivocation about this. They are so important that I recommend that they be committed to memory -- perfectly and by rote.

On examining some of the early documents of the Order as well as those of the later formulation of the Order, the Stella Matutina, I am constantly struck by the fact that in the rituals, whether of initiation or of personal growth and developement, the pentagrams and hexagrams pertaining to the operation are depicted in diagrammatic form. This eternally surprises me. For despite the fact that the papers on the Pentagram and Hexagram rituals suggest, nay demand, that the contents be committed to memory, few apparently took this injunction seriously. Instead of being content with the rubric of the ritual stating that for example the invoking Pentagram of Air should be traced in the Air, or that the banishing Hexagram of Mercury should be traced, the members whose papers I have seen drew the appropriate figure. This of course suggests that the figures were not committed to memory, and that the member had to draw the appropriate figure on the pages of the ritual in order to jog his memory.

Now all of this is totally unnecessary -- which is why I am demanding categorically that the serious student study the following papers and commit the schema to memory. Try to study the papers with the idea in mind of perceiving the underlying attributions. In that case, should a momentary doubt arise as to what figure to employ, all one has to do is to visualize the attributions to the respective angles, and then recall the basic rules involved. With the Pentagrams, the rule is to trace towards the angle involved to invoke, and move away from to banish. In the case of the Hexagram, the rule is to trace clockwise from the angle you are dealing with in order to invoke, and anti-clockwise in order to banish. It is that simple.

VOLUME FOUR

It is so simple aufond that it puzzles me considerably when I find the Pentagrams and Hexagrams depicted in diagrams in various rituals -- like the Consecration of the Elemental Weapons, etc. It must imply that students are careless, or adopt a trifling attitude towards these basic but most important elements of the art of Invocation. The whole art of Magic is rooted in these basics, without which there is nothing but form and emptiness.

So let this be a word to the wise. Memorize the basics then there will be no problem. In that case one could proceed to the next important part of ritual, the visualizations. To repeat a former statement, there can be no magical progress without visualizing the lineal figures or the Godforms. Take one step at a time. Start with the basics first, then proceed to the more complex. The Godforms and the Telesmatic Images are every bit as important as are the lineal figures -- in fact, more so. They will require a good deal of practise to achieve any degree of skill. All the more reason to memorize what can be called the more mechanical phases of magical procedures.

One of the most satisfactory ways of learning these basics is to devise a simple ritual which can be performed daily without too much trouble. It should include the fundamental drills, such as the greater ritual of the Pentagram, plus a dramatic element which will do something to and for the student.

Nearly fifty years ago I composed a short, simple ritual which I used every day for practically a year. As time went on, and as I became more familiar with the rudiments of the Golden Dawn system, it developed into a species of what I came to call Opening by Watchtower. It employed all the important items of the Greater Ritual plus the use of the Elemental Weapons. As a result, in no time at all, a considerable expertise was obtained in the fundamental principles of magical invocation and banishing which has stood me in good stead throughout the years. This really accounts for my adamant insistence on the elimination of diagrams of hexagrams and pentagrams in Rituals, which appalls me more and more as I retype some of the earliest documents of the Order.

In a book published by Aquarian Press in England, entitled Ceremonial Magic, I reproduced this ritual with several variations. There are innumerable changes that can be rung on a simple theme. The student who really wants to be proficient in the magical arts can take one of these themes which I reproduce somewhere in this book and work it to his considerable advantage. By doing so, he will come to a profound understanding of numberless other schemata which at first sight bear little relationship to what he is about to do. (By V.H. Frater A.M.A.G.).

THE RITUAL OF THE PENTAGRAM

The Pentagram is a powerful symbol representing the operation of the Eternal Spirit and the Four Elements under the divine Presidency of the letters of the Name Yeheshuah. The elements themselves in the symbol of the Cross are governed by Yhvh. But the letter Shin, representing the Ruach Elohim, the Divine Spirit, being added thereto, the Name becometh Yeheshuah or Yehovashah - the latter when the letter Shin is placed between ruling Earth and the other three letters of Tetragrammaton.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

From each re-entering angle of the Pentagram, therefore, issueth a ray, representing a radiation from the Divine. Therefore is it called the Flaming Pentagram, or Star of the Great Light, in affirmation of the forces of Divine Light to be found therein.

Traced as a symbol of good, it should be placed with the single point upward, representing the rule of the Divine Spirit. For if thou shouldst write it with the two points upward, it is an evil symbol, affirming the empire of matter over that Divine Spirit which should govern it. See that thou doest it not.

Yet, if there may arise an absolute necessity for working or conversing with a Spirit of evil nature, and that to retain him before thee without tormenting him, thou hast to employ the symbol of the Pentagram reversed - (for, know thou well, thou canst have no right to injure or hurt even evil Spirits to gratify curiosity or caprice) - in such a case, thou shalt hold the blade of thy Magical Sword upon the single lowest point of the Pentagram, until such time as thou shalt license him to depart. Also, revile not evil spirits -- but remember that the Archangel Michael of whom St. Jude speaketh, when contending with Satan, durst not bring a railing accusation against him but said 'The Lord rebuke thee'.

Now, if thou wilt draw the Pentagram to have by thee as a symbol, thou shalt make it of the colours already taught, upon the black ground. There shall be the sign of the Pentagram, the Wheel, the Lion, the Eagle, the Ox, and the Man, and each hath an angle assigned unto it for dominion. Hence ariseth the Supreme Ritual of the Pentagram, according to the angle from which the Pentagram is traced. The circle or Wheel answereth to the all-pervading Spirit: The laborious Ox is the symbol of Earth; the Lion is the vehemence of Fire; the Eagle, the Water flying aloft as with wings when she is vaporized by the force of heat: the Man is the Air, subtle and thoughtful, penetrating hidden things.

At all times complete the circle of the place before commencing an invocation.

The currents leading from Fire to Air and from Earth to Water are those of Spirit -- the mediation of the Active and Passive Elements. These two Spirit Pentagrams should precede and close Invocations as the equilibrium of the Elements, and in establishing the harmony of their influence. In closing, these currents are reversed.

VOLUME FOUR

SPIRIT BANISHING

They are the invoking and banishing Pentagrams of the Spirit, The Sigil of the Wheel should be traced in their centre. In the invoking Pentagram of Earth the current descendeth from the Spirit to the Earth. In the Banishing Pentagram, the current is reversed. The Sigil of the Ox should be traced in the centre. These two Pentagrams are in general use for invocation or banishing, and their use is given to the Neophyte of the Order of the Golden Dawn under the title of the Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram.

This Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram is only of use in general and less important invocations. Its use is permitted to the Outer that Neophytes may have protection against opposing forces, and also that they may form some idea of how to attract and to come into communication with spiritual and invisible things. The Banishing Pentagram of Earth will also serve thee for any opposing Astral force. In all cases of tracing a Pentagram, the angle should be carefully closed at the finishing point.

The invoking Pentagram of Air commenceth from Water, and that of Water commenceth from the Angle of Air. Those of Fire and Earth begin from the angle of Spirit. The Kerubic symbol of the Element is to be traced in the centre. The banishing Signs are reversing of the current. But before all things, complete the circle of the place wherein thou workest, seeing that it is the key of the rest.

Unless you want to limit or confine the force, make not a circle round each Pentagram, unless for the purpose of tracing the Pentagram truly. In concentrating however the force upon a symbol or Talisman, thou shalt make the circle with the Pentagram upon it so as to concentrate the force together thereon.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

BANISHING

INVOKING

VOLUME FOUR

RULE: Invoke towards, and banish from, the point to which the Element is attributed.

Air hath a watery symbol, (Aquarius) because it is the container of rain and moisture. Fire hath the form of the Lion-Serpent (Leo). Water hath the alchemic Eagle of distillation (Eagle's Head). Earth hath the laborious Ox (Taurus). Spirit is produced by the One operating in all things.

The elements vibrate between the Cardinal points for they have not an unchangeable abode therein, though they are allotted to the Four Quarters in their invocation in the Ceremonies of the First Order. This attribution is derived from the nature of the winds. For the Easterly wind is of the Nature of Air more especially. The South Wind bringeth into action the nature of Fire. West winds bring with them moisture and rain. North winds are cold and dry like Earth. The S.W. wind is violent and explosive -- the mingling of the contrary elements of Fire and Water. The N.W. and S.W. winds are more harmonious, uniting the influence of the two active and passive elements.

Yet their natural position in the Zodiac is: Fire in the East, Earth in South, Air in West, and Water in the North. Therefore they vibrate: Air between West and East. Fire between East and South. Water between North and West. Earth between South and North.

Spirit also vibrateth between the Height and Depth.

So that, if thou invokest, it is better to look towards the position of the winds, since the Earth, ever whirling on her poles, is more subject to their influence. But if thou wilt go in the Spirit Vision unto their abode, it is better for thee to take their position in the Zodiac.

Air and Water have much in common, and because one is the container of the other, therefore have their symbols been at all times transferred, and the Eagle assigned to Air and Aquarius to Water. Nevertheless, it is better that they should be attributed as before stated and for the foregoing reason is it that the invoking sign of the one and the banishing sign of the other counterchange in the Pentagram.

When thou dealest with the Pentagram of the Spirit thou shalt give the saluting signs of the Adeptus Minor Grade, and for the Earth the Sign of Zelator, and for Air that of Theoricus, and for Water that of Practicus, and for Fire, Philosophus.

If thou wilt use the Pentagram to invoke or banish the Zodiacal forces, thou shalt use the Pentagram of the Element unto which the Sign is referred, and trace in its centre the usual Sigil of the Sign thus:

WATERY: BANISHING FOR PISCES

FIERY: INVOKING FOR ARIES

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

And whenever thou shalt trace a Sigil of any nature, thou must commence at the left hand of the Sigil or symbol tracing it in a clockwise motion.

Whenever thou invokest the forces of the Zodiacal Signs as distinct from the Elements, thou shalt erect an astrological chart of the Heavens for the time of working so that thou mayest know toward what quarter or direction thou shouldst face in working. For the same Sign may be in the East at one time of the day and in the West at another.

Whenever thou shalt prepare to commence any magical work or operation, it will be advisable for thee to clear and consecrate the place of work by performing the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram. In certain cases, especially when working by or with the forces of the Planets, it may be wise also to use the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Hexagram.

In order that a Force and a Current and a Colour and a Sound may be united together in the same symbol, unto each angle of the Pentagram certain Hebrew divine Names and Names from the Angelic Tablets are allotted. These are to be pronounced with the invoking and banishing Pentagrams as thou mayest see in this diagrams.

The attributions of the angles of the Pentagram are the key of its Ritual. Herein, during ordinary invocation without the use of the Enochian Tablets of the Elements, thou shalt pronounce the Divine Name Al with the Pentagram of Water, and Elohim with Fire, etc. But if thou art working with the Elemental or Enochian Tablets, thou shalt use the Divine Names in the Angelic language drawn therefrom. For Earth, Emor Dial Hectega, etc., and for Spirit the four words: Exarp in the East; Hcoma in the West; Nanta in the North; and Bitom in the South.

In the pronunciation of all these Names, thou shalt take a deep breath and vibrate them as much as possible inwardly with the outgoing breath, not necessarily loudly, but with forcible vibration thus: A-a-a-el-ll (Since this Divine name consists of only two letters I consistently make a practice of vibrating the letters separately viz, Aleph Lamed, then the sound as indicated before). Or Em-or-r Di-a-ll Hec-te-e-gah. If thou wilt, thou mayest also trace the letters or Sigils of these Names in the Air.

VOLUME FOUR

To invoke the forces of the Four Elements at once, at the Four Quarters, commence at the East and there trace the equilibrating Pentagram of the Actives and the invoking Pentagram of Air and pronounce the proper Names. Then carry round the point of thy wand to the South and there trace the equilibrating Pentagram for Actives and the invoking Pentagram of Fire and pronounce the proper Names. Thence, pass to the West, trace the Equilibrating Pentagram for Passives and the Invoking Pentagram for Water and pronounce the proper Names; thence to the North, trace the equilibration of the Passives and the invoking Pentagram of Earth, pronounce the proper Names, and then complete the circle of the place.

In the same manner shalt thou banish, unless thou desirest to retain certain of the Forces for a time. All invocations shall be opened and closed with the Qabalistic Cross. In certain cases other Names, as those of Angels and Spirits, may be pronounced towards their proper quarters and their Names and Sigils traced in the Air.

If thou workest with but one Element, thou shalt make -(if it be an active element as Fire or Air) - the equilibrating Pentagram for Actives only and the Element's own invoking Pentagram, and not those of the other Elements. If it be a passive Element - Earth or Water thou shalt make the Equilibrating Pentagram of the passives only and the invoking Pentagram and banishing follow the same law. Also. see that thou pronouncest the proper Names with the proper Pentagrams.

THE RITUAL OF THE HEXAGRAM

The Hexagram is a powerful symbol representing the operation of the Seven Planets under the presidency of the Sephiroth, and of the seven-lettered Name, ARARITA. The Hexagram is sometimes called the Signet Star or Symbol of the Macrocosm, just as the Pentagram is called the Signet Star or Symbol of the Microcosm. ARARITA is a divine name of the Seven letters formed of the Hebrew initials of the sentence:

One is his beginning. One is his individuality. His permutation is one.

As in the case of the Pentagram, from each re-entering angle of the Hexagram issueth a ray representing a radiation from the divine. Therefore it is called the Flaming Hexagram, or the six-rayed Signet Star. Usually, it is traced with the single point uppermost. It is not an evil symbol with the two points upward, and this is a point of difference from the Pentagram.

Now if thou dost draw the Hexagram to have by thee as a Symbol, thou shalt make it in the colours already taught and upon a black ground. These are the Planetary Powers allotted unto the Angles of the Hexagram.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Unto the right hand lower	ק	Green	Green
Unto the left hand upper	ט	Red	Red
Unto the left hand lower	פ	Yellow	Orange
In the center is the Sun	☉	Orange	Golden

The order of attribution is that of the Sephiroth on the Tree of Life. Hence ariseth the Supreme Ritual of the Hexagram according to the Angles from which it is traced.

The uppermost angle answereth also to Daath and the lowest to Yesod, and the other angles to the remaining angles of the Microprosopus. The Hexagram is composed of the two triangles of Fire and Water, and is therefore not traced in one continuous line like the Pentagram, but by each Triangle separately. (The exception to this is the use of Unicursal Hexagram, by means of which Hexagram is traced in one continuous line. This is demonstrated at considerable length at the end of this section.)

All the invoking Hexagrams follow the course of the Sun in their current, that is from left to right. But the banishing Hexagrams are traced from right to left from the same angle as their respective invoking Hexagrams contrary to the course of the Sun. The Hexagram of any particular Planet is traced in two Triangles, the first starting from the angle of the Planet, the second opposite to the commencing angle of the first. The Symbol of the Planet itself is then traced in the centre. Thus in the case of the invoking Hexagrams of Saturn, the first triangle is traced from the angle of Saturn, following the course of the Sun, the second triangle from the angle of the Moon.

(Only trace the central Planetary symbol in practice -- the others shown on the diagram only for illustration.) Vibrate Ararita while tracing the Hexagram and divine Name of the Planet when tracing its symbol.

But for the Sun all six invoking Hexagrams of the Planets should be traced in their regular planetary order and the symbol of the Sun traced in the centre. And for his banishing hexagram also, all the six banishing hexagrams of the other Planets should be employed in their regular order, only that the symbol of the Sun should be traced therein. (Because all of this is so cumbersome the Unicursal Hexagram is of such great advantage. I.R.).

Remember that the symbol of Luna varieth, and as Moon in her increase she is favorable. But Moon is not so favourable for good in her decrease. The symbol of Luna in the centre of the Hexagram should be traced if in her increase; by the reverse in her decrease. Remember that the symbol in her decrease represents restriction and is not so good a symbol as the Moon in her increase. And at the full Moon exactly it is represented by a full circle but at new Moon a dark circle.

The last two forms of Luna are not good in many cases. If thou wilt invoke the Forces of the Head of the Dragon of the Moon thou shalt trace the lunar invoking Hexagram and write therein the symbol of Caput and for the tail Cauda. These Forces of Caput and Cauda are more easy to be invoked when either the Sun or the Moon is with them in the Zodiac in conjunction. In these invocations thou shalt pronounce the same Names and Letters as are given with the Lunar Hexagram. Caput is of a benevolent character, and Cauda of a malefic, save in a very few matters. And be thou well wary of dealing with these forces of Caput and Cauda or with those of Sol and Luna during the period of an eclipse, for they are the Powers of an eclipse. For an eclipse to take place both the Sun and Moon must be in conjunction with them in the Zodiac, these two luminaries being at the same time either in conjunction or opposition as regards each other.

In all Rituals of the Hexagram as in those of the Pentagram, thou shalt complete the circle of the place. Thou shalt not trace an external circle round each Hexagram itself unless thou wishest to confine the force to one place -- as in charging a Symbol or Talisman.

From the attribution of the Planets, one to each angle of the Hexagram, shalt thou see the reason of the sympathy existing between each superior planet and one certain inferior Planet. That is, that to which it is exactly opposite in the Hexagram. And for this reason is it that the Triangle of their invoking and banishing Hexagrams counter-change. The superior Planets are Saturn, Jupiter, Mars. The inferior Planets are Venus, Mercury, Luna. And in the midst is placed the Fire of the Sun. Therefore the superior Saturn and the Inferior Luna are sympathetic, so are Jupiter and Mercury, Mars and Venus.

In the Supreme Ritual of the Hexagram the Signs of the Adeptus Minor Grade are to be given, but not those of the Grades of the First Order, notwithstanding these latter are made use of in the Supreme Ritual of the Pentagram. And because the Hexagram is the Signet Star of the Macrocosm or Greater World, therefore is it to be employed in all invocations of the Forces of the Sephiroth: though the Signet Star of the Pentagram represents their operation in the Luna World, in the Elements and in Man.

If thou wilt deal with the Forces of the Supernal Triad of the Sephiroth, thou shalt make use of the Hexagrams of Saturn; for Chesed those of Jupiter, for Geburah those of Mars; for Tiphareth those of the Sun, and for Netzach those of Venus, and for Hod those of Mercury, and for Yesod and Malkuth those of the Moon.

Know also that the Sephiroth are not to be invoked on every slight occasion, but only with due care and solemnity. Above all, the forces of Kether and Chokmah demand the greatest purity and solemnity of heart and mind in him who would penetrate their mysteries. For such high knowledge is only to be obtained by him whose Genius can stand in the Presence of the Holy Ones. See that thou usest the Divine Names with all reverence and humility for cursed is he that taketh the Name of the Vast One in vain.

When thou tracest the Symbol of a Planet in the centre of a Hexagram, thou shalt make the same of a proportionable size to the interior of the Hexagram, and thou shalt trace them from left to right generally following the course of the Sun as much as possible Caput and Cauda Draconis may follow the general rule.

When thou shalt invoke either the Forces of one particular Planet or those of them all, thou shalt turn thyself towards the Quarter of the Zodiac where the Planet thou invokest then is. For owing both to their constant motion in the Zodiac and to the daily movement of the same, the position of a Planet is continually changing, and therefore it is necessary for thee in such a case to erect an astrological chart of the position of the Planets in the heavens for the actual time of working, so that thou mayest see the direction of each Planet from thee. This is even more necessary when working with the Planets than with the signs of the Zodiac.

When thou shalt desire to purify or consecrate any place, thou shalt perform the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Hexagram, either in conjunction with, or instead of that of the Pentagram, according to the circumstances of the case. For example, if thou hast been working on the plane of the Elements before, it will be well to perform the Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram before proceeding to thee work of a Planetary nature, so as thoroughly to clear the places of Forces which, although not hostile or evil of themselves, will yet not be in harmony with those of an altogether different Plane. And ever be sure that thou dost complete the circle of the place wherein thou workest.

VOLUME FOUR

THE FOUR FORMS

These are the four forms assumed by conjoining the two triangles of the Hexagram on which the Lesser Ritual of the Hexagram is based.

The first form is:

The angles are attributed as in the diagram. Its affinity is with the Eastern Quarter; the position of Fire in the Zodiac. (Note: To form these from the usual Hexagram, lower the inverted triangle, then reverse it by throwing the Lunar angle up to the top from being lowest. Mars and Jupiter do not change sides.)

The second form is the ordinary Hexagram with the attribution of the angles as usual: the affinity being rather with the Southern Quarter, the position of Earth in the Zodiac, and of the Sun at his culmination at noon.

The third form is:

The angles are attributed as shown and its affinity is with the Western Quarter, the position of Air in the Zodiac.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

The fourth form is:

The angles are attributed as shown and its affinity is with the Northern Quarter, the position of Water in the Zodiac.

With each of these forms the Name Ararita is to be pronounced. Also as in the preceding cases there will be seven modes of tracing each of these four forms, according to the particular Planet with those Forces thou art working at the time.

The Hexagrams of Saturn may be used in general and comparatively unimportant operations, even as the Pentagram. In these four forms of the Hexagrami thou shalt trace them beginning at the angle of the Planet under whose regimen thou art working, following the course of the Sun to invoke, and reversing the course to banish. That is to say, working from left to right for the former and from right to left for the latter. Remember always that the symbols of the Elements are not usually traced on Sigils but are replaced by the Kerubic Emblems of Aquarius, Leo, Taurus and the Eagle head.

THE LESSER RITUAL OF THE HEXAGRAM

Commence with the Qabalistic Sign of the Cross as in the Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram, and use what manner of Magical implement may be necessary according to the manner of working, either the Lotus Wand or the Magical Sword.

Stand facing East, If thou desirest to invoke thou shalt trace the figure thus:

Following the course of the Sun, from left to right and thou shalt pronounce the name Ararita, vibrating it as much as possible with thy breath and bringing the point of the Magical Implement to the center of the figure.

But if thou desirest to banish thou shalt trace it thus:

VOLUME FOUR

From right to left, and see that thou closest carefully the finishing angle of each triangle.
Carry thy magical implement round to the South and if thou desirest to invoke trace the figure thus:

But if to banish then from left to right thus:

Bring as before the point of thy magical implement to the center and pronounce the Name Ararita.

Pass to the West. and trace the figure for invoking thus:

Banishing thus:

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Then to the North, Invoking:

Banishing:

Then pass round again to the East so as to complete the circle of the place wherein thou standest, then give the LVX signs and repeat the analysis of the Pass-word INRI of the Adeptus Minor Grade.

ADDENDUM

Now in the Supreme Ritual of the Hexagram, when thou shalt wish to attract in addition to the forces of a Planet, those of a Sign of the Zodiac wherein he then is, thou shalt trace in the centre of the invoking Hexagram of the Planet, the Symbol of that Sign of the Zodiac beneath his own; and if this be not sufficient, thou shalt also trace the invoking Pentagram of the Sign as it is directed in the ritual of the Pentagram.

In the tracing of the Hexagram of any Planet thou shalt pronounce therewith in a vibratory manner as before taught, both the Divine Name of the Sephira which ruleth the Planet and the Seven-letterd Name Ararita, and also the particular letter of that Name which is referred to that particular Planet.

Now if thou shalt wish to invoke the forces of One particular Planet, thou shalt find in what Quarter of the heavens he will be situate at the time of working. Then thou shalt consecrate and guard the place wherein thou art by the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Hexagram. Then thou shalt perform the Lesser Invoking Ritual of the Hexagram, yet tracing the four figures employed from the angle of the Planet required, seeing that for each Planet the mode of tracing varieth. If thou dealest with the Sun, thou shalt invoke by all six forms of the Figure and trace within them the Planet Symbol and pronounce the Name Ararita as has been taught.

Then shalt thou turn unto the quarter of the planet in the Heavens and shalt trace his invoking Hexagram and pronounce the proper Names, and invoke what Angels and Forces of that Nature may be required, and trace their Sigils in the air.

When thou hast finished thy invocation thou shalt in most cases license them to depart and perform the Banishing Symbols upon it which would have the effect of entirely de-charging it and reducing it to the condition it was in when first made -- that is to say dead and lifeless.

If thou wishest to bring the Rays of all or several of the Planets into action at the same time, thou shalt discover their quarter in the Heavens for the time of working, and thou shalt trace the general Lesser Invoking Ritual of the Hexagram, but not differentiated for any particular Planet, and then thou shalt turn to the Quarters of the respective Planets and invoke their forces as before laid down; and banish them when invocation is finished, and conclude with the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Hexagram. And ever remember to complete the circle of the place wherein thou workest, following the course of the sun.

N.B. The series of Hexagrams to invoke and banish Solar forces are repetitive, clumsy and tedious. Crowley had developed an Unicursal Hexagram to which all the regular traditional attributions could be made. I found later that this was not original with Crowley but could be found in the document on Polygons and Polygrams. In any event, it was a happy find. It is a great deal easier and less tedious in operation, and I first published these findings in Ceremonial Magic Aquarian Press, I am reproducing the attributions here, for I feel sure that the modern student does not wish to be bogged down by unnecessary traditional forms which can be replaced by a streamlining effect. THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

INVOKING

THE MAGIC SWORD

The following includes, Sword description, Use, Consecration, Mode of use, Caution. Need of reverence.

This is for general use in Banishing for defense against evil forces, and in certain invocations.

The Sword should be of medium length and weight.

Any convenient sword may be adapted for this use, the pattern of the hilt here given is not essential. But the handle, hilt and guard must be such as to offer surface suitable for inscriptions.

Pentagrams should be painted on salient portions because it is the lineal figure of GEBURAH.

The Divine and Angelic Names related to GEBURAH are then to be added and also their sigils taken from the Rose.

The Motto of the Adept is to be engraved upon it, or upon the hilt in letters of emerald green colour, in addition to the other mystic devices and Names.

VOLUME FOUR

The Blade should be clean and bright, and the hand hilt and guard should be painted bright scarlet. Upon this as a ground colour the inscriptions are to be added in emerald green.

The Sword has then to be consecrated in due form.

USE

It is to be used in all cases where great force and strength are to be used and are required, but principally for banishing and for defense against evil forces.

For this reason it is under the presidency of GEBURAH and of MARS. Thus their Names and forces are to be invoked at its consecration, which should take place on the Day and Hour of Mars, or used during the course of the Fiery Tattwa.

Here again let the Z.A.M. remember his Obligation never to use his knowledge of practical magic for purposes of evil. Let him be well assured that if he do this, notwithstanding his pledge, the evil he endeavours to bring about will react on himself, and that he will experience on his own person and in his own affairs that very thing which he has endeavoured to bring about for another.

So also may he perish and be blotted out from among us.

MODE OF USE

When it is desired to concentrate and to use the full force of the Sword, hold it thus. The pommel of the hilt rests in the palm of the hand, with the thumb and forefinger extended along the hilt, towards the guard.

CAUTION

Need of Reverence. Remember that there is hardly a circumstance in the Rituals, even of the First Order, which has not its special meaning and application, and which does not conceal a potent magical formula.

These ceremonies then have brought thee into contact with certain forces which thou hast now to learn how to awaken in thyself. And to this end, read, study and re-read what thou hast already received. Be not sure even after the lapse of much time, that thou hast yet fully discovered all that is to be learned from them.

To be of use unto thee, this must be the work of thine own inner Self -- thine own, and not the work of another that so thou mayest gradually attain to the Knowledge of the Divine Ones.

CONSECRATION CEREMONY

Prepare the chamber, with a central Altar draped in black, with a red Cross, white Triangle, Rose and incense, Cup and water, Lamp, plate and salt, Rose Cross, consecrated Lotus Wand, white robe is desirable, the new Sword, Red cloak and Lamén.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Next: An Invocation to Mars and Geburah. An Astrological figure to show position of Mars at the time. In wording and formulating the Invocation to the Forces of Geburah, force and strength are to be specially requested.

1. Place the Sword upon Altar, hilt to East near Incense, point to West near Water.
2. Take up Lotus Wand near Water.
3. Stand at West of Altar, facing East.
4. Say, Hekas Hekas Este Bebeloi.
5. Take up Cup and purify with Water sprinkling to E. S. W. N.
6. Saying, So therefore first the Priest who governeth the works of Fire must sprinkle with the Lustral Water of the loud resounding sea.
7. Put down Cup on Altar.
8. Take up Incense and wave it as you pass round E. S. W. N.
9. Saying, And when after all the Phantoms are vanished thou shalt see that holy and formless Fire, that Fire which darts and flashes through the hidden depths of the Universe, hear thou the voice of Fire.
10. Put down Incense. Take up Wand.
11. Circumambulate with Sun three times, grasping Wand by white band. Return to West, face East, say Adoration:

Holy art Thou Lord of the Universe.
Holy art Thou Whom nature hath not Formed.
Holy art Thou the Vast and Mighty One.
Lord of the Light and of the Darkness.

12. Performing Lesser Invoking Ritual of the Hexagram of Mars, holding the Wand by White Band. Give Adeptus Minor Signs and analyse Key-Word.
13. Return to West of Altar.
14. Turn to face the direction in which you have found Mars to be standing so that the Altar is between yourself and Mars for convenience.
15. Describe in the Air the Invoking Pentagram of Sign Mars is in.
16. Describe Invoking Hexagram of Mars, saying: ELOHIM GIBOR. Then still holding Wand by White Band.
17. Recite your Invocation to the power of GEBURAH and the Forces of Mars, tracing the Sigil of each as you read it.

O Mighty Power who governeth GEBURAH, Thou strong and terrible Divine ELOHIM GIBOR. I beseech Thee to bestow upon this Magic Sword Power and Might to slay the evil and weakness I may encounter. In the Fiery Sphere of MADIM, strength and fidelity. May Thy Great Archangel KAMAEL bestow upon me courage wherewith to use it aright and may The Powerful Angels of the Order of SERAPHIM scorch with their flames the feebleness of purpose which would hinder my search for the True Light.

VOLUME FOUR

18. Then trace in the Air, slowly, above Sword, and as if standing upon it, the Invoking Hexagram of Mars. Do this with the Lotus end, still holding the White Band.

19. Next trace over the Sword the letters of the names in the invocation and their several Sigils.

20. Put down the Wand.

21. Take up the Cup and purify new Sword with Water, making Cross upon it; put down Cup.

22. Take up Incense and wave it over new Sword. Put down Incense.

23. Take up new Sword and with it perform the Lesser Invoking Ritual of the Hexagram and also trace the Invoking Hexagram of Mars, repeating ARARITA and ELOHIM GIBOR.

24. Lay down Sword.

25. With Cup purify Chamber as before.

26. With Incense purify as before.

27. Reverse circumambulation three times and say:

28. In the Name of YEHESHUAH, I now set free all Spirits that may have been imprisoned by this Ceremony.

29. Perform with the Sword the Lesser Banishing Ritual of Hexagram.

30. Perform Lesser Banishing Ritual of Pentagram.

31. Conclude with Qabalistic Cross.

32. Wrap up Sword, white or scarlet silk or linen. Henceforth no one else may touch it.

THE FOUR ELEMENTAL WEAPONS

These are the Tarot Symbols of the letters of the Divine Name YHVH and of the Elements, and have a certain bond and sympathy between them. So that if even one only is to be used, the others should also be present, even as each of the Four Elemental Tablets is divided in itself into Four Lesser Angles, representing the other three elements bound together therewith in the same tablet.

Therefore also let the Zelator Adeptus Minor remember that when he works with these forces, he is, as it were, dealing with the forces of the letters of the Divine Name, YHVH.

Each implement must be consecrated, and when this has been done by an Adeptus, no one else may touch it.

THE WAND OF FIRE

The Staff of the Wand should be of wood, rounded and smooth, and perforated from end to end, and within it should be placed a steel rod, just so long as to project an inch beyond each end of the wood rod.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

It is often convenient to form the Wand from cane which has a natural hollow through it. If of cane there should be three natural lengths according to the knots, so that these knots may be placed similarly to the manner in which they are placed in the figure which is such as a turner would produce.

Eighteen inches is an extreme length. The magnet should be a strong one.

One end of the Wooden Rod should be cone-shaped. The North end of the magnet, (known by its repelling the so-called North Pole of a compass needle) should be placed at the end of the Wand which is plain.

The whole is coloured flame scarlet, and divided into 3 parts by Yellow bands.

The Cone shaped end has also painted upon its red surface three wavy flame-shaped YODS as ornaments; they are painted in bright yellow as in illustration.

The Divine and Angelic names of the Element Fire, should be there written in green paint along the Shaft and on the Cone.

Their sigils should be added with the Motto of the Adeptus. The green should be bright Emerald. The wand must then be consecrated.

The Wand is to be used in all workings of the Nature of Fire and under the Presidency of YOD and of the Wand of the Tarots. Sigils are not given. The Adeptus must work them out for himself.

THE DAGGER FOR AIR

Any convenient dagger or knife or sword may be adapted to this use, the shorter the better. The hilt, pommel and guard are to be coloured a bright pure yellow.

Upon this background, the divine and angelic names should then be written with purple or violet colour, together with their sigils from the Rose, and the motto of the Adeptus.

It is then ready for consecration.

When using the Air Dagger in ceremonial work, it may be held in the usual way of a dagger -- or as a knife, or as described for the Wand or Sword.

It is to be used in all works of an Airy nature and under the presidency of VAU and the Sword of the Tarot.

Let there be no confusion between the magical Sword and the Air Dagger. They belong to different planes and any substitution of one for the other is harmful.

The magical Sword is under GEBURAH and is for strength and defense. The Air Dagger is for Air, for VAU of YHVH, and is to be used with the other three elemental weapons.

VOLUME FOUR

THE CUP FOR WATER

Any convenient clear glass Cup may be adapted for this use.

The bowl should somewhat resemble the shape of a crocus flower, and must show eight petals. Thus a smooth glass cup is acceptable, though if it has eight cuts or ridges it is preferable.

These petals must be coloured bright blue, neither too pale nor too dark. They must be edged with bright orange colour which must be clear and correct -- an exact complement of the blue, adequate to produce a flashing.

The petals may be formed by paint or from coloured paper pasted on the glass. (This is not really practical. If water spills over the rim of the glass, it may spoil altogether the stuck-on-paper. Paint is by far the better medium. I.R.) The proper Divine and Angelic Names are then to be written upon the petals in orange colour, together with their Sigils from the Rose. Then add the motto of the Adeptus. The stem and base may be painted blue also -- but there is no advantage in this.

The Cup must be consecrated by the appropriate ceremony.

When using the Cup, you may sprinkle with Water from the Cup in the required direction.

It is to be used in all workings of the nature of Water, under the presidency of the letter HEH and the Cup of the Tarot.

THE PANTACLE FOR EARTH

The Pantacle or Pentacle should be formed of a round disk of wood, of about six inches in diameter and from half to one inch in thickness, nicely polished, and truly circular and of even thickness.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

There should be a circular white border, with a white Hexagram upon each face of the disk. The space within the white ring should be divided saltire-wise into four compartments by two diameters at right angles.

The four compartments are to be coloured:

The upper -- Citrine -- for the Airy part of Earth.
The right -- Olive Green -- for the Watery part of Earth.
The left -- Russet Brown -- for the Fiery part of Earth.
The lower -- Black -- for the Earthy part of Earth.

The Divine and Angelic names should be written in black within the white border, each name followed by its sigil taken from the Rose. Crosses may be placed after each Sigil. The motto of the Adept is to be added.

The Pantacle should be the same on both sides and should be held in the hand with the Citrine part upmost, unless there be some special reason for using one of the other compartments.

The Pantacle must then be consecrated by the appropriate ceremony.

It is to be used in all working of the nature of Earth, and under the presidency of HEH (final), and of the Pantacle of the Tarot.

RITUAL OF CONSECRATION OF THE FOUR ELEMENTAL WEAPONS

(N.B. The Consecration Ceremony as described and given in the oldest papers of the Order are not very systematic and are rather disorderly. It remained for one of the products of the rebellion, the Stella Matutina, to organize this material and produce a systematic ritual. Whoever was responsible for this editing produced a splendid example of very fine editing and reorganization. I had nothing to do with it, though I would like to have said I did it. I.R.)

GENERAL NOTES ON THE CONSECRATION OF THE FOUR IMPLEMENTS

The Adept is to be robed in White, wear his white sash, and Rose Cross.

Have on hand the Lotus Wand, Magic Sword and prepare the chamber as for Sword.

All four weapons should be present at once on altar, with all four symbols of the Elements.

Lay the Fire Wand near the Lamp, the Cup near the Water, the Dagger near the Incense and the Pantacle near the Salt.

Each Elemental Weapon must be consecrated at a time (24 minutes) when the Tattwa of the Element concerned is in course.

The consecration of each weapon is a separate ceremony although they may be done successively.

VOLUME FOUR

The opening ceremony and the closing ceremony will suffice for one or all, however, and need not be repeated if all are consecrated on one occasion.

The Tattwa period is found in practice to suffice for the 'Special Portion' of the ceremony.

Prepare for each Element by the Invocation to the King and the Six Seniors from the Elemental Tablets, according to the instructions laid down in the that section of this book dealing at length with Enochian System.

After consecration, each implement is to be wrapped up either in White silk or in silk of the colour proper to the Element.

NOTE OF V.H. FRATER N.O.M.

Before performing these four ceremonies it will be found wise to write out the complete form, including all pentagrams and other figures and sigils and invocations, using the notes here following as an outline. Otherwise, confusion will arise among Tablet names.

(With all due respect to the wisdom of G.H. Frater N.O.M. this advice is absolutely pernicious. By this time, the student or Z.A.M. should be so familiar with the basics through drills and repetition, that he has no need of writing out the above forms, etc. The advice given at the outset of this section is still by far and away the most practical -- unless the Z.A.M. is a pure nit-wit. I.R.)

THE RITUAL OF CONSECRATION

1. Take up the Lotus Wand by the Black portion, and say, Hekas Hekas Este Bebeloi. Put down the Wand and take up the Magic Sword and with it go to the East.

2. Perform the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram.

3. Lay down Sword, and purify with Water, saying, So therefore first the Priest who governeth the works of Fire must sprinkle with the Lustral Water of the loud-resounding Sea.

4. Consecrate with Fire, saying, And when, after all the Phantoms are banished, thou shalt see that Holy formless Fire, that Fire which darts and flashes through the hidden depths of the Universe, hear thou the Voice of Fire.

5. Take up the Lotus Wand by White portion.

6. Circumambulate with the Sun three times.

7. Repeat the Adoration, salute with the Neophyte Sign each time.

Holy art Thou, Lord of the Universe.
Holy art Thou, whom Nature hath not Formed.
Holy art Thou, the Vast and the Mighty One.
Lord of the Light and of the Darkness.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

8. Varying with each Implement on different days, or 20 minutes between each commencement, according to Tattwas, perform Supreme Invoking Ritual of the Pentagram of the particular elemental Implement with Lotus Wand, holding it by appropriate band of the Kerubic Figure.

9. With the Lotus Wand in hand, and standing by the Altar and facing the Quarter of the Element whose Implement you are consecrating, describe in the Air over the Implement, as if standing upon it, the Invoking Pentagram of that Implement.

10. Invoke the Divine and Angelic Names already graven upon the Implement, making their letters and Sigils in the Air, over the Implement with the Lotus Wand.

O Thou, Who art from everlasting, Thou Who hast created all things, and doth clothe Thyself with the Forces of Nature as with a garment, by Thy Holy and Divine Name, (For Pentacle vibrate Adonai, For Dagger vibrate Yhvh, For Cup vibrate El, For Wand vibrate Elohim) whereby Thou art known especially in that Quarter we name (For Pentacle and Earth vibrate Tzaphon for the North, For Dagger and Air vibrate Mizrach for the East, For Cup and Water vibrate Mearab for the West, For Wand and Fire vibrate Darom for the South).

I beseech Thee to grant unto me strength and insight for my search after the Hidden Light and Wisdom. I entreat Thee to cause Thy Wonderful Archangel (For Pentacle vibrate AURIEL Who governeth the works of Earth, For Dagger vibrate RAPHIEL Who governeth the works of Air, For Cup vibrate GABRIEL Who governeth the works of Water, For Wand vibrate MICHAEL Who governeth the works of Fire) to guide me in the Pathway; and furthermore to direct Thine Angel (For Pentacle vibrate PHORLAKH, For Dagger vibrate CHASSAN, For Cup vibrate TALIAHAD, For Wand vibrate ARAL) To watch over my footsteps therein.

May the Ruler of (name element) the Powerful Prince (For Pentacle and Earth vibrate KERUB, For Dagger and Air vibrate ARIEL, For Cup and Water vibrate THARSIS, For Wand and Fire vibrate SERAPH) by gracious permission of the Infinite Supreme, increase and strengthen the hidden forces and occult virtues of this (name implement) so that I may be enabled with it to perform aright those Magical operations, for which it has been fashioned. For which purpose I now perform this mystic rite of Consecration in the Divine Presence of (For Pentacle vibrate ADONAI, For Dagger vibrate YHVH, For Cup vibrate EL, For Wand vibrate ELOHIM).

11. Lay aside the Lotus Wand.

12. Take up the Magic Sword, and read the Invocation to the King, tracing in the Air the Invoking Pentagram of the Element.

In the Three Great Secret Holy Names of God borne upon the Banners of the, (For Pentacle and Earth -- North vibrate EMOR DIAL HECTEGA, For Dagger and Air -- East vibrate ORO IBAH AOZPI, For Cup and Water -- West vibrate EMPEH ARSEL GAIOL, For Wand and Fire -- South vibrate OIP TEAA PEDOCE).

VOLUME FOUR

I summon Thee, Thou Great King of the, (For Pentacle -- North vibrate IC ZOD HEH CHAL, For Dagger -- East vibrate BATAIVAH, For Cup -- West vibrate RA AGIOSEL, For Wand -- South vibrate EDEL PERNAA) to attend upon this Ceremony and by Thy presence increase its effect, whereby I do now consecrate this Magical (name implement). Confer upon it the utmost occult might and virtue of which Thou mayest judge it to be capable in all works of the nature of (name implement) so that in it I may find a strong defense and a powerful weapon wherewith to rule and direct the Spirits of the Elements.

13. Still with the Sword, trace in the Air over the Implement the Hexagram of Saturn, and read the Invocation to the Six Seniors.

Ye Mighty Princes of the (name Quadrant) Quadrangle, I invoke you who are known to me by the honourable title, and position of rank, of Seniors. Hear my petition, ye mighty Princes, the Six Seniors of the (same point) quarter of the Earth who bear the names of, (For Earth - LAIDROM ALPHCTGA ACZINOR AHMLLICV LZINOPO LIANSA, For Air - HABIORO AHAOZPI AAOZAIF AVTOTAR HTMORDA HIPOTGA, For Water - LSRAHPM SLGAIOL SAIINOR SONIZNT LAOAXRP LIGDISA, For Fire - AAETPOI AAPDOCE ADOEOET ANODOIN ALNDVOD ARINNAP) and be this day present with me. Bestow upon this (name weapon) the Strength and purity whereof ye are Masters in the Elemental Forces which ye control; that its outward and material form may remain a true symbol of the inward and spiritual force.

14. Then read the Invocations of the Angels governing the Four Lesser Angles. During each, make the Invoking Pentagram of the Element whose implement is being consecrated, Cup, Wand, Dagger, or Pentacle, according to which lesser angle is in process, making the Pentagram in the air immediately over the Implement with the Sword.

FIRE WAND

Lesser Angle of Fire. O Thou Mighty Angel Bziza who art Ruler and President over the Four Angels of the Fiery Lesser Quadrangle of Fire, I invoke Thee to impress into this weapon the force and fiery energy of Thy Kingdom and Servants, that by it I may control them for all just and righteous purposes.

With the Sword, trace invoking Fire Pentagram with Lion Kerub. Lesser Angle of Water. O Thou Mighty Angel Banaa, Ruler and President over the Four Angels of fluid Fire, I beseech Thee to impress into this weapon Thy magic power that by it I may control the Spirits who serve Thee for all just and righteous purposes.

With the Cup trace the Invoking Fire Pentagram.

Lesser Angle of Air. O Thou Mighty Angel Bdopa, Ruler and President over the Four Angels and Governors of the subtle and aspiring Etheric Fire, I beseech Thee to bestow upon this weapon Thy strength and fiery steadfastness, that with it I may control the Spirits of Thy Realm for all just and righteous purposes.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Trace Invoking Fire Pentagram with the Dagger.

Lesser Angle of Earth. O Thou Mighty Angel Bpsac, who art Ruler and President over the Four Angels of the denser Fire of Earth, I beseech Thee to bestow upon this weapon Thy strength and fiery steadfastness that with it I may control the Spirits of Thy realm for all just and righteous purposes.

Trace Invoking Fire Pentagram with Pentacle.

WATER CUP

Lesser Angle of Fire. O Thou Powerful Angel Hnlrx, Thou who art Lord and Ruler over the Fiery Waters, I beseech Thee to endue this Cup with the Magic Powers of which Thou art Lord, that I may with its aid direct the Spirits who serve Thee in purity and singleness of aim.

With Wand trace invoking Water Pentagram with Eagle Kerub.

Lesser Angle of Water. O Thou Powerful Angel Htdim, Thou who art Lord and Ruler over the pure and fluid Element of Water, I beseech Thee to endue this Cup with the Magic Powers of which Thou art Lord, that I may with its aid direct the Spirits who serve Thee in purity and singleness of aim.

With Sword trace invoking Water Pentagram.

Lesser Angle of Air. O Thou Powerful Angel Htaad, Thou who art Lord and Ruler of the Etheric and Airy Qualities of Water, I beseech Thee to endue this Cup with the Magic Powers of which Thou art Lord, that I may with its aid direct the Spirits who serve Thee in purity and singleness of aim.

With Dagger trace invoking Water Pentagram.

Lesser Angle of Earth. O Thou Powerful Angel Hmagl, Thou who art Lord and Ruler of the more dense and solid qualities of Water, I beseech Thee to endue this Cup with the Magic Powers of which Thou art Lord, that with its aid I may direct the Spirits who serve Thee in purity and singleness of aim.

With Pentacle trace invoking Water Pentagram.

AIR DAGGER

Lesser Angle of Fire. O Thou Resplendent Angel Exgsd, Thou who governest the Fiery Realms of Air, I conjure Thee to confer upon this Dagger, Thy mysterious and magical Powers, that I thereby may control the Spirits who serve Thee for such purposes as be pure and upright.

With the Wand trace invoking Air Pentagram with Aquarius as Kerubic emblem.

Lesser Angle of Water. O Thou Resplendent Angel Eytpa, Thou who governest the Realms of Fluid Air, I conjure Thee to confer upon this Dagger, Thy Mysterious Powers that by its aid I may control the Spirits who serve Thee for such purposes as be pure and upright.

With the Cup trace invoking Air Pentagram.

VOLUME FOUR

Lesser Angle of Air. O Thou Resplendent Angel Erzla, Thou who rulest the Realms of Pure and Permeating Air, I conjure Thee to confer upon this Dagger the Magic Power of which Thou art Master, whereby I may control the Spirits who serve Thee, for such purposes as be pure and upright.

With the Sword trace invoking Air Pentagram.

Lesser Angle of Earth. O Thou Resplendent Angel Etnbr, Thou who rulest the Denser Realms of Air symbolised by the Lesser Angle of Earth, I conjure Thee to confer upon this Dagger the Magic Powers of which Thou art Master, whereby I may control the spirits who serve Thee, for such purposes as be pure and upright.

With the Pentacle trace invoking Air Pentagram.

EARTH PENTACLE

Lesser Angle of Fire. O Thou Glorious Angel Naaom, Thou who governest the Fiery essences of Earth, I invoke Thee to bestow upon this Pentacle the Magic Powers of which thou art Sovereign, that by its help I may govern the Spirits of Whom Thou art Lord, in all seriousness and steadfastness.

With Wand over Russet part trace invoking Earth Pentagram with Taurus Kerub.

Lesser Angle of Water. O Thou Glorious Angel Nphra, Thou who governest the moist and fluid essences of Earth. I invoke Thee to bestow upon this Pentacle the Magic Powers of which Thou art Sovereign that by its help I may govern the Spirits, of whom Thou art Lord, in all seriousness and steadfastness.

With Cup over Olive part, trace invoking Earth Pentagram.

Lesser Angle of Air. O Thou Glorious Angel Nboza, Thou who governest the Airy and Delicate Essense of Earth, I invoke Thee to bestow upon this Pentacle the Magic Powers of which Thou art Master, that with its help I may govern the spirits of whom Thou art Lord, in all seriousness and steadfastness.

With Dagger over Citrine part, trace invoking Earth Pentagram.

Lesser Angle of Earth. O Thou Glorious Angel Nroam, Thou who governest the dense and solid Earth, I invoke Thee to bestow upon this Pentacle the Magic Powers of which Thou art Master, that with its help I may govern the spirits of whom Thou art Lord, in all seriousness and steadfastness.

With Sword over Black part, trace invoking Earth Pentagram.

15. Then take up the newly consecrated Implement and perform with it the Supreme Invoking Ritual of the Pentagram of its Element in the Four Quarters, preceding each Pentagram with the Equilibrating Pentagram suitable. Close with Qabalistic Cross and Prayer. When completed each Implement is to be wrapped in silk or linen, white, or suitable colour.

16. Purify with Water, repeating verse as in opening.

17. Consecrate with Fire, repeating the verse as in opening.

18. Reverse Circumambulation.

19. Stand at West of Altar, and say, In the name of YEHESHUAH, I now set free any Spirits that may have been imprisoned by this ceremony.

20. Perform the Lesser Banishing Ritual of Pentagram in four Quarters.

21. If preferred, the Supreme Banishing Ritual of Pentagram of special element, if one or two or three Implements have been consecrated and not all four at same ceremony.

DIAGRAM OF THE LOTUS WAND

THE LOTUS WAND (For The Zelator Adeptus Minor Grade)

This is for general use in Magical Working. It is to be carried by the Z.A.M. at all meetings of the Second Order at which he has the right to attend.

VOLUME FOUR

1. It is to be made by himself unassisted.
2. Consecrated by himself.
3. Used by himself alone.
4. Untouched by any other person.
5. Kept wrapped in white silk or linen.

It will thus be free from external influences other than his own, on the human plane.

The Wand has the upper end white; the lower is black, and between there are 12 colours referring to the 12 zodiacal signs in the positive and masculine scale of colour. At the upper end of the white is fixed a Lotus Flower in three whorls of 26 petals; the outer 8, the middle 8, and the inner 10 petals. The Calyx has 4 lobes or sepals of orange color. The flower centre is orange. The wand. should be from 24 to 40 inches long, of wood about an inch in diameter. See next page for definition of XX.

XX

The bands of white, twelve colours, and black, may be painted or enamelled, or formed of coloured papers gummed on. The lengths of the band should be such that the white is longest, then the black, then the twelve colours in length. The colours must be clean, brilliant and correct.

They are as follows:

White
Aries	Red
Taurus	Red-Orange
Gemini	Orange
Cancer	Amber
Leo	Lemon Yellow
Virgo	Yellow Green
Libra	Emerald
Scorpio	Greenish-Blue
Sagittarius	Bright Blue
Capricorn	Indigo
Aquarius	Violet
Pisces	Crimson

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Black

The Lotus Flower may be of metal or cardboard, in three whorls of 8, 8, and 10 petals, white internally, with the tips curved inward a little. Outside, the petals should be olive green with five markings, as shown in diagram.

The flower centre should be of orange colour, or a brass bolt to keep all together will serve the same purpose.

On the white portion of the wand the owner's motto may be inscribed.

THE SYMBOLISM AND USE OF THE LOTUS WAND

As a general rule use the White end in Invocation but use the black end to Banish. The white end may be used to banish by tracing a banishing symbol against an evil and opposing force which has resisted other efforts.

By this is meant, that by whatever band you are holding the wand, whether by white for spiritual things, black for mundane, blue for Sagittarius, red for fiery triplicity etc. you are when invoking to direct the white band externally to the quarter desired. When banishing to point the black or lowest end to the quarter. But the Wand is never to be inverted. So when very material forces are concerned, the black end may be most suitable for invocation, but with the greatest caution.

In working on the Plane of the Zodiac, hold the wand by the portion you refer to between the thumb and two fingers. If a planetary working be required, hold the wand by the portion representing the day or night-house of the planet, or else by the Sign in which the Planet is at the time,

PLANET	DAY-HOUSE	NIGHT-HOUSE
Saturn	Capricorn	Aquarius
Jupiter	Sagittarius	Pisces
Mars	Aries	Scorpio
Venus	Libra	Taurus
Mercury	Gemini	Virgo
Sun	Leo only
Moon		Cancer only

Should the action be with the elements, one of the signs of the triplicity of that element should be held according to the nature of the elements intended to be invoked.

Thus bearing in mind that the Kerubic Emblem is the most powerful action of the element in the triplicity.

Leo-violent heat of summer.
Aries-beginning of warmth of spring.
Sagittarius-waning of heat in autumn.

VOLUME FOUR

Hold the Wand by the White portion for all Divine or Spiritual matters, or for Sephirotic influences, and for all the processes of Rising on the Planes.

Hold the wand by the black part only for material and mundane affairs.

The ten upper and inner petals refer to the purity of the ten Sephiroth. The middle 8 refer to the counter-charged natural and spiritual forces of fire and air. The lowest and outer 8 refer to the powers of earth and water. The central amber portion refers to the Spiritual Sun. The outer calyx of four orange petals shows the action of the Sun upon the elements perfecting the life of things by differentiation.

THE WAND SHOULD NEVER BE USED INVERTED

The Lotus Flower is not to be touched in working. In Sephirotic and Spiritual things however the flower is to be inclined towards the forehead. To rise in the planes the orange coloured centre is to be fully directed to the forehead.

CONSECRATION OF A LOTUS WAND

First provide:

- 1. A private room
- 2. A white triangle
- 3. A red cross of six squares
- 4. Incense and a rose
- 5. Lamp, or a vessel of Fire
- 6. Water in a vase
- 7. Salt on a platter
- 8. Astrologic figure of the heavens for the time of consecration.
- 9. Ritual of the Pentagram
- 10. The new Wand
- 11. White linen or silk wrapper
- 12. A table for an altar with
- 13. Black cover and drapery.

Second, find the position of the East.

Third, prepare an invocation of the forces of the Sign of the Zodiac.

Fourth, place the Altar in the middle of the room, cover and drape it with a black cloth.

Fifth, arrange upon it the Cross and Triangle, the Water at the base of the triangle, the Incense and Rose in the East above the Cross, the Lamp at the South.

Sixth, illumine the Lamp.

Seventh, stand holding the Wand at the West of the Altar facing the East.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Eighth, grasp the Wand by the Black portion and Ninth, say 'Hekas, Hekas, este Bebeloi.'

Tenth, perform the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram.

Eleventh, deposit the wand upon the Altar.

Twelfth, light the Incense from the Lamp.

Thirteenth, sprinkle some Salt into the Water

Fourteenth, purify the room, first with water, and then with fire, as in the Neophyte grade, repeating as you do so these two passages from the ritual of the 31st Path: With water: So therefore first the Priest who governeth the works of fire, must sprinkle with the lustral waters of the loud resounding sea.

Fifteenth, with fire: And when after all the phantoms are banished thou shalt see that holy and formless five, that fire which darts and flashes through the hidden depths of the Universe, hear thou the Voice of Fire.

Take up the Wand again by the white portion, circumambulate the room three times and at West, facing East repeat the adoration.

Holy art Thou, Lord of the Universe!
Holy art Thou whom Nature hath not formed!
Holy art Thou! the Vast and Mighty One!
Lord of the Light and of the Darkness!

Sixteenth, perform the Supreme Invoking Ritual of the Pentagram at the four quarters of the room, tracing the proper pentagram at each quarter.

Seventeenth, stand then in the Eastern Quarter; face the East; hold the Wand by the white portion; give the sign of Adeptus Minor. Look upward, hold the Wand on high and say:

O Harpocrates, Lord of Silence, who art enthroned upon the Lotus. Twenty-six are the Petals of the Lotus Flower of the Wand. O Lord of Creation! They are the number of Thy Name. In the name of YHVH let the Divine Light descend.

Eighteenth, facing consecutively the quarter where each Sign is, repeat in each of the 12 directions the Invocation which follows, using the appropriate Divine and Angelic Names and Letters for each special Sign. Begin with Aries. Hold the wand at the appropriate coloured part, and in left hand the element from off the altar which is referred to the Sign and say:

(For Aries) The Heaven is above and the earth is beneath, and between the Light and Darkness the Colours vibrate.

THE INVOCATION TO THE FORCES OF THE SIGNS OF THE ZODIAC

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

I supplicate the powers and forces governing the realm and place and authority of the Sign Aries by the Majesty of the Divine name YHVH with which in earth life and language I ascribe the letter Heh, to which is allotted the Symbolic tribe of Gad, and over which is the Angel Malchidael, to bestow this present day and hour and confirm their mystic and potent influence upon the Red band of this Lotus Wand, which I hereby dedicate to purity and to occult work. May its grasp strengthen me in the work of the character of Aries and his attributes.

Nineteen, as this is recited, trace in the air with the Lotus end the invoking Pentagram of the Sign required, and hold the corresponding element from the Altar in the left hand, while facing in each of the 12 Zodiacal directions.

Twenty, then lay the wand on the Altar, the Lotus pointing towards the East. Stand on the West side of the Altar, face the East and say:

O Isis! Great Goddess of the Forces of Nature, let Thine influence descend and consecrate this Wand which I dedicate to Thee for the performance of the works of the Magic of Light.

Twenty-first, wrap up the Wand in silk or linen.

Twenty-second, purify the room by Water and by Fire as at the first, then performing the reverse circumambulation.

Twenty-third, standing at the West of the Altar, face the East and recite:

In the Name of Yeheshuah I now set free any Spirits that may have been imprisoned by this Ceremony.

Preferably perform the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE ROSE CROSS

Rays -- White with black letters and symbols.

Air -- yellow ground purple Pentagram and symbols.

Fire -- scarlet ground Emerald Pentagram and symbols.

Water -- blue ground Orange Pentagram and symbols.

White ground -- Black Hexagram and symbols.

Earth -- Citrine, Russet, Olive, Black, White Pentagram and symbols.

ROSE CROSS

The Rose and Cross is for general use in magical working and is to be worn by the Zelator Adeptus Minor at all meetings of the Second Order at which he has the right to be present.

VOLUME FOUR

It should be suspended from a yellow silk collarette or ribbon. It is to be made and consecrated by him unassisted and when not in use should be wrapped in white silk or linen. Like the Lotus Wand, it should not be touched by another person after consecration, only by its owner.

It is a complete synthesis of the Positive. Masculine, or Rainbow Scale of Colour attribution, the 'Scale of the King,' as it is called. These colours may be found in a Knowledge Lecture. The four ends are attributed to the Elements, the white portion to the Spirit and to the Planets, the 22 petals of the Rose to the 22 paths. It is the Cross in Tiphareth, the receptacle and centre of the forces of the Sephiroth and the Paths. The extreme centre of the Rose is White, the reflected spiritual brightness of Kether, bearing upon it the Red Rose and Golden Cross from which the second Order takes its name; the symbols of the rescuing force.

Around the Hexagram on the white part, below the Rose, are placed the planets in the order which is the Key of the Supreme Ritual of the Hexagram. Around the Pentagrams are the symbols of the Spirit and the four Elements in the order which is the Key of the Supreme Ritual of the Pentagram. In each of the floreated ends of the Cross itself are arranged the three Alchemical principles, but in different order in each element, and as showing their operation therein.

The uppermost arm of the Cross allotted to Air, is of the yellow colour of Tiphareth. In it the flowing philosophic mercurial nature is chief and without hindrance to its mobility, hence the ever moving nature of Air. Its Sulphurous side is drawn from the part of Fire whence its luminous and electrical qualities. Its Saline from the Water, whence clouds and rains, from the action of the Solar forces.

The lowest arm of the Cross allotted to Earth is of the four colours of Malkuth, the Earth being of the nature of a container and receiver of the other influences. The Citrine answers to its airy part; the Olive to the watery; the Russet to the fiery part; and the Black to the lowest part, earthy of the Earth.

Here is also the Mercurial part chief, but hindered by the compound nature, whence its faculty becomes germinative, rather than mobile. While the Sulphur and the Salt are respectively from the sides of Water and Fire, which almost neutralize their natural operation and bring about the fixedness and immobility of Earth.

The extremity allotted to fire is of the scarlet colour of GEBURAH, and in it the Sulphurous nature is chief, whence its powers of heat and burning. The Salt is from the side of water, whence the necessity for a constant substantial pabulum whereon to act; and the Mercury is from the side of Air, whence the leaping, lambent motion of flame especially when acted on by wind.

The extremity allotted to Water is of the blue color of CHESED and in it the Salt nature is chief as exemplified in the Salt nature of the Ocean. to which all waters go; and thence also is derived the nature of always preserving the horizontal line. The Mercury is from Earth whence the weight and force of its flux and reflux. Its Sulphur part is from the Air whence the effects of waves and storms; so that the dispositions of these three principles form the key of their alchemical operation in the elements.

The white rays issuing from behind the Rose at the inner angles between the arms, are the rays of the Divine light issuing and corruscating from the reflected light of Kether in its centre. The letters and symbols on them refer to the analysis of the Key Word of an Adeptus Minor.

I. N. R. I.

The above is the means by which the opening of the Vault is accomplished. Its associations are as follows:

The first I is attributed to Virgo, as well as L in (LVX), the letter N is attributed to Scorpio, as well as V in (LVX), the letter R is attributed to the Sun, as well as X in (LVX), the final I merely repeats some of the attributions.

The Twelve letters of the 12 outer petals follow the order of the Signs of the Zodiac.

HEH that is Aries being uppermost.

LAMED which is Libra being lowest.

The Seven Double letters of the middle row are allotted to the Planets in order of their exaltations, the planets being wanderers, and the stars fixed with respect to the Earth.

THE SEVEN DOUBLE LETTERS ON THE ROSE

7	Tau	Saturn
6	Resh	Sun
5	Peh	Mars
4	Kaph	Jupiter
3	Daleth	Venus
2	Gimel	Moon
1	Beth	Mercury

The Three Mother Letters are allotted to the Elements, and are so arranged that the petal of Air should be beneath the arm of the Cross allotted to Air. While those of Fire and Water are on counterchanged sides so that the forces of the arms of the Cross should not too much over rule the Planetary and Zodiacal forces in the Rose, which might otherwise be the case were the petal of Fire placed on the same side as the arm of Fire, and that of Water on the arm of water.

The mode of Sigil formation from the Rose petals is taught in another place in this volume.

The back of the Cross bears inscriptions as shown as follows:

THE GOLDEN DAWN ROSE CROSS

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

At the top is written in Latin: 'The Master Jesus Christ, God and Man,' between four Maltese crosses, which represent the four pyramids of the Elements opened out.

This is placed at the uppermost part because here is affirmed the descent of the Divine Force into Tiphareth, which is the central point between Supernals and Inferiors. But at the lowest part is written the Motto of the Zelator Adeptus Minor, because therein is the affirmation of the elevation of the Human into the Divine.

But this is impossible without the assistance of the Divine Spirit from Kether, whence the space above Malkuth is white upon the front aspect of the Cross -- white being the Symbol of the Spiritual rescuing from the material.

In the centre, between the symbols of the Alchemical Principles of which the outermost is Sulphur, the purgational fire of suffering and self-sacrifice is written in Latin: 'Blessed be the Lord our God who hath given us the Symbol SIGNUM' and this is a word of six letters, thus representing the six periods (creative) in the Universe. And the Regimen of the Planets necessary ere the Glory of the Sun can be obtained.

S.R.M.D.'s NOTE OF MAKING THE ROSE CROSS

The Cross may be cut out of cardboard and the coloured portions may be painted or formed by pasting on portions of coloured paper of the required shape. The colours must be correct and clear and brilliant. If they are not the symbol is useless either as a Symbol or Insignium. Actually evil effects may follow if the colours are not clear and brilliant or if they are dirty. If this occurs, the whole should be destroyed, for faulty colours and shapes in Divine Symbols are a degradation of Divine Things and are practical blasphemy, because it is substituting the evil and disorderly for the good.

For the petals, one pattern may be designed and several cut at once from it, superimposing several coloured papers.

No dimensions are officially given for the Rose Cross but pragmatism dictates that it should be about 7-8 inches in length.

CONSECRATION OF THE ROSE CROSS

1. Prepare the chamber, and the invocation of Tiphareth.
2. Arrange a central altar, draped in black.
3. Place on it the Triangle and Cross as in the Neophyte Grade.
4. Place on it the Rose, Cup, Salt, and Fire, but place Cup between the Cross and Triangle as in the Neophyte Grade, with the Rose and incense at the East side.
5. Place the new Rose Cross upon the Triangle.
6. Stand at the West side of the Altar and have thy Lotus Wand (consecrated) with thee.
7. Illumine the Lamp and incense, and drop salt into the water.
8. Take the Wand in the right hand.
9. Repeat: Hekas, Hekas, este Bebeloi.
10. Perform the lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram.

VOLUME FOUR

11. Perform the lesser Banishing Ritual of the Hexagram.

12. Deposit the Wand upon the Altar.

13. Purify the chamber with Water in the four quarters.

So therefore first the Priest who governeth the works of fire must sprinkle with the lustral water of the loud resounding sea.

14. Purify the chamber with Fire in the four quarters repeating: When after all the phantoms are banished thou shalt see that holy and formless fire, that fire which darts and flashes through the hidden depths of the Universe, hear thou the Voice of Fire.

15. Take up the Wand.

16. Circumambulate with the Sun three times.

17. Return to place and repeat the Adorations:

Holy art Thou, Lord of the Universe!
Holy art Thou, Whom Nature hath not formed!
Holy art Thou, the Vast and Mighty One!
Lord of Light and of the Darkness!

Give sign of Neophyte at each adoration and sign of Silence at close.

18. Perform the Supreme Invoking Ritual of the Pentagram at the Four quarters of the Chamber.

19. Stand West of the Altar, facing East, hold the Wand by the White part.

20. Make over the Rose Cross, in the Air with the Lotus wand and as if standing in the centre of the Rose, the symbol and invoke all the Divine and Angelic Names of the Tiphareth by a special form as follows:

Thou most sublime Majesty on high, who art at certain seasons worthily represented by the Glorious Sun of Tiphareth. I beseech Thee to bestow upon this symbol of the Rose and Cross, which I have formed in Thy honour, and for the furtherance of the Great Work in a spirit of purity and love, the most excellent virtues by the divine name of YHVH, and the great name of ELOAH VE DAATH. Deign I beseech thee to grant that the great Archangel RAPHAEL and the mighty angel MICHAEL may strengthen this emblem, and through the sphere of the splendid orb of SHEMESH may confer upon it such power and virtue as to lead me by it towards the solution of the great Secret. [Raising the hand and eyes to Heaven during the Prayer and covering them as you finish it.]

21. Repeat these words from Genesis:

And a river NAHAR went forth out of Eden to water the Garden, and from thence it was parted and came into four heads.

22. Describe over the white portion the invoking Hexagrams of the planets as if standing upon it, repeating the necessary names and holding the Wand by the white portion.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

23. Describe the equilibrating Pentagrams of Spirit, and the words EXARP-BITOM-HCOMA-NANTA as previously laid down.

24. Then over the four coloured portions (arms) in turn describe the Invoking Pentagrams of each Element, using the Words and Grade Signs and repeating the verse of Genesis II, II-13, 14, 15 referring to each. Holding the wand by the part allotted to the Kerubic sign of the Element.

First - over the red Fire arm, read, And the name of the First River is PISON; it is that which encompasseth the whole land of HAVILAH where there is Gold, and the Gold of that land is good; there is bdellium and the onyx stone. Make invoking Fire pentagram holding the wand by Leo, with the Sign of Fire grade.

Second - over the blue Water arm read, (Hold by Scorpio-Blue Green) And the name of the second River is Gihon, the same as that which compasseth the whole land of Ethiopia. Sign of Practicus Grade and invoking Water Pentagram.

Third - over the Yellow Air arm read, (Holding by Aquarius-Violet) And the name of the third river is Hiddekel, that is it which goeth toward the East of Assyria. Sign of Theoricus grade and Invoking Air Pentagram.

Fourth - over the black Earth arm read (holding by Taurus-red orange.) And the fourth river is Euphrates. Sign of Zelator with Invoking Earth Pentagram.

25. Lastly --holding the Wand again by the white part, describe a circle from left to right over the outermost 12 petals of the Rose pronouncing the name ADONAI vibrating it as taught.

26. Describe a similar circle over the seven middle petals pronouncing the word ARARITA.

27. Then describe a circle over the three innermost petals say: YHVH.

28. Finally trace a perpendicular line down and say: EHEIEH.

29. Draw a horizontal line from left to right and say: ELOHIM.

30. Wrap up the Cross in white silk.

31. Close the Ceremony by purification by Water.

32. Close the Ceremony by purification by Fire.

34. Stand at West of altar, face East and say: In the name of Yeheshuah, I now set free any spirits that may have been imprisoned by this Ceremony.

35. Perform the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram.

VOLUME FOUR

THE RITUAL OF THE ROSE CROSS

1. Light a stick of Incense. Go to the South East corner of the room. Make a large cross and circle thus:

Then holding the point of the incense in the centre vibrate the word Yeheshuah.

2. With arm outstretched on a level with the centre of the cross, and holding the incense stick, go to the South West corner and make a similar cross, repeating the Word.

3. Go to the North West Corner and repeat the cross and the Word.

4. Go to the North East Corner and repeat the cross and the Word.

5. Complete your circle by returning to the South East corner and bringing the point of the incense to the central point of the first cross which you should imagine astrally there.

6. Holding the stick on high, go to the centre of the room, walking diagonally across the room towards the North West corner. In the centre of the room, above your head, trace the cross and circle and vibrate the Name.

7. Holding the stick on high, go to the North West and bring the point of the stick down to the centre of the astral cross there.

8. Turn towards the South East and retrace your steps there, but now, holding the incense stick directed towards the floor. In the centre of the room, make the cross and circle towards the floor, as it were, under your feet, and vibrate the Name.

9. Complete this circle by returning to the South East and bringing the point of the stick again to the centre of the Cross, then move with arm outstretched to South West corner.

10. From the centre of this cross, and, raising stick before, walk diagonally across the room towards the North East corner. In the centre of the room, pick up again the cross above your head previously made, vibrating the Name. It is not necessary to make another cross.

11. Bring the stick to the centre of the North East cross and return to the South West, incense stick down, and pausing in the centre of the room to link up with the cross under your feet.

12. Return to the South West and rest the point of the incense a moment in the centre of the cross there. Holding the stick out, retrace your circle to the North West, link on to the North West Cross -- proceed to the North East cross and complete your circle by returning to the South East, and the centre of the first cross.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

13. Retrace the Cross, but larger, and make a big circle, vibrating for the lower half Yeheshuah, and for the upper half Yehovashah.

14. Return to the centre of the room, and visualise the six crosses in a net-work round you. This ceremony can be concluded by the analysis of the Key-Word given as follows:

ANALYSIS OF THE KEY-WORD

1. Stand with arms outstretched in the form of a cross. Face East.
2. Vibrate these words:

I.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

THE USE OF THE ROSE CROSS RITUAL

1. It encloses the aura with a protection against outside influences. It is like a veil. The Pentagrams protect, but they also light up the astral and make entities aware of you. They are more positive for magical working. When much distracted, use the Pentagrams to banish and the Rose-cross to maintain peace.

2. It is a call to another mode of your consciousness and withdraws you from the physical. It is a good preparation for meditation and, combined with the Key-Word, a form of invocation of the Higher Wisdom which is helpful when solving problems or preparing for a difficult interview, or in order to be calm and strong to help another.

3. When you are quite familiar with the Ritual, but most certainly not before, it can be done in imagination while resting or lying down. Part of yourself goes out, and you get all the sensation of walking around your own quiescent body. Used thus, with rhythmic breathing, it will withdraw your mind from pain (if it be not too severe) and release you for sleep. You can do the analysis of the Key-Word standing behind your physical head, and you can call down the Divine White Brilliance, watching it flow over your body and smooth out the tangles in the etheric double, bringing peace and rest.

4. You can do the Ritual with intention to help others in pain or difficulty. For this purpose, you build up an astral image of the person, in the centre of the room, and call down the Light upon him, after surrounding him with the six crosses. When the ceremony is done, command the astral shape you have made to return to the person, bearing with it the peace of Yeheshuah.

5. It is a protection against psychic invasion from the thoughts of others or from disturbed psychic conditions, such as there might be in a place charged with fear, where terrible things had happened.

(N.B. This does not appear to be an original Order document. It was probably composed and written by Dr. R. Felkins, during the Stella Matutina period. I.R.)

LAETITIA	CONJUNCTIO	CAPUT DRAC.	CAUDA DRAC.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

On examining the number of points of which the sixteen (16) figures of Geomancy are composed, it is at once evident that they vary from four (4) points the least to eight (8) points the greatest number contained in one figure.

Only one figure contains eight (8) points -- that is plus -- the number of the letters of the name YHVH ADNI.

Four figures consist each of 7 points, the number of the 28 Mansions of the Moon in the Zodiac: Rubeus, Albus, Tristitia and Laetitia.

Six (6) figures contain six points each -- the number of the 36 Decans of the Zodiac: Carcer, Conjunctio, Fortuna Major and Minor, Amissio and Acquisitio.

Four (4) figures consist of five (5) points each -- the number of the Sephiroth in two aspects (positive and negative) and of the word YOD spelled out in full, thus: Y - 10, Vau - 6, Daleth - 4, making 20. Puer, Puella, Caput and Cauda Draconis.

Only one (1) figure consists of 4 points, Via, the number of the letters of the Name -- YHVH.

The total of all the points in all the figures, $8 + 28 + 36 + 20 + 4$ equals 96. 8×12 equals the name of 8 letters multiplied through the 12 divisions of the Zodiac. The number of the classes of the figures according to their points, as above given, will be five (5), answering to the points of the Pentagram.

Also, the total number 96 will further show 16 (times) 6 or the geomantic figures multiplied in the Hexagram. This development of the figures according to the number of the points may be classified and summed up in the annexed diagrams.

VOLUME FIVE

In addition, the 16 figures are classed among the four (4) Elements so that 4 shall belong to each Element. To EARTH belong 3 figures of 6 points and 1 of 5 equals 23 points: Carcer, Amissio, Conjunctio and Caput Draconis.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

To AIR belong 2 figures of 7 points, 1 of six and 1 of 5 points equals 25 points: Tristitia, Puella, Albus, and Fortuna Minor.

To FIRE belong 2 figures of 6, and 2 of 5 equals 22 points: Acquisitio, Puer, Fortuna Major, and Cauda Draconis.

To WATER belong 1 figure of 8, 2 of 7, and 1 of 4 points equals 26 points: Laetitia, Rubeus, Populus, and Via.

The Geomantic Tree of Life is formed by arranging the 16 figures according to their Planetary attributions in the Sephiroth to which the Planets correspond, as represented in the accompanying diagram. There, Saturn represents the three Supernal Sephiroth -- Kether, Chokman and Binah -- while Caput and Cauda Draconis are referred to the 10th Sephirah of Malkuth

VOLUME FIVE

The following important characters -- letters of the Angelic or Enochian Alphabet -- are attributed to the Seven Planetary Rulers in the Twelve Signs and the Sixteen Figures in Geomancy.

(N.B. In the Introduction to Crowley's Vision and the Voice, [Sangreal's edition] I noted some difficulty in following Crowley's attributions of the 30 Aethyrs to the Enochian Alphabet. A correspondent wrote calling my attention to the Enochian attributions here which solves the problems. He deserves acknowledgement -- if only to reaffirm my claim that Crowley was a Golden Dawn "graduate". He stored his Order knowledge in the Unconscious, whence it could emerge into his every day field of activity. The correspondent is Mr. K. Campos of Seattle Washington. I.R.)

	Signifies Melchidael and Puer, a figure of Bartzabel or Mars in Aries.
	Signifies Asmodel and Amissio, a figure of Kedemel or Venus in Taurus.
	Signifies Ambriel and Albus, a figure of Taphthartharath or Mercury in Gemini.

QUALITIES OF THE FIGURES

(These qualities of the figures have been extrapolated by S.R.M.D. from Heydon's Theomagia. The rest is from the ancient Golden Dawn cypher manuscripts.)

Here follow the special qualities of the 16 Geomantic Figures. It is to be noted that all which have more points above than below are entering in except Tristitia. And those which have more points below than above are going out and evil, except Laetitia. Those which have as many above as below are medium, except Carcer. That is to say, that such is their natural signification.

Good for a voyage and quick: Acquisitio, Caput Draconis, Fortuna Major, Fortuna Minor, Laetitia.

Good by land: Populus, Laetitia, Albus, Conjunctio, Via.

Good by Water: Populus, Laetitia, Puella, Albus, Acquisitio.

Slow for a voyage, but profitable: Puella.

Evil for the Way: Rubeus, Conjunctio, Populus, Tristitia.

Robbing by the Way: Cauda Draconis, Rubeus.

Evil for Fear: Conjunctio, Acquisitio, Rubeus, Caput Draconis, Fortuna Major, Albus.

Good for Honour and Integrity: Acquisitio, Fortuna Major, Fortuna Minor, Laetitia, Albus, Caput Draconis, Conjunctio.

Evil for Honour: Amissio, Via, Rubeus, Puella, Tristitia.

Good to have Liberty and come out of Prison: Fortuna Minor, Via, Cauda Draconis, Puer, Amissio, Laetitia.

Evil to come out of Prison: Acquisitio, Fortuna Major, Tristitia, Carcer.

Mean to come out of Prison: Rubeus, Puella, Albus.

Good for Body: Populus, Conjunctio, Fortuna Minor.

Mean for Body: Fortuna Major, Albus, Puella, Puer.

Evil for Body: Carcer, Rubeus, Amissio.

Good for Woman (pregnant): Amissio, Fortuna Minor, Via, Laetitia.

Child will die: Tristitia.

Mean for Childbirth: Amissio, Fortuna Major, Cauda Draconis, Populus.

Better than before: Via, Cauda Draconis, Laetitia, Tristitia.

Marriage Good: Fortuna Major, Laetitia, Caput Draconis.

Best: Tristitia.

Mean: Cauda Draconis, Carcer.

VOLUME FIVE

Marriage Evil: Fortuna Major, Amissio, Via, Fortuna Minor, Rubeus.
Good for Dread and Fear: Amissio, Via, Cauda Draconis, Puer, Fortuna Minor.
Good for Woman's Love: Laetitia, Caput Draconis, Puer, Fortuna Major.
Evil for Woman's Love: Amissio, Via, Rubeus, Cauda Draconis.
Good to Recover things stolen: Acquisitio, Caput Draconis, Conjunctio, Carcer, Puer, Tristitia.
Medium: Puella.
Evil for things stolen: Fortuna Minor, Laetitia, Caput Draconis, Populus, Via.
Good for Shipping: Acquisitio, Laetitia, Fortuna Major, Fortuna Minor, Via.
Medium: Cauda Draconis.
Evil for shipping, for they shall be drowned: Conjunctio, Populus, Amissio, Tristitia.
Good to Remove: Fortuna Major, Cauda Draconis, Laetitia, Caput Draconis, Acquisitio.
Medium to Remove: Albus, Conjunctio, Puer, Amissio.
Evil Figures signifying Evil: Via, Carcer, Puer, Tristitia, Caput Draconis, Rubeus, Amissio.
Medium: Conjunctio.
Figures of Chastity and Virginity: Albus, Fortuna Major, Laetitia, Carcer, Caput Draconis, Tristitia, Puella.
Figures of Incontinence and Lechery: Puer, Cauda, Amissio, Rubeus, Populus, Conjunctio, Via, Acquisitio, Fortuna Minor.
Figures showing NO theft; all others show theft: Acquisitio, Fortuna Major, Albus, Caput Draconis, Laetitia.
Figures signifying War: Tristitia, Rubeus, Puer, Cauda Draconis, Fortuna Minor, Amissio.
Figures signifying Peace: Fortuna Major, Acquisitio, Caput Draconis, Laetitia, Albus, Puella.
Figures signifying Loss: Carcer, Conjunctio, Albus, Laetitia, Populus, Via, Amissio, Puer, Rubeus, Fortuna Minor, Cauda Draconis.
Figures of Gain: Acquisitio, Fortuna Major, Tristitia, Puella, Caput Draconis.
Figures of Nobility: Acquisitio, Laetitia, Puella, Fortuna Major, Fortuna Minor, Caput Draconis.
Figures of Ignobility: Tristitia, Carcer, Via, Cauda Draconis, Conjunctio.
Figures of Life: Albus, Fortuna Major, Laetitia, Puella, Acquisitio, Populus, Caput Draconis, Via.
Figures of Death if in the 8th house: Tristitia, Cauda Draconis, Carcer, Rubeus, Puer, Conjunctio, Acquisitio, Amissio, Fortuna Minor.
Figures of Liberality: Amissio, Cauda Draconis, Fortuna Minor, Via.
Figures of Avarice and Covetousness: Tristitia, Carcer, Conjunctio, Fortuna Major.

Good to buy Cattle: Puella, Populus, Caput Draconis.

Loss to buy Cattle: Tristitia, Carcer.

TALISMANS AND FLASHING TABLETS

By

G.H. FRATER D.D.C.F.

In construction of a talisman, symbolism should be exact and in harmony with universal forces.

A Flashing Tablet is one made in the complementary colors (i.e., in the Scale of the King.)

A flashing color then is the Complementary Color, which, if joined to the original, enables it to attract to a certain extent the Akasic current from the atmosphere and partly from yourself -- thus forming a vortex which can attract its flashing light from the atmosphere. The complementary colors are:

White to Black and Grey
Red to Green
Blue to Orange
Yellow to Violet
Olive to Orange
Blue-green to Russet
Violet to Citrine
Reddish-orange to Greenish blue
Deep Amber to Indigo
Lemon Yellow to Violet
Yellow green to Crimson

NATURE AND METHOD OF FORMATION OF THE TELESMA.

1. Not always just and right to make a talisman with the idea of completely changing the current of another's Karma.

2. That which assists in material things is often a hindrance spiritually, seeing that for a force to work it must attract elemental forces of the proper descriptions, which may thus to an extent endanger your spiritual nature.

3. In making a telesma for a person, isolate yourself entirely from them; i.e., banish love, hate, irritations, etc.

4. See that you are in harmony with the effect you wish to produce.

VOLUME FIVE

5. In actual consecration, a good aid is to purify the room using the banishing ritual of Pentagram.

6. Better to finish a Telesma at one sitting.

7. Where Talismans or Symbols have done their work, they should be carefully decharged and then destroyed. Decharge with Pentagram or Hexagram according as it partakes of planetary or zodiacal nature. These remarks apply to Flashing Tablets as well. May be done astrally.

8. Any flashing tablets in two colors should be nearly balanced in proportion of color as possible, the ground one color, the charge another.

There is also a mode in which 3 colors can be used in planetary talismans, by placing the seven colors of the Heptagram and drawing two lines to the points exactly opposite which would yield 2 flashing colors.

9. Mode of charging and consecrating should be suitable to the operation. Certain words and letters are to be invoked in the charging of a tablet, viz. the letters governing the signs under which the operation falls, together with the planet associated therewith (the latter only for planetary talisman). Thus in elemental operations you take the letters of the appropriate triplicity, adding AL thereto, thus forming an Angelic name, which is the expression of the force. Hebrew names as rule represent the offices of certain forces, while the Enochian Tablets represent a species of more particular ideas. Both classes of names should be used in these operations.

After preparing room first formulate towards the quarters the Supreme Ritual of the Pentagram as taught. Then invoke the Divine Names turning towards the quarter of the Element. Then being seated or standing before the Tablet and looking in the requisite directions, i.e., in the direction of the force you wish to invoke, take several deep inspirations, close the eyes and holding the breath, mentally pronounce the letter of the forces invoked. Do this several times until with the eyes closed you can positively feel the element involved. Having done this formulate the letters several times as if you breathed upon the tablet, pronouncing them in the vibratory manner. Then rising make the sign of the Rose and the Cross over the Tablet. Repeating the requisite formula or any other appropriate words, first describe around the telesma to be consecrated, a circle with the proper magical implements and then make the Invoking Pentagram appropriate five times over it, as if it (the pentagram upright) were standing upon it, vibrating the letters of the Triplicity involved with AL added. e.g., for Fire (Halsael) and (SheHalsael). Then solemnly read any invocations required -- making the proper sigils from the Rose as you pronounce the names.

The first Operation is to initiate the Whorl from yourself. The second, to attract the force in the atmosphere into the vortex you have formed. Then read the Elemental Prayer as in the Grade rituals (if for Fire, that of the Salamanders) and close work with the sign of the Circle and Cross --after performing the necessary Banishing Ritual. But do not banish over newly consecrated telesma.

Wrap telesma carefully up in silk or linen, preferably white.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

The Talismanic symbols -- or Telesmatic Emblems as they are sometimes called -- are formed from the Geomantic Figures by drawing various lines from point to point of each.

These characters are then attributed to their ruling Planets and Ideas. For example, the most simple forms will be:

Here follows a complete table of all the Talismanic Figures classed under the Planets and Signs.

The characters of Luna and Chasmodai taken from Via equals Cancer.

The characters of Caput Draconis are:

The characters of Cauda Draconis are:

MODE OF FORMATION OF TALISMANS AND PANTACLES

The mode of using these Talismanic Characters drawn from the Talismanic Figures in the construction of a Talisman or Pantacle, is to take those formed by the figures under the Planet required, and to place them either at the opposite ends of a wheel of eight radii as shown, or to place them in the compartments of a Square. A versicle suitable to the matter is then to be written within the double line.

VOLUME FIVE

THE LINEAL FORMS OF THE NAMES OF THE SEPHIROTH ON THE TREE OF LIFE

In the early days of the Order, this paper had appended to it a note by Dr. Westcott, using his Order name of Non Omnis Moriar. He said that this paper was only for those members of the Inner Order who had mastered the Pentagram and Hexagram Rituals and consecrated their elemental weapons.

The original document here given gave the names of the Sephiroth in Hebrew. Since these Hebrew Names were previously given in Hebrew in an early Knowledge Lecture, I have for the sake of convenience transliterated them into English. The number of letters used to describe the appropriate lineal figure refers to the number of Hebrew letters, not English. It is important for the student to keep this in mind, otherwise he will get thoroughly confused.

I would also urge the student not to permit first impressions of complexity disturb his peace of mind, forcing him to neglect the study of this paper. It is really worth giving a good deal of attention to. Admittedly it is purely speculative and an exercise in intellectual virtuosity. The end result rather as with the use of a Zen Koan is the product of a higher level of perception. The use of the Koan may result in a swing over to the same level of perception experienced by whoever it was that developed it originally. This study of lineal figures and the various divine names bears many resemblances to the processes just described.

I give these Sephirotic Names in English. On an earlier page will be found the equivalent Hebrew spelling.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

In examining the number of Hebrew letters in the Sephirotic names on the Tree of Life, it will be observed that Kether consists of three letters whose equivalent then is the Triangle among the lineal figures. Chokmah and Binah each of four letters, as also Yesod; the actual lineal figure is then the Square. Gedulah, Geburah, Tiphareth and Malkuth have five letters each, equivalent to the Pentagram. While Chesed, Pachad, Netzach and Hod have each three like Kether, as also Daath.

The total number of letters in these names on the Tree will then be 50, the number of the Gates of the Understanding, as is laid down in the Qabalah.

Then in the ensuing translations of the Names of the Sephiroth into lineal symbols, what is at once evident is the absolutely harmonious balance of forms which results. Pachad is a correspondence of Geburah and means Fear. Gedulah is a correspondence of Chesed and means Magnificence.

VOLUME FIVE

The Supernal Triangle (Triad) will then be represented by a Triangle surmounting the two Squares.

The Sephiroth may thus be summed up in three classes, the Triangle, Square and Pentagram, the respective lineal equivalents of Chesed, Binah, and Geburah, six under the Triangle in Kether, Pachad, Chesed, Netzach, Hod and Daath. Three under the Square, Chokmah, Binah and Yesod. Four under the Pentagram: Gedulah, Geburah, Tiphareth, and Malkuth. Now, if as in the diagram, we draw lines connecting those Sephiroth which are represented by the same lineal equivalents, we shall find that the lines number Twenty

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Two, that is, the number of the Paths in the Tree. For you require 13 lines to join initially those Sephiroth under the Triangle, 3 for those under the Square, and 6 for those under the Pentagram which adds to 22.

VOLUME FIVE

The letters of each Sephirotic Name may then be translated into the lineal symbols of the Sephiroth to which their numerical value is referred by the Qabalah of the Nine Chambers.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

If these Letters be again translated into their Yetziratic attribution and this combined with the former, we shall obtain an analysis compounded of both scales of interpretation.

In the diagram, the lineal figures of the tens and hundreds are distinguished from those of the units by being encircled with either one or two rays, according as to tens or hundreds are implied. If these be further placed within the Lineal Figure of the Whole Name, a species of Hieroglyphic Form of each Sephirah will result; which may again be represented by a cognate Angelic form, as taught in the paper on the Formation of Sigils from the Rose.

VOLUME FIVE

We shall then find from the Qabalah of Nine Chambers that the numerical values of the 22 paths are thus allotted under the Sephiroth:

AIQ	Kether	1, 10, 100	Air, Virgo, Pisces
BKR	Chokmah	2, 20, 200	Mercury, Jupiter, Sun
GLSh	Binah	3, 30, 300	Moon, Libra, Fire
DMT	Chesed	4, 40, 400	Venus, Water, Saturn
HN	Geburah	5, 50	Aries, Scorpio
VS	Tiphareth	6, 60	Taurus, Sagittarius
ZO	Netzach	7, 70	Gemini, Capricorn
ChP	Hod	8, 80	Cancer, Mars
T Tz	Yesod	9, 90	Leo, Aquarius

This classification may, then, be again referred to the lineal figures thus:

Air, Virgo, Pisces	Point within a circle
Mercury, Jupiter, Sun	Cross
Luna, Libra, Fire	Triangle
Venus, Water, Saturn	Square
Aries, Scorpio	Pentangle
Taurus, Sagittarius	Hexangle
Gemini, Capricorn	Heptangle
Cancer, Mars	Octangle
Leo, Aquarius	Enneangle

POLYGRAMS AND POLYGONS

THE TRIANGLE

The Triangle is the only Lineal Figure into which all surfaces can be reduced, for every Polygon can be divided into Triangles by drawing lines from its angles to its centre. Thus the Triangle is the first and simplest of all Lineal Figures.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

We refer to the Triad operating in all things, to the 3 Supernal Sephiroth, and to Binah the 3rd Sephirah. Among the Planets it is especially referred to Saturn; and among the Elements to Fire. As the colour of Saturn is black and the Triangle that of Fire, the Black Triangle will represent Saturn, and the Red Fire.

The 3 Angles also symbolize the 3 Alchemical Principles of Nature, Mercury, Sulphur, and Salt.

As there are 360° in every great circle, the number of degrees cut off between its angles when inscribed within a Circle will be 120°, the number forming the astrological Trine inscribing the Trine within a circle, that is, reflected from every second point.

THE SQUARE

The Square is an important lineal figure which naturally represents stability and equilibrium. It includes the idea of surface and superficial measurement.

It refers to the Quaternary in all things and to the Tetrad of the Letter of the Holy Name Tetragrammaton operating through the four Elements of Fire, Water, Air, and Earth. It is allotted to Chesed, the 4th Sephirah, and among the Planets it is referred to Jupiter. As representing the 4 Elements it represents their ultimatum with the material form. The 4 angles also include the ideas of the 2 extremities of the Horizon, and the 2 extremities of the Median, which latter are usually called the Zenith and the Nadir: also the 4 Cardinal Points.

The number of degrees of a great circle cut off between its angles will be 90° the number forming the astrological Quartile or Square Aspect, potent and evil.

There is only one way of inscribing a Square within a Circle, that is, reflected from every second point.

VOLUME FIVE

THE PENTAGON

The Pentagon, first form, reflected from every second point.

The Pentangle can be traced in two ways: reflected from every second point, when it is called the Pentagon; and reflected from every third point, when it is called the Pentagram.

The Pentangle as a whole is referred to the 5th Sephirah Geburah. The Pentagon naturally represents the power of the Pentad operating in nature by the dispersal of the Spirit and the 4 Elements through it. The number of degrees of a great circle cut off between its Angles is 72° the number forming the astrological Quintile aspect, good in nature and operation.

It also answers to the dispersal force of the 5 letters YEHESHUAH.

It is not so consonant to the Nature of Mars as the Pentagram, and as a general rule the Pentagon is not so powerful a symbol as the Pentagram.

THE PENTANGLE

The Pentangle - The Pentagram, second form; reflected from every 3rd point.

The Pentagram with a single point uppermost is called the "Sign of the Microcosm" and is a good symbol representing man with his arms and legs extended adoring his Creator, and especially the dominion of the Spirit over the 4 Elements and consequently of Reason over Matter.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

But with the single point downwards it is a very evil symbol, the head of the Goat, or demon's head, representing the abasement of Reason beneath the blind forces of Matter, the elevation of anarchy above order, and of conflicting forces driven by chance above God.

It represents the concentrated force of the Spirit and the 4 Elements governed by the 5 letters of the name of the Restorer of all things YEHESHUAH, and also the ten Sephiroth classified into 5 odd and 5 even numbers. It is especially attributable to the Planet Mars. It also shows the Kerubim and the Wheel of the Spirit. It is a Symbol of tremendous force, and of HEH, the letter of the Great Supernal Mother, AIMA H.

The Hexagon, first form, reflected from every second point.

The Hexangle can be traced in two ways as a complete symbol: reflected from every second point, when it is called the Hexagon: and reflected from every third point, when it is called the Hexagram. There is also a third form, called the pseudo-Hexagram.

The Hexangle as a whole is referred to the 6th Sephirah, Tiphareth.

The Hexagon naturally represents the power of the Hexad operating in nature by the dispersal of the rays of the Planets and the Zodiac emanating from the central Sun. The number of degrees of a great circle cut off between its Angles is 60° forming the astrological Sextile aspect, powerful for good.

It is not so consonant to the solar nature as the Hexagram. Remember then that the Hexagon signifieth the dispersion, distribution, and radiation of a force but the Hexagram concentration. Hence thou shalt use the Hexagon for the spreading, and the Hexagram for the concentrating and sealing. Thus when there is need, thou canst compare, interpose and combine them; but the "Gon" initieth the whirl."

The nature of the "whirl" is described in a document relating to the Vibratory Formula of the Middle Pillar, and the formation of the Telesmatic Images.

VOLUME FIVE

THE HEXANGLE

The Hexangle, second form, reflected from every 3rd point.

The Hexagram with a single point uppermost is called the "Sign of the Macrocosm," or greater world, because its six angles fitly represent the six days or periods of creation evolved from the manifestation of the Triune. Its synthesis forms the seventh day or period of rest summed up in the hexagonal centre.

It represents especially the concentrated force of the Planets acting through the Signs of the Zodiac, and thus sealing the Astral Image of nature under the presidency of the Sephiroth; and also the Seven Palaces of the same. It is especially attributable to the Sun. It is a Symbol of great strength and power, forming with the Cross and the Pentagram, a triad of potent and good symbols which are in harmony with each other.

THE HEXANGLE

The Pseudo-Hexagram or irregular third form.

The pseudo-Hexagram an irregular third form, sometimes employed to denote the presidency of the Sun and Moon over the 4 Elements united in and proceeding from the Spirit.

(Until quite recently, I thought that Aleister Crowley had invented the unicursal Hexagram. Upon reviewing this document, I find of course that it had existed anterior to him. On another page when dealing with the Ritual of the Hexagram, I shall have a little more to say about this hexagram and its uses in magical ritual. I.R.)

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

THE HEPTANGLE

The Heptagon, first form, reflected from every second point.

The Heptagon can be traced in three ways reflected from every second point when it is called the Heptagon; and as the Heptagram is reflected from every third point, and from every fourth point.

The Heptangle as a whole is referred to the Seventh Sephirah, Netzach.

The Heptagon naturally represents the dispersal of the powers of the Seven Planets through the week and through the year. The number of degrees of a Great Circle cut off between its angles is $51\frac{3}{4}^\circ$.

It further alludes to the power of the Septenary acting through all things, as exemplified by the seven colours of the Rainbow.

It is not so consonant to the nature of Venus as the Heptagram reflected from every fourth point.

THE HEPTANGLE

The Heptagram, second form; reflected from every third point.

The Heptagram reflected from every third point, yieldeth Seven Triangles at the apices thereof; fitly representing the Triad operating in each Planet; and the Planets themselves in the week and in the year.

The weekly order of the Planets is formed from their natural order by following the lines of this Heptagram; as hath been already shown in the 2nd point of the Grade of Zelator. It is not so consonant to the nature of Venus as the next form.

VOLUME FIVE

THE HEPTANGLE

The Heptagram, third form; reflected from every fourth point.

This Heptagram is the Star of Venus and is especially applicable to her nature. As the Heptagram is the lineal figure of the Seven Planets, so is Venus, as it were, their Gate or Entrance, the fitting symbol of the Isis of nature, and of the 7 lower Sephiroth of the Bride.

Study this reference in connection with the Venus door of the Vault of the Adepts, described in the Adeptus Minor grade.

THE OCTANGLE

The Octagon, first form; reflected from every second point.

The Octangle can be reflected in three ways; reflected from every second point when it is called the Octagon; and as the Octagram reflected from every third, and from every fourth point.

The Octangle naturally representeth the power of the Ogdoad. The Octagon showeth the Ogdoad operating in nature by the dispersal of the rays of the Elements in their dual aspect under the presidency of the 8 letters of the name Yod Heh Vau Heh and Aleph Daleth Nun Yod.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

The number of degrees of a Great Circle cut off between its angles is 45° forming the astrological weak Semi-Quartile aspect, evil in nature and operation.

The Octagon is not so consonant to the nature of Mercury as the Octagram reflected from every fourth point.

THE OCTANGLE

The Octagram, second form, reflected from every third point.

The Octagram reflected from every third point yieldeth eight Triangles at the apices thereof, fitly representing the Triad operating in each Element in its dual form, i.e., of Positive and Negative, under the powers of the name of Tetragrammaton Adonai: or as it is written bound together, Yod Aleph Heh Daleth Vau Nun Heh Yod.

It is not so consonant to the nature of Mercury as the next form. It is composed of two Squares united within a circle.

THE OCTANGLE

The Octagram, third form; reflected from every fourth point.

This Octagram is the Star of Mercury, and is especially applicable to his nature. It is further a potent symbol representing the binding together of the concentrated Positive and Negative forces of the Elements under the name of YHVHADNI. And forget not that ADNI is the key of YHVH.

VOLUME FIVE

THE ENNEANGLE

The Enneangle, first form, reflected from every second point.

The Enneangle can be traced in four ways reflected from every second point when it is called the Enneagon; and as the Enneagram reflected from every third, every fourth, and every fifth point.

The Enneangle as a whole, is referred to the ninth Sephirah Yesod.

The Enneangle naturally representeth the power of the Ennead. The Enneagram showeth the Ennead operating in nature by the dispersal of the rays of the Seven Planets and of the Head and Tail of the Dragon of the Moon.

The number of degrees of a Great Circle cut off between its angles is 40°

The Enneagon is not so consonant to the nature of the Moon as the Enneagram reflected from every fifth point.

THE ENNEANGLE

The Enneagram, second form; reflected from every third Point. The Enneagram reflected from every third point representeth the Triple Ternary operating both in the Seven Planets with the Head and Tail of the Dragon of the Moon, and with their Alchemical principles countercharged and interwoven.

It is not as consonant to the nature of the Moon as the Enneagram reflected from every fifth point.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

THE ENNEANGLE

The Enneagram, third form, reflected from every fourth point.

The Enneagram reflected from every fourth point is composed of three Triangles united within a Circle, and alludes to the Triple Ternary of the Three Alchemical principles themselves. It is not so consonant to the nature of the Moon as the next form.

THE ENNEANGLE

KETHER

The Enneagram, fourth form, reflected from every fifth point.

This Enneagram is the Star of the Moon and is especially applicable to her nature. It represents her as the administrator to the Earth of the virtues of the Solar System under the Sephiroth.

VOLUME FIVE

THE DEKANGLE

The Dekangle, first form, reflected from every second point.
The Dekangle can be traced in four ways; reflected from every second point when it is called the Dekagon and as the Dekagram reflected from every third, every fourth, and every fifth point.

The Dekangle as a whole is referred to the Tenth Sephirah, Malkuth.

The Dekangle naturally represents the power of the Dekad. The Dekagon showeth the Dekad operating in nature by the dispersal of the rays of the Ten Sephiroth therein.

The number of degrees of a Great Circle cut off between its angles is 36°; the half of the Quintile astrological aspect.

THE DEKANGLE

The Dekagram, second form; reflected from every third point.

The Dekagram reflected from every third point is especially consonant to Malkuth and shows the Triad operating through each angle of the two Pentagons within a circle, of which it is composed. It alludes to the combination of the 3 Alchemical principles with the Spirit and the 4 Elements in their Positive and Negative form, under the presidency of the 10 Sephiroth themselves.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

THE DEKANGLE

The Dekagram, third form, reflected from every fourth point.

This form of the Dekagram especially alludes to the concentrated and continuous operations of the Ten Sephiroth in nature. It is continuously reflected from every fourth point.

THE DEKANGLE

The Dekagram, fourth form, reflected from every fifth point.

The Dekagram reflected from every fifth point is composed of two Pentagrams within a Circle. It shows the operation of the duplicated HEH of the Tetragrammaton and the concentration of the Positive and Negative forces of the Spirit and the four Elements under the presidency of the Potencies of the Five in Binah; the Revolutions of the forces under AIMA, the Great Mother.

VOLUME FIVE

THE ENDEKANGLE

The Endekagram, first form, reflected from every second point.

The Endekangle can be traced in five ways: reflected from every second point, when it is called the Endekagon; and as the Endekagram reflected from every third, fourth, fifth, and sixth points.

The Endekangles as a general whole are referred to the Qliphoth. Of its forms, however, the one reflected from every fourth point represents their restriction, and therefore it is not altogether to be classed with those which represent their operation in nature, wherefore it is here separated from them and placed by itself at the end of the book.

The Endekangle naturally represents the evil and imperfect nature of the Endekad. The Endekagon represents the dispersal of the Eleven Curses of Mount Ebal through the Universe. Though they are paragraphed as 12 in the English version of the Bible, in the Hebrew they are paragraphed as 11, two being classed together.

The number of degrees of a great circle cut off between its angles is $32-8/11^\circ$.

THE ENDEKANGLE

The Endekagram, second form; reflected from every third point.

The Endekagram reflected from every third point, represents the concentrated action of evil in the Averse Triad, symbolized by the Eleven Dukes of Edom, the horns of the Red Dragon when he ariseth. This is a reference to one of the Altar Diagrams, the Garden of Eden after the Fall.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

THE ENDEKANGLE

The fourth form; reflected from every fifth point.

It is a curious fact that the Endekagram which can be formed reflected from every fourth point is not so evil as the rest, and represents the restraining of the evil ones. This abhorrence of and incompatibility with the number four is another mark of the imperfect nature of the Endekad when applied to the symbolism of the Qliphoth; for by the same that they are shown, so is their restriction shown. Yet even the Endekangle reflected from every fourth point is not good in operation, but simply declareth the restriction of evil as will be shown hereafter.

The Endekagram reflected from every fifth point represents the concentrated force of the averse and evil Sephiroth.

THE ENDEKANGLE

VOLUME FIVE

The Endekagram, fifth form, reflected from every sixth point.

Unto this form of the Endekagram are attributed the 12 Princes of the Qliphoth who are the heads of the Evil operating in the months of the year.

THE DODEKANGLE

The Dodekangle, first form, reflected from every second point.

The Dodekangle can be traced in five ways; reflected from every second point, when it is called the Dodekagon; and as the Dodekagram reflected from every third, fourth, fifth and sixth point.

The Dodekangle as a general whole is referred to the Zodiac, and naturally represents the powers of the Dodekad. The Dodekagon shows the dispersal of the influence of the Zodiac through nature.

The number of degrees of a great circle cut off between its angles is 30° forming the weak astrological semi-sextile Aspect, good in nature and operation.

THE DODEKANGLE

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

The Dodekagram, second form, reflected from every third point.

The Dodekagram reflected from every third point, is formed of two Hexagons within a Circle, and represents the dispersal and concentration of the Zodiac in masculine and feminine signs. The masculine being Aries, Gemini, Leo, Libra, Sagittarius and Aquarius; and the feminine Taurus, Cancer, Virgo, Scorpio, Capricorn and Pisces. As this Dodekagram is composed of twelve triangles, so do these allude to the 3 decanates, faces, or sets of 10° of each Sign.

THE DODEKANGLE

The Dodekagram, third form, reflected from every fourth point

This Dodekagram is formed of three Squares, representing the three Quaternions of Angular, Succedent, Cadent and Movable, Fixed and Common.

THE DODEKANGLE

VOLUME FIVE

The Dodekagram, fourth form; reflected from every fifth point.

The Dodekagram reflected from every fifth point is formed of four Triangles within a Circle, and refers to the concentrated force of the four Triplicities of the Zodiac operating through nature.

THE DODEKANGLE

The Dodekagram, fifth form; reflected from every sixth point.

The Dodekagram reflected from every sixth point is a continuous figure; and symbolizes the 24 Thrones of the schema established over the Positive and Negative potencies of the Elements in the Zodiac; and over the 24 hours in the day.

THE ENDEKANGLE

The Endekagram third form; reflected from every fourth point.

Symbolizing the restriction of the Qliphoth, Esther IX, vs. 3 is "Vehachashdranim," signifying lieutenants or deputy governors of provinces.

Deut. I, vs. 2. "There are eleven days journey from Horeb by the way of Mount Seir unto Kadesh Barnea," Deut. XXXII, vs. 37 is VeOmar Ai Elohim Tzur Chasyahbah. "And he shall say 'Where are their Gods, their rock wherein they trust?' or 'Eleven are their Gods,' etc., or Ai are their Gods (Elohim)."

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

THE CROSS WITHIN THE CIRCLE

The Point within the Circle represents the operation of Kether in general; and the Cross within the Circle that of Chokmah, for therein are the roots of Wisdom. When using these Lineal Figures in the formation of Talismans under the Sephiroth remember that:

The Point within the Circle is Kether.
The Cross within the Circle is Chokmah.
The Triangle within the Circle is Binah.
The Square within the Circle is Chesed.

The remaining Sephiroth should have the double, or triple, or quadruple, forms of their lineal figures bound together in their talismans; e.g., in the Heptangle for Netzach, the Heptagon and the two forms of the Heptagram should be united in the same Talisman, the extremities of the angles coinciding.

The Endekangle is appropriate to the Qliphoth.

The Dodekangle is appropriate to the Zodiacal forces in Malkuth. Kether that of the Primum Mobile; Chokmah the Sphere of the Zodiac in command; and Malkuth that of the Elements.

And many other meanings are bound together in the lineal figures besides those which are given in this book. Two or more different forms may be bound together in the same Talisman.

SIGILS

By

G.H. FRATER D.D.C.F.

In the Opening Ceremony of the grade of Adeptus Minor the complete Symbol of the Rose and Cross is called the 'Key of Sigils and of Rituals.' It is further said that it represents the Forces of the 22 Letters in Nature, as divided into a Three, a Seven, and a Twelve.

The inner Three Petals of the Rose symbolise the active Elements of Air, Fire, and Water, operating in the Earth, which is as it were the recipient of them, their container and ground of operation. They are coloured, as are all the other petals, according to the hues of the Rainbow in the masculine scale. The seven next Petals answer to the Letters of the Seven Planets, and the Twelve Outer to the Twelve Signs of the Zodiac.

If thou wilt trace the Sigil of any word or name either in the Air, or written upon paper, thou shalt commence with a circle at the point of the initial letter on the Rose, and draw with thy magical weapon a line from this circle unto the place of the next letter of the name. Continue this, until thou hast finished the word which the letters compose. If two letters of the same sort, such as two Beths or Gimels, come together, thou shalt represent the same by a crook or wave in the line at that point.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

And if there be a letter, as Resh in Metatron, through which the line passeth to another letter and which yet formeth part of the name, thou shalt make a noose in the line at that point thus: (___0___) to make the same.

If thou art drawing the Sigil thou mayest work it in the respective colours of the letters and add these together to form a synthesis of colour. Thus the Sigil of Metatron shall be: blue, greenish-yellow, orange, red-orange, and greenish-blue: the synthesis will be a reddish-citron.

METATRON

ELOHIM

Now we will discuss, for example, the Sigils of the Forces under Binah, the Third Sephirah. The Sigils for the plane of a Sephirah are always worked out on this system in this order:

First: Sigil of the Sephirah - Binah.

Second: Sigil of the Divine Name, representing the force of the Sephirah in the World of Atziluth. For Binah, YHVH ELOHIM.

Third: The Sigil of the Archangel, representing the force of the Sephirah in Briah TZAPHQIEL.

Fourth: Sigil of the Choir of Angels, representing the force of the Sephirah in Yetzirah ARALIM.

Fifth: The Sigil of the Sphere of the Planet representing the force of the Sephirah in Assiah - SHABBATHAI.

Finally, the Sigils of any other names whose numbers have some relation to the powers of the Sephirah or its Planet. Yet these latter (the Sigils of the Intelligence and Spirit) are more usually taken from the Magical Kamea or Square of the Planets according to a slightly different system as will be shown hereafter.

SIGILS AND KAMEAS

This ancient mode of forming Sigils was through the medium of the Kameas of the Planets or the magical squares. Wallis Budge believes that the word Kamea is derived from the same root as our English cameo. Magical squares are arrangements of numbers and or letters arranged in such a manner as to yield the same number when added horizontally, vertically or diagonally. The sum of all the numbers in the Kamea is one of special significance to the Planet to which that square is attributed.

The method of forming Sigils from these squares is very simple -- so simple as sometimes to be confusing. The method of using the magical Rose is very useful and certainly the most convenient -- but it has no roots in antiquity. This however is certainly no argument against using it, anachronism though it may be. Barrett gives the Kameas in his book The Magus, and Wallis Budge also reproduces them in his Amulets and Superstitions, though his are copied from a text on Magic written by Papus towards the close of the last century.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Those in The Magus are replete with multiform errors, as is the execrable Hebrew that Barrett uses. Most of these errors are readily correctable. However some basic knowledge, such as is given in the Knowledge Lectures, of Hebrew and Qabalistic numerical manipulations is necessary in order to trace these Sigils on the Kameas. One of the most important tools is the Qabalah of Nine Chambers, or AIQ BEKER. It has been reproduced earlier in these pages. By this method, the letters of the Hebrew alphabet are grouped together according to the similarity of their numbers -- since Hebrew letters are sounds and numbers at the same time. As you will see from the diagram Aleph - 1, Yod - 10, and Qoph - 100 are grouped together in the first space or chamber because they are all variables of 1. So also in the third chamber, Gimel - 3, Lamed - 30, and Shin - 300 are likewise grouped together since 3 is their constant. The same rule applies to all the others -- forming nine groupings or chambers.

In order to trace the Sigil of any Name -- and do remember that Sigil simply means signature -- one must reduce the letters of the Name to tens or units as found in the Square. TIRIEL one of the Mercurial names is one which previously defied tracing because of errors in the numbering of the square and the careless transposition of the shape of the Sigil in older works. However, Teth - 9, Yod - 10 and can be used as such or reduced to 1, Resh - 200 but must be reduced to 20, Yod - 10, Aleph - 1, and Lamed - 30. To trace the Sigil, one starts at the lower left hand corner, moves directly diagonally to 10 or 1, then again almost diagonally downwards to either 20 or 2 (they are in the same pathway), back to 10 or 1, loops the line because one must return to Aleph - 1, then somewhat downwards to the left for Lamed - 30 (3 is in the same pathway but lower down.)

It sounds complex but a little practice will demonstrate its simplicity. The resultant shape may be somewhat different from that given here -- but the difference is slight and may be put down to artistic license.

The Seal or Sigil of the Planet is a symmetrical form so designed that its traced lines touch every number on the Kamea. Thus the seal becomes an epitome or synthetic figure of the Kamea.

In a small book I wrote some years ago How to Make and Use Talismans I demonstrated a technique whereby ordinary names -- not necessary Qabalistic ones -- may be used in order to initiate a particular current of force thought to be necessary at a given time. Thus the names Joe Brown or Bill Green, to use crude examples, may be translated by means of Pythagorean numerology into numbers that can be traced in a Kamea. If for example, the student of Magic -- say Joe Brown -- felt sickly, he could make a sigil of his name and number by using the Kamea of the Sun or Jupiter, etc. etc. There are many changes that can be rung on this simple theme.

So far as concerns the foregoing Sigils, tradition has it that the Spirits are evil, the Intelligences good. The Seals and Names of the Intelligences should be used on all Talismans for a good effect. Those of the Spirits of the Planets serve for evil, and should therefore not be used in any operation of a beneficial kind. The tradition however implies usually by an evil force, such as the Spirits of the planets, a blind force, which contrary to popular notion can be used to good and beneficial ends.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

TELESMATIC FIGURES

There is a mode whereby, combining the letters, the colours, the attributions and their Synthesis, thou mayest build up a telematic Image of a Force. The Sigil shall then serve thee for the tracing of a Current which shall call into action a certain Elemental Force.

Know thou that this is not to be done lightly for thine amusement or experiment, seeing that the Forces of Nature were not created to be thy plaything or toy. Unless thou doest thy practical magical works with solemnity, ceremony and reverence, thou shalt be like an infant playing with fire, and thou shalt bring destruction upon thyself.

Know, then, that if thou essay in the imagination to form an astral image from the Names, the first letter shall be the head of the Figure or Form, and the final letters shall be its feet. The other letters shall be, and represent in their order, its body and members.

AGIEL, for example, shall give thee an Angelic Form of the following nature and appearance.

ALEPH, Air. The head winged, and of a golden colour, with long floating golden hair.

GIMEL, Luna. Crowned blueish silver crescent, and with face like that of grave and beautiful woman with a blueish halo.

YOD, Virgo. The body of a maiden clothed in a grass green robe.

ALEPH, Air. Golden wings of a large size, partly covering the lower part of the figure.

LAMED, Libra. Feet and limbs well-proportioned and, either in the hand of the figure or lying at its feet, the sword and scales of Justice in bright green.

Playing around the figure will be a greenish light the colour of its synthesis. The keys of the Tarot may help thee in the form.

See well also that thou makest the Image as pure and beautiful as possible, for the more impure or common the figure, the more dangerous is it unto thee. (N.B. I suggest that before you build up this figure in your imagination, you make a rough sketch on a large sheet of paper and keep it aside for several days constantly making improvements in its appearance. When finished this is the time to transfer it to the imagination. I.R.)

Write upon the breast its Sigil, upon the girdle its Name, and place clouds below the feet. And when thou has done this with due solemnity and rigid correctness of symbolism, shunning as thou wouldst shun death any suggestion of coarseness or vulgarity in an Angelic symbol, then hear what it shall say unto thee.

SERAPHIM will give thee an Angelic Figure like a Warriress with Flame playing about her, and a countenance glorious like the Sun, and beneath her feet the stormy Sea and thunder clouds, and lightning about her, and a glow as of Flame. She has a triangular helmet or head-dress of Flame like the symbol of Fire.

GRAPHIEL will give thee a Great Angel like a Female Warrior with a most glorious countenance, crowned with the Crescent and flashing with Light, and surrounded by Flame and Lightning and with Four Wings.

VOLUME FIVE

The termination EL always gives to Angelic Forms the Wings and Symbols of Justice. The ending YAH will make the Figures like enthroned Kings or Queens, and with flaming glory at their feet.

FURTHER ON TELESMATIC FIGURES

The Names of all Angels and Angelic forces terminate, with few exceptions, in either AL or YAH. The Divine Name AL belongs to CHESED and it represents a good, powerful, and mighty force, but of somewhat milder operation than the Name YAH.

Since not only the Angels but even devils are said to draw their force and power directly from the prolific source of the divine energies, therefore frequently to the names of evil spirits, is AL added. The Name YAH is added to the name of an Angel or Spirit who exercises only a good and somewhat beneficent office.

This being understood, these two terminations being rather in the nature of incidental attributions than of essential distinction, they need not be taken too much notice of in the construction of a telematic image.

In building up such an image, you can either imagine it astrally before you, or paint the actual resemblance. Care should however be taken to pronounce the Divine Names belonging to the world under which the telematic image under course of construction would fall. Thus to ATZILUTH are allotted Deific Names. To BRIAH, Archangelic and so on. It is also useful to employ the Sephirotic Names which are comprised in the special world to which the Telematic Image is allotted.

It is well to note that the four Worlds themselves formulate the Law involved in the building up or expression of any material thing. The world of ATZILUTH is purely archetypal and primordial, and to it, as before said, Deific Names are applied. BRIAH is creative and originative, and to it certain Great Gods called Archangels are allotted. YETZIRAH is formative and Angelic Orders are allotted thereunto. ASSIAH which is the material world consists of the great Kingdoms of the Elements, human beings, and in some cases of the Qlippoth -- though these latter really occupy the planes below ASSIAH.

From these remarks it will be seen that a Telematic Image can hardly apply to ATZILUTH; that to BRIAH it can only do so in a restricted sense. Thus a Telematic Image belonging to that world would have to be represented with a kind of concealed head, possessing a form shadowy and barely indicated. Telematic Images, then really belong to YETZIRAH. Therefore it would be impossible to employ the telematic image of a Divine Name in ATZILUTH, for it would not represent that in the world of ATZILUTH, but rather its correlation in YETZIRAH. In ASSIAH you would get Elemental forms.

The sex of the figure depends upon the predominance of the masculine or the feminine in the total of the letters together, but a jumble of the sexes should be avoided in the same form. The Image built up should be divided into as many parts as there are letters, commencing at the upper part and so on in order.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

In addition to this method of determining the sex of the Telesmatic Image of a Name, certain Names are inherently masculine, others feminine, and some epicene, irrespective of the mere testimony of the letters.

SANDALPHON, for instance is thus analysed:

Samekh is Male, Nun is Male, Daleth is Female, Lamed is Female, Peh is Female, Vau is Male, and Nun is Male.

Therefore masculine predominates, and if it were an ordinary Name you would make a masculine Form out of it. But this Name is especially applied to the feminine Kerub, it is an exception to the rule; it is an Archangelic Name, belonging to the BRIATIC world and not merely an Angelic Name relating to YETZIRAH.

SANDALPHON is also called Yetzer, meaning 'left', and its letters are: female, female and male, so that, in this case, it may be any of these.

The Seven Letters composing the Name SANDALPHON are thus adapted to the Telesmatic Image.

Samekh is the Head. Would represent a beautiful and active face rather thin than fat.

Nun is the Neck, would be admirably full.

Daleth is the Shoulders of a beautiful woman.

Lamed is the Heart and Chest, the latter perfectly proportioned.

Peh is the Hips strong and full.

Vau is the Legs massive.

Nun (final) Feet sinewy and perhaps winged.

Should you desire to build up an elemental form out of this Name a very peculiar figure would result:

Samekh -- Head fierce, but rather beautiful. Blue.

Nun -- Neck with eagle's wings from behind. Blue-green.

Daleth -- Shoulders feminine, rather beautiful. Green-blue.

Lamed -- Chest of woman. Emerald.

Peh -- Strong and shaggy hips and thighs. Red.

Vau — Legs of a Bull. Red-orange.

Nun (final) -- Feet of an Eagle. Green-blue.

This it will be seen, is almost a synthetical Kerubic Figure. This figure may be represented, as it were, with its feet on the Earth, and its head in the clouds. The colours in the scale of the King would synthesize as a delicate and sparkling green.

The uncovered parts of the body would be blue, the countenance belonging to Sagittarius would be almost that of a horse. The whole form would be like that of a goddess between Hathor and Neith holding a bow and arrows, that is if represented as an Egyptian symbol.

VOLUME FIVE

If again, we endeavour to translate this Name into symbols on a Tattwic Plane, we get the following:

Samekh comes under FIRE
Nun comes under WATER
Daleth comes under WATER OF EARTH
Lamed comes under AIR
Peh comes under FIRE
Nun comes under WATER.

These would be synthesized thus: A silver crescent on a red triangle placed over a yellow square. All three would be charged and enclosed within a large silver crescent.

Now, taking another example, the Telesmatic Image appertaining to the Letter ALEPH. This on the BRIATIC Plane, would be rather masculine than feminine and would be resumed by a spiritual figure hardly visible at all. the head-dress winged, the body cloud-veiled and wrapped in mist, as if clouds were rolling over and obscuring the outline, and scarcely permitting the legs and feet to be seen. It represents the Spirit of Ether. In the YETZIRATIC World, it would be like a Warrior with winged helmet, the face angelic but rather fierce, the body and arms mailed and bearing a child --the legs and feet with mailed buskins and wings attached to them.

In ASSIAH, this same letter ALEPH is terrific energy and represents, as it were, mad force (the shape of the Letter is almost that of a Swastika). On the human plane, it would represent a person who was a lunatic and at times given to frightful fits of mania. Translated to the elemental plane, it would represent a form whose body fluctuated between a man and an animal, and indeed, the ASSIATIC form would be a most evil type with a force something like that compounded of that of a bird and that of a demon -- an altogether horrible result.

The Letter ALEPH represents spirituality in high things, but when translated to the plane contiguous to or below ASSIAH is usually something horrible and unbalanced, because it is so opposed to matter that the moment it is involved therein, there is no harmony between them. This notion is most important and permeates all forms of the Order's magical procedures.

Radiating forces of Divine Light, otherwise called Angelic Forms, have not gender in the grosser acceptation of the term, though they can be classed according to the masculine and feminine sides. As, for example, in the human figure, sex is not so strongly marked in the upper part, the head, as in the body, while yet the countenance can be distinctly classed as of a masculine or a feminine type. So, also. on quitting the material plane, sex becomes less marked, or rather appreciable in a different manner, though the distinction of masculine or feminine is retained. And herein is the great error of the phallic religions -- that they have transferred the material and gross side of sex to Divine and Angelic planes, not understanding that it is the lower that is derived from the higher by correlation in material development, and not the higher from the lower. Gender, in the usual meaning of the term, belongs to the Elemental Spirits, Kerubic Forms, Fays, Planetary Spirits and Olympic Spirits --also to the Qliphoth in its most exaggerated and bestial aspects, and this is a ratio increasing in proportion to the depths of their descent. Also, in certain of the evil elemental spirits it would be exaggerated and repulsive.

But in the higher and angelic natures, gender is correlated by forms, either steady and firm, or rushing. Firmness like that of a rock or pillar is the nature of the Feminine; restlessness and movement, that of the Masculine. Therefore, let this be clearly understood in ascribing gender to angelic forms and images. Our tradition classes all forces under the heads of vehement and rushing force, and firm and steady force. Therefore a figure representing the former would be a masculine and that representing the latter, a feminine form.

But for convenience in the formation of Telesmatic images of ordinary occult names and words, the letters are arranged in masculine and feminine classification. This classification is not intended to affirm that the letters have not in themselves both natures (seeing that in each letter as in each Sephirah is hidden the dual nature of masculine and feminine) but shows more their tendency as regards the distinction of force beforementioned.

Those, then, are rather masculine than feminine to which are allotted forces more rapid in action. And those, again, are rather feminine than masculine which represent a force more firm and steady whence all letters whose sound is prolonged as if moving forward are rather masculine than feminine. Certain others are epicene, yet incline rather to one nature than to another. (By G.H. Frater D.D.C.F.)

TELESMATIC ATTRIBUTIONS OF THE LETTERS OF THE HEBREW ALPHABET

By

G.H. FRATER D.D.C.F.

ALEPH. Spiritual. Wings generally, epicene, rather male than female, rather thin type.

BETH. Active and slight. Male.

GIMEL. Grey, beautiful yet changeful. Feminine, rather full face and body.

DALETH. Very beautiful and attractive. Feminine. Rather full face and body.

HEH. Fierce, strong, rather fiery; feminine.

VAU. Steady and strong. Rather heavy and clumsy, masculine.

ZAYIN. Thin, intelligent, masculine.

CHETH. Full face, not much expression, feminine.

TETH. Rather strong and fiery. Feminine.

YOD. Very white and rather delicate. Feminine.

CAPH. Big and strong, masculine.

VOLUME FIVE

LAMED. Well-proportioned; feminine.
MEM. Reflective, dream-like, epicene, but female rather than male.
NUN. Square determined face, masculine, rather dark.
SAMEKH. Thin rather expressive face; masculine.
AYIN. Rather mechanical, masculine.
PEH. Fierce, strong, resolute, feminine.
TZADDI. Thoughtful, intellectual, feminine.
QOPH. Rather full face, masculine.
RESH. Proud and dominant, masculine.
SHIN. Fierce, active, epicene, rather male than female.
TAU. Dark, grey, epicene; male rather than female.
(These genders are only given as a convenient guide.)

SUMMARY

In the vibration of Names concentrate first upon the highest aspirations and upon the whiteness of Kether. Astral vibrations and material alone are dangerous. Concentrate then upon your Tiphareth, the centre about the heart, and draw down into it the White Rays from above. Formulate the letters in White Light in your heart. Inspire deeply, and then pronounce the letters of the Name, vibrating each through your whole system --as if setting into vibration the Air before you, and as if that vibration spread out into space.

The Whiteness should be brilliant.

The Sigils are drawn from the lettering of the Rose upon the Cross, and these are in Tiphareth, which corresponds to the heart. Draw them as if the Rose were in your heart.

In vibrating any Name, pronounce it as many times as it has letters. This is the Invoking Whirl.

Example: The Vibration of ADONAI HA-ARETZ.

Perform the Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram in the four quarters of your room, preceded by the Qabalistic Cross. Then in each quarter give the Signs of the Adeptus Minor, saying IAO and LVX, making the symbol of the Rose-Cross as taught in the paper describing the Rose-Cross Ritual.

Pass to the centre of the Room, and face East. Then formulate before you in brilliant white flashings the Letters of the Name in the form of a Cross -- i.e., both perpendicular and horizontal, as seen in the diagram below.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

There is another method of assigning gender based upon whether or not the sound of the HEBREW Letter is arrested or prolonged. If the former it is masculine, if the latter it is feminine -- as follows:

SOUND PROLONGED (MASCULINE)

Aleph-broad A
Vau-U,V, OO
Caph-K, Kh
Samekh-S
Qoph-Q, Qh
Shin-Sh, S

Beth-B-Bh
Zayin-Z
Nun-N
Ayin-O, Ngh, Au
Resh-R

SOUND ARRESTED (FEMININE)

Gimel-G, Gh
Heh-H
Teth-T
Lamed-L
Peh-P, Ph
Tau-T, Th.

Daleth-D, Dh
Cheth-Ch (guttural)
Yod-I, J, Y.
Mem-M
Tzaddi-Tz

These, then, are two processes: The INVOKING WHIRL related to the Heart. 'The EXPANDING WHIRL related to the Aura.

ADNI makes the figure from head to waist; HA-ARTZ from waist to feet. The whole Name is related to Malkuth, Matter, and Zelatorship.

ALEPH. Winged, white, brilliant, radiant Crown.

DALETH. Head and neck of a woman, beautiful but firm, hair long, dark and waving.

NUN. Arms bare, strong, extended as a cross. In the right hand are ears of corn, and in the left a golden Cup. Large dark spreading Wings.

YOD. Deep yellow-green robe covering a strong chest on which is a square lamen of gold with a scarlet Greek Cross -- in the angles four smaller red crosses.

In addition a broad gold belt on which ADONAI HA - ARETZ is written in Enochian or Hebrew characters.

The feet are shown in flesh colour with golden sandals. Long yellow green drapery rayed with olive reaches to the feet. Beneath are black lurid clouds with patches of colour. Around the figure are lightning flashes, red. The crown radiates White Light. A Sword is girt at the side of the figure.

THE VIBRATORY MODE OF PRONOUNCING THE DIVINE NAMES

By

G.H. FRATER D.D.C.F.

In vibrating the Divine Names, the Operator should first of all rise as high as possible towards the idea of the Divine White Brilliance in KETHER -- keeping the mind raised to the plane of loftiest aspiration. Unless this is done, it is dangerous to vibrate only with the astral forces, because the vibration attracts a certain force to the operator, and the nature of the force attracted rests largely on the condition of mind in which the operator is.

The ordinary mode of vibrating is as follows: Take a deep and full inspiration and concentrate your consciousness in your heart, which answers to Tiphareth. (Having first, as already said, ascended to your Kether, you should endeavour to bring down the white Brilliance into your heart, prior to centering your consciousness there.)

Then formulate the letters of the Name required in your heart, in white, and feel them written there. Be sure to formulate the letters in brilliant white light, not merely in dull whiteness as the colour of the Apas Tattwa. Then, emitting the breath, slowly pronounce the Letters so that the sound vibrates within you, and imagine that the breath, while quitting the body, swells you so as to fill up space. Pronounce the Name as if you were vibrating it through the whole Universe. and as if it did not stop until it reached the further limits.

All practical occult work which is of any use tires the operator or withdraws some magnetism, and therefore, if you wish to do anything that is at all important, you must be in perfect magnetic and nervous condition, or else you will do evil instead of good.

When you are using a Name and drawing a Sigil from the Rose, you must remember that the Sephirah to which the Rose and Cross are referred, is Tiphareth, whose position answers to the location of the heart, as if the Rose were therein.

It is not always necessary to formulate before you in space the telematic angelic figure of the Name.

As a general rule, pronounce the Name as many times as there are letters in it.

(N.B. One of the things that affords me much gratification is hearing from a student here and there who has been working the Golden Dawn system satisfactorily. Every now and then someone calls my attention to a pamphlet or book written by a student who found techniques of considerable worth in this system. For example, a few months ago my attention was directed to ANGELIC IMAGES by a Frater A.H.E.H.O. in England. It is a beautifully written little manual on the use of the Telematic Images. As the author states, the technique is nowhere to be found save in the Golden Dawn, yet this is strange, that so formidable a technique has received no further commentary. He proposed to remedy the deficiency, and indeed has succeeded so well that I strongly recommend the little book. It may be purchased from the Sorcerer's Apprentice, in Leeds, Yorkshire.

AHEHO's description of the technique is: As the sapphire is drawn from the earth, rugged and of crude appearance, so do we find these two Papers -- archaically written, disjointed, seemingly in places to be worthless; but, as the gem is cut and polished to a gleaming splendour, so do these Papers, when studied and worked upon, synthesize into a gleaming gem, a radiant sapphire, the reflected Light through which may serve to illuminate the dark pathways of the Cosmos. I.R.)

AN ALTERNATE METHOD OF VIBRATING THE DIVINE NAMES

By

V.H. FRATER A.M.A.G.

Not long ago, I came across a technique which, while not essentially Golden Dawn, is so intrinsically in harmony with fundamental principles that I experimented with it to ascertain whether it could be used magically. It could, so I discovered. And a good deal else beside.

It also provides a good basis for understanding -- if one was not aware of it before -- the nature of the effect in one's own organism of the vibration of the Divine Names. One develops a great deal of respect for the method itself. The latter was reported by a metaphysician by the name of Brown Landone in a brochure entitled The Great Spiritual Responsiveness of Body and Awakening the Brain of Spirit. It is a formidable title -- and the principal content is formidable also. Landone describes a simple experiment which is essential to anyone wishing to employ this method intelligently.

Before describing this, let me repeat once more the instructions given in Z-1. The Symbolism of the Ceremony of the Opening of the Neophyte Grade. 'Let the Adept, standing upright, his arms stretched out in the form of a Calvary Cross, vibrate a Divine Name, bringing with the formulation thereof a deep inspiration into his lungs. Let him retain the breath, mentally pronouncing the Name in his Heart, so as to combine it with the forces he desires to awaken thereby. Thence sending it downwards through his body past Yesod, but not resting there. Taking his physical life for a material basis, send it on into his feet. There he shall again momentarily formulate the Name. Then bringing it rushing upwards into the lungs, thence shall he breathe it forth strongly, while vibrating that Divine Name. He will send his breath steadily forward into the Universe so as to awaken the corresponding forces of the Name in the outer world. Standing with arms out, in the form of a cross, when the breath has been imaginatively sent to the feet and back, bring the arms forward in the sign of the Enterer while vibrating the name out into the Universe. On completing this, make the Sign of Silence and remain still, contemplating the Force you have invoked.'

VOLUME FIVE

The alternative method to be described here is not too fundamentally different. In fact, it is identical save in one respect. Before describing that one fact, let me describe the experiment recommended by Brown Landone.

Take an ordinary piece of dining flatware -- a long spoon or knife or fork, or what not. It makes no difference. So long as it is a metal and can transmit vibrations readily, that is all that is required. Now take a long piece of ordinary string, about forty inches long. Wrap the middle of this string securely around the spoon (or whatever), leaving the ends free. Hold each end between thumb and forefinger -- one end in both right and left hands, and leaning over, swing the spoon against the edge of a table. Listen to the sound it makes. Depending on the flatware and the table, a certain sound will be struck. Take note of it.

Having done this, take one end of the string and wrap it around the middle phalange of the index finger. Do this on both the right and left sides. Then insert the tips of the fingers involved into the ear, lightly. Repeat the same experiment of swinging the spoon so that it hits against a table or desk. Now determine what kind of sound this spoon makes in the ear. I must confess it rather surprised me when I first performed this little experiment.

The resultant sound bears little relation to the first sound. It is more like the peeling of cathedral bells. Repeat this several times, so that your impression is most clear, and hence can be recalled.

It is this sound, suggests Mr. Landone, which is made whenever we speak, talk or pray. It is this sound which is made when we hum. And it is humming that Landone recommends in conjunction with various prayers etc. that he prescribes. It is this inner vibration of which we are not normally aware that vibrates throughout the whole organism. It must have an effect on every molecule in every cell, so that all vibrate in unison with the divine name being intoned.

I am not suggesting prayers of any kind actually. It is solely my recommendation that the humming be employed with the Order's method of vibrating the divine Names, knowing full well from this experiment what the full effect of the formula produces. In all other instances of intoning the various names -- as in the Pentagram and Hexagram rituals -- follow all the rules and methods described in this paper by the Order. But when breathing out the Name, as described above, hum it out. Do not try to pronounce or vibrate the Name clearly. Hum the Name. But as you hum, clearly visualize, or have the mental intention that such and such a Name is being vibrated while you hum.

For instance, if the name METATRON or SANDALPHON is to be used, as recommended in this document, it should be hummed on the outgoing breath. The Name in Hebrew letters riding on the breath, as it were, should be visualized as per the relevant instructions. When the instruction advises that you should imagine that the breath, when quitting the body, swells you up so that you fill up all space, it should not be too difficult to conceive of the fact that the sound made within, while humming, is doing precisely that. It may of course require a good deal of practice, but I fancy that you will find it is worth the effort.

Over my many years of use of the vibratory formula there are a couple of suggestions I would like to offer the student just beginning to work with it. The first one is to draw the name of the God or Archangel one proposes to work with on a large board or piece of paper. Write it with a soft-tipped marking pen, and make the letters very large. Place it about six to ten feet away from where you are working so that it is within easy vision. So that when attempting to visualize the Name, it will be made easier by looking at the board first. With a little practice it will be easy to visualize with the eyes open. If not, open them periodically, casting a swift glance at the name on the board. This is an aid to visualization.

The second tip is that if you are not accustomed to being hyperventilated, proceed slowly. Stand at the foot of a bed, or have a mattress placed on the floor where you are working. The idea is that this practice results in hyperventilation, producing dizziness and unsteadiness on one's legs so that more often than not you can fall and I would rather you fall on a relatively soft surface than a hard one and injure yourself. Please take this warning seriously.

Practice the method -- with both the board and the bed -- several times before attempting to use it in full ceremonial work in your Temple. Develop some expertise first, so that in your Temple you will not fall because of hyperventilation.

If you are not familiar with the concept of hyperventilation, read Undoing Yourself with Energized Meditation and Other Devices, by Christopher S. Hyatt, Falcon Press, 1982. Also my book on the vegetotherapy of Wilhelm Reich to be published in 1984 by Falcon Press, will provide an extensive discussion of the subject.

GEOMANCY

By

G.H. FRATER D.D.C.F.

ONE

The figures of Geomancy consist of various groupings of odd and even points in 4 lines. Of these the greatest possible number of combinations is 16. Therefore these sixteen combinations of odd and even points arranged on four lines are the sixteen figures of Geomancy. These are again classed under the heads of the Elements, the Signs of the Zodiac, and the Planets. Two figures are attributed to each of the Seven Planets, while the remainder are attributed to Caput and Cauda Draconis the Head and Tail of the Dragon, or the North and South Nodes of the Moon. Furthermore, to each Planet and Sign certain ruling Genii are attributed.

TWO

Roughly speaking, the mode of obtaining the first four Geomantic figures, from which the remainder of the Divination is calculated, is by marking down at random on paper with a pencil held by a loosely tensed hand 16 lines of points or dashes, without counting the number placed in each line during the operation. It should be done very rapidly. All the time think fixedly of the subject of the question. When the 16 lines are completed, the number of points in each line should be added up, and if the result be odd a single point or cross should be made in the first of the three compartments to the right of the paper. If even, two points or crosses. These 16 lines are represented below.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

These yield four Geomantic figures. The results, odd and /or even, of lines 1 to 4 inclusive comprise the first figure, of Fortuna Minor. Of lines 5 to 8 the second figure; of lines 9 to 12 the third; of lines 13 to 16, the 4th figure, as shown in the diagram.

The symbol of a Pentagram either within or without a circumscribed circle should be made at the top of the paper on which the dashes are made. The paper itself should be perfectly clean and should have never been previously used for any other purpose. If a circle be used with the Pentagram, it should be drawn before the latter is described. The Pentagram should always be of the "invoking" type, as described in the Pentagram Ritual. Since the Pentagram concerns the element of Earth, it should therefore be drawn beginning at the top point descending to the lower left hand point, carefully closing the angle at the finish. While slowly tracing the Pentagram, the divine name associated with Earth should be intoned or vibrated ADONAI ha-ARETZ. It could be intoned two or three times before proceeding with the drawing of the Sigil. This will help to concentrate the mind and to elevate it to the highest notion compatible with the method. Do remember that in one of the Ritual obligations, the aspirant swears that in all his magical workings he will always invoke the highest divine names that he knows. Thus he will always be working under the aegis of the divine. Within the centre of the Pentagram, the Sigil of the "Ruler" to which the matter of the question specially refers, should be placed.

If the question be of the Nature of Saturn, such as agriculture, sorrow, death, etc., the Sigil of Zazel should be placed in the Pentagram. If of Jupiter, concerning good fortune, feasting, church preferment, etc., the Sigil of Hismael. If of Mars, war, fighting, victory, etc., the Sigil of Bartzabel. If of the Sun, power, magistracy, success, etc., the Sigil of Sorath. If of Venus, love, music, pleasure, etc., the Sigil of Kedemel. If of Mercury, such as science, learning, knavery, etc., the Sigil of Taphthartharath, etc., If of travelling, fishing, etc., under Luna, then the Sigil of Chasmodai. In the diagram appended, the Sigil of Hismael is employed.

During the marking down of the points, the attention should be fixed upon the Sigil within the Pentagram, and the mind should carefully consider the question proposed.

A good idea to to repeat out loud the name of the Ruler as if to invoke him. This should also be followed by a short statement repeated again and again concerning the topic of divination. The hand should not be removed from the paper until all 16 lines of points have been finished.

For example if you wished to ask a question concerning the acquisition of wealth you would use the Sigil relating to Jupiter, Hismael. You would then, while making the random dots, repeat three or four times the name of Hismael, followed by, "Will I acquire, such and such amount of money?" (Specify time period. The phrasing of the question should be very definite and specific.) The whole phrase should be repeated frequently until all 16 lines of dots have been completed.

VOLUME FIVE

A pencil is preferable to a pen for this task of tracing the dots. Otherwise, use a contemporary felt pen or marking pen which is ideal for this purpose. It is practically more convenient to draw or rule four lines across the paper beforehand to mark off the space for such four lines composing a Geomantic Figure as shown on the previous page.

The first four Geomantic figures formed directly from the 16 lines of points are called The Four Mothers. It is from them that the remaining figures necessary to complete the Geomantic scheme of direction are derived.

These should now be placed in a row from right to left, for the greater convenience of the necessary calculation though much practice may render this unnecessary. The first figure will be attributed to the South, the Second to the East, the Third to the North, and the Fourth to the West.

THE FOUR MOTHERS

From these Four Mothers, four resulting figures called the Four Daughters are now to be derived, thus: The uppermost points of the First Mother, will be the uppermost points of the First Daughter. The corresponding, that is the first line of, points of the Second Mother will be the second points of the First Daughter. The same line of points of the Third Mother will constitute the third points of the First Daughter. The same points of the Fourth Mother will be the fourth points of the First Daughter. The same rule applies to all the figures.

The second line of points of the four Mother figures will comprise the Second Daughter. The third line of points of the Four Mothers will comprise the Third Daughter, and the fourth line of points of the Four Mothers will comprise the Fourth Daughter and so on.

Applying the above rule throughout, the following will represent the Four Daughters:

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

These, again for the convenience of the beginner, are now to be placed on the left hand of the Four Mothers in a single line from right to left.

From these eight figures, four others are now to be calculated which may be called the Four Resultants, or the Four Nephews. These will be the 9th, 10th, 11th, and 12th figures of the whole scheme. The Ninth figure is formed from the points of the first and second figures compared together. The Tenth from the 3rd and 4th figures; the 11th from the 5th and 6th figures, the 12th from the 7th and 8th figures. The rule is to compare or add together the points of the corresponding lines. If, for instance, the first line of the First Mother consists of one point, and the first line of the Second Mother also consists of one point, these two are added together, and since they form an even number two points are marked down for the first line of the Resultant. If the added points are odd, only one point is marked for the resulting figure. The Ninth figure of Conjunctio is thus formed.

Now the first figure has one point at the top, the second figure has one point at the top -together they make two, an even number, thus making 2 points for the new figure. The first figure has one point on the second line, and the second figure has two points on the second line. Together they make three points, an odd number, therefore represented by one point in the new figure. The rest follow similarly and is represented again by the figure below.

VOLUME FIVE

CONJUNCTIO

The other Resultants are calculated in precisely the same way:

Four Daughters

Four Mothers

8th	7th	6th	5th	4th	3rd	2nd	1st
Albus	Con- junctio	Carcer	Fort. Minor	Rubeus	Fort. Major	Amissio	Fort. Minor

In this way are yielded the four Resultants:

12th	11th	10th	9th
Rubeus	Acquisitio	Caput Drac.	Conjunctio

And thus the Twelve Principal Figures of the Geomantic scheme of Divination are completed. These again correspond to the 12 Astrological Houses of Heaven, with which they will later on be compared.

THREE

For the greater assistance of the Diviner in forming a judgment upon the general condition of the scheme of 12 figures thus far obtained, it is usual to deduce from them three other subsidiary figures. These three are of less importance than the twelve previous figures, and are not to be considered at all in the light of component figures of the scheme, but only as aids to the general judgment. These other figures are known as the Right Witness, Left Witness, and the Judge.

The two witnesses are without significance in the divination, except as they are the roots from which the figure known as the Judge is derived. The Right Witness is formed from the 9th and 10th figures by comparing the points in the manner before shown in the formation of the Resultants. That is the corresponding lines of points in the two figures are compared together, and the addition, whether odd or even, comprises the points of the Witness. The Left Witness represents the combination in a similar manner to the 11th and 12th figures. The Judge again is formed in precisely the same way from the Two Witnesses, and is therefore a synthesis of the whole figure.

If he be good, the figure is good and the judgment will be favourable; and vice versa. From the nature of the formation of the 15th figure, the Judge, it should always consist of an even number of points, and never of odd. That is, adding together the four lines of points, comprising the Judge, the result should be an even number. For if the Judge were a figure of odd points it would show that a mistake had been made somewhere in the calculation.

The Reconciler is a 16th figure sometimes used for aiding the Judgment by combining the Judge with the Figure in the Particular House signifying the thing demanded. Thus, in the preceding scheme, the Judge formed is Populus, and the Second Figure, being Amissio, their combination also yields Amissio.

In order to discover where The Part of Fortune will fall, add together all the points of the first twelve figures. Divide that number by twelve, and place the Part of Fortune with the figure answering to the remainder. If there is no remainder it will fall on the 12th figure. The Part of Fortune is a symbol of ready money, money in cash belonging to the Querent, and is of the greatest importance in all questions of money.

FOUR

The following is the signification of the 12 Houses of Heaven, in brief:

First House (Ascendant)

Life, health, querent, etc.

Second House

Money, property, personal worth.

Third House

Brothers, sisters, news, short journeys, etc.

VOLUME FIVE

Fourth House

Father, landed property, inheritance. The grave, the end of matter.

Fifth House

Children, pleasure, feasts, speculation.

Sixth House

Servants, sickness, uncles and aunts, small animals.

Seventh House

Love, marriage, husband or wife. Partnerships and associations, public enemies, law suits.

Eighth House

Deaths, wills, legacies; pain, anxiety. Estate of deceased.

Ninth House

Long journeys, voyages. Science, religion, art, visions, and divinations.

Tenth House

Mother. Rank and honour, trade or profession, authority, employment, and worldly position generally.

Eleventh House

Friends, hopes and wishes.

Twelfth House

Sorrows, fears, punishments, secret enemies, hospitals or prisons, unseen dangers, restrictions.

The Twelve figures of the Geomantic scheme as previously calculated are to be attributed to a map of the 12 houses of heaven to be placed therein thus:

The first figure goes in the 10th house.
The second figure goes in the 1st house.
The third figure goes in the 4th house.
The fourth figure goes in the 7th house.
The fifth figures goes in the 11th house.
The sixth figure goes in the 2nd house.
The seventh figure goes in the 5th house.
The eighth figure goes in the 8th house.
The ninth figure goes in the 12th house.
The tenth figure goes in the 3rd house.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

The eleventh figure goes in the 6th house.
The twelfth figure goes in the 9th house.

Thus the figures derived by the calculations provided in the example given previously would occupy a Geomantic map as follows:

There are a series of interpretations in the original texts based on the use of the Judge and Two Witnesses which I have omitted. To me they were found to be unreliable providing answers unrelated to the divination as indicated by the following interpretations. Clearly they are of mediaeval origin and are totally unrelated to modern situations.

Herein follows a set of general Tables of the Sixteen figures in the Twelve Houses for the better convenience of forming a general judgment of the Scheme. Under the head of each figure separately is given its general effect in whatever House of the Map of the Heavens it may be located. Thus, by taking the House signifying the end or result of the matter, the Fourth House, etc., and by noting what figures fall therein, the student may find by these tables the general effect in that position.

ACQUISITIO

Generally good for profit and gain.

Ascendant - Happy, success in all things.

Second House - Very prosperous.

Third House - Favour and riches.

Fourth House - Good fortune and success.

Fifth House - Good success.

Sixth House - Good, especially if it agrees with the 5th.

Seventh House - Reasonably good.

Eighth House - Rather good, but not very. The sick shall die.

Ninth House - Good in all demands.

Tenth House - Good in suits. Very prosperous.

Eleventh House - Good in all.

Twelfth House - Evil, pain and loss.

VOLUME FIVE

AMISSIO

Good for loss of substance and sometimes for love; but very bad for gain.

Ascendant - Ill in all things but for prisoners.

Second House - Very ill for money, but good for love.

Third House - Ill end, except for quarrels.

Fourth House - Ill in all.

Fifth House - Evil except for agriculture.

Sixth House - Rather evil for love.

Seventh House - Very good for love, otherwise evil.

Eighth House - Excellent in all questions.

Ninth House - Evil in all things.

Tenth House - Evil except for favour with women.

Eleventh House - Good for love, otherwise bad.

Twelfth House - Evil in all things.

FORTUNA MAJOR

Good for gain in all things where a person has hopes to win.

Ascendant - Good save in secrecy.

Second House - Good except in sad things.

Third House - Good in all.

Fourth House - Good in all, but melancholy.

Fifth House - Very good in all things.

Sixth House - Very good except for debauchery.

Seventh House - Good in all.

Eighth House - Moderately good.

Ninth House - Very good.

Tenth House - Exceedingly good. Go to superiors.

Eleventh House - Very good.

Twelfth House - Good in all.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

FORTUNA MINOR

Good in any matter in which a person wishes to proceed quickly.

Ascendant - Speed in victory and in love, but choleric.

Second House - Very good.

Third House - Good, but wrathful.

Fourth House - Haste; rather evil except for peace.

Fifth House - Good in all things.

Sixth House - Medium in all.

Seventh House - Evil except for war or love.

Eighth House - Evil generally.

Ninth House - Good, but choleric.

Tenth House - Good, except for peace.

Eleventh House - Good, especially for love.

Twelfth House - Good, except for alteration, or for suing another.

LAETITIA

Good for joy, present or to come.

Ascendant - Good, except in war.

Second House - Sickly.

Third House - Ill.

Fourth House - Mainly good.

Fifth House - Excellent.

Sixth House - Evil generally.

Seventh House - Indifferent.

Eighth House - Evil generally.

Ninth House - Very good.

Tenth House - Good, rather in war than in peace.

Eleventh House - Good in all.

Twelfth House - Evil generally.

VOLUME FIVE

TRISTITIA

Evil in almost all things.

Ascendant - Medium, but good for treasure and fortifying.

Second House - Medium, but good to fortify.

Third House - Evil in all.

Fourth House - Evil in all.

Fifth House - Very evil.

Sixth House - Evil, except for debauchery.

Seventh House - Evil for inheritance and magic only.

Eighth House - Evil, but in secrecy good.

Ninth House - Evil except for magic.

Tenth House - Evil except for fortifications.

Eleventh House - Evil in all.

Twelfth House - Evil. But good for magic and treasure.

PUELLA

Good in all demands, especially in those relating to women.

Ascendant - Good except in war.

Second House - Very good.

Third House - Good.

Fourth House - Indifferent.

Fifth House - Very good, but notice the aspects.

Sixth House - Good, but especially so for debauchery.

Seventh House - Good except for war.

Eighth House - Good.

Ninth House - Good for music. Otherwise only medium.

Tenth House - Good for peace.

Eleventh House - Good, and love of ladies.

Twelfth House - Good in all.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

PUER

Evil in most demands, except in those relating to War or Love.

Ascendant - Indifferent. Best in War.

Second House - Good, but with trouble.

Third House - Good fortune.

Fourth House - Evil, except in War and Love.

Fifth House - Medium good.

Sixth House - Medium.

Seventh House - Evil, save in War.

Eighth House - Evil, save for Love.

Ninth House - Evil except for War.

Tenth House - Rather evil. But good for Love and War.

Eleventh House - Most other things medium.

Twelfth House - Medium; good favour. Very good in all.

RUBEUS

Evil in all that is good and Good in all that is evil.

Ascendant - Destroy the figure if it falls here! It makes the judgment worthless.

Second House - Evil in all demands.

Third House - Evil except to let blood.

Fourth House - Evil except in War and Fire.

Fifth House - Evil save for love, and sowing seed.

Sixth House - Evil except for blood-letting.

Seventh House - Evil except for war and fire.

Eighth House - Evil.

Ninth House - Very evil.

Tenth House - Dissolute. Love, fire.

Eleventh House - Evil, except to let blood.

Twelfth House - Evil in all things.

VOLUME FIVE

ALBUS

Good for profit and for entering into a place or undertaking.

Ascendant - Good for marriage. Mercurial. Peace.

Second House - Good in all.

Third House - Very good.

Fourth House - Very good except in War.

Fifth House - Good.

Sixth House - Good in all things.

Seventh House - Good except for War.

Eighth House - Good.

Ninth House - A messenger brings a letter.

Tenth House - Excellent in all.

Eleventh House - Very good.

Twelfth House - Marvellously good.

CONJUNCTIO

Good with good, or evil with evil. Recovery of things lost.

Ascendant - Good with good, evil with evil.

Second House - Commonly good.

Third House - Good fortune.

Fourth House - Good save for health; see the 8th.

Fifth House - Medium.

Sixth House - Good for immorality only.

Seventh House - Rather good.

Eighth House - Evil; death.

Ninth House - Medium good.

Tenth House - For love; good. For sickness, evil.

Eleventh House - Good in all.

Twelfth House - Medium. Bad for prisoners.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

CARCER

Generally evil. Delay, binding, bar, restriction.

Ascendant - Evil except to fortify a place.

Second House - Good in Saturnine questions; else evil.

Third House - Evil.

Fourth House - Good only for melancholy.

Fifth House - Receive a letter within three days. Evil.

Sixth House - Very evil.

Seventh House - Evil.

Eighth House - Very evil.

Ninth House - Evil in all.

Tenth House - Evil save for hidden treasure.

Eleventh House - Much anxiety.

Twelfth House - Rather good.

CAPUT DRACONIS

Good with evil; evil with evil. Gives a good issue for gain.

Ascendant - Good in all things.

Second House - Good.

Third House - Very good.

Fourth House - Good save in war.

Fifth House - Very good.

Sixth House - Good for immorality only.

Seventh House - Good especially for peace.

Eighth House - Good.

Ninth House - Very good.

Tenth House - Good in all.

Eleventh House - Good for the church and ecclesiastical gain.

Twelfth House - Not very good.

VOLUME FIVE

CAUDA DRACONIS

Good with evil, and evil with good. Good for loss, and for passing out of an affair.

Ascendant - Destroy figure if it falls here! Makes judgment worthless.

Second House - Very evil.

Third House - Evil in all.

Fourth House - Good especially for conclusion of the matter.

Fifth House - Very evil.

Sixth House - Rather good.

Seventh House - Evil, war, and fire.

Eighth House - No good, except for magic.

Ninth House - Good for science only. Bad for journeys. Robbery.

Tenth House - Evil save in works of fire.

Eleventh House - Evil save for favours.

Twelfth House - Rather good.

VIA

Injurious to the goodness of other figures generally, but good for journeys and voyages.

Ascendant - Evil except for prison.

Second House - Indifferent.

Third House - Very good in all.

Fourth House - Good in all save love.

Fifth House - Voyages good.

Sixth House - Evil.

Seventh House - Rather good, especially for voyages.

Eighth House - Evil.

Ninth House - Indifferent. Good for journeys.

Tenth House - Good.

Eleventh House - Very good.

Twelfth House - Excellent.

SIX

By essential dignity is meant the strength of a Figure when found in a particular House. A figure is, therefore, strongest when in what is called its house, very strong when in its exaltation, strong in its Triplicity, very weak in its Fall; weakest of all in its Detriment. A figure is in its Fall when in a House opposite to that of its Exaltation, and in its Detriment when opposite to its own house.

The Geomantic figures, being attributed to the planets and Signs, are dignified according to the rules which obtain in Astrology. That is to say they follow the dignities of their ruling Planets, considering the Twelve Houses of the scheme as answering to the Twelve Signs. Thus, the Ascendant or First House answers to Aries, the Second House to Taurus, the Third House to Gemini, and so on to the Twelfth answering to Pisces. Therefore the figures of Mars will be strong in the First House, but weak in the Seventh House, and so forth.

TABLE OF DIGNITIES

Sign	Element	Ruler	Exaltation	Fall	Detriment	Strong
Aries	Fire	Mars	Sun	Saturn	Venus	Jupiter
Taurus	Earth	Venus	Luna	--	Mars	Jupiter
Gemini	Air	Mercury	--	--	Jupiter	Saturn
Cancer	Water	Luna	Jupiter	Mars	Saturn	Mercury
Leo	Fire	Sun	--	--	Saturn	Mars
Virgo	Earth	Mercury	Mercury	Venus	Jupiter	Saturn
Libra	Air	Venus	Saturn	Sun	Mars	Jupiter
Scorpio	Water	Mars	--	Luna	Venus	Sun
Sagittarius	Fire	Jupiter	--	--	Mercury	Venus
Capricorn	Earth	Saturn	Mars	Jupiter	Luna	Mercury
Aquarius	Air	Saturn	--	--	Sun	--
Pisces	Water	Jupiter	Venus	Mercury	Mercury	--

Caput Draconis is strong in the dignities of Jupiter and Venus.

Cauda Draconis is strong in the dignities of Saturn and Mars.

NOTES

The following notes were abstracted from a paper on Geomancy circulated in the A.O., which was the name given to the renewed Golden Dawn by Mathers years after the revolt. In it, the statement is made that it was compiled by S.R.M.D. from ancient treatises: 1) Ye Geomancie of Maisrer Christopher Catton; a very old work in black letters. 2) The Theomagia by John Heydon (17th century). 3) And the Geomancia Astronomica of Gerardus CAMBRENSIS or Cremonensis.)

In each set of four lines of print, the First or Top line is attributed to the element FIRE (as being the most subtle element), the second line to the Air (the next in lightness), the third to the Water (more heavy), and the fourth and lowest line to Earth (the heaviest of all).

Further that each set of Four points signifieth an element, thus:

The first Four Lines signify FIRE; the second Four the element AIR; the third Four lines the element of WATER; and the fourth Four lines the element of EARTH.

In Geomancy there are three points which may tend a little to confuse the Practicus: (a) Why the Names and Seals of the SPIRITS of the Planets are employed instead of those of the INTELLIGENCES, the former being said to be more Evil in nature, and the latter More Good. (b) This being so, why the names and sigils of the Archangels of the Zodiacal Signs, purely Good in Nature, should be also employed; and instead of those of either the Angels, or Assistant Angels of the Zodiac. (c) There being 16 figures of Geomancy, and these under the 12 Signs, how are the 4 extra to be attributed in this classification.

(a) Geomancy being a form of Divination especially attributed to the Element of Earth, and therefore more purely Terrestrial in operation, the Spirits and their Characters are more naturally appropriate hereto than the Intelligences, as representing the more weighty and automatic force of the Planetary Ray in its action upon the Earth. Also the Sigils employed in Geomancy are different from those of the same Spirits when taken from the Kameas of the Planets, and this to affirm their more specialized action in this Art.

(b) The reason of the employment of such powerful Names as those of Malchidael, etc., is to bring a strong aiding Force of Good into the Operation, again specialized by the Sigils used in this connection.

(c) The 12 Governors of the 12 Zodiacal Ideas or Figures, have power over the face of the Earth in their Figures and Places, but the 4 extra which be Fortuna Minor, Via, Caput Draconis and Cauda Draconis, also naturally have reference to the Four Winds and their Genii; a fortunate phase of the Moon (especially at Full) aspecting, is Good.

Gerardus Cremonensis sayeth: But you must always take heed, that you do not make a Question in a Rainy, very Stormy, cloudy, or very Windy Season; that is when the Elements be Angry; or when thou thyself art angry, or thy mind over-busied with many affairs; nor for tempters nor deriders, neither renew nor reiterate the same question again under the same Figure or Form; for that is Error.

YE COMPANIE OF HOUSES - From the Geomancie of Maister Christopher Cattan. When ye doe find a Good Figure in a good House, it is double Good, because the House is Good and the Figure also; and it signifieth that without any doubt the Querent shall obtain his Demand. By the like reason if ye find an Ill figure in an Ill House it is very Ill for the Querent. But if ye find a Good Figure in an Ill House, it Signifieth Good to the Querent but it will not continue, but taketh away part of the Malice of the House. In like case if ye find an Ill figure in a Good House, it taketh away the Malice of the Figure, for he would do harm, but he cannot; yet keeping back always the Good that it come not to the Querent.

By "Ill House" is meant that which in a Question shews persons or things opposed to the

VOLUME FIVE

Querent or to his interest in the Question, as in a Lawsuit, The House shewing his Opponent; in a case of Sickness, the 6th and 8th would be hostile. "Good Houses" would be those shewing Aid etc. We might in a general sense consider the 6th, and 8th, (death) and the 12th (Fears, prison, private enemies), "Ill House" by Nature.

The "Companie of the Houses" is after three manners: SIMPLE, SEMI SIMPLE, and COMPOUND. And the House be classed in Pairs, thus: the Second House is always the Companion of the First; the Fourth of the Third; the Sixth of the Fifth, and so on.

The COMPANIE SIMPLE is when the same Figure is repeated in both Houses of any of the "Pairs." Thus in our Scheme, VIA is repeated in the PAIR formed by the Ascendant and the Second House and they are therefore in COMPANY together. In this case shew that the indecision of the querent re-acts on his business. But though Caput Draconis is repeated in the Fourth and Fifth houses which be next each other, there is no COMPANY, for they belong to different pairs, the Fourth house being the Companion of the Third and not of the Fifth, and the latter being Company to the Sixth and not to the Fourth. And with regard to Persons, the COMPANION Figure will shew the COMPANIONS or Associates of a Person in question, as also will the COMPANION House. Good Figures in COMPANY show much Good, and as well in the Present as in the time to come; and Evil Figures the reverse. For also the First House (of a Pair) sheweth the Time Present, and the Second the Time to Come.

The COMPANY DEMI SIMPLE is when the Figures in the Two Houses forming a Pair be not identical, but be under the same Planetary Ruler as Acquisitio and Laetitia which be both under Jupiter and Hismael, Fortuna Major and Minor under the Sun, Puella and Amissio under Venus, etc.

The COMPANY COMPOUND is when the Points of the Two Figures be the exact complementary contrary one of the other in arrangement as Puer and Puella, Albus and Rubeus, Acquisitio and Amissio, Laetitia and Tristitia, etc. A Reconciler figure is then formed from them in the same way that the Judge is calculated from the Two Witnesses, and according as this Figure is harmonized with such and Good, so is the nature of this "Company Compound," but if discordant and evil so is this form of COMPANY.

There is also yet another kind of COMPANY which is that of the uppermost Line of the Two Figures in the Pair of Houses. If this uppermost line in both cases be odd or even, there is COMPANY, and as in the case of the COMPANY COMPOUND, a Reconciler Figure is formed and the case judged as in the last paragraph. But if the top line of the one be odd and the other be even there is no COMPANY between those Figures. In our Scheme Tristitia is in the Third and Caput in the Fourth House, and as the top line of each has even points there is COMPANY between them. The Reconciler Figure will be Conjunctio, which is Harmonious with Both and is an argument of Good being signified thereby.

The reference in the above to "our scheme" only means that Mathers had set up a divination in full, with its complete interpretation. I have not included it here because it would be redundant; one is already included in this text.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

SEVEN

Remember always that if the figures Rubeus or Cauda Draconis fall in the Ascendant, or first house, the figure is not fit for Judgment and should be destroyed without consideration. Another figure for the question should not be erected before at least two hours have elapsed.

Your figure being thoroughly arranged as on a Map of the heavens, as previously shown, note first to what House the demand belongs. Then look for the Witnesses and the Judge, as to whether the latter is favourable or otherwise, and in what particular way.

Note next what Figure falls in the House required. Also whether it passes or springs - that is whether it is also present in any other House or Houses. These should also be considered as for example in a question of money stolen, if the figure in the second House be also found in the sixth House, it might also show that the thief was a servant in the house.

Then look in the Table of Figures in the Houses and see what the Figure signifies in the special House under consideration. Put this down also. Then look in the Table for the strength of the figures in that House. Following this, apply the astrological rule of aspects between houses, noting what houses are Sextile, Quintile, Square. Trine, etc. Write the "Good" on one side and the "Evil" on the other, noting also whether these figures also are "strong" or "weak," "friendly" or "unfriendly" in nature to the figure in the House required. Note that in looking up the aspects between houses, there are two directions, Dexter and Sinister. The Dexter aspect is that which is contrary to the natural succession of the houses; the Sinister is the reverse. The Dexter aspect is more powerful than the Sinister.

Then add the meaning of the figure in the Fourth House, which will signify the end of the matter. It may also assist you to form a Reconciler Figure from the Figure in the house required and the Judge, noting what figure results and whether it harmonises with either or both by nature. Now consider all you have written down, and according to the balance of "good" and "evil" therein form your final judgment.

Consider also in "money" matters where the Part of Fortune falls.

For example, let us consider the figure previously set up and form a judgment for "Loss of money in business" therefrom.

Populus is the Judge, and we find that in questions of money, which concern the Second House, it signifies "medium good." The question as a whole is of the nature of the Second House, where we find Carcer. We then discover that Carcer here is "evil," as showing obstacles and delays. The Part of Fortune is in the Ascendant with Amissio, signifying loss through Querent's own mistake, and loss through Querent's self.

The Figure of Amissio springs into no other house, therefore this does not affect the question. "Carcer" in the Second House is neither "strong" nor "weak" its strength for evil is medium. The figures Sextile and Trine of the Second are Conjunctio, Fortuna Major, Fortuna Minor, and Acquisitio, all "good" figures, helping the matter and "friendly" in nature. This signifies well intentioned help of friends. The figures square and opposition of the Second are Fortuna Minor, Conjunctio, Albus which are not hostile to Carcer. therefore showing "opposition not great."

The figure in the Fourth House is Fortuna Major which shows a good end but with anxiety. Let us now form a Reconciler between the figure of the Second House which is Carcer and the Judge, Populus, which produces Carcer again, a sympathetic figure, but noting delay, but helping the Querent's wishes. Now let us add all these together:

- 1. Medium.
- 2. Evil and Obstacles, delay.
- 3. Loss through querent's self.
- 4. Strength for evil, medium only.
- 5. Well-intentioned aid of friends.
- 6. Not much opposition from enemies.
- 7. Ending good; but with anxiety.
- 8. Delay, but helping Querent's wishes.

And we can formulate the final judgment. That the Querent's loss in business has been principally owing to his own mismanagement. That he will have a long and hard struggle, but will meet with help from friends. That his obstacles will gradually give way, and that after much anxiety he will eventually recoup himself from his former losses.

SUMMARY OF STAGES IN GEOMANTIC DIVINATION

1. If Rubeus or Cauda Draconis in Ascendant destroy the figure.
2. Note the House to which the question belongs. See if the figure there springs into another house.
3. Form the Judge from the two witnesses.
4. Part of Fortune that is, if a money question.
5. See if Figure in House concerned is "strong" or "weak." If it pass or spring into any other house.
6. See figures Sextile and Trine, Square and Opposition.
7. Friendly or unfriendly.
8. Note the figure in Fourth House, signifying the end or outcome.
9. Form the Reconciler from Judge and the figure in House to which the demand appertains.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

SKRYING

By

V.H. FRATER A.M.A.G.

I would like to deal with a topic that is considered to be at the heart of the magical system. Crowley for example, whose contribution to the subject can hardly be called minimal, considers the Body of Light technique of prime importance. In fact, he has formulated Liber Samekh, one of the most significant of the rituals of his own Order dealing with the knowledge and conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel, around the Body of Light technique. There can be no possibility of performing this ritual without considerable skill in this art. In the Golden Dawn itself, many of the primary magical skills, if not wholly dependent on this skill, at least need to bring it into play for those skills to become effective. For example, in Tarot divination, you will often find the advice given by Mathers to use clairvoyance to divine the significance of any one card. It must be added here that clairvoyance, in the Order sense of the term meant seeing with the inner eye, the eyes of the Body of Light. Furthermore, most of the Enochian system, the crown and jewel and synthesis of all the Golden Dawn teaching, devolves upon the Body of Light Technique for full use of the system.

The discussion of this topic must revolve around three different headings:

- 1. The Order method, sometimes referred to as Tattwa vision, or skrying in the spirit vision.
- 2. The Inner Guide Meditation of Edwin Steinbrecher, now achieving considerable popularity.
- 3. Aleister Crowley's method, previously referred to as the Body of Light Technique.

1. This method is described in several places in the Order teaching. For example, in the paper entitled "Man, the Microcosm" it is described at some length. Then there is a so-called flying roll where the description covers some several pages. Here and there in many other documents, it is further described.

"The subject of clairvoyance must always be in the highest degree interesting to all who are aspiring after adeptship even in its lowest grades...We frequently meet with two opposite attitudes towards the subject, both in the outer world and amongst our junior members. Both these attitudes are hindrances to its proper study, and therefore I shall preface my remarks by a few words concerning each of them." (I should interpolate here that these remarks were made by G.H. Frater Felkins.)

"The first is fear of clairvoyance, and the second is a disproportionate estimate of its value.

"Both of these attitudes arise from a misunderstanding of its true character. People imagine that somehow the power of clairvoyance is obtained secondhand from the powers of evil; or that its exercise will bring those who practice it under their influence. Or, on the other hand, they imagine that the power of clairvoyance will save them a great deal of trouble, and give them a short and easy path to the information and guidance they desire, in fact, that these may almost be attained at will. Nay more, would such a power not fully satisfy that curiosity which is one of the pitfalls of the superficial student?

"The properly trained clairvoyant need have no fear that he will thereby expose himself to the powers of evil. It is the untrained natural clairvoyant who is in danger. Training will give him knowledge, discipline and protection, such as will protect him from the onslaughts of the averse powers.

"On the other hand, let him who desires to save himself trouble and to gain knowledge to which he has no claim, be very well assured that only 'in the sweat of his brow' can he obtain this power and exercise it in security. And that he who seeks to gratify his curiosity will either be mortified by disappointment or distressed by discoveries he would much prefer not to have made. Trained, humble, and reverent clairvoyance is a great gift, opening up new worlds and deeper truths, lifting us out of ourselves into the great inpouring and outpouring of the heart of God."

Most of the following quotations are from a rather lengthy flying roll, #11 actually, written by G.H. Frater D.D.C.F. on clairvoyance. "We pass through life affecting others, and being affected by others through these akashic envelopes that surround us --- so that when we close the eyes of the body and senses upon the material world, we first apprehend by interior vision the essences of our own and contiguous natures. This perception of our own environment is a source of error to the beginner in clairvoyance. He believes himself to have gone away and to see elsewhere, but he may be among only the confused images of his own aura."

"An old name of clairvoyance, in our ancient manuscripts was 'skrying in the spirit vision;' becoming a 'skryer' was not simply becoming a seer, but one who descries what he seeks, not only the impassive receiver of visions beyond control or definition.

"When one stands in common life in the kingdom of Malkuth, there is but little confusion of sight, but when one voluntarily leaves the dead level of materialism and passes up the path of Tau towards Yesod, then there is a confusion of lights. One comes within the scope of the crossing and reflected and coloured rays of the Qesheth, the rainbow of colours spread over the earth. Here then we require instruction and guidance to avoid confusion and folly. And yet this stage must be passed through -- to go higher.

"Beyond Yesod you enter the path of Samekh, the strait and narrow path which leads to truly spiritual regions of perception. This is attained by the process called rising in the planes.

"Our subject falls most conveniently into three heads, which are however closely related, and the three forms or stages pass one into the other.

"1. Clairvoyance. Descrying in the spirit vision.

"2. Astral projection. Traveling in the spirit vision.

"3. Rising in the planes.

"It is well to commence (1) by means of a symbol, such as a drawing, or coloured diagram. related in design, form and colour to the subject chosen for study. The simple and compound Tattwa emblems are suitable for this purpose. It is better for them not to be in the complementary

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

"flashing" colours for this purpose as though more powerful, they are also more exhausting to the student. The symbol should be of convenient size, for the eye to take it in at a glance, and large enough not to require too close an application of sight to realize the details... (The Tattwa scheme is nearly the same as our queen scale of colour applied to the Sephirotic colours in the Minutum Mundum diagram)... To use the symbol for clairvoyance, place it before you, as on a table, place the hands beside it, or hold it up with both hands, then, with the utmost concentration, gaze at it, comprehend it, formulate its meaning and relations. When the mind is steady upon it, close the eyes and continue the meditation. Let the conception still remain before you. Keep up the design, form and colour in the akashic aura, as clearly as they appeared in material form to the outward seeing. Transfer the vital effort from the optic nerve to the mental perception, or thought seeing as distinct from seeing with the eye. Let one form of apprehension glide on with the other -- produce the reality of the dream vision, by positive will in the waking state. All this will be possible only if the mind is steady, clear and undisturbed, and the will powerful. It cannot lead to success if you are in an unsuitable state of anxiety, fear, indignation, trouble or anticipation. You must procure peace, solitude and leisure, and you must banish all disturbing influences.

"Above all, never attempt these magic arts if there be any resentment in the mind, anger, or any evil passion. If you do, the more you succeed, the greater will be the evil that will follow for yourself.

"With the conditions favourable, the process may be continued and this, by means of introducing into the consciousness and by formulating into sound, the highest divine names connected therewith. This invocation produces and harmonizes currents of spiritual force in sympathy with your object. Then follow with the sacred names of archangelic and angelic import, producing them mentally, visually and by voice."

However casually this may have been stated, nonetheless this is the essence of the difference between the Golden Dawn method and that of the inner guide meditation. I shall have more to say about this when this particular method is being discussed, but nonetheless it should be emphasized right here. The reader should have noticed that in one of the obligations that the initiate into the Order has assumed there is the statement that no matter what type of magical operation he proposes to engage in, he will always invoke the highest divine names within his purview. In this way, his steps will be guided in the right direction and all harm thus avoided. In a major sense this is one of the greatest differences between the initiated and profane points of view. It holds good in all occult matters -- from so apparently a prosaic undertaking as divining by means of geomancy to invoking one's higher and divine genius. It means placing one's workings and one's goal in the hands of the divine -- no matter how one defines the latter.

Now we can return to the long quotation about clairvoyance by Mathers: "Then, maintaining your abstraction from your surroundings, and still concentrating upon the symbol and its correlated ideas, you are to seek a perception of a scene, panorama, or view of a place. This may also be brought on by a sense of tearing open, as a curtain is drawn aside and seeing the 'within' of the symbol before you. As the scene dawns upon you, particularize the details, and seek around for objects and then for beings, entities and persons -- attract their attention, call mentally to them by suitable titles and courtesies, and by proper and appropriate signs and symbols, such as the signs of the grades, pentagrams, hexagrams and sigils, etc."

Again, let me call attention to this statement as being one of overwhelming significance and importance. It is another one of those differences between an initiated and a profane point of view or technique. All the correspondences that the student has been obliged to learn and memorize before he even attempts this kind of training now come into use. They are the means whereby he attempts 'to test the spirits, whether they be of god or the devil.' If the student has elected to travel upon the path of Saturn leading from Malkuth to Yesod and feels that somehow all is not going well, and because of that makes the invoking or banishing hexagrams of Saturn, even drawing in the air before him the astrological symbol of Saturn and the Hebrew letter Tau to which this path is attributed, he will find that there will be changes in the visual environment in which he finds himself. The tracing of the appropriate symbols and the vibration of the appropriate divine names eliminates all those things which have no place in vision. Thus the details which may represent delusion and deception are banished from the scene enabling him to proceed safely with his mission of investigation, etc.

"Test them by divine and angelic names, observing their attitude and responses thereto. Thus losing sight of the symbol you see its inwardness, perceive things as in a mirror by reflection. In this form of descrying, note that you see objects reversed, as to right and left, for which suitable allowance must be made. You project, in this process, part of your own nerve and spirit force upon the symbol, and by this you attract and attach to it more akashic force from the environment, hence the results obtained. If, instead of this simple spirit vision, a ray of yourself is sent and actually goes to a place (astral projection) there is not necessarily the sense of reversal of objects.

"In using symbols it is necessary to avoid self hypnotization. for this occurrence would dispose you to mediumship, and to be the playground of forces you must control and not permit to control you. For this reason, partly, it is well not to have the symbol too small. It is of advantage to pursue these researches with the aid of the presence before you of the four magical implements, and even to hold the one suitable to the investigation. If you enter upon the spirit vision without a symbol you proceed by a mental symbol imagined in the astral light. This is not a wise proceeding for learners because it opens the door to other astral effects. You create a vortex into which other astral influences are drawn and hence confusion and mischief may result.

"The process of working by a small symbol placed upon the forehead or elsewhere is not wholly good either. It is more liable to derange the brain circulation and cause mental illusion and disturbance, headache and nervous exhaustion than the first method.

"In using symbols placed before you, it is a useful addition to provide a large circular or square tablet, around which are placed divine names etc., related to the elements, and to the cardinal points. Then after duly arranging this with respect to the compass, place your symbol upon and within this frame.

"Astral projection, although from one point of view a development of clairvoyance, yet is from another quite distinct. In astral projection, the adept emits from his ego a perceptible ray of his identity, and by cultured and trained will, sends it to travel to the place desired, focusses it there, sees there, directly and not by reflection, perceives its bodily home, and re-enters it.

"In this traveling of the spirit, the process may be caused to start also by the symbol as before, or by will alone. But in any event the divine names should be used and relied upon. If the ray be emitted, and you succeed in this traveling to the place, you perceive a different result to that of the clairvoyant, mirror-like vision, scenes and things instead of being like a picture, have the third dimension, solidity. They stand out first like a bas relief, then you see as from a balloon, as it is said, by a bird's eye view. You feel free to go to the place, to descend upon it, to step out upon the scene and to be an actor there.

"Having attained success in projection you should practice the method when opportunity offers, and having passed to any place, should make efforts -- and if you will -- success will follow -- to pass through all elements, water and earth as well as through air. Practice will enable you to fly through air either quickly or slowly as willed, and to swim through water, or pass through earth and through fire fearlessly with the aid of the divine names, in this astral projection."

Once again, Mathers is stressing the initiated viewpoint, the vibration of the divine names in order to achieve one's ends and to get to where one wishes to go without undue opposition or difficulty. He stresses this as often as possible to ensure that the idea is driven home, and that the method be used on all possible occasions. The above section also stresses the use of the magical implements in all such undertakings -- implements which have been made and charged and consecrated by the student himself for use in just such circumstances. It is only when these basic rules are not scrupulously and faithfully followed that some mishap or disaster may occur. Crowley's method, which is really that of the Order, follows this procedure -- Steinbrecher's does not.

"Seek then the forms and persons of the place or of the plane you read, seek converse with them, by voice, word, letter and symbol, and claim admission, etc. by signs and by invocation. Every figure is to be tried and tested, whether he be as he appears or whether a delusory and deluding embodied power. It may be too that your travel is not real, and that you are wandering in your own environment, and are misled by memory, etc. hence you might be deceiving yourself by your own reminiscences.

"Try all beings, and if offered favours or initiation by any, try and test them by the divine names and forces. And ever remember your own adept obligation and your allegiance to it, to your own higher self, and to the great angel Hua, before whom you stood fastened to the cross of suffering, and to whom you pledged your obedience.

"This old proverb enshrines a great truth, as many of them do. 'Believe thyself there and thou art there.'

"Rising in the planes is a spiritual process after spiritual conceptions and higher aims; by concentration and contemplation of the divine, you formulate a Tree of Life passing from you to the spiritual realms above and beyond you. Picture to yourself that you stand in Malkuth-- then by the use of the divine names and aspirations you strive upward by the path of Tau toward

VOLUME FIVE

Yesod, neglecting the crossing rays which attract you as you pass up. Look upwards to the divine light shining down from Kether upon you. From Yesod leads up the path of Temperance, Samekh; the arrow cleaving upward leads the way to Tiphareth, the great central sun of sacred power.

"Invoke the great angel Hua, and conceive yourself as standing fastened to the cross of suffering, carefully vibrating the holy names allied to your position, and so may the mental vision attain unto higher planes.

"There are three special tendencies to error and illusion which assail the adept in these studies. They are: memory, imagination and actual sight. These elements of doubt are to be avoided by the vibration of divine names, and by the letters and titles of the 'lords who wander' -- the planetary forces represented by the several double letters of the Hebrew Alphabet.

"If the memory entice thee astray, apply for help to Saturn, whose Tarot title is 'the great one of the night of time,' formulate the Hebrew letter Tau in whiteness.

"If the vision change or disappear, your memory has falsified your efforts. If imagination cheat thee, use the Hebrew letter Caph for the forces of Jupiter named 'lord of the forces of life.' If the deception be of lying -- intellectual untruth, appeal to the force of Mercury by the Hebrew letter Beth. If the trouble be of wavering of mind, use the Hebrew letter Gimel for the Moon. If the enticement of pleasure be the error, then use the Hebrew letter Daleth as an aid. Use the Hebrew letter Peh for Mars to coerce sense of anger and violence. Use the Hebrew letter Resh for the sun to coerce sense of haughtiness and vanity.

"Never attempt any of these divine processes when at all influenced by passion or anger or fear. Leave off if desire of sleep approach. Never force a mind disinclined. Balance the Mem and Shin of your nature and mind, so as to leave Aleph like a gentle flame rising softly between them.

"You must do all these things by yourself alone. No one can make you nor take you. Do not try to make, or take others. You may only point out the path and guide, but must not help others.

"A strong person can galvanize a weak one, but its effect is only a temporary folly, doing good neither to the strong nor to the weak. Only offer guidance to those who are making necessary efforts of themselves. Do not assist a negligent pupil, nor encourage one whose desire is not in the work.

"This rule is open to some alteration when, passing from our mystic studies, you refer to the worldly guidance of childhood. A parent is in a special position, and has a natural duty incumbent upon him or her to train, guide and protect a child.

"Still, even here, do protect and lead, but do not 'obsess' a child; don't override by your peculiar personal predilections all the personal aims of the offspring. A man's ideal of true propriety is often himself, and his idea of doing good to a child is to make it like himself. Although this father may be a good man, his form of goodness is not to be made a universal type, and there are many other forms equally existing, and equally fit to exist, and any attempt to dictate too closely a child's 'thought life' may, while failing of success, yet warp aside from the truth what would otherwise pass into a good path, through its own peculiar avenue."

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

"It is well to make all symbols for clairvoyant use yourself. Otherwise, to obtain a purely individual result, you have to banish the influence of him who made them.

"It is best to do high clairvoyance alone, or only with others of the utmost purity, and in whom you have the utmost confidence.

"If more than one is attempting in concert the same process, there is the source of error that there becomes formed in the astral light a complex symbol, and struggle ensues as to who shall lead the direction of the currents. When two sit together, as in the vault, they should be balanced. And so with three. For two, one each side of the Pastos or one at each end, for three assume the position of the angles of a triangle, say one at head of Pastos, one at the right and at the left hand of the form of Christian Rosy Cross."

Example: The V.H. Soror V.N.R. 6-5 sat at a table, robed, and took a Tattwa card coloured symbol (Tejas -- Akasha) an erect red triangle upon which is a dark violet or black egg shaped centre. She placed her hands beside her side, or held it in turns before the eyes (held the magic fire wand). Gazed and contemplated and considered as the symbol grew before her, so enlarged and filled the place, that she seemed to pass into it, or into a vast triangle of flame. She realizes that she is in the presence of a desert of sand, harsh, dry and hot.

Thinks of, and vibrates Elohim. Action seems set up, increase of heat and light. Passing through the symbol and scene, she seems to arrive and descend there, feels the hot dry sand -- perceives a small pyramid in the distance. Wills to rise up and fly through air to it, descends beside it, passes around, sees a small square door on each side. Vibrates -- Elohim, Michael, Aral, Seraph, Darom, Ash.

Stamps five times, figure appears at an entrance, stamps again five times and vibrates Seraphiel. A warrior figure leads out a procession of guards, she asks for his seal, he shows a complex symbol of four triangles around a central emblem? Deceptive, draw Beth before him -- he appears terrified. Withdraw symbol, he is courteous, ask him about pyramid. He says they conduct ceremonies there. She seeks admission, gives sign of 0-0 grade. There is a sense of opposition. Gives sign of 1-10; this appears to suffice. But he gives signs of adeptship. Guards kneel before her and she passes in. Dazzling light, as in a temple. An altar in the midst, kneeling figures surround it, there is a dais beyond and many figures upon it. They seem to be elementals of a fiery nature. She sees a pentagram, puts a Leo into it, thanks the figure who conducts her. Wills to pass through the pyramid, finds herself out amid the sand. Wills her return. Returns, perceiving her body in robes seated in the second order hall.

Another instance of such visionary experience I recorded many years ago in an essay now published under the title of The Foundations of Practical Magic -- the essay itself being entitled The Art and Meaning of Magic. It was a Tattwa Vision of dealing with the 32nd path on the Tree of Life. "We marched down the wide indigo road. There was a cloudy night sky -- no stars. The road was raised above the general level of the ground. There was a canal each side beyond which we could see the lights of what appeared to be a large city. We went on like this for a long way, but then I noticed in the distance a tiny figure of a woman, like a miniature -- she seemed to be naked, but as she drew near, I saw a scarf floating round her. She had a crown of stars on her head and in her hands were two wands. She came towards us very quickly, and I gazed fascinatedly at a string of pearls reaching from her neck to her knees -- and gazing, found that we had passed through the circle of pearls, and she had disappeared.

'Now the sky is clear and full of stars...the moon, a great yellow harvest moon, rises slowly up the sky to a full arch... and we saw three moonbeams shining on the high purple walls of a city...we did not delay to look about, but marched quickly to the centre of the city, to an open space, in the midst of which was a round temple like a ball of silver. It was approached by nine steps, and rested on a silver platform. It had four doors. Before each was a large angel with silver wings...inside, we were in a very airy place. Light breezes lifted our clothes and our hair -- the interior was very white and clear silvery -- no colours. Suspended in the centre was a great globe, like the moon itself...while we looked we saw that the globe was not suspended in the air; it rested on immense cupped hands. We followed the arms up and saw, far up near the roof, deep dark eyes looking down, dark like the night sky, and a voice said..."

2. Simplicity itself is the keyword to the method described by Edwin Steinbrecher. He is an astrologer, well-versed in associated subjects, such as tarot, alchemy, qabalah, etc., and underwent a lengthy Jungian analysis. In the latter he was instructed in Jung's technique of creative imagination. By this means, to put it crudely and oversimplified, one carries on conversations with the images and personalities seen in dreams. Apparently some quite interesting results follow from this procedure. One interesting example is The Tree by J. Marvin Spiegelman (Falcon Press, 1982), which the author describes in his introduction as an experiment in creative psycho-mythology. The book is based on some interior experiences and conversations the author had with some of his dream images, described at considerable length.

As Steinbrecher describes it, the Inner Guide Meditation is a "transformative process concerned with assimilating the disparate energies which exist in the human unconscious into the unified wholeness that is the awakened enlightened being inherent in each of us, thus ending the illusions which cause separation, guilt and judgment. With the meditation of the inner guides, problems once unapproachable and unchangeable become fulfilling challenges that bring forth productive and creative responses."

Let me quote the author as he describes the process of meditation, after which I would like to discuss a description given of a rather frightening experience he had. This latter could have readily been obviated had he known beforehand something of the Order method as given earlier.

"Close your eyes, and invent a cave around you as if you had just walked into the cave and the entrance is at your back. Allow the cave to structure itself as it will, well-lighted or dim, smooth walled or rough. Try to be like blank film receiving impressions. Accept these impressions uncritically as they come to you from this environment. Try not to edit what comes." So far so good. This is the essence of the Jungian method.

"Be as sensory as you can...use all your senses...be sure you are observing and sensing this environment while being in your body and looking out of your eyes. Don't be watching an image of yourself!...

"When you can feel yourself in the cave, even though things may still be vague at this point, move to the left, away from the cave entrance, and find some kind of doorway or opening there on the left that will lead you out into a landscape...take a step out into the landscape when it appears, feeling the new type of ground under your feet. Is it soft or hard, grassy or rocky? What is around you? What is the scene like?

"Then with your mind call for an animal to come to you. Let it be an animal you don't know. Not a familiar housepet or some other known outer world animal, (e.g., your friend's horse, the neighbor's cat, the lamb you had when you were a child), and ask the animal to lead you off to the right to where your inner guide awaits you. Concentrate on following the animal and try not to anticipate the guide...the animals that appear to people come in all varieties. Deer were common, as are squirrels, sometimes a lion or a dog or cat will appear. People have even gotten skunks and anteaters...

"The animal will lead you to an unknown male figure -- your first guide. The initial inner guide for both men and women is a male form...you will generally feel an outpouring of love, protection and friendliness from the figure...

"Let all these impressions come to you as they will. Don't try to see the guide's face clearly right away unless it presents itself easily. One of the hallmarks of the true inner guide is that his face isn't usually clear at first, although a false guide's face almost always is. The true guide's face will clear and come into focus later on as you work with him -- when you stop trying to "make him a face." Be sure to ask the figure if he is your true guide. Generally a false guide will answer "no" to this question. Feel the guide's feeling for you. There is no love from a false guide.

"Ask the guide to take your right hand in his left...feel the hand contact as much as you can...then ask the guide to point to where the sun is in the sky of your inner world. Look to where he points. .don't accept any known person from your outer world as your inner guide. Your guide is a being who wasn't alive on this planet when you were born, so if your favorite uncle, or your father, or the current or past president of the United States appear, keep looking past him to the right. And if a famous deceased guru or teacher or luminary from the past should appear, test him, and see if another figure appears beyond him on the right...the inner guides are always human and do not have the powers or attributes of gods...remember you're in foreign territory. Trust and use your inner guide to act both as interpreter and counselor--truly let him guide you.."

The author then goes into a great deal of detail and explanation of the meditation and the guide and the material to be derived from this sort of thing. The book is well worth reading, and the method of course experimented with. I recommend it unequivocally -- at least as a device for dealing with the inner world of the spirit. What I am interested in at this moment is to analyze briefly a couple of the problems he encountered as relative to the meditation.

For example, he describes how the meditation evolved. He was undergoing Jungian analysis many years ago. At one point his analyst left town for Zurich where the Jungian Institute is located, and he was left with a feeling of being stranded, that his unconscious had been activated but, at that moment, not going anywhere in particular. He had been using the "active imagination" technique the analyst had taught him and was fascinated by the living experiences he had while exploring his psyche. He had been warned about the potential dangers of the process, that repressed unconscious forces could well up to overcome the ego and usurp it. However despite that warning, he continued experimenting with the method trying to establish relationships between the tarot and astrology. (He was a professional astrologer at the time.)

He wrote: "I was delighted with my new toy. It had a reality and a freshness I hadn't experienced since childhood, and there was no doubt about the experiential realness of it...but then I had an experience that acutely demonstrated the analyst's warning about the dangers of active imagination as it is practiced in analytical psychology. It was inside the room where I came into contact with the archetypal forms when an image of the tarot old Pan or devil appeared, unsummoned and unwanted. It was a classic christian devil with an emanation of 'evil' as real as the beneficence I had felt when interacting with the archetype of the sun...I was paralyzed. I began to panic. I seemed to be frozen in the chair. The old Pan entity became even more menacing than before, placing himself in my inner world between me and the stairway to the outer world and safety. The panic finally subsided (although not the fear) and I further tried to manoeuvre to the stairway around the figure, but to no avail. This entity of the inner world blocked my every move whenever I attempted the stairs. He did not advance towards me but remained as a moving barrier to any possible exit. It even crossed my mind that I might be discovered by the outer world in this catatonic state and be taken off to the nearest psychiatric hospital. I couldn't even call out to try to communicate my situation to anyone who might be within hearing...the experience was so frightening to me, however, that I decided then and there never again to attempt another venture into the realms of the unconscious without the presence of a trained analyst."

Eventually, however, he recovered from that fright -- as we might have anticipated. The point I wish to emphasize here however is that all this terror could have been obviated, without any difficulty, had he been trained (or trained himself) in those Golden Dawn methods that are being described in this section. The Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram, the vibration of the appropriate divine names, the assumption of god forms. etc. are all devices which the student must have mastered long before attempting to enter the inner world by means of Tattwa Vision, etc. In a well-regulated temple, these fundamental techniques would have been taught regularly and gradually to the aspirant so that by the time he was ready to attempt this kind of inner adventure these techniques would have been well assimilated and become second nature.

One might well ask, then, that if this is the case why were there so many disasters in the Order as a result of the use of inner vision? The answer is so simple as almost to be frightening. These methods were not being used as scrupulously as they should have. Many assumed that since they had used the visionary techniques for a long period of time, they had no further need for the protective devices. In the Felkins period of government of the Stella Matutina, as reported by Ellic Howe and Arthur E. Waite, and several others, an extraordinary degree of gullibility seemed to have taken possession of these visionaries who apparently had lost their wits and all sense of proportion and sanity primarily because they did not use any or all of the protective devices in which the Order had already trained them.

This is one of the several reasons for my repeated insistence in several areas of this book for a complete mastery of the Pentagram and Hexagram rituals in all their phases, with the absolute memorization of the divine names, gestures, signs, etc. There should be no passing on to more advanced methods until the basic drills had been mastered. Otherwise the student who initiated himself, without the aid of a teacher other than this book of instructions, may find himself in a similar quandary as did Steinbrecher and others. There is simply no justification or excuse for any of this at all. Proper preparation is the basic rule for every phase of the magical arts. Without this, only disaster can loom ahead.

While on this topic let me launch into a pet peeve of mine which is stimulated into activity every time I glance through some of the manuscript rituals dating from various periods in the history of the Order. Again and again I am struck by sketches of Pentagrams, Hexagrams and grade signs to be made at various points of the ritual. I confess myself to be more than somewhat irritated by this procedure, since in theory it is not necessary. They are there included obviously to act as a reminder to the officer of technical matters which theoretically should have been mastered long before. Had they been mastered beforehand, then there would have been no point in making these sketches of what he has to do.

In one sense, this is the fault of the founders of the Order. Mathers himself has written a paper about the least amount of work needed to be done to pass a written examination. This is a pretty poor notion to convey to newly admitted aspirants to higher things. This was a curse that ran through all the Order work as I have indicated in What You Should Know About the Golden Dawn. Students for the most part did only so much as would get them through an examination. There was no thought of obtaining real proficiency in anything. Consecration ceremonies were done for the sword, the elemental weapons, the rose cross and so on, and there they stopped. It seemed never to have occurred to them to repeat their performance many times, over months or years if necessary in order to sharpen their expertise. And yet practice for most of us is the only means whereby that expertise may be obtained.

The Pentagram and Hexagram rituals should have been committed to memory long before some of these grade rituals were to have been performed. I am not antagonistic to the notion that the officers should refer to their scripts for the long speeches required in some of the grade and other rituals, but I deem it unworthy of them -- if they are adepts in reality and not merely in name only -- if they must consult their manuscripts in order to determine what kind of pentagram they were required to trace in some particular place, here, there or anywhere.

The study of the Pentagram Ritual, for example, must not be confined merely to reading it over many times. It has to be performed again and again until it becomes almost deeply embedded in the very warp and woof of one's unconscious. It has to be practiced until the Nephesch or automatic consciousness is able to reproduce it without the Ruach giving the matter any deliberate thought.

It seems to me to be a good idea for the student to prepare a simple type of ritual for daily use in which he will be required to employ almost everything he has learned concerning the art of invocation so that he will not need to think about it, but to devote his whole attention to the really significant parts of the ritual -- the use of will and imagination and the vibratory formula of the middle pillar.

Many years ago -- in the mid-thirties -- I constructed a simple form of ritual for invoking the elements. I borrowed the openings from each of the four elemental grade ceremonies and bound them together into a coherent whole. Then, for almost a whole year, I performed this little ritual daily, until I was able to describe and trace the appropriate lineal figures together with the appropriate divine names without a moment's hesitation. It succeeded in driving these basic ritual methods deeply home into my unconscious psyche so that they were there when I needed them.

Many years later, probably a couple of decades, when I returned to the simples and rudimentals again, I appropriated the opening phase of the Corpus Christi celebration which I called Opening by Watchtower. This becomes a magnificent little ceremony and has become elaborated into a variety of different directions. Some of these have been described and written about at some length in Ceremonial Magic (Aquarian Press, England, 1980). It accomplishes in a slightly different manner what I had attempted to do much earlier, making use of every seemingly arbitrary gesture of elementary magic. Its practice is such that it should result in the ability to trace any pentagram or hexagram, invoking or banishing, at will in the right place, etc. without having to burden one's script with a sketch of the appropriate pentagram. Actually, the ritual is very easy to learn and I strongly suggest it be committed to memory and performed as often as may be possible. In this manner, the basic principles of magical procedure are used so often that they become second nature. At the same time, the sphere of sensation is purified, exalted and made impenetrable to any outside and disturbing influence. With such an aura, one can go anywhere, do anything, meet any entity without fear or anxiety that one's person could be assailed successfully. After a year of study and the practice of the Opening by Watchtower, this magical result is achieved. When that stage has been reached, other usages of that ritual will suggest themselves.

But the primary goal of this exhortation will have been accomplished. When performing a ritual -- any ritual, either by oneself or to demonstrate a technique to a beginner -- one should not have to consult any text in order to recall what an invoking active spirit pentagram looks like, or from what point a banishing lunar hexagram should begin. This is fundamental magical training, must not be glossed over, and should be respected as such for its disciplinary effect on the Nephesh and Ruach.

To return however to the Inner Guide Meditation. In one place, the author gives a question asked by one of his students, as follows: "Is the inner guide an aspect of my ego?"

His reply was no. The guides do not always cater to our ego whims and fancies. They say and do what is needed, not wanted. They know our limits and our inadequacies and allow exposure to unconscious materials which the ego would never choose to deal with.

This is all very well, and by and large I will accept this. But I did know sometime ago a lady who used this Inner Guide Meditation a very great deal and let it govern her every day life and activity. It so happened that she was a compulsive neurotic and a hypochondriac -- the two often go together.

Very often she would consult her inner guide as to some course of behavior, and of course he would advise her. As it turned out, he was a compulsive neurotic too, for he would advise her to behave in markedly compulsive routines, ritualistically as it were. These she would accept without equivocation -- naturally. It was her own voice, as it were. The result was that her whole world fell apart disruptively and utter chaos ensued. I doubt if that taught her anything. She had given herself a crash course in magical procedures; she did have a copy of one of my books. I doubt if she employed any of the testing devices I have mentioned. That is the trouble with such crash courses; not enough of an impression is made on the unconscious psyche for the technique to be used when really necessary.

The stupidity of the whole business is that it taught her nothing! Her compulsiveness remained, unaltered and unchanged!

3. Crowley's Body of Light Technique.

Before going too far with a description of this method, let me give a long quotation from his Liber O, reprinted in Gems from the Equinox (Falcon Press, 1982).

"1. This book is very easy to misunderstand; readers are asked to use the most minute critical care in the study of it, even as we have done in the preparation.

"2. In this book it is spoken of the Sephiroth, and the paths, of spirits and conjurations; of gods, spheres, planes, and many other things which may or may not exist.

"It is immaterial whether they exist or not. By doing certain things certain results follow; students are most earnestly warned against attributing objective reality or philosophic validity to any of them...

"4. The student, if he attains any success in the following practices, will find himself confronted by things (ideas or beings) too glorious or too dreadful to be described. It is essential that he remain the master of all that he beholds, hears or conceives; otherwise he will be the slave of illusion and the prey of madness...

"5. There is little danger that any student, however idle or stupid, will fail to get some result; but there is great danger that he will be led astray, even though it be by those which it is necessary that he should attain. Too often, moreover, he mistaketh the first resting-place for the goal, and taketh off his armour as if he were a victor ere the fight is well begun.

"It is desirable that the student should never attach to any result the importance which it at first seems to possess."

Before proceeding further, let me state that all other things apart, Crowley was once a member of the Golden Dawn. All his early writings are essentially expressive of the Golden Dawn viewpoint. It is only in his later writings that he departs a considerable distance from the Order viewpoint. But even then there always remains a nucleus of the Order teaching which he embraced with all his heart. No matter how far he departed from the basic Order methodology, he was a Golden Dawn initiate -- first, last and always. Let this always be remembered. In his writing, there is much of value to the sincere student of these Golden Dawn techniques.

"1. Let the student be at rest in one of his prescribed positions, having bathed and robed with the proper decorum. Let the place be free from all disturbance, and let the preliminary purifications, banishings and invocations be duly accomplished, and, lastly, let the incense be kindled.

"2. Let him imagine his own figure (preferably robed in the proper magical garments, and armed with the proper magical weapons) as enveloping his physical body, or stand near to and in front of him.

VOLUME FIVE

"3. Let him then transfer the seat of his consciousness to that imagined figure; so that it may seem to him that he is seeing with its eyes, and hearing with its ears.

"This will usually be the great difficulty of the operation.

"4. Let him then cause that imagined figure to rise in the air to a great height above the earth.

"5. Let him stop and look about him. (It is sometimes difficult to open the eyes.)

"6. Probably he will see figures approaching him, or become conscious of a landscape.

"Let him speak to such figures, and insist upon being answered, using the proper pentagrams and signs, as previously taught.

"7. Let him travel at will, either with or without guidance from such figure or figures.

"8. Let him further employ such special invocations as will cause to appear the particular places he may wish to visit.

"9. Let him beware of the thousand subtle attacks and deceptions that he will experience, carefully testing the truth of all with whom he speaks..."

At first sight this sounds a great deal different from the basic Golden Dawn method as described above. In point of fact, however, it is identical. Identical in spirit as well as in letter. For example, somewhere in his autobiography, Crowley speaks of instructing a student to visualize one of the hexagrams of the Yi King, and then to imagine that he is passing through it as if going through a door. A vision of some kind results from that, and when the student had returned from one of these, Crowley would open Legge's book on the Yi King and read the description given of that hexagram. Usually there would be more than a marked relationship.

Furthermore, in the Blue Equinox, at the end of the diary of Frater Achad (Charles Stansfeld Jones), Crowley under the pseudonym of Frater O.M. prescribes an examination for Achad. One of the items of that examination was to pass through a door on which was described a hexagram of a particular kind that Crowley had drawn specifically for that purpose, and report what he had found out about that symbol by means of the vision.

Do note that in both these instances, he mentions nothing of visualizing a body within his physical body or trying to transfer his consciousness to it. In both instances he was literally following the Golden Dawn method of so-called Tattwa vision. Years ago, shortly after receiving my 5 = 6 degree, I painted on 3x5 filing cards a series of symbols -- those of the Tattwas, the Hebrew letters, the geomantic symbols, and the signs of the planets and zodiac. These became the symbolic doors to use for skrying in the spirit vision, to use the technical name for the process being considered. One simply stared for a minute or so at the card or the symbol on it, and then closed one's eyes -- in which case one saw the symbol in its complementary color. Then one imagined that this symbol grew in size until it was like a large door through which one could pass. Using the sign of the Enterer, one projected oneself through the door and on the other side vibrated the appropriate names and traced the corresponding pentagrams and other lineal figures. A landscape was sure to develop, and as a result of the invocations a figure would appear. If all went well, everything that he was in person and in color would be appropriate to that symbol. In any event he was to be tested by all the tests at one's disposal to make sure that one was on the right track.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Crowley's Body of Light technique thus turns out in the end to be identical with that of the Golden Dawn. I could quote from Crowley's writings to give examples of his skrying, but that is not really necessary at this juncture.

The method is the same, and the testing techniques of course are the same. The document Liber O from which I quoted most of the above instruction also describes the pentagram and hexagram rituals, as well as the vibratory formula of the middle pillar and the assumption of god forms. All are taken, in their entirety, from the Order of which he was once a member.

All three methods -- that of the Order, Steinbrecher and Crowley -- are very similar, save only that Steinbrecher's method is lacking in the very protective devices that it so urgently needs. Apart from that, it may well be that his method is an ideal one for the beginner to use, even if only to acquire some expertise in the method. Once obtained, he should learn the Order's methods of testing and protecting -- and proceed from there.

ON SKRYING

By

V.H. SOROR V.N.R

Having learned the general rules the student should discover for himself particular methods best suited to his own particular temperament. It may prove useful to some however to write in some detail about the mode of skrying and of astral projection which have already proved likely to bring about successful results, and which by reason of its continual tests would tend to minimize the chances of illusion, delusion and hallucination. Before proceeding it would be well to refer to the Microcosm lecture regarding the theory of skrying.

The rules for skrying and astral projection being almost similar the two subjects can be studied together, the one being taken as the complement of the other.

Skrying can be commenced simply. That is to say, not projecting the astral beyond the sphere of sensation into the Macrocosm, but retaining it to perceive some scene in the Universe reflected in the symbol which you hold. This latter acts as a mirror which reflects to you some scenes outside your normal range of vision. Secondly, you can continue the operation by using the same symbol and by passing through it projecting yourself to the scene in question which previously you had only perceived as a reflection.

This latter process will probably appear more vivid to the perception than the prior one, just as in the material vision one is less likely to be deceived by going to a place and actually examining it than by obtaining knowledge of it from a mere reflection in a mirror.

In the room in which I am now for example, I see reflected in a mirror a portion of the garden. I obtain an impression of all within my range of sight, but not nearly so powerful a one as when I step out into the garden to the spot in question to examine all the objects therein, feel the atmosphere, touch the ground, smell the flowers, etc.

But it is well to practice both methods. The latter will probably be found to be more instructive though far more fatiguing since, when projecting the astral you will have to supply it with much vitality drawn mostly from the Nephesh.

The key to success in both skrying and astral projection then, would appear to be alternately to employ both intuition and reason. This is done by permitting each thought picture to impress itself on the brain in the manner comprehended generally by the word inspiration, followed by the reason applying its knowledge of correspondences to an affirmation or correction of the same.

You must be prepared to receive impressions of scenes, forms and sounds as vivid thought - forms. I use the phrase thought - forms for want of a better one. There are distinctly in these experiences, things heard, things felt as well as things seen, which would prove that the faculties are really the sublimated senses. That the faculty of clairvoyance exists is easily provable after a little patient exercise with one of the first methods given for the practice of skrying.

Take the Tattwa cards and from them choose one at random. Don't look to see what symbol it represents. Lay it down on a table face downwards. Then try to guess the nature of the symbol. To do this, make your mind a blank as much as possible, always keeping control over the same, attempting to chase away for the time being the reasoning element, memory, imagination, etc. After a few minutes of gazing attentively at the back of the card, you will find that it will seem as though the thought form of the Tattwa appeared to enter the mind suddenly. When more practised it will probably appear to you later as if the symbol were trying to precipitate itself materially through the back of the card. But sometimes, especially if the cards have been long kept together in the pack in the same order, we may find that the back of the card in question is charged astrally not with the symbol upon its face, but with that upon the card whose face has been next to its back in the order of the pack.

Some may find it easier to turn the card over astrally, that is in imagination, and in imagination endeavor to perceive what flashes in the mind in that moment.

Since it is with the Tattwas that we obtain our first experiences, to illustrate the following rules, preferably use one that is in harmony with the time in which I commence my working.

RULES FOR SKRYING

If possible work in an especially prepared magical room, G.D. Altar in the center, bearing the four elements and the cross and the triangle, incense burning, lamp lighted, water in the cup, bread and salt on the platter. In addition place on the altar your magical implements. Wear your white robe wearing your Adeptus Minor sash and your Rose Cross Lamen on your breast.

Have by you your Sword and Lotus Wand. Sit at the side of the altar facing the quarter of the element, planet or sign with which you propose to work. Should any other Frater or Soror be with you arrange that they shall sit in balanced disposition around the altar. For example, if the forces with which you work be in the West your place is East of the altar facing West across it. Should it be inconvenient for you to have your own Temple or to have at hand all or any of the implements for your experiment, do your utmost to imagine them as astrally present, and in any case in astral projection wear the garments and insignia astrally all through the experience.

In fact, after considerable, most constant practice you will probably not find the absolute physical so necessary. Yet remember, that though the material in magical working is the least important of the planes in one sense, yet in another major sense it is of the greatest importance crystallising as it does the astral plane, completing it.

Have present before you the exact correspondences of certain universal formulae, for in the aforesaid insignia and implements you hold a perfect symbolic representation of the

VOLUME FIVE

Universe. Their contemplation should in itself prevent your mind wandering to irrelevant subjects, but to the contrary compel your concentration on the sublime mysteries of the Macrocosm. Moreover these consecrated insignia give you a certain power by means of having attracted rays of force from the infinite more or less potent in proportion to your development.

The importance of using the implements on every possible occasion would appear to be great. For the implements assist in the working of a ceremony, and the latter in turn should help recharge the implements. Therefore every voyage to the realms of fire or water should add as it were a flame to the wand and moisture to the cup.

Next purify the room with fire and water and the lesser banishing ritual of the Pentagram. Imagine that we have chosen Apas - Prithivi as our Tattwa of choice. Naturally we use the correspondences of water and earth for the symbol, but do keep in mind that water is the main Tattwa expressed and the earth being secondary in this compound Tattwa. In this particular example it is well to use principally the cup, the pentacle only in a minor sense. To employ this, use the cup to trace most of the earth symbols, only occasionally employing the pentacle to work the particular symbol.

In this hypothetical case of a compound Tattwa, thoroughly to fill your sphere with the idea of this Tattwa, trace with the cup around your room the greater invoking ritual of the Pentagram both of water and of earth. Then return to your seat. For the process of skrying do the following.

Place the Tattwa card before you on the altar, take the cup in your right hand and the pentacle in the left, and look at the symbol long and steadily until you can perceive it clearly as a thought vision when you close your eyes. Vibrate the Names of Water and of Earth (Empeh Arsel, etc.) and try to realize the mental union more intensely. It may help you to perceive it as a large crescent made of blue or silvery water containing a cube of yellow sand. Continue trying to acquire a keen perception of the Tattwa until the Element and its shape and its qualities shall seem to have become a part of you, and you should then begin to feel as though you were one with that particular Element, completely bathed in it. If this is correctly done, you will find that the thought of any other Element will become distinctly distasteful to you.

Having succeeded in obtaining the thought vision of the symbol, continue vibrating the Divine Names with the idea well fixed in your mind of calling forth on the card a mental picture of some scene or landscape. This, when it first appears, will probably be vague, but continue to realize it more and more. Remember that this is a passive state of the mind, and the time is not ripe for its testing. Only when the thought picture has become sufficiently tangible and vivid, and you find that you are beginning to lose the sense of confusion and vagueness should you begin to apply tests. Before this period, all reasoning, all doubting and rumination is destructive to the experiment.

In all probability, the thought picture may become so clear to you through diligent practice, that it will seem as though the picture were trying to precipitate through the symbol. In such a case as this there can be no difficulty, for the vision will be nearly as clear to the perception as a material one. But you can arrive at a great deal by merely receiving the impression of the landscape as a thought. For example, I perceive an expanse of sea, a slight strip of land - high grey rocks or boulders rising out of the sea. To the left is a long gallery of cliffs jutting out some distance into the ocean. This appears sufficiently vivid, so I begin my tests. I suspect my memory chiefly, so I draw in front of the picture on the card, with the Lotus Wand, a large TAU in bright light. Then, believing that I may have constructed the scene in imagination, I formulate on the card a large CAPH. In this case, neither of these symbols banish or dim the scene in any way, so I continue. (But if the scene vanishes or changes or becomes blurred, it is well to banish with a Pentagram whatever may remain on the card, and simply recommence the process at the point where you are endeavouring to attract a picture on the card.)

I now draw over the picture with the Cup the Water Pentagram, and with the Pentacle the Earth Pentagram using the correct vibration. This intensifies the picture, and I now perceive in it many figures, principally of the Water Spirit type. On gazing further, and repeating the vibration, I perceive a much larger figure than the elementals, overshadowing them, clothed in blue and white, with some glimmering of silver. To obtain detail I must work for some time longer, and continue invoking with water and earth Symbols. I have found that it is best first to look at the image and then alternately test it.

Hoping that enough has been explained to enable the student to understand the general method of skrying, I will proceed further to the rules for astral projection. However it should be remembered that it is possible to carry this vision very far, and the student should not stop where I have left off.

ASTRAL PROJECTION

First follow the rules given for Skrying, until the point where the Tattwa symbol has become perfectly vivid and you feel as though you are one with the Element. You can modify the earlier stages of the work by enlarging the symbol astrally so that it is large enough for a human being to pass through. When very vivid, and not until then, pass, spring, leap or fly through it, and do not begin to think or reason till you find yourself in some place or landscape on the other side. As before, only test the experience when it has become tangible and a complete picture. If you have made your mind a blank, as much as possible, the first idea that enters your mind vividly, after you have traversed the symbol should be a correct correspondence of the Tattwa in question.

Having already, by the process of skrying, obtained a vision of a compound Tattwa, my first impression is to find myself standing on a boulder slightly out at sea, which I had noted as an important point in the picture. I realize that I am standing clothed in my Adeptus Minor insignia and white robe, on this rock, facing the shore. Turning to the right I am conscious of the gallery of cliffs, and to left and back of me the sea, everywhere.

When working on the planes it is well to act exactly as one would normally realizing each step as one goes, not trying to look on both sides at once or at the back of one's head.

VOLUME FIVE

Instead turn first to the right and examine that, and then to the left, then turning around, and so on. It is better to remain in one spot until you are experienced so as to avoid reflexes. In fact, the more practical the experiences are, the greater chance of success.

I have an impression that the air is very cold. I stoop down and feel the rock, which I find is of a coral nature. I have already tested this vision in skrying, but it is well to repeat it to determine if I am sufficiently in touch with the landscape. I therefore trace with my astral Lotus Wand, the symbols I evoked before, the TAU and the CAPH, in white light. In fact, I do not cease tracing them until I actually perceive them as vividly as the landscape. Concluding that the scene does not vanish or become dim I now with my Astral Cup and Pentacle, draw in Light very large Water and Earth pentagrams, which stand on the sea. These, even more than the former symbols should be continued and accentuated until they become to the mind living entities. If these latter be correctly drawn and sufficiently realized, there will be little chance of illusion during the rest of the experience.

The drawing of the Pentagrams standing above the sea appears to increase the vitality of the scene, for the rather intangible Elementals and Angelic Being that I had perceived in the reflected picture became more and more real to the mind.

Had I commenced at once with astral projection without the introduction of my skrying experience, I should have had to evoke these figures. In such a case, using the Invoking Pentagrams of Water, I should continue vibrating the Deity Names, etc. of these Elements using as well the names of the Angels and Rulers, such as Tharsis, Kerub, etc. I would continue this process using these names and symbols until some forms appeared.

After careful examination, by first receiving the impression and then testing it, I can describe the following. The Angelic being, feminine in nature, pale with brown hair and light grey-green eyes, is draped in blue and white. She wears a crown formed of crescents. In her left hand she holds a curious cup, heavy, with a squarish base, and in her right hand a wand with a symbol similar to the positive element of Water.

The Elementals vary in type, the majority being of the mermaid and merman nature, but again many are of the Earth and Air nature.

Turning to the Angelic Being, I make the 5-6 Signs and LVX Signs, and to the Elementals the 3-8 and 1-10 Signs, and by right of these I ask to have explained some of the secret workings of the plane of the compound Tattwa.

The Angel having answered my signs by similar ones gives the impression that she is willing to instruct me. This can enter the mind as an extraneous thought, or may be heard clairaudiently. She shows how even the work on this particular spot is varied and according to the types of the Elementals is the work allotted. Some Elementals such as gnomes are digging in the cliffs, with sharp instruments, and boring holes therein, thus permitting water to enter freely. (This could explain the spongy rather than broken appearance of the rocks.) The mermaid and merman Elementals, who I think are in the majority are carrying some dust into the sea. Some of this may go to form islands. Others are bringing earth and weeds and alike from the depths, also probably to form land. There are also figures holding funnel-like cups who rise from the sea, drawing in air, diving back again carrying that element into the sea.

It can be understood how these investigations can be carried to very great detail, but to be as brief as possible I ask if I may be shown the effect of this Ray of the compound Tattwa on the Universe generally and on this Planet in particular.

I understand that the effect of the Ray is generating and fructifying generally, and on the whole beneficent, though everything would depend on the Force with which it was united. Its correlative would be thick rich water, containing such substances. I ask for its influence on Earth. I accomplish this by shewing thought pictures of this planet and its continents, seas, etc., and pray that this Angel will send a ray first to one spot and then another. In answer I perceive the ray falling right through the water of the Earth, as if the affinity lay with all land under water.

"The Life of Earth in the Waters is its Name" does the Angel say. Nearly all vegetation attracts this ray, but especially plants which grow under water. The Zoophyte only partially attracts it, this latter seeming rather largely composed of some active element, such as Fire. Among animals the Ray appears to fall on the seal and hippopotamus, and has a general affinity for most amphibious animals. With fish, the link seems to be small, a tortoise, a frog, and a snail are shown me, and some water-fowl of the duck variety.

Falling on man, on the savage it would appear to be beneficial to health generally, to give a feeling of well-being, and would also govern to some extent generation. Its tendency would be to accentuate sensuality and laziness. On the intellectual man it increases intuition, with some desire to clothe idea with form, therefore the first vague development of form in the mind of the artist. Since this experience has become rather voluminous I will now stop - feeling that sufficient information has been expressed which can help guide the serious and enterprising student.

I salute therefore the Angel with the LVX Signs and the Elementals by the 3-8 and 1-10 Signs, and banish astrally with the Pentagram and other symbols that I have traced upon the scene. The more powerfully the symbols have been evoked, the more powerfully should they be banished.

If you should be feeling a sensation of fatigue, as I before mentioned. make towards the symbols the sign of the Enterer indrawing their strength and vitality by using the sign of Harpocrates. Then return by the way in which you came, that is through the symbol and back into your room. Once there perform the Supreme Banishing Ritual of the Pentagrams that you have evoked. Supposing a scene to remain on the symbol of the Tattwa banish that as well. When you have had considerable practise it is probable that such detailed care as is herein indicated will not be necessary. Should the operation be too complicated to accomplish at one sitting it would be possible to divide it into parts. However you will find that one carefully practised sitting will provide more knowledge and ability than a hundred careless and vague experiments which simply strengthen mental deception, emotional folly and ignorance.

NOTES

This experiment is very good for the practice of Spiritual sight, and in this manner you can easily prove the correctness of your vision. Also for this kind of simple experience you need not prepare yourself spiritually to such an extent as with the deeper working, so that you can have your cards continually with you and practise with them as you will.

To find what Tattwa is in course, note the time of sunrise. Akasa always begins with sunrise and lasts 24 minutes followed by Vayu, Tejas, Apas, and Prithivi each lasting for 24 minutes.

Placed at the junction of the Cross and Triangle, the incense, lamp etc., should be at the angles of the arms of the Cross.

All Adeptus Minor members who are Z.A.M. have the right to wear the white robe and yellow girdle of the 3rd Adept, but not his cloak or Nemyss. Note the following:

If 2 persons are present one should be opposite the other.

If 3 persons are present form a triangle.

If 4 persons are present form a square.

If 5 persons are present form a pentagram, etc.

The G.D. Altar, the most synthetical of the symbols, the material universe ruled by the Spirit and Four Elements. The Rose-Cross contains the affirmation of the principal divisions of the Universe, synthetical like the Altar, but particular in the sense that it is attributed to the Sephirah Tiphareth, the central Sun, and is therefore the symbol for the Microcosm - Man, the Adept, he to whom perfection of the Microcosm means a certain conscious union with the Macrocosm.

The white robe and yellow girdle imply Purity - Kether, Harmony - Gold, Tiphareth. Lotus Wand - Mercy. Sword - Severity.

Imagination (eidolon) means the faculty of building an image. The imagination of the artist must lie in the power which he possesses more or less in proportion to his sincerity, and his intuition, of perceiving forces in the Macrocosm, and allying or attuning himself thereto, his talents naturally and his training permitting him to formulate images which shall express those forces.

During this process, it is more than likely that you will be believing that the picture is one of memory, or imagination, or construction, etc. All these qualities being analogous to the faculty that you are employing, and the probability of their arising at any moment will be great.

Let it be remembered that this can only be a part of the plane of the Symbol expressed by the compound Tattwa.

Employ the "Lords who Wander" (the 7 Planets), the planetary Tarot trumps, as important test symbols.

Use occasionally the Pentacle, so as not to ignore too great an extent the part that the Earth plays.

In the case of starting the entire experience with Astral Projection only, you will understand that you ignore the portion of the process which attracts the picture to the card, but simply go forward through the symbol when once the latter is realised.

If working with correct correspondences, you are bound to arrive at some place answering to the same, if you project your astral sufficiently.

If after these repeated tests the Vision becomes diminished or changes very much, banish with the Astral implement, and return in the way you came, through the symbol, and start again freshly. If you feel you have expended too much force in the symbols which you traced in the scenes, redraw some of the force spent into yourself again by the formula of the signs of Horus and Harpocrates. Extend towards the symbols in the sign of Hoor, redrawing them into yourself by the sign of Hoorparkraat.

Sometimes it seems as though one had to find the words to translate the impression; sometimes the words appear to be found already, for one believes that one has heard them.

The symbol shows the potency of the whorl-formation.

Some students, I believe, have great difficulty in returning. In such a case one can do so gradually by first flying into space, thinking of this Planet, fixing the thoughts on the particular country, then on the particular spot therein, then on the house, and lastly on the room and entering therein. But in most cases this will not be necessary.

TECHNIQUE

Here follow two Tattwa visions by Soror Vestigia. These are provided as simple examples of the technique, and the procedure to be used. The first of them is the fiery sub-element of Earth, Tejas of Prithivi.

VOLUME FIVE

Vestigia stated that she found herself, after going through the visualized symbols, "in a volcanic district. Hill and mountains, hot air, and sunny light. Using a Pentacle, and calling on the Earth names, I see before me a species of Angelic King Elemental. On testing him, I find that he gives me the Neophyte Saluting Sign, and the Philosophus (fire) Sign. He bows low to the symbols that I give him, and says that he is willing to show me some of the working on the plane. He has a beautiful face, somewhat of the Fire type, yet sweet in expression. He wears a Golden Crown, and a fiery red cloak, opening on to a yellow tunic, over which being a shirt of mail. In his right hand he bears a wand, the lower end or handle being shaped somewhat as the Pentacle implement, and the staff and upper end being as the Fire Wand. In his left hand (but this I do not clearly see) he bears a Fire Wand; I think that the right hand points upwards and the left downwards, and is a symbol to invoke forces. Little figures of the gnome type come at his call. When commanded some broke the rocky parts of the mountain with pick-axes which they carry. Others appear to dig in the ground. In breaking off these rocky pieces, there fall away little bits of bright metal or copper. Some of these gnomes collected the bits of metal and carried them away in little wallets slung by a baldrick from their shoulders. We followed them and came to some mountainous peaks. From these peaks issued some large and fierce, but hardly perceivable, fires. Into cauldrons or bowls placed above these fires, the collected pieces of metal were placed. I was told that this was a lengthy process, but asked that I might see the result of what appeared to be a gradual melting of this metal, I was then shown some bowls containing liquid gold, but not I imagine, very pure metal, I again followed my guide, the Angelic King Elemental Ruler, who gave me his name as Atapa, and followed by some gnomes bearing the bowl of liquid gold. We came, after passing through many subterranean passages cut in the mountains, to a huge cavern of immense breadth and height. It was like a Palace cut out of the rock. We passed through rudely cut passages, until we reached a large central hall, at the end of which was a Dais on which were seated the King and Queen, the courtier gnomes standing around.

"This Hall seemed lighted by torches, and at intervals were roughly cut pillars. The Gnomes who accompanied us presented to the King and Queen their gold. These latter commanded their attendants to remove this to another apartment. I asked the King and Queen for a further explanation, and they appointing substitutes in their absence, retire to an inner chamber which appeared more elevated than the rest. The architecture here seemed to be of a different kind. This small hall had several sides, each with a door, draped by a curtain. In the center of the Hall was a large tripod receiver containing some of the liquid gold such as that we had brought with us. The King and Queen who before had worn the colours of Earth now donned, he the red, and she the white garments. They then with their Earth and Fire Wands invoked and joined their wands over the Tripod. There appeared in the air above, a figure such as Atapa, he who had brought me here. He, extending his wand, and invoking, caused to appear from each door a figure of a planetary or zodiacal nature. These each in turn held out his wand over the gold, using some sigil which I can but dimly follow. The gold each time appearing to undergo a change. When these last figures have retired again behind the curtains, the King and Queen used a species of ladle and compressed together the gold, making it into solid shapes and placing one of these at each of the curtained doors. Some gold still remained in the bowl. The King and Queen departed, and it seemed to me that I saw a figure again appear from behind each curtain and draw away the pieces of gold."

The second one I shall quote is a vision of Spirit of Water, Akasa of Apas, also by Vestigia.

"A wide expanse of water with many reflections of bright light, and occasionally glimpses of rainbow colours appearing (perhaps symbolising the beginning of formation in Water). When divine and other names were pronounced, elementals of the mermaid and merman type appear, but few of other elemental forms. These water forms are extremely changeable, one moment appearing as solid mermaids and mermen, the next melting into foam.

"Raising myself by means of the highest symbols I have been taught, and vibrating the names of Water, I rose until the Water vanished, and instead I beheld a mighty world or globe. with its dimensions and divisions of Gods, Angels, elementals, demons - the whole universe of Water (like the tablet ruled in EMPEH ARSEL GAIOL), I called on this latter name, and the Universe seemed to vivify more and more. I then called on HCOMA, and there appeared standing before me a mighty Archangel (with four wings) robed in glistening white, and crowned. In one hand, the right, he held a species of trident, and in the left a Cup filled to the brim with an essence which appeared to be derived from above. This essence, brimming over, poured down below on either side, From the overflowing or over running of this Cup, which derives its essence from Atziluth, apparently the cup being in Briah, the World of Yetzirah obtains its moisture. It is there differentiated into its various operative forces.

"These operative forces are represented by Angels each with their respective office in the world of moisture. These forces working in Yetzirah, when descending and mingling with the Kether of Assiah, are initiating the force of that which we as human beings call Moisture."

Here is another good example of a Tattwa vision. It was obtained over a score of years ago by Countess Tamara Bourkoun-Dolgoruky when she visited me in Los Angeles.

"I found myself suspended in an unfathomable abyss of space. Nothing was visible, neither sky nor clouds, no stars or any other heavenly bodies, save a diffused pale grey light. I was conscious of myself as a colossal figure in a yellow robe and a yellow and violet nemyss, holding a yellow dagger and tracing with it the appropriate Pentagrams and Divine Names. However, they did not appear outlined in flashing colours, as had been the case when skrying in the realms of Fire and Water. Rather I heard them vibrating through the waves of Aether and reaching the confines of the Universe, whence their echoes rushed back to me, reverberating with a deafening roar.

VOLUME FIVE

"Slowly a definite panorama began to formulate against the pale background. A wide expanse of turquoise, blue sky, enclosed by luminous lapis lazuli clouds lined with translucent pinkish-orange, stretched on the horizon. It is impossible to describe the radiance and brilliancy of those colours; they should be painted and even then the attempt would have failed. As I was observing this enchanting scene, a graceful sylph-like shape emerged from the clouds slowly soaring towards me. The entity was draped in filmy gauze of smokey grey, gradually shading into mauve and royal blue. The robe was caught at the waist by long streamers of amethyst velvet. The wings were those of a gigantic butterfly, iridescent and transparent, ornamented with jewelled green-blue "eyes" of a peacock's tail. Tiny silver stars were gleaming and sparkling through dark cloud-like hair that framed a wistful rosy face with violet-blue eyes. After acknowledging my salutes, the Genie informed me that he was the messenger of twilight and the evening breeze.

"At the approach of the Angelic being, I suddenly became aware of a slow rolling vibration pulsating through space, which swelled and undulated as if it were animated by in breathings and out breathings of an invisible all-pervading Presence. The words 'The Great Breath which knows itself not' flashed in my mind. Yet here it was, filling the abysses of infinite Space, ceaseless, eternal, changeless in its rhythmic motion, embracing innumerable worlds which swayed and rolled gently in its waves, only to disappear like a wisp of vapour. As in the previous vision I perceived the circulation of the Tattwas, only this time it was on a much grander scale, as the currents swept not only around the Earth but throughout the whole universe and beyond. Also it became quite simple to understand why through Pranayama one may acquire knowledge and mastery over the elements, for is not Air-Breath our most direct link with the Macrocosm?

"Thus, immersed in contemplation, I became conscious of Nada, the faint notes of which sounded like a melancholy flute accompanied by a gong ringing in a void. As the Sound swelled, I heard a distant chanting of OM, the Logos, the Creative Word. And, as if to illustrate this, there slowly emerged, shining softly through a transparent veil of greyish clouds, an opalescent orange globe, floating majestically on the horizon. Rays of diffused light were playing around it, forming faint outlines of two enormous wings. No words could convey the supernal beauty, majesty and unutterable sweetness of this apparition which seemed to be the very essence of love. The Angel and I were so overwhelmed that we silently knelt immersed in the soft radiance of this wondrous winged sphere. My senses began to reel, unable to withstand the impact of such a powerful and totally unfamiliar vibration, and as I was afraid to lose consciousness, nothing remained but to ask the Genie to conduct me back to my body."

OUTER ORDER RITUALS AND COMMENTARIES

INTRODUCTION TO THE ORIGINAL GOLDEN DAWN RITUALS (These are not the later revisions of the Stella Matutina)

In 1979 and 1980, my friend Carr P. Collins Jr. visited Gerald Yorke in England on two separate occasions to obtain copies of a Complete Set of Golden Dawn Documents. One set was lost in transit demanding therefore the second visit. They are dated 1894-5 and were originally issued to a member of the Order who used the pseudonym or magical motto of Frater De Profundis Ad Lucem.

Upon examination of these papers I discovered that the later Rituals of the Stella Matutina had been considerably edited and modified when compared to the 1894-5 versions of D.P.A.L. In the Complete Golden Dawn System of Magic the original versions written by Mathers and Westcott have been used exclusively here.

It was further discovered that there was a quantity of new material that either had never found its way to the Stella Matutina or had been ruthlessly edited out. The result is that the contents of this book follow literally the title -- it does represent the Complete Golden Dawn System. Good fortune also pursued me in that R.A. Gilbert of Bristol, the author of a biography of A.E. Waite now in preparation, and of a new history of the Golden Dawn from a radically different point of view, was kind enough to give me copies of the Neophyte and Adeptus Minor Rituals employed in Waite's own Order, The Fellowship of the Rosy Cross. This was formed some years after the revolt which splintered and shattered the unity and integrity of the Order.

Be that as it may, the student would do well to compare the original simplicity of the Golden Dawn Rituals with the complex verbosity of Waite's Rituals. In any event, the inclusion of these two rituals (there is a third, the Adeptus Major Ritual which I believe came from Carr P. Collins' own private collection of Golden Dawn Manuscripts) with the rest of the original material makes this not merely a new presentation of the Golden Dawn System, but an unique account of what has come to be termed the Western Esoteric Tradition.

NOTE

The complete spelling of the officers who participate in these ceremonies will be given once here. Thereafter they will be abbreviated as follows:

- Hierophant (Red Robe, Lamén, Sceptre) will be shown as Hiero.
- Hiereus (Black Robe, Lamén, Sword) not abbreviated.
- Hegemon (White Robe, Lamén, Sceptre) shown as Heg.
- Kerux (Black Robe, Lamén, Lamp and Wand) not abbreviated.
- Stolistes (Black Robe, Lamén, Cup of Water) shown as Stol.
- Dadouchos (Black Robe, Lamén, Thurible) shown as Dad.
- Sentinel (Black Robe, Lamén, Sword) shown as Sent.

ON THE DAIS (THE STAGE IN THE EAST OF TEMPLE)

These officers represent the Second Order and are present mostly symbolically.

Imperator.
Cancellarius.
Praemonstrator.
Past Hierophant.

REQUIRED MATERIALS

FOR THE ALTAR:

Cross and Triangle.
Red Rose.
Red Lamp.
Cup of Wine.
Paten of Bread and Salt.

FOR THE CANDIDATE:

Black Gown.
Red Shoes.
Hoodwink.
Rope.
Sash.
Chemicals to change clear water to red - the colour of blood.

OPENING OF THE NEOPHYTE GRADE 0-0

When the members are assembled and clothed, Hierophant gives one knock and the Officers rise.

Members do not rise except for Adorations to the East or when asked for the signs. Nor do they circumambulate with the Officers. When they do have occasion to move in the Temple, they do so in the direction of the Sun and make the Neophyte signs on passing the Throne of the East -- whether the Hierophant is there or not. The Grade sign is made in the direction of movement except when entering or leaving the Hall, when it is made toward the East.

The knock is made by rapping the base or shaft of Wand or the pommel of Sword on a Table.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Hiero:

(Knock) (All members assembled wearing regalia. Kerux goes to the right of Hierophant, faces West and proclaims:)

Kerux:

HEKAS, HEKAS, ESTE BEBELOI! (Returns to place.)

Hiero:

(Knock) Fratres and Sorores of the Order of the Golden Dawn in the Outer, assist me to open the Hall of the Neophytes of the (Name the) Temple (All rise.) Frater Kerux see that the Temple is properly guarded.

Kerux:

(Knock) (Answered by Sentinel) Very Honored Hierophant, the Hall is properly guarded.

Hiero:

Very Honored Hiereus, assure yourself that all present have witnessed the Golden Dawn.

Hiereus:

Fratres and Sorores of the Order of the Golden Dawn in the Outer give the signs of a Neophyte (done). Very Honored Hierophant (saluting) all present have been so honored.

Hiero:

Very Honoured Hiereus, how many chief officers are there in this grade?

Hiereus:

Three, Very Honoured Hierophant. Namely, the Hierophant, Hiereus and Hegemon.

Hiero:

Is there any peculiarity in these names?

Hiereus:

They all commence with the letter H.

Hiero:

Of what is this letter the symbol?

Hiereus:

Of life, because the character H is one mode of representing the ancient Greek aspirate; Breathing and Breath, are the evidence of life.

Hiero:

How many assistant officers are there in this grade?

VOLUME SIX

Hiereus:

Three, besides the Sentinel, namely, the Kerux, the Stolistes, and Dadouchos.

Hiero:

The situation of the Sentinel?

Hiereus:

Without the Portal of the Hall.

Hiero:

His duty?

Hiereus:

Armed with a sword to keep out intruders, and to prepare the Candidate.

Hiero:

Frater Dadouchos, your situation?

Dad:

In the South, Very Honored Hierophant, to symbolize heat and dryness.

Hiero:

Your duty?

Dad:

I attend to the censer and the incense, and I assist in the purification and consecration by Fire of the Hall, of the Members, and of the Candidate.

Hiero:

Frater Stolistes, your situation?

Stol:

In the North, Very Honored Hierophant, to symbolize cold and moisture.

Hiero:

Your duty?

Stol:

I see that the robes, collars and insignia of the Officers are ready before the opening; I attend to the cup of lustral water and I assist in the purification and consecration by water, of the Hall, of the Members, and of the Candidate.

Hiero:

Frater Kerux, your situation?

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Kerux:

Within the Portal of the Hall, Very Honored Hierophant.

Hiero:

Your duty?

Kerux:

I see that all the furniture of the Hall is properly arranged before the opening. I guard the inner side of the Portal. I admit Fratres and Sorores of the Order. I assist in the reception of the Candidates. I attend to the Lamp of my office. I lead the mystic circumambulation and make all announcements and reports.

Hiero:

What do your Lamp and Wand symbolize?

Kerux:

The Light of Occult Science and directing power

Hiero:

Honored Hegemon, your station?

Heg:

Between the two pillars of Hermes and Solomon facing the cubical altar of the Universe, Very Honored Hierophant.

Hiero:

Your duty?

Heg:

I preside over the symbolic gateway of Occult Science. I am the reconciler between light and darkness. I immediately follow the Kerux in the mystic circumambulations. I superintend the preparation of the Candidate; lead him through the path of darkness into light, and assist in his reception, and I aid the other officers in the execution of their duties.

Hiero:

What does the white color of your robe symbolize?

Heg:

Purity.

Hiero:

Your peculiar ensign of office?

VOLUME SIX

Heg:

The mitre-headed sceptre.

Hiero:

What does it symbolize?

Heg:

Religion, to guide and regulate life.

Hiero:

What does your office symbolize?

Heg:

Those higher aspirations of the soul, which should guide its actions.

Hiero:

Honored Hiereus, your station?

Hiereus:

On the throne of the West, Very Honored Hierophant.

Hiero:

What does the throne of the West symbolize?

Hiereus:

Increase of darkness; decrease of light.

Hiero:

Your duty?

Hiereus:

I preside over twilight and darkness, which encompass us in the absence of the Sun of Life and Light. I guard the gate of the West. I assist in the reception of the Candidate and I superintend the inferior officers in the execution of their duties.

Hiero:

What does the black color of your robe symbolize?

Hiereus:

Darkness.

Hiero:

Your peculiar insignia of office?

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Hiereus:

The Sword and Banner of the West.

Hiero:

What does the Banner of the West symbolize?

Hiereus:

Twilight.

Hiero:

What does the Sword symbolize?

Hiereus:

Severity and Judgement.

Hiero:

What does your office symbolize?

Hiereus:

Fortitude.

Hiero:

My place is on the Throne of the East, which symbolizes the rise of the Sun of Life and Light -- my duty is to rule and govern this Hall in accordance with the laws of the Order. The red color of my robe symbolizes Light: my insignia are the Sceptre and the Banner of the East, which signify power and light, mercy and wisdom, and my office is that of Expounder of the Mysteries. Frater Stolistes, I command you to purify the Hall and the members by Water.

Stol:

(Does so, saying) I consecrate with water.

Hiero:

Frater Dadouchos, I command you to purify the Hall and the members by fire.

Dad:

(Does so, saying) I consecrate with fire.

Heg:

Stolistes and Dadouchos last. They pass three times around from East by South to West. After first round Hierous returns to his place. After second round Hegemon, after third remaining members. Each as he passes the throne of the East salutes and lowers insignia, except the Hierophant.)

Hiero:

The mystic circumambulation symbolic of the rise of the Light is accomplished. Let us adore the Lord of the Universe.

(ADORATION)

Holy art Thou, Lord of the Universe.
Holy art Thou, whom Nature hath not formed.
Holy art Thou, The Vast and Mighty One.
Lord of the Light and of the Darkness.

CEREMONY OF ADMISSION

(The Candidate is not to be told the name of the Order until his admission.)

Hiero:

(Knocks) Fratres and Sorores of the Order of the Golden Dawn in the Outer, I have received a dispensation from the Greatly Honored Chiefs of the Second Order to admit (name of aspirant) to the Grade of Neophyte. Honored Hegemon instruct (name of aspirant) to hold himself (or herself) in readiness for the ceremony of his (or her) admission and superintend his (or her) preparation. (Hegemon removes his chair from between the Pillars, salutes Hierophant, quits Temple and prepares Candidate as follows: The Candidate is Hoodwinked and a rope tied thrice around the waist.)

Heg:

Child of Earth, arise and enter the Path of Darkness.

Kerux:

(Knocks) Very Honored Hierophant, is it your pleasure that the Candidate be admitted?

Hiero:

It is. Admit (name of aspirant) in due form, who will hereafter be known by the motto XYZ. Fratre Stolistes and Dadouchos assist the Kerux in the reception. (They join Kerux at door. Kerux opens door but bars the entrance.)

Kerux:

Child of Earth, unpurified and unconsecrated thou canst not enter our Sacred Hall.

Stol:

(Signing a Cross on Candidate's forehead) Child of Earth, I purify thee with Water.

VOLUME SIX

Dad:

(Censing the Candidate) Child of Earth, I consecrate thee with Fire.

Hiero:

Conduct the Candidate to the foot of the altar. Child of Earth, why dost thou request admission into this Order?

Cand:

(Prompted by Hegemon) My soul is wandering in darkness seeking for the Light of Occult Knowledge, and I believe that in this Order the knowledge of that Light may be obtained.

Hiero:

(Name of aspirant) I hold in my hand your signed pledge to keep secret all relating to this Order, but to confirm it I now ask if you are willing in the presence of this assembly to take a great and solemn obligation to keep inviolate the secrets and mysteries of our Order? Let me however assure you that this obligation contains nothing incompatible with your civil, moral or religious duties.

Cand:

I am. (Banners left behind at Thrones. Hierophant advances between Pillars to Eastern side of Altar. Hiereus stands on Candidate's left. Hegemon on Candidate's right.)

Hiero:

Thou wilt kneel on both knees, give me your right hand, which I place on this sacred and sublime symbol (Places Candidate's right hand on the centre of the triangle.) Place your left hand in mine, bow your head, repeat your full name at length and say after me (All rise).

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

THE OBLIGATION

I, (name of aspirant), in the presence of the Lord of the Universe and of this Hall of Neophytes of the Order of The Golden Dawn in the Outer, regularly assembled under warrant from the Greatly Honored Chiefs of the Second Order, do of my own free will and accord hereby and hereon most solemnly pledge myself to keep secret this Order, its name, the name of its members, and the proceedings which take place at its meetings, from all and every person in the whole world who is outside the pale of the Order, and not even to discuss these with initiates, unless he or they are in possession of the password for the time being; nor yet with any member who has resigned, demitted or been expelled, and I undertake to maintain a kind and benevolent relation with all the Fratres and Sorores of the Order.

I furthermore promise and swear that I will keep any information relative to this Order, which may have become known to me prior to the completion of the Ceremony of my admission and I also pledge myself to divulge nothing whatsoever concerning this Order to the outside world in case either of my resignation, demission or expulsion therefrom, after the completion of my admission. I will not seek to obtain any ritual or lecture pertaining to the Order without due authorization from the Praemonstrator of my Temple, nor will I possess any ritual or lecture unless it be properly registered and labelled by him.

I further undertake that any such ritual or lecture and any case, cover or box containing them shall bear the official label of the Golden Dawn. I will not copy myself, nor lend to any other person to be copied, any ritual or lecture, until and unless I hold the written permission of the Praemonstrator to do so, lest our secret knowledge be revealed through my neglect or error.

Furthermore, I undertake to prosecute with zeal the study of Occult Sciences, seeing that this Order is not established for the benefit of those who desire only a superficial knowledge thereof. I will not suffer myself to be hypnotized, or mesmerized, nor will I place myself in such a passive state that any uninitiated person, power, or being may cause me to lose control of my thoughts, words or actions.

Neither will I use my Occult powers for any evil purposes and I further promise to persevere with firmness and courage through the ceremony of my admission, and these points I generally and severally, upon this sacred and sublime symbol, swear to observe without evasion, equivocation, or mental reservation of any kind whatsoever; under the no less penalty on the violation of any or either of them of being expelled from this Order, as a wilfully perjured wretch, void of all moral worth, and unfit for the society of all right and true persons, and in addition under the awful penalty of voluntarily submitting myself to a deadly and hostile current of will set in motion by the chiefs of the Order, by which I should fall slain and paralysed without visible weapon as if slain by the lightning flash. (Hiereus here suddenly lays the blade of his sword on the nape of the Candidate's neck and withdraws it again).

So help me the Lord of the Universe and my own higher soul.

VOLUME SIX

Hiero:

Rise, newly obligated Neophyte of the Golden Dawn in the Outer. Place the Candidate in the Northern part of the Hall, the place of the greatest symbolic darkness. (Done. Candidate faces to the East, Hierophant and Hieres return to their thrones.)

Hiero:

The voice of my higher soul said unto me, Let me enter the Path of Darkness, peradventure thus shall I obtain the Light. I am the only being in an abyss of darkness. From the darkness came I forth ere my birth, from the silence of a primal sleep, and the Voice of Ages answered unto my soul, I am he that formulates in darkness. Child of Earth; the Light shineth in the darkness, but the darkness comprehendeth it not.

Let the mystic circumambulation take place in the path of darkness with the symbolic Light of Occult Science to guide the way. (Kerux leads with Light and Wand, Hegemon guides the Candidate, Stolistes and Dadouchos follow, thrice round. First time Hierophant (Knocks), and Hieres (Knocks), Second time Hierophant (Knocks) They halt in the South.)

Kerux:

Child of Earth, unpurified and unconsecrated, thou canst not enter the path of the West.

Stol:

(Signing a Cross on Candidate's forehead) Child of Earth, I purify thee with water

Dad:

(Censing Candidate) Child of Earth, I consecrate thee with fire.

Heg:

Child of Earth, twice consecrated, thou mayest approach the gate of the West. (They move to the West, facing Throne and halt. Hieres rises, takes Banner in left hand, menaces Candidate with sword and says as the Hegemon slips up the Candidate's hoodwink.)

Hieres:

Thou canst not pass by me saith the Guardian of the West unless thou canst tell me my name.

Heg:

Darkness is thy name, the Great One of the Paths of the Shades.

Hieres:

(Slowly sinking point of sword) Child of Earth, fear is failure. Therefore be without fear, for in the heart of the coward virtue abideth not. Thou hast known me, so pass thou on. (Hoodwink slipped down again. They move to the North and halt.)

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Kerux:

Child of Earth, unpurified and unconsecrated, thou canst not enter the Path of the East.

Stol:

(Signing a Cross on the Candidate's forehead) Child of Earth, I purify thee with water.

Dad:

(Censing the Candidate) Child of Earth, I consecrate thee with fire.

Heg:

Child of Earth, thrice consecrated, thou mayest approach the gate of the East. (They move to the East facing Throne and halt. Hierophant rises, takes Banner in left hand and raises Sceptre as if to strike. Hegemon slips up Candidate's hoodwink.)

Hiero:

Thou canst not pass by me saith the Guardian of the East, unless thou canst tell me my name.

Heg:

LIGHT dawning in darkness is thy name, the LIGHT of a Golden Day.

Hiero:

(Slowly lowering Sceptre) Child of Earth, remember that unbalanced force is evil, unbalanced mercy is but weakness, unbalanced severity is but oppression. Thou hast known me, so pass thou on unto the Cubical Altar of the Universe. (Hoodwink slipped down and Candidate taken to West of Altar. Hierophant leaves Throne and stands between the pillars, facing Candidate with Sceptre in right hand and Banner in left.)

Hiero:

I come in the Power of the Light.
I come in the Light of Wisdom.
I come in the Mercy of the Light.
The Light hath Healing in its Wings.

(Hegemon on Candidate's right, Kerux behind Candidate, Stolistes and Dadouchos right and left of Kerux. The officers are now forming a Hexagram around the Altar. Hierus holds sword in the right hand with the Banner of the West in left.)

Hiero:

Let the Candidate kneel while I invoke the Lord of the Universe (Candidate kneels). Lord of the Universe, the Vast and the Mighty One, Ruler of the Light and of the Darkness, we adore Thee and we invoke Thee. Look with favour upon this Neophyte, who now kneeleth before Thee and grant Thine aid unto the higher aspirations of his soul, so that he may prove a true and faithful Frater among us unto the Glory of Thy Ineffable Name. Amen.

Let the Candidate rise. (Candidate is assisted to rise and is brought close to the Altar. Hierophant, Hiereus, and Hegemon raise Wands and Sword touching over the head of Candidate. At the word "Darkness" Kerux removes hoodwink).

Hegemon:

Inheritor of a dying world we call thee to the living beauty.

Hiereus:

Wanderer in the wild darkness we call thee to the gentle light. (Hoodwink removed).

Hiero:

Child of Earth, long hast thou dwelt in darkness. Quit the night and seek the day. (All members present clap hands. Hierophant, Hiereus, Hegemon say together):

In all your wanderings through darkness the lamp of the (Kerux advances and raises his lamp) Kerux went before you, though you saw it not. It is the symbol of the Hidden Light of Occult Science. Let the Candidate be conducted to the East of the Altar. Honoured Hiereus, I delegate to you the duty of entrusting the Candidate with the secret signs, grip, grand word and present password of the Neophyte Grade of the Order of the Golden Dawn in the Outer, of placing him between the mystic pillars and of superintending his fourth and final consecration. (Hierophant returns to Throne, Hiereus takes his place between the pillars, Candidate is conducted by Hegemon to the East of the Altar facing Hiereus. Hiereus giving Sword and Banner to Hegemon to hold.)

Hiereus:

Frazer XYZ, I now proceed to instruct you in the secret signs, grip and token, grand word and password for the present time for this Grade. Firstly, advance your left foot about six inches: this is called the step of the grade. The sign is two-fold; the Saluting Sign and Sign of

VOLUME SIX

Silence. The first should always be answered by the second. The Saluting Sign is given by thrusting both arms horizontally forward, palms downwards. as if groping your way and bow your head. It alludes to your condition in a state of darkness unilluminated by the Lamp of Occult Knowledge and groping your way blindly in the search for truth. The Sign of Silence is given by placing the left first finger on the mouth. It alludes to the strict silence inculcated on you by your obligation regarding all proceedings of the Order. The grip or token is given in the following manner: Advance your left foot about six inches touching mine, side to side and toe to heel. Now extend your right hand as if to grip mine, but miss it intentionally; again extend it and seize mine by the fingers only. It alludes to the seeking for guidance in darkness. The Grand Word is HAR-PAR-KRAT whispered by alternate syllables mouth to ear thus. It is the title of the Egyptian God of Silence and should ever remind you of the strict silence you have sworn to maintain. The password is (blank) which will be periodically changed at each Equinox so that a member who has resigned, demitted, or been expelled from the Order, may be in ignorance of the existing password. I now place you between the two pillars of Hermes and Solomon in the symbolical Gateway of Occult Science. (Hiereus draws Candidate forward between the pillars and unclasps hands. He receives sword and banner from Hegemon, stands at the latter's left, all facing Candidate.)

Hiereus:

Let the final consecration of the Candidate take place.

Kerux:

(Goes to the North and faces East. Stolistes signs a Cross on Candidate's forehead. bows to Hierophant and sprinkles East and says): Frater XYZ, I purify thee finally with water.

Dad:

(Censing as Stolistes has done) Frater XYZ, I consecrate thee finally with fire.

Hiero:

Honored Hegemon, the final consecration of the Candidate having been performed, I command you to remove the rope from his waist, the last remaining symbol of the path of darkness, and to invest him with the distinguishing badge of the grade.

Heg:

(Doing so) By the command of the Very Honored Hierophant, I invest you with the distinguishing badge of the grade. It symbolizes Light dawning in darkness.

Hiero:

Let the mystic circumambulation take place in the path of Light. (Kerux goes to the North East. Hegemon takes Candidate behind Black Pillar, and stands behind Kerux. Hiereus comes next, followed by Stolistes and Dadouchos. Kerux leads off, all salute on passing Hierophant who stands holding Sceptre and Banner as in the Opening. Hiereus drops out on reaching his Throne. Hegemon returns to between the Pillars after passing Hierophant twice. He directs Neophyte to follow Kerux who with the other Officers passes Hierophant thrice. After the third passing).

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Hiero:

Take your place North West of the Stolistes. (Kerux indicates this and goes on followed by Stolistes who falls out in the North and returns to his place. Hegemon replaces his chair between the Pillars and sits down. Kerux replaces the Rose, Lamp, Cup and Paten in their proper places on the Altar. All are seated.) The Three Fold Cord bound about your waist, was an image of the three-fold bondage of Mortality, which amongst the Initiated is called earthly or material inclination, that has bound into a narrow place the once far-wandering Soul; and the Hood-wink was an image of the Darkness, of Ignorance, of Mortality that has blinded men to the Happiness and Beauty their eyes once looked upon. The Double Cubical Altar in the centre of the Hall, is an emblem of visible Nature or the Material Universe, concealing within herself the mysteries of all dimensions, while revealing her surface to the exterior senses. It is a double cube because, as the Emerald Tablet has said The things that are below are a reflection of the things that are above. The world of men and women created to unhappiness is a reflection of the World of Divine Beings created to Happiness. It is described in the SEPHER YETZIRAH, or The Book of Formation, as An Abyss of Height and as an Abyss of Depth, An Abyss of the East and An Abyss of the West, An Abyss of the North and An Abyss of the South. The Altar is black because, unlike Divine Beings who unfold in the Element of Light, the Fires of Created Beings arise from Darkness and Obscurity. On the Altar is a White Triangle to be the Image of that Immortal Light, that Triune Light, which moved in Darkness and formed the World of Darkness and out of Darkness. There are two contending Forces and One always uniting them. And these Three have their Image in the three-fold Flame of our Being and in the threefold wave of the sensual world. (Hierophant stands in the form of Cross, saying:) Glory be to Thee, Father of the Undying. For Thy Glory flows out rejoicing, to the ends of the Earth! (He reseats himself.) The Red Cross above the White Triangle, is an Image of Him Who was unfolded in the Light. At its East, South, West and North Angles are a Rose, Fire, Cup of Wine and Bread and Salt. These allude to the Four Elements, Air, Fire, Water, Earth. The Mystical Words - KHABS AM PEKHT - are ancient Egyptian and are the origin of the Greek KONX OM PAX - which was uttered at the Eleusinian Mysteries. A literal translation would be Light Rushing Out in One Ray and they signify the same form of Light as that symbolized by the Staff of the Kerux. East of the Double Cubical Altar of created things, are the Pillars of Hermes and of Solomon. On these are painted certain Hieroglyphics from the 17th and the 125th Chapters of the Book of the Dead. They are the symbols of the two powers of Day and Night, Love and Hate, Work and Rest, the subtle force of the Lodestone and the Eternal out-pouring and in-pouring of the Heart of God. The Lamps that burn, though with a veiled light, upon their summits show that the Pathway to Hidden Knowledge, unlike the Pathway of Nature - which is a continual undulation, the winding hither and thither of the Serpent - is the straight and narrow way between them. It was because of this that I passed between them, when you came to the Light, and it was because of this that you were placed between them to receive the final Consecration. Two contending Forces and one which unites them eternally. Two basal angles of the triangle and one which forms the apex. Such is the origin of Creation, it is the Triad of Life. My Throne at the Gate of the East is the Place of the Guardian of the Dawning Sun. The Throne of the Hieres at the Gate of the West is the Place of the Guardian against the Multitudes that sleep through the Light and awaken at the twilight. The Throne of the Hegemon seated between the Columns is the Place of Balanced Power, between the Ultimate Light and the Ultimate Darkness. These meanings are shown in detail and by the color of our robes. The Wand of the Kerux is the Beam of Light from the Hidden Wisdom, and his Lamp is an emblem of the everburning Lamp of the Guardian of the Mysteries. The Seat of the Stolistes at the Gate of the North is the Place of the Guardian of the Cauldron and the Well of Water - of Cold and Moisture. The Seat of the Dadouchos at the Gate of the South is the Place of the Guardian of the Lake of Fire and the Burning Bush.

Hiero:

Honored Frater Kerux, I command you to declare that the Neophyte has been initiated into the Mysteries of the Neophyte Grade. (Kerux advances to the North East, faces West, raises his Wand and says:)

Kerux:

In the name of the Lord of the Universe and by command of the Very Honored Hierophant, hear all ye that I proclaim that (name of aspirant) who will hereafter be known unto you by the Motto XYZ, has been admitted in due form to the Neophyte grade of the Order of the Golden Dawn in the Outer. (All clap hands.)

Hiero:

Very Honored Hieres, I delegate to you the duty of pronouncing a short address to our Frater on his admission.

Hieres:

As you have now passed through the ceremony of your admission, allow me to congratulate you on being admitted a member of this ancient and honorable Order, whose professed object and end is the practical study of Occult Science. Let me therefore advise you to remember this day as a marked one in your existence and to adopt and cultivate a mental condition worthy of this Order. To this end let me first earnestly recommend you never to forget due honor and reverence to the Lord of the Universe, for as the whole is greater than its parts, so is He far greater than we, who are but as sparks derived from that unsupportable Light which is in Him. It is written that the borders of his Garment of Flame sweep the ends of the Universe and unto Him all return. Therefore do we adore Him; therefore do we invoke Him; therefore in adoration to Him sinks even the Banner of the East. (Done) Secondly, let me advise you never to ridicule or cast obloquy upon the form of religion professed by another, for what right have you to desecrate what is sacred in his eyes? Thirdly, never let the seal of secrecy regarding the Order be absent from your recollection, and beware that you betray it not by a casual or unthinking word. Fourthly, study well that Great Arcanum, the proper equilibrium of mercy and severity, for either unbalanced is not good; unbalanced severity is cruelty and oppression; unbalanced mercy is but weakness and would permit evil to exist unchecked, thus making itself as it were the accomplice of that evil. Lastly, do not be daunted by the difficulties of Occult Study and remember that every obstacle can at length be conquered by perseverance.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Hiero:

Before you can pass on to the next Higher Grade of this Order you will have to make yourself perfect in the following: 1) The names and alchemical symbols of the four elements. 2) The names, astrological symbols and elemental attribution of the twelve signs of the Zodiac. 3) The names and astrological symbols of the seven planets, also their houses, exaltation and triplicity in the Zodiac. 4) The names, characters and numerical values of the twenty-two letters of the Hebrew alphabet. 5) The names and English meanings of the ten Qabalistic Sephiroth. A MSS. lecture on these subjects of study may be obtained on application. When you know these thoroughly you must signify the same by letter to the Cancellarius or Scribe. You will then be examined and if found perfect you will be eligible for admission to the next higher grade, should the higher powers approve your application.

Kerux:

(Conducts Candidate to his table, gives him a solution and tells him to pour a few drops on the plate before him). As this pure and limpid fluid is changed into the semblance of blood, so mayest thou perish if thou betrayest thine oath of secrecy to this Order by word or deed.

Hiero:

Resume your seat and remember that your admission to this Order gives you no right to initiate any other person without dispensation from the Grand High Chiefs of the Second Order.

CLOSING

Kerux:

Honored Hiereus, assure yourself that all present have witnessed the Golden Dawn.

Hiereus:

Fratres and Sorores of the Order of the Golden Dawn in the Outer, give the signs of a Neophyte. (Done) Very Honored Hierophant (saluting), all present have been so honored.

Hiero:

Frater Stolistes, I command you to purify the Hall and the members by water. (Done as in opening.)

Hiero:

Frater Dadouchos, I command you to purify the Hall and the members by fire. (Done as in opening.)

Hiero:

Let the mystic circumambulation take place in the Path of Light. (Kerux goes by the South to the South East. Hegemon goes to the North and leads the new Neophyte by West and South, directing him to follow Hegemon in the Procession. Hiereus follows Neophyte and Stolistes follows Hiereus, accompanied or followed by Dadouchos, and Sentinel ends the procession. As they pass the Hierophant, who is standing and holding the Banner of the East in his left hand, the Sceptre in his right, they make the Neophyte Signs. Hiereus drops out when his Throne is reached. Hegemon passes Hierophant twice and then takes his place between the Pillars, directing Neophyte to follow Kerux who, after the third passing of Hierophant, directs Neophyte to his seat, the other Officers dropping out as their places are reached.) The Mystical Reverse Circumambulation is accomplished. It is the symbol of Fading Light. Let us adore the Lord of the Universe. (All turn East. Stolistes directs Neophyte to rise and face East. Hierophant faces East, making the salute at each adoration, the others, Officers and Members repeating it also.)

Holy art Thou, the Vast and the Mighty One!
Lord of the Light and of the Darkness!

Nothing now remains but to partake together in silence of the Mystic Repast, composed of the symbols of the Four Elements, and to remember our pledge of secrecy. (All are seated.) (Hierophant puts down his Sceptre and returns the Banner of the East to its place. He goes to the West of the Altar and facing East gives the Saluting Sign but not the Sign of Silence, and taking up the Rose says:) I invite you to inhale with me the perfume of this Rose, as a symbol of air. (Smells Rose). To feel with me the warmth of this sacred Fire. (Spreads his hands over it). To eat with me this Bread and Salt as types of Earth. (Dips bread in Salt and eats). And finally to drink with me this Wine, the consecrated emblem of Elemental Water. (Makes a Cross with the Cup and drinks. Hierophant puts down the Cup between the Cross and Triangle. He comes East of the Altar and faces West. The Praemonstrator then comes to the West of the Altar and makes the Saluting Sign. Hierophant replies with the sign of Silence and then hands the Elements, beginning with the Rose which Praemonstrator smells and returns; then feels the warmth of the Lamp. eats the Bread and Salt and receives from the Hierophant the Cup with which he makes a Cross, and having drunk, returns it. Hierophant then passes by West and South to his Throne. Praemonstrator then comes to the East of the Altar. Imperator comes to the West, exchanges Signs and partakes. He returns to his place, after serving Cancellarius who in turn serves the Past Hierophant. After the Chiefs, the Officers partake in this order: Hiereus, Hegemon, Stolistes, Dadouchos. When all the Officers except Kerux have partaken, the Inner Members in order of seniority of admission, partake but do not wait for instruction in this. If there is a pause, one comes forward. Next come the members of the Outer in the same manner - the Neophytes coming last piloted by Hegemon or any Officer appointed. The Order of procedure for Outer members is: Philosophi, Practici, Theorici, Zelatores, Neophytes. When the last Neophyte stands East of the Altar, Kerux comes to the West, exchanges the Signs and partakes. Hegemon directs Neophyte to return to his place as soon as Kerux takes the Cup. Kerux, on receiving the Cup, drains it, inverts it, and says:)

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

DISCUSSION OF THE Z-DOCUMENTS

By

V.H. FRATER A.M.A.G

These three documents, Z-1, Z-2, and Z-3, are amongst the most important of all the instructions issued by the Golden Dawn. They are extensive commentaries on the Neophyte Ritual. All three are replete with the most profound instruction on Magic ever written.

As I reflect upon what I have written in this book I am sure that I have asserted several times that this particular document or that one are the most important lessons ever released within the Order. This is probably most correct. All the instructions handed out to the Zelator Adeptus Minor are unequivocally important in different ways. But they all serve as the foundation of the magical art. Throughout the years, whenever I have casually opened the book to any page of these Z documents, I have found them always illuminating - more so with each perusal of their contents. Their ability to illuminate seems inexhaustable. And for this reason, I must insist that the student pay special attention to them, studying them carefully over a long period of time rather than trying to read them as he would a novel or some informative non-fictional piece of work.

They have all the earmarks of having been written by S.L. Mathers - G.H. Frater D.D.C.F. More than anything else I know, they exemplify the profundities of which he was capable. Admittedly some of the material is trite, elaborating the usual claptrap of secret societies - such as grips, steps and passwords. But these trivia comprise but a small segment of these fantastic papers. The remaining material is of such a nature that I feel compelled to warn the casual reader not to be casual in dealing with this type of information. This is "heavy" material which needs to be savored, thought about and reflected upon.

For example, in the description of the accoutrements of the Hierophant, one is inclined to gloss it over as merely explanatory of the Temple equipment. It is really much more than that. Some formulae of magic were concealed and simultaneously revealed in the most prosaic and trite explanations and descriptions. Do not gloss over them.

From the standpoint of practical magical technique, I suggest a frequent review of the segment entitled "The Symbolism of the Opening." One practical formula after another is described here, not abstractly but concretely as a technical exercise available to the alert and eager aspirant.

Some of these served as seminal ideas which came to full term in the development of the Middle Pillar technique. The rudiments are all Golden Dawn. But each rudiment is scattered here and there, throughout several documents. However, one does not really have to search too hard for them. They are prolific - presenting themselves as alive and vital. Over a period of time, as one uses them, the seeds sprout and grow into dynamic constituents of one's wake-a-day consciousness as though waiting to be found and used.

For example, there was the rudimentary Middle Pillar technique as given in one of the early Portal papers. The technique of circulating the energies awakened or released by this method of meditation are to be found in part in this particular paper. It is only a hint, however. It becomes rounded out and expanded by applying that idea to the formula of the Tree of Life projected into a sphere (See painting of this in coloured plate section of this work), producing four individual columns around a central invisible pillar. The roots of all this will be found in the Microcosm paper and elsewhere, but in its fullness in those documents at the end of the Tarot section.

The attributions of the planets, signs and houses are standard astrological notions within the Golden Dawn system. Its employment as described, for example, in The Foundations of Practical Magic Aquarian Press, 1979 depends entirely on how well one has understood and used some of the principles of that magical exercise.

The technique has been borrowed without acknowledgment by a number of writers who believed it to be a magical technique borrowed from the Order. In a large sense, they were plagiarizing, because in no place has this method been described except in the barest outline form. Yet in a sense which they never realized, because they were actually plagiarizing, it is predicated fundamentally and unequivocally on the whole basic structure of the Golden Dawn system itself. And it is that system that hostile critics claim was the end result of research done by McGregor Mathers in the British Museum. If taken by itself, that is pure nonsense. I defy any critic to demonstrate where and how these methods were borrowed from books or manuscripts in the British Museum.

In The Symbolism of the Opening, there is given first the method of vibrating Divine Names. It is called The Vibratory Formula of the Middle Pillar. Again, I must urge the student to study it carefully. It has been repeated and elaborated upon in several different places in these texts. But you must study it, practise it and master it.

Once mastered, it should be used in all instances where the Divine Names are employed. These are in the practice of the Pentagram Ritual, lesser and greater, the Hexagram Ritual, lesser and greater, and the Middle Pillar technique itself, (Note, some of these rituals are described in the Regardie Tapes Falcon Press, 1982). These tapes can help enormously in the mastery of the various ceremonials themselves - such as the consecration of the Elemental Weapons, and so on. The method of pronouncing and vibrating the Names is clearly indicated on the Tapes so as to eliminate all possibilities of doubt and confusion.

Some of the techniques too are infinitely valuable during the process of skrying. Safeguards are required here to protect one from delusion and self-deception - all too easy in this method. The use of the Banners of the East and West may also be used as devices to open up areas that one would not suspect could be opened, so securely are they guarded.

The assumption of God-forms described in several of these documents, (and depicted on some of the beautiful paintings in the coloured plate section of this book), which comment on the Neophyte Ritual is another method not merely of protecting oneself, but of ensuring compliance with one's demands for knowledge and self-knowledge, and for gaining admission to sanctuaries whose existence one may suspect - but that is all.

This practice needs to be used often to gain skill. The descriptions given in the text are brief enough as well as long enough. That is really all it requires. Once having made its acquaintance, nothing remains but to practice it day in and day out until it is more or less easy. One of the best books that gives practically all the needed God-forms is the paperback reprint by Dover of Wallis Budge's The Gods of the Egyptians. This is not only a storehouse of Egyptian information, but the dozens of full page plates of the Gods is without rival in our literature. At the same time for a better descriptions of the colours employed in the God Forms, you should consult the colour plates in this book.

The section in Z-1 describing the God forms used in the Neophyte initiation will be more than amplify what has just been stated. Those colors used in the first edition of Budge's book by Methuen, decades ago, are accurate enough in terms of how they were once depicted. But for practical uses, the colour scheme shown in this work is to be preferred. Never let it be forgotten that one of the basic themes of the Order is that colors are not symbols of forces, but are forces themselves. So do study the coloring system and apply it to the plain photos of the Dover edition.

There are hosts of fertile ideas in these papers. I do not wish to elaborate all of them in any way. Something must be left to the ingenuity and intuition of the reader and student. But what I have had to say here should be adequate to keep him alert when perusing this most valuable and suggestive series of texts.

One of the many documents given to advanced members of the Zelator Adeptus Minor grade was Z-2, an elaborate analysis of the Neophyte grade. The breakdown into a couple of dozen specific points, is in itself, one of the most beautiful and astute tabulations I know. Like so many of the Adeptus Minor papers, it fills me with enormous respect for whoever was responsible for the analysis. The entire elaboration was classified into five major divisions, corresponding to the Pentagrammaton. In addition, that section attributed to Shin was broken down still further into three other segments so that all told there were seven formulae for magical working.

Z-2 was one of the papers that was destined for elimination from the curriculum of the Stella Matutina, a most grave error. My guess is that it was being eliminated because it represented some exceedingly hard work on the part of the celebrant.

The application of Z-2 to the process of Divination was never quite clear to me. Rather than follow the procedure of the Stella Matutina, I have decided to include it here because some students will be able to determine on their own what its sphere of usefulness is. If the student follows the general rule laid down for all the other subdivisions of this important document, he may arrive at some format pleasing and useful to him personally.

VOLUME SIX

The Alchemy section for long years bothered me, for I was not able to make much sense from it. Francis King, in his book Ritual Magic in England reproduces a paper based on this section. It is most interesting, but raises an enormous number of questions relating to procedure, laboratory technique and allied topics. I had some correspondence with Mr. King about this matter but nothing came of it.

Sometime during the mid-thirties some alchemical processes became more or less clear to me, which made more intelligible some of the sections in Z-2. Years later, after a meeting with Frater Albertus of the Paracelsus Research Society, new insights developed.

A ritual exemplifying the rules laid down in Z-2 will be found immediately following the various initiatory rituals.

So far as rituals relating to evocation and similar types of operations are concerned some students found out that they are long, tedious, repetitive and very wearying. I must confess they are. Success in working them depends on patience, enthusiasm, and above all on the ability to stir the magical energy into activity. The rituals themselves will not yield much satisfaction until and unless the student has either some inborn theurgic ability or has developed it through the practice of the Middle Pillar technique. The method awakens the magical centers or chakras within the psycho-spiritual make-up of the student, a process of prime importance, because without the power derived from these centers or chakras, the ritual remains merely a ritual - a mere formality, dead and without power. The Middle Pillar should be practiced for several months, or even longer, until the student becomes thoroughly conscious of the energy coursing through the organism at his willed command in the three methods of circulation. The sensation is unmistakable, becoming wholly physical if steadfastly persisted in. It is the sine qua non of magical success.

When some skill has been gained in this method, further attention can be given to the Vibratory Formula of the Middle Pillar, described in several places in this work. The success of any of these operations is wholly dependent on these two methods, the Middle Pillar and the Vibratory Formula, and they should be given a great deal of attention.

When this material was first published many years ago, one of the gratifying rewards was hearing from a few students who evidently had experimented with the method. One in particular stands out. I would have liked to acknowledge his contribution, but for the moment he wishes to remain anonymous. His letter gives evidence of the fact that he has experimented with the method and found it, for him, wanting, so that he felt obliged to clarify the procedure and simplify it. His complaint was that the whole ceremony took approximately two hours, at the end of which time he felt exhausted and was unable to retain any kind of "divine intoxication" which is the sine qua non of success. The method which he then devised is as follows:

"The magician, standing in the circle, performs a banishing ritual. (For the evocation of an elemental, the lesser Pentagram ritual will suffice. If evoking a more powerful spirit, use the Supreme Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram, or Hexagram, as appropriate.)

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

"A suitable God is invoked. Assumption of God form, Vibratory Formula of the Middle Pillar, and Mystic Circumambulation being employed. This is continued until presence of the Divine Force is unmistakable; one ought to have the impression of acting on behalf of the God.

'The Sigil of the Spirit is now consecrated and placed in the Triangle outside the Circle. The element, planetary, or zodiacal force consonant with the nature of the spirit is invoked using the proper Pentagram or Hexagram, Divine Names, etc.

"Invocation of the God is recommenced and continued until identity with the God is achieved. At this point the actual evocation may begin. (The Magician will hereafter be referred to as the God.)

"The God extends His consciousness up to the spirit's plane (not unlike skrying), formulates its sigil therein, calls its name.

"The Spirit is commanded to manifest in the Triangle, and as the God brings his consciousness back into the body of the magician in the circle, the spirit manifests in the triangle.

"When he has sworn allegiance, and answered all questions put to him, he is commanded to return to his own plane. The God again extends His consciousness up to the plane, bringing the spirit with Him. When they have both arrived, the Sigil previously formulated is banished.

"He returns to the Circle, then partially withdraws from the magician, who again becomes aware that he is acting on behalf of the God.

"The element, planetary or zodiacal force previously invoked, is now banished. The magician then performs a general banishing ritual and quits the circle."

The writer of the above method adds a note, which in my opinion is worth paying close attention to; it coincides with my own view as expressed elsewhere.

"There is reason for concern that some students may misinterpret certain of Crowley's magical writings. For example in Magick in Theory and Practice, Chapter IX, p. 69, he writes:

'The peculiar mental excitement required may even be aroused by the perception of the absurdity of the process, and the persistence in it, as when Frater Perdurabo. . . recited From Greenland's Icy Mountains and obtained his result.'

"Now there is no doubt that the ego, excited to the proper pitch, is capable of placing such a strain in the Astral Light as to cause some sort of manifestation, perhaps even that of the spirit it was desired to evoke (but more likely a phantasm masquerading as such). But without the presence of the Divine Force, such a being, once evoked, cannot be controlled, and there is no effective means of banishing it.

"Depending on the nature of the spirit, and the degree of its manifestation, it is likely that the spiritual progress of the magician is at an end - at least as far as his current incarnation is concerned."

VOLUME SIX

While on this topic of magical training and developing the powers latent in man, to which the Order is dedicated, I would like to quote extensively from another source. Though the Theosophical Society is to all intents and purposes dead, there is some pertinent material in The Hall of Magic Mirrors by Victor Endersby that should set most of us back on our heels and induce some deep reflection. The tradition is a different one but facts are facts regardless of where they come from. In discussing the problem of psychical phenomena produced by Madame Blavatsky, Mr. Endersby had this to say:

"The crux of the whole problem is that the whole movement had to balance on a razor edge between credence and incredulity; and a net had to be spread whose meshes were designed, with infinite care, to catch fish of just a certain size and shape. Unfortunately, even a Mahatma could not design one which would exclude a particularly odd member of the species - the one known variously as "crackpot," "screwball," "oddball," etc. These have been especially effective shields, but also especially irritating ones. Some of the most enthusiastic devotees of Theosophy would convince any sane-minded man in five minutes that there could not possibly be anything real in it.

However, let us not be too hard on the gentle crackpot. After all, through the ages most human progress has depended on his existence - he is the one who is reckless enough to crack the ice with no thought of consequences, any more than of reason, common sense, and facts. Most really capable and competent people have, by those qualities, established a position in the world, which they will not readily risk in pioneering. The risks have in the main to be left to people without sense enough to be afraid, and they serve their purpose in their odd ways. After all, some of them have made quite a splash here and there. Considering him from the purely personal aspect, what else would you call Einstein? Or a certain famous gentleman who chooses to immure himself in an African jungle and lavish his gifts on a minor collection of ignorant natives?

We will examine the meshes of the occult net.

The Mahatma said that chelaship was impossible to anyone who harbors any tendency toward injustice, even unconsciously. First then, do you love scandal and ill talk, unverified and onesided about others? If so, you are out, and the famous scandals will take you out.

Are you a coward, afraid to stand up for justice? If so, you will keep silent in the face of slander. That will take you out. There is no room for cowards beyond the veil.

Do you still have the ecclesiastic notion that perfection and infallibility can exist in an ever-evolving universe? Then your misconception of the universe is profound, probably incurable; a few scientific, grammatical, or philosophical errors will set you out on the doorstep.

Are you a materialist, unable to grasp even the possibility that the real universe is not a material one? Then the phenomena will be self-evident fraud to you, and that will take you out. You will also get out with your sanity, because the escape hatches have been left; and the victims will be fairly safe from harm because, instead of striking matches, you will only laugh at them.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

Do you wish to set yourself up to be admired as an Infallible One by acquiring much knowledge? Then the revelation of fallible possibilities on the parts of the highest "authorities" you know - if you are a Theosophist - will set you back a little, and possibly out. And if you twist and squirm in the effort to prove the infallibility of your gods, that identifies your degree of intellectual honesty. That's the sort of thing they want to know.

Are you prejudiced racially and nationally? Then the program of universal brotherhood will steer you far away.

Are you narrow-minded, fastidious, finicky, and given to taking the form for the substance? Then a little swearing will take care of you.

Are you mentally lazy? Then the effort to untangle those peculiar books and make sense of them will take adequate care of you. No mentally lazy person can understand the occult world, let alone the visible one.

Are your interests narrow? Then the help you will need from all available human sources won't be there - you are uninterested in too much of it. You will find yourself in one blind alley or the other.

Do you think the kingdom of heaven can be gained by physical observances, and that a meat-eater is a lower animal? Then a few eggs in gravy will eliminate you nicely; if that won't do it, a few packs of cigarettes will take care of it. Especially when you find that one of the Mahatmas smoked a pipe.

It has often been asked, why, with all the resources and wisdom of the Mahatmas, was H.P.B. left to struggle in poverty and illness? As we have seen, she was accused - though no individual ever came forward to complain - of getting rich on the credulity of her followers. Suppose she had been richly maintained? Moncure Conway, the missionary, mentions her "richly furnished" apartment. No doubt the furniture had been expensive - before her wealthy friends gave it to her when they got new stuff. She never starved for food, that is certain; she always did have enough - just enough - money - to do what she had to do. As to health - we can lay that in part to herself. She did break all the rules of diet, and possibly not all because of thyroid trouble and the rest; she was a hardheaded, intractable party. She knew all the rules. If she chose to break them, the Mahatmas couldn't do anything about it. Of course, they could have "fired" her, but then she was the only agent able to do what they had in mind.

The queer thing about these questions is that they are often from Christians, whose own God left his only Son to live in hardship and poverty and die in horror.

If you have to test out the morals of a tribe of savages, to see whether it is ready to haul its snout out of the mud and take the road to civilization, a good way is to drop a sick child of the same race but another tribe into the village compound. They may kill it with a club, throw it on the fire, torture it with sharp sticks, eat it, or pick it up and care for it. If they do anything but the last, you leave - quickly - and wait a hundred years until the tribe has outgrown its land and impinged on the territory of a bigger one. It may then appreciate help. Meanwhile, if you are interested in technical educability, you string a phone wire and show that you can talk over it. The natives decide that you are a god. You show then that you can't crawl through the wire - you're a fake. You then decide that they will have to mature a little before you try to teach them electricity. They will grasp one use of the wire very quickly; it will make good necklaces, when cut up, or good slugs for the blunderbuss.

VOLUME SIX

Of course, in order to get their attention in the first place, you have to either shoot some of them, or display a cigarette lighter. If they have not caught on by the time the fluid runs out, you run out too. And stay a long time."

THE FORMULAE OF THE MAGIC OF LIGHT AN INTRODUCTION TO THE PRACTICAL WORKING OF THE Z-2 FORMULAE

By

G.H. FRATER S.R.M.D.

In the Ritual of the Enterer are shadowed forth symbolically, the beginning of certain of the Formulae of the Magic of Light. For this Ritual betokeneth a certain Person, Substance or Thing, which is taken from the dark World of Matter, to be brought under the operation of the Divine Formulae of the Magic of Light.

Also herein are contained the commencements of all formulae of Evocation, the development of which is further shown in the Inner knowledge of the succeeding grades of the Outer Order. In the true knowledge of the application of the Symbolism of the "Enterer" lies the entrance to the knowledge of Practical Magic. Therefore are all the Formulae drawn from the Ritual classed under Five several heads, according unto the Letters of the name Yeheshuah.

For to the Letter Yod and the element of Fire belong the works of Ceremonial Magic, as the evocations of the Spirits of the Elements, etc.

Unto the First Heh the consecration and charging of Telesmata, and the production of Natural Phenomena, as storms, earthquakes, etc.

Unto the Great Holy Letter Shin are allotted Three classes of works. Spiritual development, transformations and invisibility.

Unto the Letter Vau Divination in all its branches; and the art of making the Link between the subject of the work and the process of divination.

And to the Final Heh the works and operations of the Art of Alchemy, the order of its processes and Transmutation.

I-YOD EVOCATION

A - The Magic Circle.

B - The Magician, wearing the Great Lamen of the Hierophant; and his scarlet Robe. A Pentacle, whereon is engraved the Sigil of circle and cross as shown on the Hierophant's Lamen.

THE COMPLETE GOLDEN DAWN SYSTEM OF MAGIC

C - The Names and Formulae to be employed.

D - The Symbol of the whole evocation.

E - The Construction of the circle and the placing of all the symbols, etc., employed, in the places properly allotted to them; so as to represent the interior of a G.D. Temple in the Enterer, and the purification and consecration of the actual piece of ground or place, selected for the performance of the Evocation.

F - The Invocation of the Higher Powers. Pentacle formed of three concentric bands, name and sigil therein, in proper colours, is to be bound thrice with a cord, and shrouded in black, thus bringing into action a Blind Force to be further directed or differentiated in the Process of the Ceremony. Announcement aloud of the Object of the working; naming the Spirit or Spirits, which it is desired to evoke. This is pronounced standing in the centre of the Circle and turning towards the quarter from which the Spirit will come.

G - The Name and Sigil of the Spirit, wrapped in a black cloth, or covering, is now placed within the circle, at the point corresponding to the West, representing the Candidate. The consecration or Baptism by water and fire of the Sigil then takes place, and the proclamation in a loud and firm voice of the spirit (or spirits) to be evoked.

H - The veiled Sigil is now to be placed at the foot of the Altar. The Magician then calls aloud the Name of the Spirit, summoning him to appear, stating for what purpose the spirit is evoked: what is desired in the operation; why the evocation is performed at this time, and finally solemnly affirming that the Spirit shall be evoked by the Ceremony.

I - Announcement aloud that all is prepared for the commencement of the actual Evocation. If it be a good spirit the Sigil is now to be placed within the white Triangle on the Altar, the Magician places his left hand upon it, raises in his right hand the magical Implement employed (usually the Sword) erect; and commences the Evocation of the Spirit (give name) to visible appearance. The Magician stands in the Place of the Hierophant during the Obligation, irrespective of the particular quarter of the Spirit. But if the nature of that Spirit be evil, then the Sigil must be placed without and to the West of the White Triangle and the Magician shall be careful to keep the point of the Magical Sword upon the centre of the Sigil.

J - Now let the Magician imagine himself as clothed outwardly with the semblance of the form of the Spirit to be evoked, and in this let him be careful not to identify himself with the spirit, which would be dangerous; but only to formulate a species of mask, worn for the time being. And if he knows not the symbolic form of the Spirit, then let him assume the form of an Angel belonging unto the same class of operation. This form being assumed, then let him pronounce aloud, with a firm and solemn voice, a convenient and potent oration and exorcism of the Spirit unto visible appearance. At the conclusion of this exorcism, taking the covered sigil in his left hand, let him smite it thrice with the flat blade of the Magic Sword. Then let him raise on high his arms to their utmost stretch, holding in his left hand the veiled sigil, and in his right the Sword of Art erect. At the same time stamping thrice upon the ground with his right foot.

K - The veiled and corded sigil is then to be placed in the Northern part of the Hall at the edge of the Circle, and the Magician employs the oration of the Hierophant, from the throne of the East, modifying it slightly, as follows: "The voice of the Exorcism said unto me, Let me shroud myself in darkness, peradventure thus may I manifest myself in Light, etc." The Magician then proclaims aloud that the Mystic Circumambulation will take place.

L - The Magician takes up the Sigil in his left hand and circumambulates the Magic Circle once, then passes to the South and halts. He stands (having placed the sigil on the ground) between it and the West, and repeats the oration of the Kerux. And again consecrates it with Water and Fire. Then takes it in his hand, facing westward, saying, "Creature of. . ., twice consecrate, thou mayest approach the gate of the West."
